Come when the corn-tassel dances and gleams
In the light of the summer sun-tide,
And the leaves whisper low to the shadowy streams,
As a wandering minstrel delightedly dreams
He lingers his loved ones beside.

Come when the harvest is garnered again,
When the vintage hangs dark on the vine,
When the frost-king has frescoed the lichen and pane,
And the harp and the viol awaken the strain
We loved in the days of lang syne.

Come in the evening, at morn, or at noon,
In spring-time with beauty and song,
Come in the summer with sunshine and bloom,
Come in the autumn, to the desolate room
That has waited your coming so long

Come, though the winds of the winter of life
Have drifted your dear locks with snow,
Though the world has been only with enmity rife,
Corroding your soul with the changes and strife,
And left you in shadows of woe.

Always, as ever we whisper your name,
We cry in our loneliness, "Come!"
Come in your honor, your glory, your fame,
Come in your sorrow, humility, shame,
This heart is your kingdom, your home.

BETRAYED;

—OR—

A DARK MARRIAGE MORN.

A Romance of Love, Intrigue and Crime.

BY MRS. ALICE P. CARRISTON.

CHAPTER XXIX—(Continued.)

Some time now passed without making any sensible change in the relations of the different persons of this story.

This was the most brilliant phase, and probably the happiest, in the life of Eugene Cleveland.

The sudden death of Sidney Leland had more than doubled his fortune, and his careful business management and clever speculations augmented it every day.

Mrs. Leland continued to reside at her old home in Roxbury, where her son passed much of his time.

Clara Denton and Mildred Lester were still, for the most part, in New York, and there were now bright hopes that Mildred would soon be her old self again—this the great specialist emphatically promised.

Warren Leland passed all his evenings, when he was in the city, in their society.

Eugene Cleveland's liaison with Cora Elliston, without being proclaimed, was suspected, and completed his prestige.

His prosperity, too, was great. It was, nevertheless true that he did not enjoy it without trouble. Two black spots darkened the sky above his head, and might contain destroying thunder.

His life was eternally suspended on a thread.

Any day Senator Elliston might be informed of the intrigue which dishonored him, either through some selfish reason or through public rumor, which began to spread.

Should this ever happen, he knew his uncle would never submit to it, and he had determined never to defend his life against his outraged friend and relative.

This resolve, firmly decided upon in his secret soul, gave him the last solace to his conscience.

All his future destiny was thus at the mercy of an accident most likely to happen.

The second cause of his disquietude was the jealous hatred manifested by Cora against the young rival she had herself selected.

After having jested freely on this subject at first, she had, little by little, ceased even to allude to it.

Eugene could not misunderstand certain mute symptoms, and was sometimes alarmed at this silent jealousy.

Fearing to exasperate this most violent feminine sentiment in so strong a soul, he was compelled, day by day, to resort to tricks which wounded his pride, and probably his heart also; for his wife, to whom his new conduct was inexplicable, suffered intensely, and he saw it.

One evening there was a grand reception at the Elliston mansion.

Cora, before making a little trip with her husband, whose duties at Washington were now over for the season, was making her adieus to a choice group of her friends.

Although this fete professed to be but a sociable gathering, she had organized it with her usual elegance and taste.

A kind of gallery, composed of verdure and of flowers, connected the drawing-rooms with the conservatory at the other end of the garden.

This evening proved a very painful one to Flora.

Her husband's neglect of her was so marked, his assiduities to Cora so persistent, their mutual understanding so apparent, that the young wife felt the pain of her desertion to an almost insupportable degree.

She went and took refuge in the conservatory, and finding herself alone there, commenced weeping.

A few moments later, Eugene, not seeing her in the drawing-room, became uneasy.

She saw him as he entered the conservatory, by one of those instantaneous glances by which women contrive to see without looking.

She pretended to be examining the flowers, and by a strong effort of will dried her tears.

Her husband advanced slowly toward her.

"What a magnificent camellia!" he said to her. "Do you know this variety?"

"Very well," she replied; "this is the camellia that weeps."

He broke off the flowers.

"Flora," he said, "I have never been much addicted to sentimentality, but this flower I shall keep."

She turned upon him her astonished eyes.

"Because I love it," he added.

The noise of a step made them both turn.

It was Cora Elliston, who was crossing the conservatory on the arm of a young English nobleman.

"Pardon me," she said, smiling; "I have disturbed you. How awkward of me!" and she passed out.

Flora suddenly grew very red, and her husband very pale. The Englishman alone did not change color, for he comprehended nothing.

Flora, under pretext of a headache, which her face did not belie, returned home immediately, promising her husband to send back the carriage for him.

Shortly after, Cora, obeying a secret sign from Eugene, rejoined him in the retired snuggery, which recalled to them both the most culpable incident of their lives. She sat down beside him on the lounge with a haughty nonchalance.

"What is it?" she asked.

"Why do you watch me?" asked Eugene. "It is unworthy of you!"

"Ah! an explanation? Disagreeable thing. It is the first between us—at least, let us be quick about it, and complete."

She spoke in a voice of restrained passion, her eyes fixed on her foot, which she twisted in her satin shoe.

"Well, tell the truth," she said. "You are in love with your wife."

He shrugged his shoulders.

"Unworthy of you, I repeat."

"What, then, mean these delicate attentions to her?"

"You ordered me to marry her, but not to kill her, I suppose?"

She made a strange movement of her eyebrows, which he did not see, for neither of them looked at the other.

After a pause, she said:

"She has her son! She has her mother! I have no one but you! Hear me, Eugene; do not make me jealous, for, when I am so, ideas torment me which terrify even myself.

"Wait an instant," she continued, still more earnestly. "Since we are on this subject, if you love her, tell me so. You know me—you know I am not fond of petty artifices. Well, I fear so much the sufferings and humiliations of which I have a presentiment, I am so much afraid of myself, that I offer you and give you your liberty. I prefer this horrible grief, but which is at least open and noble! It is no snare that I set for you, believe me! Look at me, I seldom weep."

The dark blue of her eyes was bathed in tears.

"Yes, I am sincere," she went on; "and I beg of you, if it is so, profit by this moment, for, if you let it escape, you will never find it again."

Eugene was little prepared for this decided proposal. The idea of breaking off his liaison with Cora never had entered his mind. This liaison seemed to him very reconcilable with the sentiments his wife would inspire him with.

It was at the same time the greatest wickedness and the perpetual danger of his life, but it was also the excitement, the pride, and the magnificent voluptuousness of it.

He shuddered.

The idea of losing the love which had cost him so dear exasperated him.

He cast a burning glance on this beautiful face, refined and exalted as that of a warring archangel.

"My life is yours," he said. "How could you have alarmed yourself, or even thought of my feelings toward another? I do what honor and humanity command me—nothing more. As for you—I love you—understand that."

"Is it true?" she asked. "It is true! I believe you!"

She took his hand and gazed at him a moment without speaking, her eyes dimmed, her bosom palpitating; then suddenly rising, she said:

"My beloved, you know I have guests!" and saluting him with a smile left the little room.

This scene, however, left a disagreeable impression on the mind of Eugene Cleveland.

He thought of it impatiently the next morning while trying a horse in Central Park—when he suddenly found himself face to face with the ex-private secretary, Oscar Slyme.

He had never seen this personage since the day he had ventured to make love to his wife.

The park was almost deserted at this hour. Slyme could not avoid, as he had probably done more than once, encountering Cleveland.

Seeing himself recognized he saluted him and stopped, with an uneasy smile on his lips.

His worn black coat and doubtful linen showed poverty unacknowedged but profound. Eugene did not notice these details, or his natural generosity probably would have been awakened and have curbed the sudden indignation which took possession of him.

He reigned in his horse sharply.

"Ah, it is you, Slyme?" he said. "You have left Boston, then? What are you doing now?"

"I am looking for a situation, Mr. Clevland," said Slyme, humbly, who knew his old rival too well not to read clearly in the curl of his mustache the prognostic of a storm.

"And why," said Eugene, "do you not return to your trade of locksmith? You are so skillful at it! The most complicated locks had no secret for you."

"I do not understand your meaning," murmured Slyme.

"Ah, a liar as well as a picklock, eh?" and throwing out these words with an accent of withering scorn, Eugene, striking him one sharp blow across the face with his riding whip, tranquilly passed on at a walk.

Instantly the face of the ex-secretary became ghastly white, save only for the fiery red mark across it. A look of mortal hatred came into his eyes. He gazed after the slowly retreating form of the horseman until a bend in the road hid him from view; then hissing out the words, "You shall pay dearly for that, Eugene Cleveland!" he turned and hurried away.

CHAPTER XXX.

PREPARING FOR THE TRAGEDY.

Mildred Lester and her devoted friend and constant companion, Clara Denton, did not spend all their time in New York. Scarcely a week passed during which they did not visit Clara's home in Roxbury, for a day, at least, and oftentimes when they returned to the city, Edith Denton, who was rapidly developing into a lovely young woman, would accompany them.

The great specialist was assiduous in his attentions on Mildred, and almost at every visit emphatically declared that the time was now close at hand when all that she had ever lost would be restored to her.

Thus far the past had come back to her gradually, but in the doctor's opinion the complete restoration of her faculties would be instantaneous, and probably brought about by some great and sudden shock.

Warren Leland, who had now attained the object of his ambition and was a member of Congress, was indefatigable in his attentions to the two ladies. Whether they were in New York or Roxbury, he too was there, and at last the devoted Clara had the desire of her soul gratified, his affections were wholly transferred to Mildred, and abruptly, one evening, he asked her to be his wife, and was accepted.

Strange as it may seem, while he yet retained the warmest regard for Clara Denton, he almost idolized Mildred—felt for her a love, a passion, which even the beautiful and royal Clara had never inspired, and he could not bear to be absent from her side even for a day.

Under these circumstances he urged that the marriage should take place with the least possible delay, and after some deliberation an early day was set, and preparations for the interesting event were begun in earnest.

And now Edith became a very important personage. Her services were required by her mother and Mildred from early dawn till latest eve. Everybody called upon her for assistance. She became a female Mercury, and her face was soon as well known in the great dry goods establishments as those of the proprietors themselves.

More than once in her excursions she had met a lovely young lady, several years her senior, but with the sweetest yet sadest face, she thought she had ever seen.

One day, in Marcey's she saw this lady in conversation with the physician who attended Mildred, and at once intimated to him that she should like an introduction.

He responded promptly.

"Miss Fielding," he said, "permit me to make you acquainted with my charming young friend, Miss Edith Denton. Miss Denton, this is Miss Fielding. She will tell you presently that her name is Meta Fielding. I am really pleased, young ladies, that through me you two should become known to each other."

"No more pleased than I am," exclaimed Edith, heartily. "I have wanted to make her acquaintance ever since I first saw her, and I am glad you were the medium through which my desire has been gratified."

"So you really wanted to know me, dear?" asked Meta, in a pleased tone.

"Yes, indeed, I did," answered Edith, emphatically.

"And I was most anxious to make your acquaintance. Your face pleased me so much."

They talked for some time together, and before they parted Edith had promised to pay Meta a visit the very next day.

Of course, when she reached home, Edith was full of her new friend, and could talk of nothing else.

"Meta Fielding!" repeated Mildred, with a troubled look. "Meta Fielding! Surely I have heard that name before."

"When and where, dear?" asked Clara, eagerly. "Was it in the old times, before your sickness?"

"Yes, yes, it was before that, when I——" and then she stopped, with a bewildered expression on her face.

A little later Warren Leland called, and Clara at once asked him if he knew a lady named Fielding.

"Meta Fielding," supplemented Edith; "and she lives on West Forty-seventh street."

"A single lady, I suppose?" he said.

"Yes, and young."

"N-no," said Warren, slowly. "I don't think I have the pleasure of the young lady's acquaintance."

"She has a brother named Ray, and he's in a bank down town," Edith explained.

"Ah! that puts a different face on the matter altogether," said Leland. "I know Ray Fielding very well. He is now assistant cashier in the Atlantic National Bank, of which my father was President. Are you sure he's her brother?"

"Oh, yes," said Edith; "Meta told me all about him."

"Then it's all right; the family is very well connected, and they are perfectly proper people to know."

"Glad to hear it!" exclaimed Edith; "for I intend to call on my new friend to-morrow."

"Do so, by all means."

"You may be sure I shall."

"But, Warren," broke in Clara, "Mildred feels sure she knew this Meta Fielding in the old days; at least, she is certain she has heard the name before."

"She may have heard the name, but I hardly think she has ever met Miss Fielding. The brother and sister, I believe, have passed most of their lives in New York."

"Then where can she have heard the name?"

"Why, perhaps in this very room. I have had short business notes, drafts, and other papers, signed by Fielding, almost every day, and, no doubt, have spoken his name in her presence."

"Ah! that may be."

"I am pretty sure that's the explanation."

"I shall know to-morrow," laughed Edith.

"How will you find out?" asked Leland.

"Easy enough," was the reply. "I shall ask Meta if she ever knew Mildred Lester."

"Of course!" exclaimed her mother; "why didn't we think of that before?"

"Because you're not young and quick-witted as I am," laughed the girl, as she fled from the room.

When she was gone, Leland suddenly turned to her mother and asked:

"When did you or your father hear from Mildred's brother last?"

"We have not heard from him in some time; indeed, for several months," was the reply. "He is still in the South or West, I believe."

"But remittances come regularly?"

"Yes—to my father."

"From where?"

"From Mr. Lester's agent here in New York."

"Have you his address?"

"No, I have not; and I question if my father has."

"That is unfortunate; for Mr. Lester should be notified of the impending event in his sister's life."

"I have thought of that."

"Can you suggest anything?"

"Perhaps if you saw and talked with my father, he might think of some way whereby you could communicate with Mr. Lester."

"I will go to Roxbury to-morrow."

"Do so; and meantime, I will look over what papers I have with me. I may find some note from him that will give me a clew."

The next day Leland went to Roxbury.

At the station when he changed cars, he was surprised to see old Welch, the quondam rag-picker, boarding a Western bound train.

Somehow, but why he could not think, the sight of him brought poor Amy Brownell and her wronged husband to his mind.

But hastily dismissing these he thought of the old man.

"Now, what can he be going to New York for?" he mused. "Can it be that he is tired of a rural life? I hope not, for his daughter's sake," and hurrying to catch his own train he thought no more of the matter at the time.

Meanwhile, Oscar Slyme, the "brother" with whom he was so anxious to communicate, was already thoroughly informed as to all that had transpired relating to Mildred Lester since his last visit to her in Roxbury; and he knew perfectly well that she was likely very soon to marry Warren Leland.

But instead of warning her or her friends of the terrible mistake they were about to make, he hugged himself with fiendish delight to think of the misery it would cause his hated enemy when he should hear of it; and he resolved that he should hear of it very soon after the wedding had taken place, when some other interesting things should be revealed.

But did Oscar Slyme no longer care for Cora Elliston?

No, his eyes had been thoroughly opened; he knew he had merely been her tool, and he thoroughly hated it.

But he did love Flora Leland.

He knew Flora never could be his. He knew what he was about to do would make her hate him, and might kill her; but he was thoroughly resolved to wreak vengeance on Cleveland and Cora at any cost, and such a vengeance as never before was heard of.

Then came in cunning and calculation, and he persuaded himself that, by managing properly, he could gain a large sum from Sherwood Elliston, for the unholy secret he possessed.

He resolved, therefore, since he had the opportunity, to put himself, once for all, beyond misery and want, by cleverly speculating, through his secret, on the great fortune of the Senator.

This secret he had already given to Flora under the inspiration of another sentiment, but he had then in his hands the proofs, which he now was without.

It was necessary, then, for him to arm self with new and infallible proofs; but if the intrigue he was determined to unmask still existed, he did not despair of detecting something certain, aided by the general knowledge he had of the private habits and ways of both Eugene and Cora.

This was the task to which he applied himself from this moment, day and night, with an evil ardor of hate and jealousy.

What would be the outcome?

It is not difficult to guess.

CHAPTER XXXI.

DISCOVERY—DEATH.

Eugene Cleveland was at his club one evening, playing whist with the Senator. He remarked that his uncle was not playing his usual game, and saw imprinted on his features a painful preoccupation.

"Are you in pain, uncle?" said he, after they had finished their game.

"No! no!" said the Senator; "I am only annoyed—a tiresome affair between two of my tenants up the Hudson. I sent Johnson—my head coachman, you know, and a good fellow—up there this morning to inquire into it."

The Senator made a few steps, then returned to Eugene and took him aside:

"My young friend," he said, "I deceived you just now; I have something on my mind—something very serious. I am, to tell the truth, very unhappy."

"What is the matter?" asked Eugene, whose heart sank.

"I shall tell you that probably to-morrow. Come, in any case, to see me to-morrow morning, won't you?"

"Yes, certainly."

"Thanks. Now I shall go, for I am really not well."

He squeezed his hand more affectionately than usual.

"Good-night, my dear boy," he added, and turned around brusquely to hide the tears which suddenly filled his eyes.

Eugene experienced for some moments a lively disquietude, but the friendly and tender adieus of the Senator reassured him that it did not relate to him. Still he continued astonished and even affected by the sad emotion of the old man.

Eugene remained until midnight at the club and then walked to the Elliston mansion. He was introduced into the house with the customary precautions, and this time we shall follow him there.

"Do you love me to-night, Eugene?" softly asked Cora.

"Do you doubt me, Cora? Do you doubt me? Then I swear it!" replied Eugene with warmth and energy, as he kneeled at the feet of the fascinating creature.

The sound of his voice had scarcely died away when the door suddenly opened before them.

The Senator entered.

Cora and Eugene instantly rose to their feet, and, standing side by side, motionless, gazed upon him.

The Senator paused near the door.

As he saw them a shudder passed over his frame, and his face assumed a livid pallor.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

OLD AGE.

Dr. Holmes Talks of Youth and Maturity, and Gives a Prescription for Astonishing Census Clerks.

I was a little over 20 years old when I wrote the lines which some of you may have met with, for they have been often reprinted:

The mossy marbles rest
On the lips that he has prest
In their bloom,
And the names he loved to hear
Have been carved for many a year
On the tomb.

The world was a garden to me then; it is a churchyard now.

"I thought you were one of those who looked upon old age cheerfully, and welcomed it as a season of peace and contented enjoyment."

I am one of those who so regard it. Those are not bitter or scalding tears that fall from my eyes upon "the mossy marbles." The young who left my side early in my life's journey are still with me in the unchanged freshness and beauty of youth. Those who have long kept company with me live on after their seeming departure, were it only by the mere force of habit; their images are all around me, as if every surface had been a sensitive film that photographed them; their voices echo about me as if they had been recorded on those unforgetting cylinders which bring back to us the tones and accents that have imprinted them; as the extinct animals left their tracks on the hardened sands. The melancholy of old age has a divine tenderness in it, which only the sad experiences of life can lend a human soul. But there is a lower level —that of tranquil contentment and easy acquiescence in the condition in which we find ourselves; a lower level in which old age trudges patiently when it is not using its wings. I say wings, for no period of life is so imaginative as that which looks to younger people the most prosaic. The atmosphere of memory is one in which imagination flies more easily and feels itself more at home than in the thinner ether of youthful anticipation.

One of my prescriptions for longevity may startle you somewhat. It is this: Become the victim of a mortal disease Let half a dozen doctors thump you and knead you and test you in every possible way, and render their verdict that you have an internal complaint; they don't know exactly what it is, but it will certainly kill you by and by. Then bid farewell to the world and shut yourself up for an invalid. If you are three-score years old when you begin this mode of life you may very probably last twenty years, and then you are—an octogenarian. In the meantime your friends outside have been dropping off one after another, until you find yourself almost alone, nursing your mortal complaint as if it were your baby, hugging it and kept alive by it—if to exist is to live. Who has not seen cases like this, a man or a woman shutting himself or herself up, visited by a doctor or a succession of doctors (I remember that once in my early experience I was the twenty-seventh physician who had been consulted), always taking medicine until everybody was reminded of that impatient speech of a relative of one of these invalid vampires who live on the blood of tired-out attendants. "I do wish she would get well—or something." Persons who are shut up in that way, confined to their chambers, sometimes to their beds, have a very small amount of vital expenditure, and wear out very little of their living substance. They are like lamps with half their wicks picked down, and will continue to burn when other lamps have used up all their oil. An insurance officer might make money by taking no risks except on lives of persons suffering from mortal disease.—Atlantic Monthly.

No Sass for Her.

A great, sullen-looking, heavy-jawed and brutal-appearing man, six feet tall and weighing at least two hundred pounds, came into a justice's office in company with a little bit of a thin, wan, pale sad-eyed woman who seemed to belong to that class of females who are "afraid to say 'boo' to a goose."

"We want to have a sep'ratin'," said the man gloomily, while the frail little woman looked up with a mere suggestion of color showing in her thin cheeks.

"A separation?" said the judge. "Do you mean a divorce?"

"I guess so," replied the man sullenly. "Me and her can't seem to git along no more."

"No, we can't, jedge," the voice of the sorrowful little woman cut the air with a sound suggestive of the skillful cracking of a whip-lash, "we don't git along at all, and I ain't afeerd to say why, nuther. Here of late he don't wanter do one solitary single thing I tell 'im to do, and I've had jist enough o' his sass, an' yesterday I up an' tuk a hoop-pole an' gin him one good dressin' down that I guess he won't forgit right off, and he's been talking 'sep'ration' and 'divorcement' ever sense, and Lawd knows I'm willin' fer either or both. The man don't walk the airth who kin be sassy to me, no he don't. Not much."—Detroit Free Press.

A Graceful Compliment.

Miss Wellalong (who hopes by making light of her years to be thought quite young)—"Really, I prefer to look on. I am getting too old to dance, you know."

Mr. Affable (who prides himself on always saying the right thing)—"Oh, come, now, you're not old. I don't believe you are within ten years as old as you look."—Boston Times.

Paresis, Perhaps.

Inquiring guest—Waiter!

Waiter—Yes, sah.

Inquiring guest—What is this you have let fall on my bread?

Waiter—Dat, sah, is calf's brains on toast, sah.

Inquiring guest (after a long and careful observation)—What a deuced idiot that calf must have been!—Puck.

ANOTHER big company in England is now after the Chicago breweries.

CONGRESS had a fist fight last week. Two republicans got to quarreling and made quite a scene. Other members interfered and stopped the row.

THE first of the old northern states, Maine, holds its state election on Monday of next week, Sept. 8. Of course it will go republican as it has failed to do that only once since 1856.

NEW tin mines in Dakota furnished tin at less than half the cost of that produced abroad. But the mine owners are asking that the already high duty be more than doubled, to "protect" them. Certainly the people can understand this "protection" steal?

PROF. CHARLES A. TOTTEN of Yale College, believes he has discovered the right day on which Joshua "commanded the sun and moon to stand still," or the "long day." He also thinks he has located the day when the dial of Ahaz reversed its shadow. This he thinks was August 21.

A PLOT has been discovered by which certain high officers in St. Domingo intended to seize that country and kick out its present rulers. They had emissaries in New York to buy arms and other needed material. As it has been exposed, it is likely we shall hear no more of it.

ENGLISH capital is now being freely used to secure control of various large mills and factories in New England. And we suppose they will then soon be before Congress asking for more "protection for American labor." Protection is a humbug, that appeals only to the ignorance of those who can thus easily be gulled into giving up their own profits in order to let another man have them.

CANADA shows a growing sentiment in favor of reciprocity with the United States. In other words, she wants free trade in all common articles produced in both countries. We had this to a certain extent for a long time, and the feeling on both sides of the boundary seems to be in favor of such a sensible plan. It would save both countries much trouble.

LIEUTENANT ITURBIDE, grandson of the first emperor of Mexico, has been sentenced to 340 days imprisonment and dismissed from the army, for merely censuring his superior officers. Of course, this is largely a trick to disgrace and get rid of him, as he was a very popular young man, and they feared he would one day want to be emperor His mother was an American, a Miss Alice Green, of Washington, D. C.

REED the bull dozing speaker is carrying out a similar style of doing things in his state and in his canvass for re-election to congress. His partisans have caused the arrest of a number of men in Reed's district, merely because they refused to take off of the registry of voters the names of a large number of naturalized foreigners, who they feared would vote against Reed at the polls. Reed is getting scared for fear his arbitrary course in congress may cause his defeat, and he is very anxious to get back into the next House.

THE republicans made over half the state debt, and have nothing to show for the money. The democrats made less than half, and can show where one and a half millions went into the three new asylums for the insane. Then we built the new Normal school at Terre Haute, the new library building at Bloomington, the Soldiers', Sailors' and Orphans' Home at Knightstown, the Home for feeble minded at Ft. Wayne the additions to Purdue University and put $200,000 into the soldiers' monument at Indianapolis, besides a lot of expense connected with the grounds about the new capitol building. How do republicans like the comparison.

THE Butler Record thinks there should be a re-apportionment of congressional districts all over the United States, in order to secure the next president for the republicans. Quite likely it is the only thing that will save 'em. But how about the popular will? Should not that have something to do in a national ticket? It would seem not, according to republican ideas of political matters. According to their ideas, the constitution should have provided for making districts, rather than holding elections in them.

THIRTY years ago the united States had on the ocean the finest merchant vessels in the world, and according to our size as a nation, the most of them. Now, our seagoing vessels are no more They have been driven from the ocean by the deadly protective policy of the republican party. And now after ruining our ocean trade, they turn about and ask the people to pay vast sums of money as a bounty to such lines of ships as will go into business. Before the republican party came into power our ships flourished without a bounty.

BLAINE, in his old age, has discovered the truth of the democratic doctrine that "a home market is too small to consume all we produce." He says it is "our highest duty now to extend the area of our foreign trade." If he had helped the democrats to "extend our foreign trade," he could have seen his new ideas realized years ago and our country would to-day be enjoying the blessings of a large foreign trade carried abroad and brought back in ships of our own make. Then there would be no need to subsidize ships, nor for our people to take low prices.

THE democrats have managed to capture the legislature of Oklahoma in spite of the fact that the republicans have a majority of two in the House and one in the Council or Senate. It was done by the Farmers' Alliance members voting with the democrats. This was a sensible thing to do, for all legislation looking to the benefit of farmers has been the work of the democratic party, and all against their interests has been originated by the republican party. The democratic party is the only party to which any laboring man can look for sympathy or assistance.

THE farmers should bear in mind that in 1850 the farming people owned 70 per cent. of the wealth of the country, according to census statistics. But in 1880 it showed they owned only 25 per cent. Farm property has been going down, till it is not worth over half what it was twenty years ago. And all this time the policy of the republican party has been in force. Let farmers study over these facts, and ally themselves with the only party that ever tried to benefit them. By uniting with the democrats, the farmers have always had it in their power to secure such legislation as they needed. But they have been going off too much and helping their enemies.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, one of the ablest of the republican papers says this of the McKinley tariff bill:

> It is almost beyond belief that a man can say that a measure which makes life harder for every consumer by increasing the cost of his clothing and other necessaries, which benefits here and there one petted manufacturing producer, but which does not benefit a single agricultural producer (for it confessedly does not make a new market for a bushel of his wheat or a barrel of his pork), is one which will "stimulate all our industries" and the "distinction and responsibility" of the authorship of it will "benefit the republican party." Were he not thus blinded by paternal feeling he would never talk of the republican party being "benefited" by a measure which will make it harder for everybody to feed, house and clothe himself. That political organization which is foolish enough to ask for popular support on the ground that it has made people poorer and life harder to live deserves a thrashing. If the republican party were so unwise as to do what McKinley wishes, and begin "pointing with pride" to the fact that it has harmed all but a selected few, the the sooner the pall-bearers should be picked out the better.

GREAT frauds have been discovered in the management of the great Comstock mines in Nevada, by which the smaller stockholders have been systematically cheated by the larger stockholders. The latter managed the works and had the books show so many tons of rock crushed at so much a ton in value—many times lower than it really was worth. Then the extra bullion was sent to the mint in the night or so it was entered at the Carson mint at night when the employes were all gone home except the night watch. The night watch carelessly mentioned the odd thing, that so much gold bullion came in at night and that started the small stockholders to looking the matter up, and the fraud leaked out. They sent to Windom, secretary of the treasury to have him send a copy of the accounts at the Carson mint, but so far he has failed to so. Is it possible that these wealthy stockholders also contributed to the great campaign fund of 1888? It looks like it, as it has been the policy of this administration to shield from harm and provide greater profits for all who did so.

S. H. Brown, of Chicago, spent last Sunday in Waterloo.

Wm. A. Patterson is building a large addition to his barn.

C. Hartwick has recently visited Angola for a day or two.

Mrs. Brown, of Hartford City, is visiting Rev. and Mrs. Rhetts.

Several persons from this place attended the soldiers reunion at Hamilton.

Mrs. J. B. Taylor, of Kendallville spent last Thursday and Friday in our town.

Miss Bessie Kelley spent Monday in Auburn the guest of her cousin, Pearl.

A cement walk is being laid in front of the Presbyterian church on Wayne street.

W. Phelps, M. D., of Fort Wayne, was in town Wednesday and Thursday of last week.

Last week Tuesday C. M. Merica, county superintendant of schools was in town.

Mrs. Prof. Davis is reported as some better and hopes are entertained for her recovery.

Bert Butler, who has been spending some time at Ft. Wayne returned to his home Monday.

Dr. T. J. Carpenter went this week to his old home at Defiance, O., to be absent a few days.

A. C. Grahlke has a very handsome cactus in bloom which attracts a great deal of attention.

Miss Bessie Bassett returned home last week Tuesday from Cleveland, where she has been visiting.

Dr. T. J. Carpenter has received some very fine cotton bolls from a friend in Sheffield, Alabama.

Mrs. Nellie Carpenter returned Monday from Pleasant Lake, where she has been visiting friends.

Last week Mrs. Wm. Fisher received a visit from the Misses McFarran and Rhodabaugh, of Ft. Wayne.

Mrs. Robert Patterson united with the M. E. church by letter from the U. B. church on Sunday August 24.

John Leas and wife, his two sons W. H. and H. K. Leas and their wives visited Detroit and the exposition last week.

Flora Speer started to school at Westerville, Ohio, last Monday. She has been in attendance there several terms.

Mr. and Mrs. Gill are absent in Ohio visiting relatives. They expect to stop in Cleveland to purchase their fall supply of millinery goods.

Tuesday of last week Mrs. Baird, of Auburn, came here on her way to Detroit but was taken suddenly ill, and was compelled to return home.

Miss Myrtle Ball, of Pleasant Lake, has been visiting for several weeks at Bay View, Mich., on her return home she spent Friday afternoon with friends in Waterloo.

We are having beautiful weather now. Corn is growing, and if it will only continue this pleasant until after the fairs at Auburn and Waterloo many people will be happy.

Mrs. F. P. Blair, of Laporte, and little daughter Mamie were in Waterloo on Tuesday. Master Harold who has been here visiting his grandparents, will return home with his mother.

Bert Biedler has returned from Bay View, Mich., where he has been with his mother for several weeks. Mrs. B. stopped on her way home to visit relatives, but is expected home Tuesday of this week.

Last Sunday morning at the Presbyterian church Rev. Hays preached an excellent sermon from Romans v, 1. The singing was very fine indeed, and is an attraction by itself, as well as a very important part of the service.

Thursday evening Sept., 4, Miss Mattie Maxson will give a musicale at her home. She has a large music class, and the program for the evening is an attractive one, and those so fortunate as to be present may consider themselves favored.

A sister of Mrs. Bohler who has been visiting her for some weeks, left for her home in Kansas Monday night of this week. She desired to hasten her return as much fruit of various kinds is suffering for lack of care. A niece, daughter of a sister in Ohio has also been visiting Mrs. Bohler.

BUTLER.

E. Campbell and Charley Gengnagle are seeing the sights in Detroit and its expositions this week.

Rose & Brown have a very nice assortment of boots and shoes, and are having quite a trade to start with.

Harmon Ames and family, of Defiance county, Ohio, were visiting some of their Butler friends last Sunday.

A liberal sprinkling of Butler people mingled with the crowd at the soldiers reunion at Hamilton last Thursday and Friday.

A new mill is among the early possibilities of Butler. It will be located near the Lake Shore elevator and will be of the capacity of one hundred barrels of flour per day.

Fred Gengnagle has greatly enlarged his hardware store and now has the largest ground floor room in town. He is pushing to the front, and has his room well filled with an assorted stock.

Rev. Stone, of the M. E. church returned last week after an absense of two weeks, and filled his pulpit as usual. The church received an accession of about seventy-five members last Sunday.

A couple of Butler boys whose names we will omit were arrested last Saturday, charged with breaking into a Wabash car and stealing merchandise. We have not heard what disposition was made of their case.

Mrs. Keenan, wife of Michael Keenan, died very suddenly at her residence on the north side last Monday morning. She ate her breakfast in usual health and was a corpse before nine o'clock the same morning.

The Patrons of Industry are stirring up our business men pretty lively. The chance of doing business on a less margin than competition has already forced them to do, does not look very favorable to them. There are a few business firms in our place that have made some money, but where one firm or individual has succeeded, a half dozen or more have made failures, and lost all they put in trade. The outlook for this new panacea for all the ills our farmer friends are heir to, does not bear the most roseate hues of success.

AUBURN JUNCTION.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Wertz are the parents of a new baby girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Carper are the parents of a bran new baby boy.

Miss Minnie Mayors was the guest of Miss Minnie and Pearl Grube.

The S. S. convention turned out with good success and was well attended.

Mrs. J. Bell has been quiet sick for several days, but is much better now.

There will be a great excursion over the B. & O. to the Chicago exposition.

Tramps are becoming numerous here again. There ought to be a law to prevent this.

Frank Hough was reported to be bleeding to death the other evening but is improving now.

Miss Mattie Moody, of Auburn, has been here several days visiting her cousin, Miss Allie Grube.

The Monitor Mf'g Company will commence to lay the foundation for their building this week.

We understand that our Sunday school was the largest school at the convention, also did the best singing.

Mr. L. B. Fretz filled the place of our preacher, Rev. J. J. Fred last Sunday evening on the account of the latter not feeling well.

Stealing has been carried on quite extensive here, and those that could not find ripe watermelons helped themselves to green tomatoes.

Commissioners' Court.

The board began its regular session on Monday as usual. Much work is to be done. They have put in the time on licenses, ditch work, consideration of bills, and such work. So much is unfinished, that we omit further report till next week.

Every Lady and Gent

within 50 miles of Auburn is invited to call on F. E. Davenport and try a 25ct. bottle of the great guaranteed remedy for coughs and colds, Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup in the world. A Close Call.

There near being a very serious accident at the funeral of Mr. Mahlon Baker, who died at his home south of Garrett last Sunday week, and was buried on Monday. The procession was just going over the high bridge across the railroad at Altona, and about three-fourths had got over, when the fast train was seen coming on at a high rate of speed. Just as Harvey Clark's team, containing his wife, and a young lady companion, had begun to go down off of the bridge, the train thundered along under them. They started and ran into Theo. Smith's buggy ahead of them tearing the top off. Both teams then jumped off at the right side, and down the embankment they rolled. The young lady in Clark's buggy thinks they went twice over. The buggy was smashed, and the horse ran off, breaking the buggy body. Mrs. Clark was considerably bruised, and those in both buggies badly shaken up and frightened. But it might have been worse, had not a heavy wagon been just ahead of them, and so partly checked them For a few moments it was an excited funeral procession.

Of a good house-wife, who uses SAPOLIO, it is well said: "The mouse is muzzled in her house." Try it and keep your house clean. All grocers keep it.

Cleanliness and neatness about a house are necessary to insure comfort. Man likes comfort, and if he can't find it at home, he will seek elsewhere for it. Good housewives know that SAPOLIO makes a house clean and keeps it bright. Happiness always dwells in a comfortable home. Do you want cleanliness, comfort and happiness? Try SAPOLIO and you will be surprised at your success.

Phil. Carr of Ligonier, gets a wide range of territory in the auctioneer business. He is advertised by the Hicksville News to have a sale near there last Saturday. Up this way, Jake Magginis takes the cake.

Richard Locke and Grant Fisk, of Waterloo, were over here Sunday evening to attend the union services at the Presbyterian church. The former has been a student at DePauw university, and came over to greet his teacher, Mr. Bassett.

"Five years ago I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and had been given up by my physicians. I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and after using two bottles of this medicine, was completely cured."—Anga A Lewis, Ricard, N. Y.

A. J. Ralston bought the finest potatoes, Monday, that have come to town this year. They were raised by Mr. Muhn who resides in Butler township. He says he will have about 200 bushels and as they are worth nearly or quite $1, it will be seen that he is all right, corn or no corn.

English Spavin Liniment removes all hard, soft, or calloused lumps and blemishes from horses, blood spavin, curbs, splints, sweeny, ring-bone, stifles, all swollen throats, coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle, warranted. The most wonderful blemish cure known. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Indiana. tf

The soldiers' reunion at Hamilton was a splendid affair. It was for the four counties Defiance, Williams, DeKalb and Steuben, and will be held there each year. Gen. Blair and several others made speeches while L. B. Fretz of Auburn, spoke for the S. of V. It was one of the most quiet and orderly ever held in this part of the country, and the old Vets feel proud of it.

A sweet little magazine for small children is "Our Little Ones' published by The Russel Publishing Co., 36 Bromfield St., Boston. The September number is a beauty, and it is full of nice little stories and fine pictures to illustrate them. The children will be especially pleased at the picture story about the "Watermelon Fairies." The whole number is crowded with good things.

The barn of Isaac Metcalf in Franklin township burned last Sunday morning at about two o'clock. Just fourteen days before, Mr. M. had had it insured. The next day after the fire he sent for the agent Mr. Hastings of Auburn, who went to see about it, and on Tuesday he settled the loss of $615. This is quick work. Mr. Hastings is agent for the Ohio Farmers' Insurance Co., and from this, it is plain that his company means to be prompt. It was lucky, too, for Mr. Metcalf.

A hasty glance over Harter's new fall goods shows that as usual they have been selected with care and taste. The dress goods are nice, the cloaks are such as any lady could desire and a large assortment from which to select. The carpet department is very full and has been enlarged. The millinery department attracts the ladies by the beauty and arrangement of the display. Miss Clayburg presides over this department and adds very much to its attractiveness by her pleasant manner.

Theater at Opera House all next week.

See the new goods at Cowan Sisters.'

New goods! New goods!! at Mrs. Jones & Son. 35—37

Ligonier fair begins Sept. 16. They always have a good one.

Mrs. and Mrs. W. H. Dills are at Detroit taking in the exposition.

Brick work going up on the M. E. church. Begins to look like business.

The Auburn foundry is working night and day to help along the new bridge.

Good, safe horses that ladies can drive at the Palace Barn, to let on reasonable terms. 2t

Mrs. Isaac Johnson was called to Montgomery, Mich., Tuesday to attend the funeral of a relative.

Mrs. F. K. Blake has been back here a week or more visiting the relatives here and at Waterloo, and thereabouts. They are located at Wichita, Kansas, and we are glad to know, are doing well.

Heating stoves for wood or coal, a good variety and at reasonable rates, at J. Beuret's hardware store on North Main street Auburn. Don't fail to stop and see his goods when you come to the fair. 37

Mrs. Annise Leas returned from Cleveland last week, and brought with her a large assortment of new styles in millinery, which it would pay the ladies to see before purchasing their fall and winter hats.

Take a good square look at the monster advertisement of Mr. Kiblinger which we display this week. It gives one an idea of the immense amount of fine goods he has on sale, and the extent of his business.

I am compelled to collect my book accounts, and to all those who call at the office and settle with me I will deduct the expense of a collector. I must have this matter attended to inside of 30 days. Dr. W. H. Nusbaum.

See here, Tom Flake, I will just take my team to the Palace barn and then go out to the fair grounds and stay all day. Corner of Ninth and Jackson street, west of Swineford House. J. C. Henry & George Swineford Props. 37

Any voter who moves from one county to another, or from one township to another, after September 5. or who moves from one precinct to another after October 5, will thereby lose his vote. The election will be held Tuesday, November 4.

Trentman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

"It goes right to the spot," said an old gentleman, who found great benefit in Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He was right. Derangements of the stomach, liver, and kidneys are more speedily remedied by this medicine than by any other. It reaches the trouble directly.

Tickets for the fair will be on sale at F. E. Davenport's drug store and F. J. Yesbera's jewelry store. As many as can had better buy tickets at one or the other of these places before going over to the fair ground, and save time at the gates. Single tickets 25 cents, team 25 cents.

The town will be full to overflowing fair week. Ample preparations should be made to feed and lodge them. Private homes will be in demand. All who can should be willing to open their homes to those who need, for a fair must see that its patrons are made comfortable. If not, they will not come again.

Rev. H. J. Finch, former pastor of the Baptist church, will preach to the people of Auburn, at that church on Monday evening, Sept. 8, at 7:30. Mr. Finch has many warm friends in this community, and it will afford him great pleasure to meet them on that occasion. A cordial invitation is extended to all who may desire to attend this meeting.

Fred. Funk has a medal of which he is justly proud and on Sundays, or when he goes to a democratic convention he always wears it. It was given him by the German government for his services as a soldier in the Franco-Prussian war. On one side we read "1870 1871. Gott war mit uns, Ihm sei die Ehre." (God was with us. To him be the honor.) The other side reads, "Fuer Pflichtreue im Kriege." (For faithfulness to duty in war.)

Mrs. Sthair is ready to supply and suit the public with any thing in the corset line which she guarantees to be the most perfect fit and best setting corset ever made; expanding front and back; always sells on sight; made of best satteen and satin; white, drab and black; long or short hip, one or two lacings in the back. Fancy colors, pink, pale blue, red, old gold, cardinal, tan, garnet and cream. Nursing corsets all style and in fancy colors. Nursing or adominal. Children's waists, white or drab. She is also prepared with the best fitting vandyke and comfort ever make, hose supporting and braces. The sole agent for DeKalb county for the Hygeia or Great Western Combination Corset and Waist. Call and see Mrs. A. E. Sthair. tf

The Holden Opera Company, which will hold the boards at the Opera House all next week, comes well reccommended. The company is headed by Miss Edith Arnold, who is said to be an actress of engaging capabilities and introduces the mascot quartet at each performance. The repertory contains "Queena" the opening play, Monday evening; "Mad Cap Peg." "Led Astray," "Twixt Love and Duty," "An Evening Out," "The Banker's Daughter," "Member of Congress," "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and other plays, the latter being the matinee attraction for Saturday. The popular scale of prices will prevail, 25 and 35 cents, and the management guarantees a good series of popular entertainments worth much more than the price of admission.

Beuret for stoves, North Main street.

Mrs. G. H. Yesbera came home last evening from her visit at Manton, Mich.

Gasolene stoves, the best in the market, at Beuret's hardware store, Auburn.

Holden Opera Company all next week at Opera House. All first-class plays by good actors.

Mrs. W. E. Rush is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Florence Buchanan, at Concord, this week.

Miss Lila Baker returned home Monday after a visit with friends in Van Wert, Ohio, and Ft. Wayne.

When you come to Auburn take your team to the Palace Barn and get it feed. Henry & Swineford proprietors.

Mrs. Alzina Glazier has returned from her trip of three months in Ohio, bringing word that she had a good time.

Elias Zimmerman has been making extensive improvements on his already fine residence. He will have one of the finest homes in the city.

The Farmers' Record, Muncie, Ind., organ of the F. M. B. A., Alliance, Grange, &c., want men to act as agents at the Auburn Fair. Write for terms.

The Northeastern Baptist Sunday School convention will meet at Garrett, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 5 and 6. A good program is out and a good time expected.

Miss Maud Thorley, who has been visiting Mabel Hartman went over to Warsaw Saturday, where she will make a visit before returning to her home at Findlay.

The ladies of the C. L. S. C., are requested to meet with Mrs. Ernest Sheets next Saturday at 2:30 p. m., as there is important business to transact. By order of the president.

The Baptist church, at Garrett, will dedicate their new house of worship on Sunday, Sept. 7. Rev. H. J. Finch will preach the dedication sermon at about 10:30 a. m. Let everybody come!

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

When you attend the big fair at Auburn be sure and put up your teams at the Palace Barn west of Swineford House cornor of Ninth and Jackson streets. J. C. Henry & Geo. Swineford, Proprietors. 35-36

Drive up there Jim, and get out of my way. I want to get to the Palace barn before all the room is gone. West of Swineford House, corner of Ninth and Jackson. J. C. Henry & George Swineford, Props. 37

NOTICE TO SETTLE: All parties knowing themselves indebted to J. A. Potter, are requested to call and settle the same before Sept. 25, at which time all unsettled accounts will be left for collection Let none fail to attend to this.

Col. I. B. McDonald of Columbia City was in town last Saturday having been called here to address the meeting of the Farmers' Alliance at Kutzner's Grove north of town. Vet Rogers gave him a ride over to the new fair grounds.

HORSES FOR SALE: I have two good work horses for sale. Inquire at my residence at No. 34 North Main street, Auburn, or leave word at Robbins & McCord's drugstore.

James Adams
Veterinary Surgeon

The members of the L. L. C. have decided to postpone their meetings for a couple of weeks on account of the institute and fair. Their first meeting after their summer vacation will then be on Saturday September 20th. The club will meet with Mrs. H. J. Ralston.

J. C. Henry and George Swineford, had a big parade of their livery establishment as a sort of opening, on Saturday afternoon. They are going to make business lively, and will be ready to furnish any kind of a turnout, that can be called for. We predict a good business for them.

Kendallville Standard: Twenty ten wheel freight engines are being built for the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad by the Baldwin works. The weight of each of these engines is to be 100,000 pounds, 73,000 of which is on the drivers. These engines are said to satisfactorily handle fifty loaded cars over the flat gradients of the Lake Shore road.

Walter Penfield came home reaching here on the morning B. & O. fast train Wednesday morning. He has been staying in Washington two months with his uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lamson. He comes home looking bright as a dollar right out of the mint, and evidently glad to meet his young friends again. He and Tommy Husselman were all the forenoon rushing around to see their young chums. Walter reports all well at the capital.

Huntington Democrat: The republicans make a great ado about favoring British manufacturers, and cry aloud for protecion to American industry, and then turn about and sell their plants to British syndicates at high figures, thus turning the profits of American protection into the pockets of British capitalists. This is one way. Another and a common method is to import pauper labor direct from Europe. The thing they call protection is for the benefit of capital. Labor gets no share of it and is beginning to see it.

We assure the Waterloo Press that no "Auburn parties have circulated about Hicksville a report that Waterloo will have no fair this year." Both Auburn papers have been advertising the Waterloo fair assuring all who read these two excellent papers that Waterloo will hold its fair the week beginning October 6. All should call at a number of places we have advertised in all the towns of the county, and get a premium list. Or call for one at the COURIER office. You will find it the most perfect premium list ever printed in the county.

An accident to the engine delayed the COURIER this week.

All kinds of hardware at Beuret's. Call when you are in town. 37

Write to secretary Cal. Husselman, if you wish any information about the fair.

See Dr. Buchtel's card, which begins to-day. He comes with strong recommendations.

See the new ads. of several of our merchants. They are getting on big stocks of goods.

Aha! Herb Weaver! Papa Herb! A boy, ten pounds by the hay scales. Tuesday evening!!

Balloon ascension at the fair, Wednesday and Friday of next week, and daring leap from the clouds.

The P. B. C. will meet next Monday evening at the home of Miss Gertie Wilson. All members are requested to be present.

Don't forget the date of the DeKalb Co. Fair Sept. 8 to 12. Get something ready and go. Good races. Everything new.

Shugers and Casebeer have rented the dining hall on the fair grounds. That means good meals and plenty for all. Everybody gets a good square meal.

Make your entries for the fair. All who live in Auburn, or near here should call on the secretary and make entries this week, to avoid the rush. Don't forget.

John P. Bemenderfer died at his home in Elkhart county last week. His father, Henry Bemenderfer, is, we believe, a brother to John Bemenderfer in Waterloo.

A. P. Small now has the Seventh street bakery, formerly occupied by Wesley Miser. He is a practical baker of many years experience, and will no doubt work up a good business.

I say Geo. where did you get that fine turnout last Sunday? Oh at the Palace Barn west of Swineford House, was't it a slick one. J. C. Henry & Geo. Swineford are the proprietors. 35 6

Get your printing for the fair at the COURIER office. Nearly every business man will need some work to help advertise or display his goods. Come early and avoid the rush.

Dr. Buchtel was called to Garrett several times during the past week for consultation in a desperate case of typhoid fever. At last accounts the patient was beginning to improve.

Cal. Husselman is the only candidate DeKalb county will put up at the joint representative convention Sept. 9, at Ligonier. Noble county talks of Capt. E. H. Fisher. Both are good men, and are hustlers.

L. Bowers, Ed Weeks and J. E. Rose with their wives took in the Detroit exposition last week. Jacob Walborn was with them, but his wife was sick and could not go. All say the exposition was splendid.

The Auburn Schools begin Sept. 15. The State School books will be for sale at the high school room Thursday and Friday of this week from 4 to 5 o'clock and Saturdays Sept. 6th and 13th from 9 to 10 o'clock.

I say George did you see that run-away up Main street in Auburn yesterday? Those parties were trying to get to the Palace livery and feed barn west of Swineford House, corner of Ninth and Jackson street. J. C. Henry & George Swineford, Props. 37

Rev. T. J. Bassett, one of the professors at DePauw university preached to a crowded house Sunday evening at the Presbyterian church. It was one of the most powerful and interesting sermons ever heard here. He came here to work as a teacher in the institute now in session.

A tramp has been hanging about the neighborhood where Sherman Dickinson resides, east of town for some days. He don't seem in a hurry to leave, and has been something of an annoyance. He came to the house one day, when only their little daughter, Pearl, was at the house, and wanted something to eat. The dog objected to the presence of the tramp, and he insisted that the little girl should call the dog into the house. Then she gave him some bread and having eaten a small portion, he put the rest into his pocket, and asked for more. They have felt obliged to keep a watch on things, as they feel hardly safe to leave the house alone. Such fellows should be given a steady job by the authorities.

M. E. Boren, son of Morris Boren, who resides southeast of town made us a very unusual present last Saturday. It was a splendid, home-grown watermelon. We have often wondered why we could not raise melons in northern Indiana now, as we did when we were a boy. When the country was new, melons were raised on nearly every farm and fine ones, too. Then, "melons and coon hunting" went together, hand in hand, as it were. So people said. But it has been some years since we saw a melon patch, although we presume there is now and then a farmer who raises a few for his own use. Mr. Boren tells us, that on a small patch they have had all they could eat, and have sold seven or eight dollars' worth in town. We have no doubt but many farmers could hunt out a patch for melons, and get a fair crop.

Teachers' Institute.

The institute is a splendid one, with fine instructors, fine spirits, grand lectures, and a superintendent who is master of the situation. Many familiar faces appear, but more, that are not so familiar to the editor of this paper. But all are doing well, and we make this brief note to say to them, that the small portion of the institute proceedings we could get ready this week did not seem satisfactory. So we ask their indulgence, and will send them next week, the entire report, so they will have it to keep.

Cook Ford is here to assist in Ralston's grocery during the busy season.

Miss Maud Baker while trying to light a gasolene stove was burned about the face and hands quite severely yesterday.

MARRIED: At the M. E. parsonage on Thursday Aug. 28th, Mr. John H. Richmond and Miss Hattie Brown all of Garrett, Ind.

MARRIED: At the residence of Mr. Joseph Lanning on Sabbath August 31, by Rev. H. M. Lamport, Mr. Vilver J. May to Miss Minnie Lanning.

Nicholas Ensley and daughter, Eva, came home last week. Miss Eva remained here for some days enjoying a visit with her young friends.

O. W. Nottingham, the well known teacher of penmanship, was here yesterday on his way to Albion. He will be here, again about October 1, and teach his art in the schools.

Mr. Kriebel, principal of the Butler schools, called at our office yesterday to get acquainted with the editor. We were glad to meet him, and believe the good people of Butler, made no mistake in giving him charge of their schools.

Under the new election law, the chairman and secretary of a nominating convention must sign a certificate of nomination for all candidates so nominated, make oath to the same, and deliver it to the county board of election commissioners. There are many new points in law, that should receive attention.

Speaking of Dr. Buchtel's removal to Auburn, the Ligonier Banner says: Dr. I. O. Buchtel and his estimable wife, left for Auburn last Thursday, and are now located as permanent citizens of that wide awake town. We commend these young people to their new neighbors in every particular, and hope that they will receive the good will and encouragement they so well deserve.

SILK from paper pulp is made smooth and brilliant, with about two-thirds the strength of ordinary silk and about the same elasticity.

A GEORGIA editor has twenty-seven children. He positively refuses to insert an advertisement announcing that a boy or girl is wanted.

A TRAMP named Wilson Becker bet a Boston man that he could beat his way to San Francisco and back to Boston in twenty-one days, without spending a cent. He made the trip and won the bet.

"UNCLE DARE," a centenarian living near Sheffield, Ala., has just died. He was with Andrew Jackson in the Indian war and helped to plot Sheffield over seventy years ago. His wife died in 1842, and every day up to his death he prayed at her grave.

THE leaves of the paw-paw tree are employed by the negroes in washing linen, as a substitute for soap. They also have the property of rendering meat wrapped in them, tender, owing to the alkaloid papain which they contain and which acts as a solvent.

THE accounts of a pill-maker who has just died in England show that he has been spending $200,000 a year for advertising. His heirs, however, are finding no particular fault with this extravagance, as he leaves an estate valued at $25,000,000—all due to pills and advertising.

THE smallest newspaper in the world is published at Arp, Banks County, Ga. It is 7½x5 inches. It is named The Boss, and is edited by W. A. Harris, who claims in his salutatory that the paper is a perfectly normal product, yet it appears to be the representative of a literary club, a laboratory, an alliance, a broom factory and a flying machine.

WELDLESS tubes of steel are now made in Germany by the Mannesmann process out of solid bars. A pair of rolls revolve at the rate of 200 or 300 revolutions a minute. A bar of hot and therefore plastic steel is delivered to them, and by their action it is stretched and a hollow is made in the center. The tubes made by this process are peculiarly strong and light.

MR. JOHN COLLINS WOOD, of Kentucky, is, perhaps, the richest jack-tar living, having had many vicissitudes. The death of his father and reverses of fortune making him a dry goods salesman in New York, the death of a rich uncle in Paris gave him an inheritance of two million dollars, and sent him to Atlantic City in search of lost health. Here he lives in a hotel, but belongs to the life-saving crew, wears surfman's garb, and serves regularly in the lifeboat, alleviating the hardships of his comrades with his free purse.

NEAR Somerset in Perry County, Ohio, is an ancient ruin, whose walls, inclosing forty acres, were built of undressed stone, now lying in confusion. They have been estimated sufficient to build a wall seven feet high and six feet broad around the whole forty-acre inclosure. One gateway between two large rocks opened into the country and was defended by a huge bowlder. The inclosure contained a large stone mound. No skeletons have been found, and the inclosure was certainly used for other purposes than habitation or sacrifice.

IT is said that the butler of the Fifth avenue mansion occupied by the widow of William Vanderbilt each day for dinner sets the table with an entirely different service of plate, glass, and china, and the mistress of all this magnificence is thus daily given an opportunity to enjoy the beauty of her treasures. The plate is stored in a room adjoining the dining-room, in which two rows of safes are built into the walls, the upper row being reached by steps and an inside balcony. To the care of the butler is consigned these rare collections, and he is obliged to give bond for their safe keeping.

IN Brittany a curious matrimonial custom prevails. On certain fete days the young ladies appear in red petticoats, with white or yellow borders around them. The number of borders denote the portion the father is willing to give his daughter. Each white band, representing silver, denotes one hundred francs per annum, and each yellow band denotes gold, and betokens one thousand francs a year. Thus a young man who sees a face that pleases him has only to glance at the trimmings of the petticoats to learn what amount accompanies the wearer.

THERE are more ducks in the Chinese empire, says an authority, than in all the world outside of it. They are kept by the Celestials on every farm, on the private roads, on the public roads, on streets of cities, and on all the lakes, ponds, rivers, streams, and brooks in the country. Every Chinese boat also contains a batch of them. There are innumerable hatching establishments all through the empire, many of which are said to turn out about 50,000 young ducks every year. Salted and smoked duck and ducks' eggs constitute two of the most common and important articles of diet in China.

"BUT while in Mexico on my last trip," says a drummer in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "I had my breath taken away when I saw what I guess is the most magnificently constructed railroad in the world. I refer to the Mexican Gulf Road, where ties are made out of the finest mahogany and bridges built of marble. The waste seems criminal, but the builders are actuated by motives of economy, as they find the mahogany and marble along the track side. The road hasn't really cost much to construct, but if the material were appraised at St. Louis or New York standard of prices the total would amount up in the millions."

GROWING near the baths of Alliaz, in the canton of Vaud, Switzerland, 4,500 feet above the level of the sea, stands the most remarkable tree in the world. The trunk of the tree is a little over thirty feet at the base. At about two yards above the ground it puts out on the south side seven offshoots. Bent and gnarled at the bottom, these side trunks soon straighten themselves up and rise perpendicular and parallel to the main stem. Another most curious fact is that the two largest of the side trunks are connected with the principal stem by sub-quadrangular braces resembling girders. The places where the side girders enter the main trunk of the tree are so smoothly barked over as to make it impossible to ascertain the manner in which nature formed the remarkable union.

A COMPANY has been established to guarantee depositors in national, State and savings banks and trust companies against loss by reason of the suspension or failure of such institutions in which those guaranteed may have their deposits. In case of the suspension or failure of such an institution in which the party guaranteed has money on deposit, the company, upon receiving evidence of that fact and a transfer of the claim with power of attorney to collect, pays the full amount due the guaranteed by the insolvent institution. The rates are as follows: For any amount not exceeding $300, $1 per year; for any amount not exceeding $500, $1.50 per year; for any amount not exceeding $1,000, $2.50 per year; and $2.50 for every additional $1,000 guaranteed. It is a New Jersey institution and has been incorporated less than a year.

SOME interest has lately been created by statements, from various sources, as to the distance at which large objects on the earth are visible. Those responsible for the statements are mostly men of credit, but some of the assertions scarcely seem credible. M. Emile Metzger asserts that he once saw Kelzerspekt, in Sumatra, when 110 miles off, and that, under favorable conditions, he can see Guy Merapt, in Japan, when 180 miles away. Mr. E. Hill, an English engineer, declares that he has seen Mont Blanc from Plz Muraun, a distance of 120 miles; and Mr. J. Starkle Gardner says he has seen the same mountain from Plz Landgard. The whole range of the Swiss Alps were visible to Mr. J. Hippisley at a distance of 220 miles, while Sir W. Jones declares that he has seen the Himalayas from a spot fully 224 miles away.

BRAZILIANS have more than their share of curiosity. Loving to see and be seen, they lounge in their balonies or hang over the sill, that they may show their interest in every animal or human being that passes. If a mansion is situated at some distance from the street, there is a pretty little summer-house near the gate, where the family may sit and see what goes on outside. During business hours, in the busiest streets may be seen groups of men standing and gossiping. The doorways of the stores will be blocked by merchants staring into the street. If a customer enters a store, the merchant receives him with a nonchalant air, as if he cared nothing for money in comparison with a lazy life. Often the merchant answers that he has not the article the customer wishes; if the customer discovers it, the merchant smiles and arches his eyebrows. Or the merchant, opening a case and motioning the customer to search for what he has asked, returns to the street door and looks out. The curiosity of the Brazilians is morbid.

A Monkey-Ridden City.

The head center of all monkeydom is the holy city of Muttra, or Mathura, a sort of supplementary Benares, on the river Jumna. Here we find another species, the same, I think, from which the organ-grinder generally selects his partner. The principal care in life of the citizens is to protect themselves and their property from the depredations of this privileged class, for, as they are sacred—and what animal is not in Hindooland?—they can not be killed or molested in any manner.

Every window in the town is barred with lattices, as not even the highest is out of their reach, for they could give points to the best gymnast that ever swung on a trapeze. Along the underside of the highest balconies they follow one another in single file, leaping past intervening brackets, or with one bound they clear the street, and swinging from the pendant branches of a banyan tree, in they go at some small opening left for a moment unguarded, lured by the sight of a bowl of milk on the sill; and when they are chased out again at the point of a broomstick, they go and console themselves among the stalls of the fruit sellers in the bazar.—Harper's.

Make Their Toilets in Public.

Here is a scene in Oriental Ahmedabad: As the sun is just up, the people are opening their doors and windows, and standing up their beds against the walls; some are performing their toilet operations in full view of the street, and gossiping with their neighbors as they squat in their doorways. A whole row of them are brushing their teeth with wood sticks in unison over the gutter. Brown babies of all sizes are playing in the doorways among the chickens and kids.

Here is a house carved like a jewel box, the heavy door is sumptuously wrought with crossbeams, ornamented with projecting metallic bosses. While we are lost in admiration it suddenly opens, and a couple of cows rush madly out and clatter down the steps of the portico; cows in India do not object to going up and down stairs. We are not to suppose, however, that this is a barn; it only happens that the cows, in coming from their quarters behind, are obliged to traverse the lower floor of the family mansion.

"OUGHT" is, of course, a mere cipher to any man who is dead to a sense of duty.

MILLS TO THE FARMERS

FALLACIES OF THE PROTECTIONISTS EXPOSED.

Able Address of the Texas Statesman to the People of Iowa, Delivered Before the Crowds at the Creston Blue Grass Exposition.

Our free government is supported by an enormous tax levied on articles as they go from the hand of the producer to the mouth or body of the consumer. Our free government has torn out one system of slavery and is now struggling in convulsions to eradicate another. The beneficiary of tariff slavery denounces free trade with as much vehemence as the beneficiary of human slavery denounced free negroes. Yet the manacles have been stricken from the hands of the negroes, and it is only a question of time when they will fall from the hands of white men. When our first tax bill was enacted in 1789, it declared in its preamble that its object was to protect manufactures. In order to accomplish the much-desired object, a protective duty of less than 10 per cent. on dutiable goods was imposed. This encouraging duty of $10 on the $100 worth of dutiable goods was about ten times as much taxation as they were paying for the support of their State governments, and was regarded as very liberal encouragement, and under it our fathers confidently expected the infant would soon be able to stand alone and cease to depend upon the bottle for its nourishment.

They never contemplated that the infant was to remain a perpetual imbecile, and that the longer it lived the more nursing it would require. But after one hundred years have gone the bottle-sucking policy is more importunately demanded than it was then. Instead of the bottle the infant is now crying for a demijohn filled with protection and strengthened with an infusion of free whisky. Instead of its growing stronger on protection it is growing weaker, and the milk has to be mingled with alcohol and administered in greater quantities. To-day the average protection is 300 per cent. greater than it was one hundred years ago, and Congress is being importuned to raise it to 400 per cent. over that of 1789. The average tax on dutiable articles for the year ending June 30, 1889, was $45 on the $100 of imports, and the bill now pending and which will soon be passed will make it $50 on every $100 worth. The experience of the country for a century shows that protection not only does not develop the infant into self-reliant and self-supporting manhood, but develops and intensifies his imbecility. If the next hundred years shall produce the same result as the one we have passed, it will require $100 of taxes on $100 of imports to enable the domestic infant to live. It was admitted by our fathers that high duties were a contribution from the taxpayer to the domestic manufacturer, and it was so designed by them when the duties were imposed.

They never denied that tariffs, high or low, increased the price of the taxed article. None of them denied that the consumer paid the tax on both the foreign and domestic product. He paid on the foreign goods for the support of the Government and he paid on the domestic goods for the support of the manufacturer. They admitted it was a burden, but it was a burden which, in their infant state, was necessary to be borne. They did not say that it lowered the price of goods, but raised them. They did not say that the foreign producer paid the tax on the goods, but the domestic consumer. They did not say that the tax would increase the wealth of the country, advance its civilization, build up colleges and seminaries of learning, produce entire sanctification of the body politic and finally translate it in chariots of fire to kingdom come. The good old souls thought that it would encourage and develop manufacturing so rapidly that in a reasonable time the consumer and producer would be brought side by side, but they failed to see that while many would come to engage in manufacturing, many would also come to obtain homesteads on our rich and productive lands, and the consumer and producer would remain where the laws of nature placed them, scattered all over the face of the globe. They thought that the American farmer, who was then exporting a large surplus to foreign markets would after awhile find a market at his doors for all his products. Years have come and gone, but that all-sufficient home market has never come, and will never and can never come till the God of nature changes nature's laws. Manufactures have grown, but agriculture has kept pace with them. Both have greatly overgrown the home market and both are in sore need of foreign markets. The farmers of the United States can to-day easily produce $1,000,000,000 worth of surplus agricultural products if there were open markets in which they could be sold. Our manufacturers can produce a surplus even greater than that if Congress would untax their materials and enable them to produce at a lower cost and undersell their competitors in every port of the world.

Congress to-day is preparing a bill to increase taxes, to check imports and exports, and lessen our foreign trade. This is not a bill to raise revenue, but a bill to prevent raising revenue. It is a bill to raise the prices of manufactures still higher and depress the prices of farm produce still lower. It will increase the prices of domestic manufactures and cause the people to pay more for them, while it will prevent the export of agricultural products and depress their prices, and make farmers less able to buy. All values are created by labor, and when Congress, by taxation, increases the price for an article necessary to our wants, it increases the amount of labor we have to expend to procure the same thing. Three pounds of woolen hosiery can be bought in England to-day for $1, or one day's work. Congress is now proposing to put a tax of 200 per cent. on that goods. It will then take $3, or three days' work, to purchase it—one day's work to pay for the goods and two days' work to encourage the sad and melancholy manufacturer. Four pounds of worsted underwear can to-day be bought in Europe for $1, or one day's work, but when the new tariff bill passes, with its duty of 175 per cent., it will take two and three-quarters days' labor—one to pay for the goods and one and three-quarters for the benefit of the manufacturer. One day's work will now buy one dollar's worth of student lamp chimneys, but when the bill to check importation passes, with its duty of 450 per cent., it will take five and one-half days' work—one to buy the chimneys and four and one-half days' work to light the lamp of joy in the bosom of the glass manufacturers, who only declare an annual dividend of 34 per cent. net profits. One hundred pounds of forged iron can now be bought in Europe for $1, or one day's work, but when the new bill passes to put 100 per cent. duty on it, it will "forge" two days' work out of the laborer—one to pay for the iron and one to help the manufacturer to buy a castle in Scotland or a fortress in Mexico.

These instances are sufficient to show you the effect of taxing all articles imported into the United States. It requires more labor to obtain the same amount of every article upon which the tax is imposed. Is that the way to increase in wealth? And yet its advocates tell us that taxing people is the way to make them rich, and of course the more you tax them the richer they get. If labor creates wealth, and we know it does, then it must follow that the less labor that is required in a given time to produce a given result, the greater the amount of labor that would be released to be employed in other production, and consequently the greater the increase of production and the greater the increase of wealth. The price at which the importer sells in the market is the price at which the domestic producer of the similar article sells in the same market. There cannot be two market prices for the same thing at the same time and in the same place. What amount of the $7,000,000,000 of domestic product bears the same enhanced price of 45 per cent. it is impossible to tell, but it is safe to say one-third of it, and that the consumption of the product of our domestic manufactures costs the consumers a thousand millions of dollars annually, which is paid to the manufacturer to protect him against competition, and to secure him the enjoyment of a monopoly. To pay this sum would require a thousand million days' work at $1 per day. Placing our population at 65,000,000 souls, that would represent about 20,000,000 laborers, and at twenty-six working days to the month it would require two months' work out of twelve by each laborer to pay the debt which a protective tariff has written upon the muscles of his arms. He has to work more than one more month to pay the taxes placed on articles which he must consume to live.

One month he must work for the support of the Government, and two months to build up fortunes for its favorites and castles for them to live in.

Have you ever thought how rapidly this system is transferring the wealth of the many into the pockets of a few thousand people? Have you ever thought how rapidly it is enriching a few and exhausting the masses? Do you wonder that colossal fortunes are springing up around you like mushrooms, while the working masses are vainly battling against a current that is bearing them over a political Niagara? In an article written by Thomas G. Shearman in the September number of the Forum of 1888, and which has not been contradicted, he shows that less than 25,000 persons own $31,500,000,000 of the national wealth, which is more than one-half the entire amount. Seventy persons are named by him in one of his articles, who own $2,700,000,000. Thirty others are named who own $450,000,000. This shows that 100 persons now own over $3,000,000,000 of the national wealth, which is about one-twentieth of the whole. If the favored few have in thirty years gathered up one-half of the national wealth, how long will it take them to gather up the other half? This is a little sum in whose solution the farmers of Iowa may take some interest. They may not take any interest in the tariff, but the tariff will nevertheless take a very lively interest in their farms.

I have stated enough to convince any tax-payer that taxes in any form are a burden, and that taxation on imports is the worst form of that burden, and that taxation on imports which compete with American products is a malignant type of the tax disease. I wish this was the "be-all and the end-all" of this most pernicious and destructive malady. But it is not. The worst remains to be told. I have shown you how you are injured by raising the prices of what you have to buy. I am now to tell you how it lowers the prices of what you have to sell. When high duties are imposed on foreign articles to keep them out of our market, as is claimed to be the object of the pending tariff bill, they keep our articles in as well as the foreign articles out. We have been, through our whole history, producing a large surplus of agricultural products, which we have been sending to foreign markets. This surplus is yearly increasing and augments in proportion to the increase of population and labor-saving machinery.

After feeding all our mouths and clothing all our bodies and sheltering all of our heads we have a large surplus—and surplus means supply over and above all demands of the home market. What are we to do with it? We raise 2,000,000,000 bushels of corn, 500,000,000 bushels of wheat. We produce an enormous amount of meats far beyond our wants. The shop-keeping people of Europe want them and are willing to give us manufactures of iron, steel, copper, lead and zinc, and manufactures of cotton, wool, hemp, flax and many other things from 30 to 50 per cent. cheaper than we can get them at home, and give us from 30 to 50 per cent. more for our agricultural products. But our tariff says the home market must be monopolized by the home manufacturer, and duties must be raised high enough to keep the foreigner out. What is the consequence? We refuse to buy from the foreigner; he cannot buy from us. Trade is an exchange of two or more commodities. If one of the parties refuses to take from the other, trading ceases, and he who refuses to take from the other makes it impossible for the other to take from him. If the United States should prohibit the importation of all articles from foreign countries the law would just as effectually prohibit all exportation to foreign countries.

This is the policy of the new tariff bill. It does not propose to prohibit all imports, only those that compete with ours. It does not propose to stop trade entirely, but to check it. Just then to the extent that it checks or restricts importation it will restrict or lessen importation. Whenever you have large importations we have large exportations, and the exports are chiefly agricultural products. From 75 to 80 per cent. of all of our exports are agricultural. When we have large importation it creates a demand for large exports of agricultural products. That increased demand raises their prices and distributes wealth throughout all our hives of industry. Whenever there is a small importation there is a small exportation and little demand for farm products. That lowers their prices and leaves debt, destitution and want throughout the land.

Some of our distinguished statesmen are urging reciprocity treaties with the countries situated south of us, to open markets for our farm products. It would be a very small market for provisions and breadstuffs or other farm products, because they are farmers themselves, and are, like ourselves, exporting farm products. Mexico, Central and South America and Cuba all take less than $10,000,000 worth of our agricultural products. Yet I would be willing to open any market now closed or partially closed to us, whether it took one barrel of flour or a million barrels. But if it would be to our interest to have reciprocity with countries that take $10,000,000 of our farm products, would it not be forty times better to have reciprocity with a country that takes $400,000,000 worth of agricultural products from us every year? In 1881 Great Britain took from us products that amounted to $477,000,000, nearly all of which came from our farms. If we would take more of her surplus she would take more of ours. If it is markets for our farmers that are sought for, it is difficult to see why we are looking to South America instead of Europe. I am afraid there is a large-sized African gentleman concealed in that wood pile. The amendment to the tariff bill, which has been sent from the State Department to be incorporated in the Senate, mentions steel rails as one of the articles that are to be admitted into this country free of duty. If duties are kept up on steel rails manufactured in other countries and taken off steel rails produced in this country, a mine will be opened to that industry in the United States which will make the owners of that monopoly richer than the incas of Peru. This sluiceway of wealth is to be opened and poured into the laps of the steel-rail barons while prying about the world to hunt "a market for another barrel of flour."

If it is a market for our surplus manufactures, why not say so? We can understand each other better if we will call a spade a spade, and not a jewsharp. If to-day we had reciprocity with Europe, the farming interests of this country would spring forward with the bounds of a giant, while reciproicty with Central and South America, Mexico and Cuba would give that advantage to a few articles of manufacture, of which steel rails would be chief.

I have done. I leave the question with you. If you want better rewards for labor, a better distribution of the wealth created by labor; if you want higher prices for farm products and lower prices for manufactures; if you want constant employment and higher wages for all workmen on farms, factories, and in all the avenues of commerce; if you want emancipation from debt and depression; if you want prosperity to return and bless the land, then go to the ballot-box, leave your party prejudices at home, and vote for the men who will carry your will into execution. Instruct your public servants to get up from their knees and cease their worship of the mammons and molochs who have by their aid brought the fairest land under heaven to the verge of ruin. Bid them unbind the hands of the toilers, which they have bound to worse than Egyptian taskmasters; bid them take the trumpet from the wall and sound the note of deliverance, and proclaim to the world that the night of captivity is ended.

A Girl's Own Brother.

"But, he's my own brother."

Is that any reason why you should take his courtesies for granted, and never say "thank you?"

Is that any reason why you should not try and make an evening at home pleasant for him, instead of forcing him by your selfishness to seek his happiness somewhere else?

Is that any reason why you should not think his opinion of your frocks, your bonnets, or your looks worth consideration?

Is that any reason why you should appear before him in a clumsy wrapper and with your hair in papers?

Is that any reason why, when you have a man visitor, he should be made to feel that you endured your brother when there was nobody else, but that when there was—well, then it was different?

Is that any reason why you should not be glad of a dance with him as your partner?

Is that any reason why you should not listen to his word of advice about other girls or their brothers?

Is that any reason why you should not be interested in his story of the shooting or the hunting, when you are in the same tales from other people?

Is that any reason why you should push him to the wall, except when you need him, and then claim his attention as your right?

Because he is your very own brother you ought to be ten-fold more considerate of him than of the brothers of other girls. Because he is your very own brother you ought to study his tastes and cater to them; read the books that he likes and suggest others to him; study the songs he fancies and be glad to make new ones known to him. In this way you will make your brother your very own, and to him "sister" will be the most delightful among girls. Are you your brother's keeper? Yes, in a way; but you do not keep him by fetters formed of ill-temper, untidiness and lack of courtesy, but by one made of every feminine grace and brightened by a sisterly love. That is the keeping that will give you your brother's love, and make you worthy the heart of some other girl's brother too.—Ruth Ashmore, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Who Are Compensated.

A correspondent wishes to know what a compensatory duty is, and the information may not improperly be printed as news to those who read any of the protection organs.

Whenever the American "consumer" is a seller to his countrymen and a duty is levied on anything he uses in his business, the law supposes he must pay the duty, or the enhanced price, and it "compensates" him by levying an extra duty on what he produces. Iron ore is protected by 75 cents per ton. The law supposes that the American maker of pig-iron pays the Lake Superior ore-master 75 cents extra per ton. Hence it adds that to the duty on foreign pig-iron, making the duty on that $6.72 per ton. The maker of iron rails is supposed to be burdened with the protection of the ore-master and iron-master, so he is protected by $17.92.

The tariff is supposed by the law to be a tax upon every one except the final consumer—the man who uses what is made. Down (or up) to him every one pays the tariff tax and is "compensated" by permission to add the tax to his price. But there is no way to "compensate" the last man, the final consumer, so he is induced to believe that "the tariff is not a tax"—and it is not to any one but himself, for all the others have been "compensated."

It is a cunning scheme, but it is being found out.—New York World.

Right You Are.

If the Democratic farmers of this State have no more sagacity in politics than to submit themselves to the plans for self-aggrandizement of the representatives of a party, whose power in the legislative, judicial, and executive branches of the Government is used to oppress and rob them, they deserve to be enslaved, and ought to be marked with the brand of the slave.—Evansville (Ind.) Courier.

Treasonable Utterances.

It is truly astonishing to hear Congressman Funston, of Kansas, telling his fellow-statesmen that the opening of foreign ports to American meats "would relieve the embarrassed condition of all classes of industry." In the name of the home market, are such expressions as this to be longer tolerated? Have we a tariff or haven't we a tariff?—Courier Journal.

Wait Till November.

The Democracy need not borrow trouble about the force bill if it goes over until the winter session. The people will have a chance to speak in November, and we guess they will speak so lond that even the desperate Republican leaders in Washington will think it wise to heed the mandate.—Boston Globe.

A REMUNERATIVE business is done by a little steamer which frequently leaves Victoria, British Columbia, always at night, with several Chinese passengers on board, sometimes five, occasionally as many as twenty. These are secretly landed on United States soil, and the owners of the steamer charge from $20 to $30 per head for this service. The artful Chinese thus evade our laws, and come here in almost as large numbers as before we passed laws to exclude them as immigrants.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

AND

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every one.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

—The barn of John Ott, in Union Township, Bartholomew County, was set on fire and burned to the ground. Three valuable horses perished in the flames, together with a large amount of grain and farming implements. There was no insurance. Loss, about $2,000.

—John Adams, an elevator boy at the Terre Haute House, went to sleep in the elevator with his head hanging out over the floor. The elevator started up, and Adams was caught at the ceiling and his neck broken.

—John Burgess, living near Newmarket, Montgomery County, has a calf having five legs. The odd leg grows out from the shoulder, and the bending of the knee lets the hoof fall down beside the other leg. The calf is four weeks old.

—The prospect of Crawfordsville raising her portion of the $100,000 to secure a natural-gas pipe-line, is rather cloudy. Only about $25,000 has been subscribed, and the interest seems to be dying out. A final effort to raise the amount is, however, being made.

—Wm. H. Stewart, an engineer in the employ of the Louisville and Jeffersonville Ferry Company, was drowned at Jeffersonville. He went into the wheel-house of the steamer Hite and lost his footing on the beam, fell into the water and was drowned before assistance could reach him.

—A fine young orchard of Phil Blankenship's, near Paragon, has just been entirely ruined by grasshoppers. These voracious insects first denuded the trees of their foliage, then they commenced stripping the bark from the body and limbs of the trees. There is not a single tree in the entire orchard of 400 trees that is not ruined.

—The safe of Ross Nicholson, a leading business man, of Bristol, a town nine miles east of Elkhart, was blown open. The thieves secured a draft for $527 on Conover & Herrick, of Chicago, together with $50 in money and a large number of notes, mostly given by farmers in the surrounding country. There is no clew to the thieves.

—Alfred Sweeney, of Columbus, aged 18 years, while squirrel hunting, had his right eye put out and his head and face badly powder-burned by an accidental explosion of a shell which he was placing in his gun. It was first thought he could not recover, but he has since regained consciousness sufficient to explain how the accident occurred.

—Martin Sharkey, administrator of the estate of John Sharkey, the Big Four section man who was killed by a runaway omnibus team at Greencastle, has brought suit against Cooper Bros., proprietors of the omnibus line, for $10,000. The complaint alleges negligence on the part of defendants' agent in leaving his team with no one to watch it.

—Solomon Gargis and his son John, about 14 years of age, have been lodged in jail at Vincennes, charged with stealing wheat. They were caught in the act. What makes the case a peculiar one is that Gargis was a constable in a township east of the city. At the preliminary examination he was overwhelmed with the evidence against him.

—A Knights of Pythias lodge, which will be known as Tippecanoe Lodge, was instituted at Battle-ground, with twenty-five charter members. W. S. Hartman, of Monticello, District Deputy Grand Chancellor, had charge of the work, and was ably assisted by the members of Lafayette Lodge, No. 51, and Curran Lodge, No. 111, of Lafayette. About 150 Knights were in attendance. Tippecanoe Division, No. 60, U. R., K. of P., of Lafayette, turned out in full uniform.

Rev. D. M. Stewart, the pioneer preacher of eastern Indiana, died very suddenly at his home in Rushville. He had been feeble for some time. He was sitting at his supper-table, when, without warning to any one, he threw up his arms and expired. Apoplexy was the immediate cause of his death. He had been a preacher in the Presbyterian churches in Rushville and vicinity since 1832, and had married more people than any minister in this part of the State. He was in his 83rd year.

—George Page, about fifty years old, and an inmate of the county poor-farm, situated near Jackson Hill, committed suicide by throwing himself before a rapidly-moving freight train. The engineer saw him on the track about fifty feet ahead of him, but when he reached to pull the whistle-cord the man walked off to the side of the track. When he came within about twenty feet of the engine, he threw himself across the track, his head lying on one rail and his feet on the other. The man was literally ground to pieces.

—Jacob Whetstine, of Martinsville, filed suit in the Morgan Circuit Court through his attorneys, against the Big Four Railway Company, for $25,000 damage. Whetstine was firing on one of their freight engines when it collided with a wrecking train near Delhi, O., on the night of Oct. 12, 1889, at which time several lives were lost. Whetstine was thrown under his engine, being pinned down amid escaping steam and scalding water for several hours before he could be extricated. His leg had to be taken off just below the knee.

—Charles Sturgis, a nomadic resident of Wayne County, attempted to board a passenger train on the C., St. L. & P. Railroad, at Cambridge City, just as the train was pulling up to the depot, and was horribly mangled. He missed his hold and footing and was hurled beneath the wheels and frightfully mutilated, having his left leg mashed off near the hip, the right leg severed above his ankle, his left hand mashed into a shapeless mass, and his head bruised. He died in the evening, having survived the terrible shock about five hours, during which time he was in a conscious condition.

—At Pike's Peak, Brown County, ten miles southwest of Columbus, the boiler in the large combined flour and saw-mill owned by D. L. White exploded. There were seven men at work in the two mills at the time of the explosion. Edward Fravel had the bones of both legs below the knees Crushed in a fearful manner, and Charley Mayfield was scalded so badly that there is no hope of his recovery, Charles Eulitt had his left hand so badly mashed that it will be necessary to amputate it. Two of the other laborers were knocked down, but not seriously hurt. So great was the shock from the explosion that the glass in the residence, 600 feet away, were broken, and large pieces of the boiler, weighing 200 pounds, were hurled 300 feet. The two mills are total wrecks. Fortunately no fire followed the explosion.

—James Shannon, a young miner at Rosedale, while squirrel hunting, drew his gun across a log, and the accidental discharge blew the left side of his head off.

—The Third Indiana Cavalay (Forty-fifth Regiment) will hold their next reunion at Muncie, commencing Tuesday, Oct. 9. This regiment justly claims the distinction of firing the first gun at the battle of Gettysburg, and was considered one among the best cavalry regiments in the service.

—Allison Dreely, aged 23, residing near Richmond, committed suicide by cutting his throat. He was just recovering from an attack of typhoid fever.

—Samuel Wiggins, alias Sam Rivers, has filed suit in the Shelby Circuit Court for $5,000 damages against the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, alleging that a year ago he was injured by being knocked off the track by a moving train. About a year ago, or soon after he was run into by the train, he was arrested by the United States Marshal on a charge of counterfeiting, and has been in custody until a month ago.

ALL RECORDS BROKEN.

SMASHED TO PIECES BY SALVATOR, THE KING.

The Wonderful Horse Goes a Mile in 1:35 1-2 at Monmouth Park, the Fastest Time Ever Made in a Race—A Great Event.

[New York dispatch.]

The ten thousand persons who went down to Monmouth Park expecting to see Salvator run a mile over the straight course faster than any other thoroughbred had ever covered the distance were not surprised, as the king of the turf, with the assistance of two pace-makers, covered the mile in 1;35½, and eclipsed Ten Broeck's performance against time by four and a quarter seconds. No such flight of speed had ever been seen by those assembled, and the general opinion was that the record will remain unbeaten for many years.

The original intention was to have Salvator carry weight for age, or 122 pounds, in his effort, but Trainer Byrnes advised his employer that the race should be governed by the same conditions as those of Ten Broeck's essay at the watch. This was 110 pounds, and, Mr. Withers being agreeable, Martin Bergen was selected as the jockey to ride. Trainers Charles Littlefield and J. W. Rogers, by common consent two of the most accurate timers in the United States, were invited into the stand to assist the regular timers, Col. Frank Hall of Maryland, D. D. Withers, and James Galway. Rosette and Namouna were sent out as pacemakers.

Down toward the start Salvator rushed wildly, gaining impetus at each bound, and when he flashed past the starting post he was running for a man's life. Namouna was well under way and some ten lengths ahead, but Salvator wore down her lead as his white legs played in and out with that machine-like regularity that is so dear to the lover of a racehorse. Namouna was making desperate efforts to hold her lead, the boy kicking her ribs and urging her to her best endeavors.

When the chestnut reached the half-mile pole Namouna was fifteen lengths in the rear. Trainer Byrnes was awaiting him, and under his instruction Rosette was in motion when Salvator came thundering along, his hoofs beating a rata plan on the earth, which they seemed to touch so lightly. Mr. Byrnes' watch marked 47 seconds, but those in the stand registered 47¾ seconds, and he shouted encouragingly to Bergen. When the three-quarter pole was passed Bergen was riding with his hands, but his steel-shod heels had as yet not visited the glossy sides nor the heaving flanks felt the sting of the merciless whip. Salvator is as honest a horse as ever lived, and he was doing all he knew how.

Bergen, with lowered head, rode as though a kingdom depended on the issue, and the gallant horse, answering every call, fairly flew, and darted past the wire in 1:35½, eclipsing all records.

Salvator is the best horse seen on the American turf in twenty years. All old-timers agree on that point, and it is only natural to suppose that his like will not be seen again in a decade.

Matt Byrnes was probably the most excited man at the track when he saw the time. Of course he knew the record had been broken. The time for the first half indicated that. He looked carefully after the details of the king's dressing, and then said: "He would have gone two seconds faster had the track been in its best condition. The track to-day is a trifle dead, but it's a great performance, anyway."

The betting opened with Salvator a favorite at 5 to 4 on and 2 to 1 against time. Toward the close, though, it was 2 to 1 on Salvator, beating the record, The fractional time of the race follows: Quarter, 23¾; half, 47¼; three-quarters, 1:11½; and mile, 1:35½.

DEMANDS OF THE FARMERS.

Platform Adopted by Their Congress at Council Bluffs.

[Council Bluffs, Iowa, dispatch.]

At the National Farmers' Congress, the following platform was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Farmers' Congress demands that national taxation be limited to the wants of the Government, economically administered.

Resolved, We demand of Congress the passage of such laws as will effectually prevent the buying and selling of agricultural and mechanical products with the sole view of settling the difference between the market value of such products at the time of purchase and the time of contract delivery.

Resolved, That the General Government be requested to instruct our consuls and agents abroad to take such measures as may be necessary to present the merits of maize in the various forms as an article of food to the people of the countries to which they are accredited; and

Resolved, That our Representatives be requested to provide such appropriations as may be necessary to carry such resolutions into effect.

Resolved, That this National Farmers' Congress request Congress to pass a bill giving free transmission through the mails to reports of State boards of agriculture and State boards of horticulture.

Resolved, That, believing in the doctrine of equal rights to all and special privileges to none, we demand that our national legislation shall be so framed as not in the future to foster and build up one industry at the expense of another, and we further demand the removal of the heavy tariff tax from the necessaries of life that the poor of our land must have, and placing the same upon the luxuries of life that the wealthy can do without and not suffer.

WHEREAS, Water route competition is a most important feature in the regulation and cheapening of transportation charges upon our products for distant markets, and the least liable to the control of combines and pools; therefore,

Resolved, That we demand of Congress most liberal appropriations for the improvement, by all practicable means, of our interior water ways which shall make them, instead of sources of disaster and destruction to large sections of the country, useful as great highways for the uninterrupted commerce and trade of our people.

Resolved, That we favor the election of United States senators by vote of the people.

Resolved, That this Congress demands the amendment of the patent law so that the exclusive use of an invention be limited to ten years.

Resolved, That at the Columbian Exposition, to be held at Chicago, in 1893, the agricultural and horticultural interests of the United States should be most prominently and grandly represented, and to that end it is recommended that the various State Legislatures make liberal appropriations for the creditable exhibition of the agricultural and horticultural resources of the respective States.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to confer with the Secretary of Agriculture and to urge the matter upon the attention of Congress.

The discussion of the national flower occupied a good deal of time. At one time the golden rod had it, but Congressman Weller went out and got a withered, straggling sample of golden rod, that looked as if it had grown up through the paving-stones of the street, and exhibited it as a fair specimen, which caused some of the Eastern and Southern men, who were unacquainted with the beauty of the plant, to go over to the pansy, but the golden rod was finally adopted as the national flower.

Mrs. Mackay's Manifold Woes.

Mr. Edmund Yates, understood to be a cockney writer of some note, is the London correspondent of a New York paper, his letters consisting principally of society gossip. He recently said that Mrs. Mackay (wife of the millionaire Californian), who resides in grand style in London and Paris, is the object of "cowardly persecutions." Some time ago it was alleged in a London society paper that in her early life she had been a washerwoman at a mining camp in California, and her indignation was unbounded. There was some talk then of a libel suit growing out of this newspaper allegation.

The recent "cowardly persecution," according to Mr. Yates, consisted of a "fresh batch of type-written libels sent broadcast to nearly all of her friends and acquaintances." Probably the atrocious charge that in her younger days she had soaped and scrubbed the soiled flannel shirts of the mining population is revived.

But Mr. Yates really alarms us about the matter. He says that detectives have been employed, and that "a clew" has been obtained. Then comes the startling announcement that if the clew leads to the offender "a criminal libel case of extraordinary interest on both sides of the Atlantic may be confidently expected."

In mercy Mr. Yates should forbear. On one side of the Atlantic (this side) Mrs. Mackay and her troubles are of as little interest as possible. Nobody cares for Mrs. Mackay, nor for her "cowardly persecutions," nor for her libel suits. Do not cause the echoes of the coming scandal to be heard here, for the disturbance and distraction of our peace of mind!—Chicago Journal.

They Both Snored.

Hotel Clerk—Good morning, Colonel, how did you sleep?

Colonel—I did sleep some, I suppose, but I was awake most of the night listening to the snoring of the man in the next room. He is a good one at that. He makes more noise than a steam whistle.

Another gentleman approaches.

Hotel Clerk—Good morning, Major, how did you sleep?

Major—I got asleep occasionally during the night, but there was a fellow in the next room to me who snored as if he was filling a contract to saw forty cords of wood before daylight. At least, that's the way it sounded.

Colonel—That's just what I had to listen to all night long. What is the number of your room?

Major—Number twenty-two. What is the number of yours?

Colonel—And mine is number twenty-three.

In Town and Hamlet.

The seeds of intermittent and bilious remittent fever germinate and bear evil fruit. No community has altogether escaped it. In populous wards of large cities bad sewerage causes it, and in their suburbs stagnant pools in sunken lots breed it. There is at once a remedy and a means of prevention. Its name is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is, without peradventure, the most potent antidote in existence to the malarial virus. Fortified with this incomparable, saving specific, miasmatic influences may be encountered with absolute impunity. Disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, begotten by miasma-tainted water, or any other cause, succumb to the beneficent corrective named, and rheumatic, kidney and bladder troubles are surely removable by its use when it is given a persistent trial.

"Did you give the horse the powder?"

"I tried to. I put the powder in the tin tube, forced open the horse's mouth, put the tube between his teeth, and ——"

"Did you blow the powder down his throat?"

"No; I was going to, but the horse blew first, and the powder went down my throat."—Texas Siftings.

Not So Stupid as He Looks.

Jane—You seem to be unhappy, Emma.

Emma—Yes, I have been deceived in my husband. When I married him I supposed that it was not my money but myself that he loved.

"And now you have found out that it was not you at all, but only your money he was after."

"Alas! That is what I know now for a certainty."

"Well, there is one consolation for you, and that is that your husband is not as stupid as he looks."

A GREAT mistake perhaps was made when Dr. Sherman named his great remedy Prickly Ash BITTERS: but it is presumed that at that time all remedies for the blood, etc., were called Bitters. Had he called it Prickly Ash "Regulator," "Curative," or almost anything but Bitters, it undoubtedly would have superseded all other preparations of similar character. The name Bitters is misleading; it is purely a medicine, and cannot be used a beverage.

What One Woman Can Do.

"My own firm conviction is that no education can make a writer," says Amelia E. Barr. "The heart must be hot behind the pen. Out of the abundance of life and its manifold experiences comes the power to touch life. Before I lifted the pen I had been half over the world. I had been a happy wife seventeen years. I had nursed nine sons and daughters. I had drank the widow's bitter cup.

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

But do not use the dangerous alkaline and mercurial preparations which destroy your nervous system and ruin the digestive power of the stomach. The vegetable kingdom gives us the best and safest remedial agents. Dr. Sherman devoted the greater part of his life to the discovery of this reliable and safe remedy, and all its ingredients are vegetable. He gave it the name of a name every one can remember, and to the present day nothing has been discovered that is so beneficial for the BLOOD, for the LIVER, for the KIDNEYS and for the STOMACH. This remedy is now so well and favorably known by all who have used it that arguments as to its merits are useless, and if others who require a corrective to the system would but give it a trial the health of this country would be vastly improved. Remember the name—PRICKLY ASH BITTERS. Ask your druggist for it.

Women are not slow to comprehend. They're quick. They're alive, and yet it was a man who discovered the one remedy for their peculiar ailments.

The man was Dr. Pierce.

The discovery was his "Favorite Prescription"—the boon to delicate women.

Why go round "with one foot in the grave," suffering in silence—misunderstood—when there's a remedy at hand that isn't an experiment, but which is sold under the guarantee that if you are disappointed in any way in it, you can get your money back by applying to its makers.

We can hardly imagine a woman's not trying it. Possibly it may be true of one or two—but we doubt it.

Women are ripe for it. They must have it. Think of a prescription and nine out of ten waiting for it. Carry the news to them!

The seat of sick headache is not in the brain. Regulate the stomach and you cure it. Dr. Pierce's Pellets are the Little Regulators.

State Convention.

The democratic state convention met in Indianapolis last week on Thursday and nominated a good ticket. Their names will be seen at the head of our editorial columns. All are clean, honest, moral men. We have a personal acquaintance with everyone of them except Mr. Mathews, candidate for secretary of state. He is a man with an excellent reputation, is a farmer, and a very successful, hard working one, and not a mere farmer for buncombe. He is well educated and a fine speaker He has been a member of the legislature and is a son in-law of our famous governor, James Whitcomb. Capt. Mitchell, of Goshen was renominated for Judge of the supreme court. He has been an able judge and has the confidence of the entire people of the state.

AUDITOR OF STATE.

J. O. Henderson, of Howard county is the man. He is editor of the Kokomo Dispatch and was collector of internal revenue in his district under Cleveland, until by consolidating the Indiana districts, his was abolished. He is a man of excellent character and attainments.

STATE TREASURER.

Albert Gall, a successful merchant of Indianapolis and a very popular and able man. He stands high in business and social circles and will poll more than his party vote.

ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Alonzo Green Smith, of Jennings county, is too well known to need an introduction. He was the pillar of strength that thwarted Ben. Harrison's ambition to be U. S. senator when the people had declared against him. The democrats had a narrow majority of two on joint ballot at the session of 1887, and Harrison and his friends boldly avowed their determination to wipe that out and send him to the senate. Green Smith as president of the senate led the democratic fight, and every democratic member in both houses stood by him. That majority of two was maintained, and Torpie sent to the senate. The people now say to Green Smith "Well done."

CLERK OF SUPREME COURT.

Andrew M Sweeney, of Dubois county, is our nominee for this place. Like several of the others, he is a self-made man At sixteen he was driving a dirt truck on a new railroad they were building near his humble home, for his people were Irish laborers. But he went to work to get an education and is now a college graduate and can speak fluently five languages. He has been school superintendent of his county many years, and was four years ago candidate on the state ticket for state superintendent, but went under with the rest of his ticket. He is, as will be seen, a man of unusual ability and force of character. Such men made good public servants.

SUPERINTENDENT PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

Harvey D. Vorhies, of Johnson county, has been county superintendent a long time and is one of the leading educators of the state. He is the very man for the place.

STATE GEOLOGIST.

This is a new office, heretofore appointive, but under a recent decision of the supreme court, the occupant must be elected by the people. The present incumbent S. S Gorby, was chosen unanimously. He has filled the place for some time, and with marked ability.

CHIEF OF BUREAU OF STATISTICS.

W. A. Peelle, who has filled the place some years very ably. This is another new office under the decision quoted above, but always heretofore appointive.

OTHER CANDIDATES.

Never have we had a better list to select from and so satisfactory were all the candidates to a majority of the delegates, that except on one or two offices there was little struggle. The people up this way all supported Henry C. Berghoff, of Allen county, for state treasurer, knowing him to be a clean man, and one having unusual strength. But after a hot contest, he was defeated by Mr. Gall, and accepted his defeat gracefully in a bright little speech, that called out a tumult of cheers from the immense throng in the great Tomlinson Hall. The other defeated men were persons against whom not a word could be said. Men were selected in many cases for locality and similar causes. Gov. Gray was presiding officer, and kept the rather jubilant crowd of over 1300 delegates in order.

THE PLATFORM

is very long. We can give only an outline like this:

"The electoral vote in 1888 was obtained for Harrison and Morton by flagrant crimes against the ballot committed by Dudley, who was and still is the treasurer of the national republican committee; that the administration of Benjamin Harrison has made itself an accessory after the fact to the crimes by shielding the criminals from punishment and even by rewarding them for their knavery; and that the brazen prostitution of the machinery of the federal court for the district of Indiana, by its judge and attorney, to the protection of these conspirators against the suffrage constitutes the most infamous chapter in the judicial annals of the republic.

The federal court of Indiana has decided that advising and organizing bribery is not a crime. We appeal from this decision to the people of Indiana, and we demand a verdict against William A Woods and the miscreants whom he saved from legal punishment.

The administration is denounced for its abandonment of civil service reform, for its use of cabinet positions and other high stations in payment of financial campaign debts; for treating the public patronage as a family appendage, instead of a public trust, and quartering a host of relatives by blood and by marriage upon the national treasury; for its dalliance with questionable gift enterprises. The effort of the tariff monopolists to perpetuate themselves in power is also denounced and the force bill and the McKinley bill are characterized as abominations, and the prodigality that has destroyed the surplus is severely condemned. The resolutions were unanimously adopted."

FROM DEKALB COUNTY

There was more than the usual number in attendance from this county. Of delegates proper, there were C. H. Triplet, R. Sawvell, Chas. Voss, Geo. Morell, Alex Baltz, M. J. Thomas, Thos. McNamara, F. A. Hoff, Cal. Husselman, Adam Deetz, S. S. Shutt, Fred Jenkins, Frank Mills, and perhaps others, making at least 13 out of the 16. Of those not delegates, we recall Daniel Thomas, C. P. Hammond, Ab. Kelley, Charles, Kelley, D. D. Moody, Freeman Kelley, Fred Funk, O. P. Myers, J. A. Barns, L. J. Gengler, Henry Harvey, W. H. Dills, W. B. Brown, Geo. Lanning, and possibly others not now remembered.

As only our sixteen delegates could be seated, the others went in as alternates, or put in the time seeing the town. Then when some of the delegates got tired with long hot sessions, they left a few in charge of the work. For the last hour or two the only men remaining to cast the vote were Adam Deetz and Dan. Thomas. They remained faithful and cast the vote of the county in a very sensible way, thus helping to secure the best men. While all our people did not get first choice, all are well suited and the ticket is as strong a one as we ever put in the field.

CATARRH—CATARRHAL DEAFNESS—Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result of this discovery is, that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to three simple applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks.

N. B.—This treatment is not a snuff or an ointment; both have been discarded by reputable physicians as injurious. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on application by A. H. DIXON & SON, 337 and 339 West King St., Toronto, Canada.—Christian Advocate.

Sufferers from Catarrhal troubles should carefully read the above. ly

A writer upon birds says that in the fields and groves there are many old maids and bachelors who apparently never had any inducement to marry. There is no doubt that the rivalry in bird courtship is extremely keen, and the choice is a deliberate one.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,

It is said that on the Mexican Gulf Railroad in Mexico the ties are made of the finest mahogany and the bridges built of marble. These materials were the cheapest to be had, since they were found along the track.

DRUNKENNESS—LIQUOR HABIT—In all the world there is but one cure, Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been cured who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and today believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effect results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and full particulars. Address in confidence, GOLDEN SPECIFIC Co., 185 Race street, Cincinnati, O

A unique horticultural exhibition held in England is devoted to carnations and ferns. One large tent is filled with the button-hole carnation, and the air is heavy with perfume.

Marvelous Endurance.

The vast amount of labor performed by the heart in keeping all portions of the body supplied with blood is not generally known. It beats 100,000 times and forces the blood at the rate of 168 miles a day, which is 3,000,000,000 times and 5,150,880 miles in a life time No wonder there are so many heart failures. The first symptoms are shortness of breath when exercising, pain in the side or stomach, fluttering choking in in the throat, oppression, then follow weak, hungry or smothering spells, swollen ankles, etc. Dr. Franklin Miles' New Heart Cure is the only reliable remedy. Sold by F. E. Davenport. 1

A negro baby, three months old, down in Hopkinsville, Ky., can talk. It somewhat lessens one's wonder, however, when we add that it is a girl baby.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

ECKHART CARRIAGE COMPANY,

AUBURN, INDIANA.

MOUNTED WITH THE HERBRAND GEAR IRONS.

BETTER STYLES, BETTER FACILITIES, BETTER WORK, Better Accommodations.

FOR the past sixteen years we have made and sold to the people of DeKalb County, Buggies and Carriages of all kinds, and have always justified our claim that we POSITIVELY make the BEST in the COUNTRY for the money, until now it has become a common saying that if you want a GOOD BUGGY, one that will stand the knocks,

BUY THE ECKHART BUGGY.

WE have handsomer and more thoroughly made work this year than ever before and expect to be able to furnish our customers, this year, without delay. For the accommodation of our customers we have established the following repositories:

At St. Joe, Ind., under the management of J. K. Stafford.
At Butler, Ind., " " " " Maxwell & Shoub.
At Corunna, Ind., " " " " P. N. Calkin.
At LeOtto, Ind., " " " " E. A. Ditmars.

WHERE we will at all times keep a full line. We will also keep our Repository at our Factory well filled with the styles most in demand.

Resolutions at the Institute.

The following were read by T. P. French, chairman of the committee, and adopted.

Resolved, 1. That we extend our thanks to the chorus class, organist and orchestra for their faithfulness in performing their services throughout the entire session.

Resolved, 2. That we return especial thanks to Messrs Henry and Yesbera the managers of the Opera House; and to Messrs Robbins, Yesbera, Boland and McCord for their kindness in seating the large audiences. Also, to Mr. Wolf for his work as janitor and other helps during the week.

Resolved, 3. That we extend thanks to Miss Della Weaver who so kindly interested herself in securing boarding for the teachers.

Resolved, 4. That we tender our thanks to those people of Auburn and vicinity who have added to the interest of the institute, by opening their homes to, and providing for, the comforts and accomodations of the teachers and others in attendance.

Resolved, 5, That we thank the M. E. church for the use of their organ.

Resolved, 6. That we unanimously tender our sincere thanks to Drs. DeGarmo and Bassett in appreciation of their philosophical and logical discussions and instructions to which we with pleasure and great profit were favored to listen; also, for the interest manifested by them in bringing our schools to a higher plain of morality and excellence. Hoping, that we again may, in the near future have the opportunity of garnering from their immense store of knowledge. Also, we thank Mrs. Kinsey for her very valuable and interesting talks.

Resolved, 7. That we teachers of DeKalb county, offer to our Supt. C. M. Merica, our hearty thanks for his untiring energy in securing such valuable instruction in the conduct of our schools, and the improvement of the teachers.

Obituary.

"Baby" Baxter, infant daughter of Miles and Mollie Baxter, died of cholera infantum, on Wednesday morning, Aug. 27, 1890, aged 1 yr. 3 mos. and 27 days.

Scarce had thy spirit touched our sphere,
Ere it returned to Him who gave;
And naught of thee remaineth here,
Save dust, a mem'ry and a grave.

Grieve not sad hearts that fondly clung,
Around this wanderer from above,
She's to her native land returned,
Land of eternal light and love.

And many a weary heart to-day
That dark misfortune bids repine,
Regrets its course was not as brief,
Glad if its fate had been like thine.

Obituary.

Ona Bell Shipe, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. V. Shipe, of Fairfield township, DeKalb county, Ind., departed this life Monday Sept. 1, 1890, aged 11 months and 16 days.

A host of angels flying,
Through cloudless skies impelled,
Upon the earth beheld
A pearl of beauty lying,
Worthy to glitter bright
In heaven's vast hall of light.

They spread their pinions o'er it,
That little pearl which shone
With luster all its own;
And then on high they bore it,
Where glory has its birth—
But left the shell on earth.

Obtiuary.

Died at her home in Jackson township, DeKalb county, Indiana, on Saturday Sept., 6, 1890. Mrs. Catharine Comesky at the age of seventy-seven years. She was born in County Cavin, Ireland, and came to this county when about 17. In 1833 she was married to James Comesky in Buffalo, N. Y. They moved to Ohio, then to this county in 1842, settling on the place where she made her home till her death. Her husband died in 1877, Feb. 22. At her death there were at her bedside her son Charles Comesky and five grandchildren. Mrs. Comesky was a member of the Catholic church, and was buried according to the rites of that church, in the cemetery at Leo. It should be stated as a remarkable fact, that for all the long years she resided in this county, she had never in all that time stepped outside of its borders.

Chicago Inter-State Exposition. 1890.

The eighteenth annual exhibition of this organization will open Sept. 3 and close Oct. 18. Our information gives assurance that the preparatory work is completed. All the available space in the immense building is fully occupied. The novelty and high character of the exhibits in every department of industry, art and science make the exhibition, as a whole, seem more like a rehearsal for the world's fair than like an ordinary local event. The display of electric lights by the "Sun Electric" and the "Edison" companies surpasses anything of the sort heretofore seen in America, and is worth a journey to see. The art galleries contain the best collection ever made in this country, aggregating a value of nearly half a million of dollars.

All western railways transport passengers at excursion rates.

Every Christian Mother.

Should be careful with her children. The damp atmosphere of our climate often brings on coughs, colds, etc., which if not attended to in time lead to that dreaded disease consumption. To prevent this, it is the duty of all mothers to have a remedy near to check these coughs that your children may contract, and you cannot get a safer or more reliable remedy than Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, the children's friend. You can buy this for 25 cents of F. E. Davenport.

The wine product of California this year is expected to reach eighteen or twenty million gallons, the largest for several years.

Fifty Spasms a Day.

Had Mrs. H. A. Gardner, of Vistula, Ind., lived two thousand years ago she would have been thought possessed by evil spirits. She was subject to nervous prostration, headaches dizziness, backache, palpitation and forty or fifty spasms a day. Though having been treated by eight physicians for years without success, she was permanently cured by one bottle of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. A trial bottle of this new and wonderful medicine, and a finely illustrated treatise free at F. E. Davenports's drug store, who recommends and guarantees it. 1

Home Evidence.

Dr. J. A. Nelms, of Atlanta, Ga., says: "I used Hunnicutt's Rheumatic Cure in several cases of the worst type, and I am glad to say it had the desired effect in every case. I take pleasure in recommending the medicine to all who are suffering with rheumatism and its complications." See "adv't." For sale by druggists at $1 per bottle. The Bridal.

Inscribed to Mrs. Abright, of Auburn, Ind.

BY LETTIE SEELY.

I saw a sweet vision; a lovely young bride,
With orange wreath crowning her brow;
I gazed on the charm of her beauty with pride
As she plighted a wife's holy vow.

A fond mother gazed on her idol and smiled,
Yet mingled a tear with her prayer;
"Good Father above, guard my beautiful child,
And shield her from sorrow and care."

Ah, little we thought on that fair bridal day,
That ere the sweet summer would come,
That beautiful bride would be cold as the clay
That hides her dear form in the tomb.

I saw a sad vision; the bride lay at rest,
With orange wreath crowning her brow;
White as the lilies strewn over her breast,
All pulseless, and still and cold as the snow.

Lay sleeping the last holy sleep of the dead,
That "He gives His beloved." Sleep darling, sleep,
The evergreen waves its boughs o'er thy head,
And the silver dew falls while we weep.

Weep, mother, thy darling has vanished away,
No more shall her presence be known,
At morn's early dawn, or closing of day,
To mingle her smiles with thine own.

Weep, mother, weep; for thy beautiful child
Lies pulseless and still in the tomb,
Cold are the lips that once kissed thee and smiled,
In their beauty ere death stole their bloom.

At Lagrange.

We were obliged to go to press last week before we could get ready all the matter connected with that convention. There were many things we should have added, but can only give a few.

NOTES.

We met at Lagrange a number of personal friends we had not seen lately. Of those residing there, we may name J. Frank Snyder, former editor of the Democrat, who is in much better health now that he is more out of doors. He is in the insurance business, and we believe doing well. Editor D. A. Fawcett is happier with a reunited democracy in his county than even when he had a quarrel on hand. He is always alive. Charlie Sthair, of Auburn, got on his best clothes, left the blacksmith shop where he is chief man, and shook the hands of the old Auburn friends in great shape. Warren Martin, delegate from Whitley, was there as democratic as ever. Except his old army complaint, he is in good shape, and would soon be about the size of Grover Cleveland. Andy Ellison looks about as he did twenty years ago, and those who knew him then would recognize him now. It would be useless to name all the familiar faces we met, but we were happy to greet them once more, and the Lagrange people gave them a right royal welcome and everybody felt that he had come among friends.

Lagrange has some of the best looking woman in the state outside of DeKalb county. We refer especially to those who sat in the gallery and cheered. They were evidently democrats.

Court was in session, but DeKalb county delegates noticed that Judge VanFleet did not ask much about Auburn for some cause or other.

The town has many fine homes, elegant and expensive churches, and a court house that was built about ten years ago at a cost of $67,000. It is good enough for any county. The townsite is beautiful, and lies high enough to be always dry, and we presume they do not have to contend against mud. The county has always been managed by republicans. But it was told that day, that taxes had been made higher and higher, until from $1.75 per capita in 1840, it is now over $5 for each man, woman and child in the county. The people can't see where the money goes to, as they have no bridges, ditches or expensive sessions of court, as is the case in many other counties. The chances are, that some of these things must be explained, or there will be a big change in the vote up there, this fall.

In Berghoff's speech, he made rather a neat mistake. Not being able to quote very well in English he spoke of the "republican office seeker who comes to you as a wolf clothed in sheepskin." It suited better than if he had had it right.

RESOLUTIONS. Adopted at the Lagrange Democratic Congressional Convention Sept. 2, 1890.

The committee on resolutions, by its chairman, reported the following, which were unanimously adoped:

We, the Democrats of the 12th congressional district in convention assembled, Resolve,

1st. That we have an abiding faith in the principles of government as expounded by Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson and their compatriots—the fathers of democracy, and exemplified in the lives and official conduct of these equally illustrious democrats, Grover Cleveland, the lamented Hendricks and our distinguished Senators, Voorhees and Turpie.

2d. We heartily endorse the action of our late democratic state convention in promulgating a platform based upon principles venerated by all good democrats and applicable to the present political conditions and emergencies, and we rejoice in the nomination of candidates whose names are an honor to our party, and who should receive the hearty support of every farmer, mechanic, laborer, consumer taxpayer, anti-tariff voter and democrat of the state of Indiana.

3d. We unhesitatingly endorse and approve the votes, speeches and action in congress of the Hon. C. A. O. McClellan, representative from this district, and we especially endorse and commend the bill introduced by him March 25th, 1890, to impose a graduated income tax whereby the wealth of the country (which now by republican legislation is almost entirely relieved from taxation) may be compelled to pay a proper share of the necessary revenues to meet the actual demands of the government and the payment of pensions to the soldiers, and we do also in the highest manner, approve, sanction and applaud the able, logical and patriotic speech delivered by him in congress May 22d, as being in full accord with the sentiment of the democrats of this district upon the tariff, financial and other economical questions of the day.

4th. That we regard the organization of the agriculturalists and working men of all classes as a necessity and we believe that their prosperity in this congressional district is the real foundation of all advancement and improvements made, and that their labor should be requited and their capital protected by wise state legislation and a careful and economical use of our resources.

5th. That we fully appreciate the nomination at the head of the democratic state ticket of that sturdy farmer, Hon. Claude Mathews, as a representative of the farming interests of Indiana.

TRAGEDY IN COURT.

During the Trial of a Case John Hiler Sends Deadly Bullets into the Bodies of Two Persons.

A terrible tragedy occurred at Hamersville, Ohio, during the trial of the case of George Barngrover vs. Joseph Hiler, before Esquire VanDament. A Mr. Hiler died some months ago, leaving a will in which he devised most of his property to two of his sons and two daughters, to the exclusion of other children. There has been talk of contesting the will and much bitterness has been manifested. This was a case for damages under an alleged breach of contract between Joseph Hiler and Barngrover, who was one of the sons-in-laws of Mr. Hiler. During the trial Constable I. N. Allen, another son-in-law, stepped to the door, when a pistol shot was heard. Allen came staggering into the room and fell across a chair, exclaiming: "John Hiler did it." Before the terrorized spectators could realize what had happened, the murderer was seen standing in the middle of the crowded court room and fired a second shot, which took effect in the right breast of George Barngrover, passing entirely through his body. The excitement was indescribable, the court room being crowded with men and women. As Hiler rushed from the court room into the darkness he was heard to remark: "I have loads for two more men." It is understood that he meant by the remark John Hiler, Jr., cousin to the murderer and an important witness in the case, and Attorney W. F. McBeth, who has charge of the case for the plaintiff.

WRECKERS AT WORK.

Another Diabolical Attempt on Central Road.

Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) special: A desperate attempt was made at night to wreck the fast St. Louis and Chicago express, which leaves New York on the New York Central at 6 p. m. The train was stopped for a danger signal south of Old Troy, which is 500 yards south of the New Hamburg draw-bridge. Two minutes previous the flagman had discovered several ties standing endways in the curve near Old Troy, and when he took hold of one of them to remove it he was fired upon from the bushes on the east side of the track. Knowing that the fast express was nearly due, he ran southward and set the danger signal, which stopped the train. The flagman said the ties stuck up above the rails, and would certainly have thrown the train from the track. The fast train was composed of seven or eight sleeping cars, all full, two ordinary coaches and a baggage car. There were eight ties on the upper main track. There were also two ties placed alongside of the rail towards the south, so as to ditch the train. The train passed here an hour late.

LYNCH THEM.

The Person of a Fifteen-Year-Old Girl Violated by More Than a Dozen Men.

Pittsburgh special: Last week Miss Martha Gilchrist, a 15-year-old daughter of respectable parents, residing at Moss Side, visited this city. She formed the acquaintance of a man and accompanied him to a hotel in East Liberty, where she says he outraged her person and then deserted her. In her wanderings she was picked up by a number of mill-workers and repeatedly assaulted. Escaping from them she fell in with a fishing club, camped alongside of the Monongahela River, and was again repeatedly outraged. She then sought police protection and reported her city experience. An investigation of her story resulted in the arrest of ten men. The detectives are searching for four others on the same charge. The first man to assault the girl is the father of twelve children. Among the others arrested are a policeman and several married men.

The World's Fair Site.

The Directors of the World's Fair Association at a meeting held at Chicago selected the dual site of the Lake Front and Jackson Park as the place for locating the great exposition. The final and decisive ballot resulted: Lake Front and Jackson Park, 23: Northside, 4; Westside, 8. The choice was then made unanimous. It is the design to place the grand entrance to the exposition and the buildings for fine arts and kindred displays on the Lake Front and the agricultural, live stock and other exhibits at Jackson Park.

Against Powderly.

Pittsburgh special: A rumor prevails here among labor men, that in the event of the re-election of General Master Workman Powderly, local assembly 300, window glass workers, will leave the Knights of Labor. The principal causes of dissatisfaction are said to be the mismanagement of the Centrail Railroad difficulty, and too lavish expenditure of money by the general officers of the order, especially in the matter of salaries.

Oppression of the Hebrews.

Rabbi Adler, at the services which marked the opening of the new synagogue in Hammersmith, England, declared that he had received an unquestionable confirmation of recent statements in the newspapers as to the persecution of Jews in Russia. During the last ten days seventy five Jewish families have left Berditscheff for England, America and Australia.

Delaware Republican Convention.

The Delaware Republican State Convention was held at Dover, with William C. Spruance in the chair. Harry A. Richards was nominated for Governor and Harry Purvis Conner for Congress.

SUDDEN SUMMONS.

Ex-Governor Edward F. Noyes, of Ohio, Falls Dead.

Ex-Gov. E. F. Noyes dropped dead in the Court House at Cincinnati. Apoplexy was the cause.

Ex-Governor Edwin Follansbee Noyes was a native of New England and came to Cincinnati after graduating at college. In the Queen City he read law and soon became prominent at the bar for his oratory and legal learning. He served as Colonel of an Ohio regiment in the war and lost a leg in battle where he distinguished himself by his bravery and military knowledge. At the close of the rebellion he was elected Probate Judge and was re-elected, serving in all six years. In 1871 he was elected by the Republicans Governor of Ohio, defeating Col. George W. McCook, the Democratic nominee. In 1873 he was defeated for re-election by less than 1,000 votes by William Allen, who had been in the United States Senate from 1847 to 1849. In 1877 President Hayes appointed Mr. Noyes as Minister to France, which he held until the administration of President Arthur, when he gave way to the now Vice President Morton. Ex-Governor Noyes was a lovable man, a gallant Union soldier, and an orator with few equals in the land.

DEATH AND DESTRUCTION.

Over Two Score of Men Killed from a Premature Blast.

A premature blast in the Northern Pacific yards at Spokane Falls, Wash., killed fifteen men and possibly more. The full extent of the disaster is unknown. It was just before the hour of quitting work. A large force of men was engaged in blasting out a huge rock pile in the Northern Pacific freight yards in the eastern part of the city. From fifty to seventy-five men were at work in the cut at the time. Fifteen have been taken out dead, a number injured, and still others come out alive. All is confusion, and it is impossible yet to get names or particulars. As rapidly as the mangled bodies are taken out they are carried to the hospital. The company's loss will be in the neighborhood of $100,000. Some of the workmen were preparing blasts to be touched after the other workmen and teams had departed for the night. One blast had been prepared. In the second it was exploded, the jar also touching off the first blast. Twenty-five thousand cubic feet of rock was blown over upon the unsuspecting mass of humanity with terrible results. Hundreds of people soon gathered at the scene, and the work of taking out the dead and injured has since been going on. The scenes at the hospital are heartrending. The wives and the relatives of the workmen are crazed with grief and suspense.

LATER—It is certain that forty-five men were killed outright, and nearly three score injured, some fatally. Eighteen mangled bodies of those who perished now lie in coffins and on slabs in the several undertaking establishments of the city. The bodies of twenty-seven others who were working in the cut when the imitation earthquake occurred, are under a press of rock estimated at 25,000 cubic feet, and when they will be recovered is a matter of conjecture, and there is a possibility that in the attempt to get at them another frightful accident may occur. Of the seven blasts that were put in only two exploded. Mixed with the great mass of rock, beneath which the bodies are, is sufficient giant powder to blow the whole town to atoms. The amount of powder that exploded is said by survivors to be 200 pounds. This means that 500 pounds of the explosives is mixed with the mound of humanity and stone which may be exploded by the blade of a shovel or the point of a pick. Thus the work of searching for the bodies is not only hazardous, but positively dangerous, and those engaged in it are jeopardizing their own lives.

A CLEVELAND CALAMITY.

Electric Car Struck by a Nickel Plate Engine.

Cleveland special: An electric car was struck by a Nickel Plate engine at the crossing in this city. An eye-witness of the accident describes the scene that followed as terrible. He says the locomotive was running at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour. There was no warning whistle, and the bell was not rung. The engine plowed right through the street cars, and the screams of frightened passengers rose above the crashing frames and seats of the cars. The engine was stopped as quickly as possible, but not until it had tumbled the motor against the bank on one side and the open tail-car over the edge of the embankment on the other. The injured passengers were groaning in agony. Two sisters, Louise and Minnie Mock, were in the car. They both lay under the wreck. They were lifted tenderly and carried into a neighboring saloon. Both were unconscious, but stimulants revived them so that they were able to tell their names. Minnie's body was terribly crushsd and blood trickled from an ugly wound in the head. She was taken to St. Alexis Hospital and died in half an hour. Her sister Louise was badly hurt about the head and arms, the muscles of the right forearm being torn away from the bone. She will doubtless recover. The rescuers who responded promptly did noble work, several of the unfortunate victims being carried in the arms of men a hundred yards to the nearest house. The wrecked cars were bespattered with blood, and the hands, faces and clothing of the rescuers were covered with the crimson fluid. About twenty-five were injured, some fatally.

TERRIBLE TALES

Concerning the Mysterious Central Road Wreck.

New York special: From Albany, which has all along been the head center of the troubles resulting from the strikes on the New York Central & Hudson River road, comes some very sensational rumors, and developments are awaited with deepest interest. It is sure some important arrests have been made, and the men under arrest, or surveillance, are knights. Capt. Robert Pinkerton said: "Nothing can be said now. My men did not apprehend the man, and even if they had they wouldn't talk of the case." It is believed that the detectives tracked Reed, who is a well-known railroad man, his whole family being in the business. He was tracked to Schodiack and then to Hudson, and at night one of the detectives found him in a house of prostitution. It is thought that John Kiernan, the suspected brakeman, is confined in Troy. The others may possibly be in the custody of the railroad at the depot here. The police and railroad are taking precautions to keep their plans from the public. What connection the prisoners had with the crime can only be surmised. Their trials will be held in Rensselaer County, as the wreck took place there. Rumor has it that three more warrants are out for suspects.

DEMONS AT WORK.

Unhung Scoundrels Cause a Bad Wreck on an Eastern Railroad.

Albany special: The north-bound train of eight sleeping cars well filled with passengers, known as the second section of the Montreal express was wrecked on the Hudson River road, about five miles below here. The train was going at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour. It crashed into a pile of iron fish plates placed on the track to wreck the train. When the shock came three of the sleepers toppled over the embankment, while others were derailed, but did not go over. News of the accident was brought to Albany by the conductor, who walked in. A wrecking train from this city reached the scene of the accident with physicians, but they found no one had been killed and but few were injured. A number of passengers were severely shocked and some were cut with glass. All were brought here. The loss will be many thousands of dollars. There is no clew to the perpetrators.

Fight Between the Armenians and Turks.

Constantinople special: An encounter has taken place place at Bagtchedjik, near Ishmid, between the Armenian residents and the Turkish gendarmes. Five of the soldiers were killed and a number wounded, many of the Armenians being injured. Troops are being sent to reinforce the gendarmes, and further trouble is feared.

Driven Like Dogs.

San Francisco special: The barkentine Catherine Sudden has arrived at Port Townsend from Siberia. Her commander, Capt. John Thomas, has sent to this city a description of the Russian exile system as witnessed by him. He describes the brutal scene which he witnessed on Laghalien Island, a famous Russian exile prison. A large party of exiles of all ages, heavily manacled, were being taken to the island. A few old men whose strength gave out fell from exhaustion. The brutal driver, acting under the orders from his superior, shot the unfortunate men and removed their chains. No mercy nor discrimination was shown. Wives saw their husbands killed before their eyes; mothers saw their daughters outraged and insulted. The exiles were driven like cattle, a heavy whip being used to urge them on. The prison cells were filthy and the treatment barbarous.

Deadly Damp.

John Dillon, a laborer, went down into a well which he had engaged to clean, on the property of Kate Dillon, Henderson Avenue, West New Brighton, Staten Island. After his being down a short time and it being noticed he had stopped work, Thomas Sheehan climbed down to see what was the matter with Dillon. When nearing the bottom of the wel Sheehan was seen by the onlookers to throw up his hands and fall heavily to the bottom. A man named Fleming then volunteered to go down and rescue the two men. He edged his way down, but had only gone a little way when he gave a cry, threw up his hands and fell to the bottom. After some difficulty and no little danger ropes and hooks were secured and the dead bodies of the three men were pulled to the surface, all three having been suffocated to death by foul gases. The well is twenty feet deep.

Found the Plunder.

Bentleyville (Pa.) special: The money stolen at the time of the murder of the Crouch family was found secreted in an old coal mine, not far from the scene of the triple tragedy last May. The clew was obtained from the 8-year-old son of Anna Brundage, who, with the negro West, are in jail on suspicion of having committed the robbery and murder. Recently neighbors heard Homer Harvey, the reputed father of the boy, threaten to cut his tongue out if he did not keep quiet. This aroused suspicions and the boy was induced to give up the secret, which was in effect that he had heard West tell his mother that the money was hidden in the coal mines. The amount supposed to have been in the possession of the Crouches at the time of the murder was $8,000. The Washington County officials have taken charge of the money.

Under the Wheels.

An 8-year-old son of George A. Hendrix, of Fort Wayne, Ind., met with a terrible accident, by which he lost both legs, and it is yet altogether uncertain as to his recovery. Kenneth and some other boys were playing at the east yards, and as a train was pulling out, the boys made an effort to jump upon the cars to take a ride. The usual and inevitable result followed. While his companions made the leap in safety, Kenneth was less fortunate, for he missed his footing and fell beneath the wheels, the heavy weight passing over the boy's legs, badly lacerating both, one above the knee and the other just above the ankle. It was found that amputation was necessary, and it is feared the sufferer will not be able to withstand the shock.

A Railroad Man Scalped by Two Drunken Indians.

John Wolverline, section foreman on the Northern Pacific, was knocked down and scalped by tmo drunken Indians near Hope, Wash., a few miles from Spokane Falls. Wolverline was walking on the track near the station when he was met by the two Indians, one of whom he recognized as John Deer. The redskins seemed considerably under the influence of liquor, and Wolverline turned aside to allow them to pass. They stopped him, however, and asked him for liquor. He replied that he had none, when John Deer struck him over the head with a club, knocking him senseless. When Wolverline recovered consciousness some time afterward he found his scalp missing.

Officers of Catholic Knights.

The Catholic Knights of Indiana in session at South Bend, Ind., elected Rev. Father M. C. Campion, of Logansport, President; A. J. Shuey, of Evansville, Vice President; Giard Ruter, of Vincennes, Secretary; and H. H. Downer, of Terre Haute, Treasurer. The organization of the uniformed rank was perfected by selecting J. R. Fox, of Logansport, Supreme Commander; J. M. McMullin, of Madison, First Vice Commander; Frank J. Singler, of South Bend, Second Vice Commander; A. S. Chapman, of Madison, Supreme Secretary; Nicholas Cole, of Evansville, Colonel, and Mr. Muldoon, of Fort Wayne, Lieutenant Colonel. Logansport was chosen as the next place of meeting.

Clung to His Cigar.

A collision between passenger trains 19 and 20 occurred near Lockport, New York, on the Central Railroad, in which Baggageman Fiddler, of New York, was killed, and Engineer Bradley and Fireman Houston, both of Syracuse, were badly hurt, Bradley's legs being broken. No passengers were hurt. The accident is attributed to a semaphore light going out. The trains met on a single track, and when stopped, the rear of train 20 was on the high bridge over the Erie Canal. When taken from the wreck Engineer Bradley was unconscious, but had a cigar in his mouth. Train 20 was moving slow at the time, and 19 cannot have been at high speed, as the cars did not leave the track.

The Maine Election.

Chairman Manley, of the Republican State Committee of Maine, has sent the following dispatch to President Harrison: Maine has given the largest Republican majority given an officer since 1866 and a larger majority than has been given a presidential contest since 1868 with the exceptions of 1884 and 1888. Governor Burleigh is re-elected by a majority exceeding 15,000. Speaker Reed is re-elected by the largest majority he ever received, exceeding 4,500. Representatives Dingley, Boutelle and Millekin are re-elected by majorities ranging from 3,000 to 5,000. The Pine Tree State endorses your administration and remains firm in its advocacy of protection to American industries and American labor.

Fatal Mine Explosion.

At No. 4 colliery of the Kingston Coal Company at Edwardsville, Pa., two men were seriously and one fatally injured by gas explosion. The names of the victims are: John T. Armstrong, mine boss; John E. Jones, and William D. Lewis, miners. Jones was frightfully burned, the flesh hanging in shreds from his body when taken out of the mine, and he can hardly outlive the night.

A Lone Negro Robs a Postal Car.

Mail Clerk Massey reports that as his postal car on the Big Four, was nearing Anderson, Ind., it was entered by a burly negro, who compelled him to hand over all his registered letters. The negro jumped off the car at Anderson, dropping some of the letters, and it is thought all or most of them were recovered. The negro escaped.

A Demon Father.

Two boys were blown to atoms at Pinos, Altos, N. M., under suspicious circumstances. They were the sons of John A. Murray. Murray and his wife parted several years ago. The eldest boy was crippled by the cars at Deming six years ago, recovering damages from tht railway company. The money received from the railway company was held in trust for the crippled boy. Word has been received that the oldest and the youngest of the boys had been blown up in a room adjoining that in which the father and older brother slept. Murray has been arrested on suspicion of having killed his children that he might get possession of the trust fund.

Niagara Falls Tunnel.

Lockport (N. Y.) special: The tunnel scheme at Niagara Falls for developing unlimited water power seems to be an assured thing. A contract has been awarded by the Cataract Construction Company to Rogers & Clements, New York, but the exact amount is not known. The papers, including the bond of the contractors for $300,000, are in preparation. The Niagara Falls Tunnel Company first secured the franchise in the Legislature of 1885, and since then sold it and other rights to the Cataract Construction Company, with the proviso that the undertaking be completed by Jan. 1, 1892.

General Barrundio's Daughter to Be Exiled.

City of Guatemala special: The Barrilas Government has just decided to exile the daughter of General Barrundio, who attempted the life of Minister Mizener. This is done out of deference to Mizener's wishes. He does not want her prosecuted. It is reported that all of Barrundio's relatives are to be also exiled, including Dr. Ramon Bengoechea, a son-in-law of the deceased General.

Fatal Wreck in Texas.

The south-bound freight train of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas was ditched at Shoto, Indian Territory, and Engineer Doud and Fireman Ebbson killed. The engineer was buried under the debris of sixteen cars. After the wreck, the train took fire and was destroyed. The dead engineer resided in Dennison, Texas, and leaves a large family. He was a prominent member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

Plague of Rats.

An evidence of how the country around Bloomington, Ill., is overrun with rats is shown in the fact that the Fair Association at Atlanta, which had offered premiums for their killing, received in one day 20,984 rat tails. One man caught 4,300 on his farm and got the first rize. The rats, besides destroying grain, attack and kill fowls.

Gored to Death.

Alexander Russel, aged 70 years, while cutting weeds in a pasture near Titusville was attacked by an infuriated bull and torn to pieces. Two men who rushed to the scene were forced to drop the body several times while conveying it to a neighboring house on account of the mad charges of the animal.

Served Him Right.

At Watervalley, Miss., Mrs. Samuel Murry, was decoyed from her home by a negro named Rogers on the pretense of trying to rescue her husband from roughs who, Rogers said, was maltreating him. In a lonely part of the town Rogers assaulted the woman and was arrested. Rogers was taken from jail and hanged to a tree.

Buried Alive.

Ishpeming (Mich.) special: Eight miners were buried in the Lake Angeline mine by a cave-in on the sixth level. Every effort is being made to rescue them. The men are alive and are communicated with by means of a pipe used to convey compressed air for power drills.

Has to Ante Up.

In May last the Gloucester schooner "Howard Holbrook" was fined $500 for violating the Newfoundland bait law. The Captain was alone fined $500. An appeal was taken to the Newfoundland Superior Court, which has just given a judgment sustaining the fines.

Congress to Adjourn September 25.

The leaders of the Senate and House have had a conference on the subject of adjournment and have come to the conclusion that there is no reason why the session should not be brought to a close by September 25, and efforts would be made to accomplish this.

Killed by Lightning.

John Patton, aged 18, was killed by lightning at Waveland, Ind. The bolt struck a metal roof, ran down the water spout and instantly killed the boy and a horse. Two men were also stunned.

A Convict's Suicide.

Henry Nersman, a life prisoner for murder from Cincinnati, committed suicide in his cell at the Ohio State prison. He inhaled gas through a tube made of a newspaper.

Thirty Drowned.

Prague special: A bridge in this city over the Mondea, on which were a number of persons watching the flood in that stream, collapsed. Thirty persons were drowned.

Ex-Governor Noyes' Funeral.

The funeral of Gen. Noyes, ex-Governor and ex-Minister to France, was attended by an immense crowd. The services were simple and impressive.

AFFAIRS IN INDIANA.

INTERESTING ITEMS GATHERED FROM VARIOUS SOURCES.

What Our Neighbors Are Doing—Matters of General and Local Interest—Marriages and Deaths—Accidents and Crimes—Personal Pointers.

—Seymour is to have a new opera-house to cost $25,000.

—Fred Grandort, aged 13, of LaPorte County, was kicked to death by a horse.

—Geo. Enoch, of near Crawfordsville, had thirty bushels of seed-wheat stolen from him.

—A pocket of gas, at a depth of seventy-five feet, was struck at Newmarket, Montgomery County.

—Herbert Fry, aged 18, was fatally injured at Utica, Floyd County, by falling off a load of fodder.

—A daughter of Walker Smith, aged 8 years, was fatally kicked by a horse at her home near Fayetteville.

—W. T. McKinley was crushed between saw-logs in a mill at New Providence, and seriously injured.

—The annual reunion of the Eighty-eight Indiana Volunteers will be held at Lagrange on Tuesday, Oct. 7.

—Mrs. Calvin Green, residing at Kempton, Tipton County, fell dead from her chair, while preparing supper.

—Charles Cook, of Defiance, O., a B. & O. fireman, struck a bridge with his head seven miles east of Albion and was instantly killed.

—Goshen's artesian wells have proven insufficient, and there is a scheme on foot to pipe water from Wolf Lake at a cost of $20,000.

—John Dermack, a stranger, was killed while standing on a railway track at Lafayette. The initials of the Johnstown Fire Company were tattooed upon his arm.

—The eighth annual reunion of the Seventh Indiana Cavalry Association will be held in the G. A. R. Hall, at Marion, on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 1, and 2.

—A base-ball club, the smallest member of which weighs 225 pounds, has been organized at Jeffersonville. The aggregate weight of the team is a little under three thousand pounds.

—In a runaway, Otha, the 8-year-old daughter of Walker Smith, of Lebanon, in the buggy with her father, was kicked in the head by the horse, crushing her skull, from which the brain oozed out.

—Bertie, the 7-year-old son of Henry J. Candle, residing two miles east of Fortville, was kicked on the head by a horse, producing concussion of the brain. The physicians report the injuries as fatal.

—David Yount, aged 80 years, died at his home, near Crawfordsville. He was one of the pioneer woolen manufacturers of the State, and was the owner of a large factory at Pountsville. He was also a large buyer and shipper of wool.

—Mrs. W. B. Schwartz, wife of a prominent attorney at Brazil, has been declared insane. She labors under the hallucination that her devoted husband and father, Mr. A. B. Wheeler, a wealthy real estate man, are trying to poison her.

—"Sassafras George" Adams, an eccentric character who was always dressed in rags, and who sold sassafras root and herbs for a livelihood, was found dead at the side of a country road in Brown County. On his person was found $300.

—Joe Isaacs, a well-known citizen of Evansville, was run over and killed a Mount Vernon by a freight train. He was visiting relatives at that place, and it is supposed that he was under the influence of liquor and laid down across the track to take a sleep. His body was horribly mangled.

—Willie Rysor, aged 16, while assisting Andy Van Skoik to unload some sills at the Jeffersonville, Madison & Indianapolis depot at Shelbyville, was crushed internally, his shoulders mashed and his arms dislocated by the unexpected fall of two of the largest beams. His condition is extremely critical.

—A young son of J. F. Scott, a farmer living near Warsaw, while driving a colt into a stable, was kicked in the head by the animal, and his face mashed into a pulp. His recovery is doubtful. In the event he should survive his injuries he will be horribly scarred for life, and it is feared his eyesight will be destroyed.

—At Evansville, while unloading a wagon of oats, John Becket, the driver, made a mistep and fell off the wagon between the mules, which ran away, the heavily-loaded wagon passing over Becket's neck and body, crushing him so badly that he lived but a few minutes. He leaves a wife and eight children.

—Mrs. DePauw and daughter have donated $7,000, and the Board of Trustees has added $3,000 more to the erection of a new and more commodious home for the accommodation of the theological students of DePauw University. The site selected is immediately north of the present building, better known as the Larrabee Homestead. Plans are in process of preparation, and another handsome three-story building will be erected with as little delay as possible.

—Samuel Donenham, proprietor of the Logansport sprinkling wagons, was run over by one of his wagons and horribly mangled. His back was broken by the horses, and while he is conscious, he cannot live.

—Mrs. William Jones, of Richmond, was strangled to death by getting a watermelon seed in her windpipe. She leaves a 3-months-old babe, twins between two and three years old, and two other children the oldest about six years of age.

—While Section Foreman Joseph Mullen, of the main line of the Jeffersonville, Madison & Indianapolis Railroad, was at work with a force of men on a trestle over Genins Creek, a small stream near Columbus, they discovered on the sand below a snake about five feet in length. Its peculiar actions attracted the attention of the laborers, one of whom went below and with a long-handled shovel killed the reptile, which proved to be a copperhead. Near by, in the warm sand, were found forty-three small snakes of the same kind, and all were killed.

—A Lake Shore and Michigan Southern switchman, Phineas Dwell, was killed at Elkhart. One of his feet got caught in a frog, and he could not extricate it. He was a printer by trade, came from Tecumseh, Mich, lately and leaves a wife and two children.

—While William Mahaffey was running a planer at the ship-yard at Madison, the pulley broke, throwing a piece of timber across his left leg, mashing and breaking his hip. His collar-bone was also broken and he complains of internal injuries in his left side. His recovery is doubtful. He is aged about fifty, and has a wife and three grown children.

—Charles Cook, a fireman on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was instantly killed, near Ripley's Station, Noble County. Cook had got a brakeman to do his work, and had crawled on top of a box car to enjoy the cool breeze, as he was not feeling well. He was struck by an overhead bridge and his brains dashed out. He resides at Hicksville, O., where he leaves a family.

—Dr. J. F. Maddox, late United States Pension Examiner and Secretary of the City Board of Health, went out riding with his wife at Shelbyville. When about three miles from the city his horse became frightened, turned the buggy over and then kicked it to pieces. Dr. Maddox was considerably bruised up, but his wife escaped with but little injury and a severe scare.

—Lewis B. Burdick, of Fort Wayne, a carpenter, and his two nieces, who reside near Hamilton, Steuben County, have received news from Glasgow that they have fallen heirs to the sum of $210,000 by the death of Mrs. Carlton, the grandmother of Burdick. The latter is an old soldier, and has been an invalid for a long time. He expects, within a short time, $4,500 back pension from the Government. This double stroke of good luck will bring happiness to a deserving family.

—W. H. Davis, telegraph operator at the junction near Crawfordsville found in the room what he supposed to be an old empty and rusty revolver, and pointing it at Mary Roach, who was washing one of the Junction House windows, he pulled the trigger. The weapon was discharged, and the ball struck the girl in the small of the back, near the spinal column and ranged upward. A doctor was summoned and pronounced the wound fatal, and was unable to locate the ball. Davis is almost crazy over the unfortunate affair.

—Charles Hay, a popular young man residing with his parents near St. Endal, committed suicide. He was engaged to be married to a young lady, Miss Heath, of the same locality, but his family objected to the match so strenuously that life became a burden to him. He took his gun, saying he was going out hunting, and went into the woods a short distance. There he placed the muzzle of the gun against his chest, directly over the heart, and snapped the trigger with a long stick. The charge passed clear through his body, killing him instantly.

—Information has reached Brazil that a very rich vein of silver ore had just been discovered near Art Postoffice, fourteen miles northwest of there, on the farm of William Barber. It was discovered by William Bobo, a western prospector, and he declares the find to be one of the richest and most promising that he has ever seen, not excepting the Rocky Mountain silver-mining districts. A company has been organized with a capital stock of $100,000, and a shaft will be sunk at once and a smelting furnace put in. From fifty to one hundred men will be employed to begin with, and the most sanguine hopes are indulged in by all.

—Mrs. Charles Graham was frightened to death, at her home, a short distance from New Albany, by the violent actions of a drunken neighbor, George Blust, who threatened her life. Medical aid was summoned, but the woman came out of convulsions only a few minutes before death came. The last words she uttered were: "He has frightened me to death!" Blust killed an unoffending German nearly seven years ago, on Main street, while drunk, and was sent to State prison for two years for the crime. He shouldered a gun, shortly after the death of the woman, and fled to the woods west of the city, where he is in hiding to escape the vengeance of the neighbors.

—Oliver E. Hawkins and Richard Hance, of Kokomo, were each engaged to young ladies of that place. It seems that on the night of May 17, 1887, Hance took Hawkins' sweetheart out riding and attempted a criminal assault on her. The news of the outrage coming to the ears of Hawkins he met Hance on the following night and shot and killed him. He was tried for manslaughter, the principal evidence against him being his own admission, after he had surrendered himself to the authorities, though claiming that he had acted in self-defense. He was only 18 years old and was sentenced to the penitentiary for seven years. He was of good family and had been engaged as book-keeper in the seed store of his father. He has served about half his sentence and now goes out a free man, Gov. Hovey having pardoned him at the solicitation of all who took part in the trial.

—Moses Joseph, a merchant of Shelbyville, mislaid $360 some days ago and intimated that it was stolen by Aetna Richardson. The money was found and Moses is now made defendant in a suit for $5,000 damages.

—Daviess County farmers have suffered great damage this year from barn-burners. The favorite method of the incendiaries is to put a piece of cheese in a box of matches and then to conceal it in a hay-loft, leaving the rats to start the fire.

—The Third Indiana Cavalry (Forty-fifth Regiment) will hold their next annual reunion at Muncie, commencing Tuesday, Oct. 9, 1890.

—Capt. A. C. Keel, of Fort Wayne, has been appointed Deputy Internal Revenue Collector at that point, to succeed Claude C. Miller, resigned.

—The Union Churn Works, of Tiffin, O., will be removed to Lafayette, where they have been proffered a cash bonus of $20,000, in addition to five acres of land.

FIRE and brimstone left Sodom without a house and Lot.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capitol—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

MR. HALE offered the reciprocity amendment in the Senate, on the 2d, of which he had given notice on June 12, and addressed the Senate upon it. The desirability of such an interchange of products as the amendment proposed, he said, had been a subject which had given rise to the closest attention, and had resulted in grave and pertinent suggestions from eminent public men of the United States during the last thirty years. Whoever had seen the gradual falling off of American trade with Central and South America and the isles of the sea must have witnessed those conditions with the greatest impatience. The people of all those countries had a common interest with the people of the United States. Alluding to the late Pan-American Congress, Mr. Hale said that it proved that the same considerations which had their influence in the United States were also moving in the minds of the eminent men from the sister republics who took part in the proceedings of that congress, and that they pointed to the one sure and inevitable end—the increase of trade and commerce between the United States and those peoples. Those considerations which applied to an extension of trade and an increased interchange of products, applied not only to the nations of Central and South America, but to the islands of the Spanish Main. In the House the Clayton-Breckinridge election case was called up, but was not disposed of.

A WRITTEN communication from the Oswego Board of Trade contradicting a statement of the Secretary of Agriculture on the subject of the production of barley was presented to the Senate on the 3d inst. by Mr. Evarts, who asked that it be printed in the Congressional Record. Objection to that was made, but 500 copies were ordered printed for immediate distribution. Mr. Rusk's statement was that barley is the only cereal of which there is not raised a sufficiency for home consumption. The denial is to the effect that the annual production of the United States is about 60,000,000 bushels, and that the quantity used last year for malting purposes was less than 45,000,000. Ten million bushels had been imported from Canada—the quality being superior for malting purposes to that of the United States barley. Mr. Call offered a resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, declaring that the murder of Gen. Barrundia on the steamer Acapulco, by the authorities of Guatemala, while under the protection of the flag of the United States was an insult to the people of the United States, and demanded prompt action by the Government of the United States for the redress of that injury and for security against the recurrence of such cases. The tariff bill was taken up, the sugar schedule being under consideration. In the House the Clayton-Breckinridge election case was again taken up, but its consideration was not finished. During the debate Mr. Kennedy of Ohio (Rep.) took occasion to denounce Senator Quay. Mr. Kennedy drew from the details of the Clayton-Breckinridge case the conclusion that a Federal election law should be enacted. He reflected severely upon the Senators who have been opposed to the Lodge bill. For himself, confident in the doctrines of the Republican party, fully committed to the principles of that party, he must forever dissent from the cowardly surrender which hauls down the flag and strikes the colors of the Republican party to a defeated foe.

IMMEDIATELY after the reading of the journal in the Senate on the 4th inst., the tariff bill was taken up, under the agreement limiting the discussion on each subject to five minutes for each Senator. Mr. Gibson withdrew the amendment offered by him last Tuesday to the sugar schedule (a mistake having been made in it), and he offered another amendment striking out that schedule and substituting for it the sugar provisions of the Mills bill. Some amendments, making slight changes in the bill were adopted. When the House assembled, on motion of Mr. Struble (Iowa) the Senate bill was passed to establish a port of delivery at Sioux City, Iowa. Mr. Cummings (N. Y.), rising to a question of privilege, protested against his "blacklisting" by the famous Cannon resolution. The gentleman who offered the resolution had made imputations, and in making these imputations he had falsified the Record and blacklisted himself. He then proceeded to make an attack upon Mr. Cannon. He then began to arraign the Speaker and the majority of the Committee on Rules. This majority composed a triumvirate almost as powerful as the one which sprang into life after the assassination of Julius Cæsar. When the House met in the morning, Mark Antony recognized Lepidus or Octavius and nobody else. All the legislative meat was cut and dried and distributed according to a prearranged programme.

IN the Senate, on the 5th, when the tariff bill was taken up, Senator Davis (Rep.) offered an amendment putting binding twine on the free list. The amendment was agreed to—yeas, 38; nays 18. All the Democrats except Mr. Blodgett voted aye, in company with the following named Republicans: Allen, Allison, Cullom, Davis, Ingalls, McMillan, Manderson, Mitchell, Moody, Pierce, Plumb, Power, Sawyer, Spooner and Washburn. The negative votes were given by Messrs. Aldrich, Blodgett, Cameron, Chandler, Dawes, Edmunds, Evarts, Frye, Hawley, Higgins, Hiscock, Hoar, Platt, Quay, Sherman, Stewart, Stockbridge, and Wolcott. Mr. Quay moved to strike out of the free list paragraph 665, "sulphate of quinia and all alkaloids or salts of cinchona bark." The motion to strike quinine out of the free list was defeated—yeas, 15; nays, 38. The House, by a vote of 105 to 62, declared the seat of C. R. Breckinridge, of Arkansas, vacant. Mr. Breckinridge, in speaking in his own defense, said: "Come to your conclusion, and I will take an appeal to the people, regardless of party, in the district I have the honor to represent, on the broad ground of common honesty, and in November they will reverse both your conclusion and the method of your conclusion."

A DARK MARRIAGE MORN.

A Romance of Love, Intrigue and Crime.

BY MRS. ALICE P. CARRISTON.

CHAPTER XXXI.—(Continued.)

For an instant his eyes rested on Eugene with a stupefied surprise and almost bewilderment; then he raised his arms over his head, and his two hands struck together with a sharp sound. At this terrible moment Cora seized the arm of Eugene, and threw him a look so profound, supplicating and tragic that it alarmed him.

He roughly pushed her from him, crossed his arms, and waited the result.

The Senator walked slowly toward him. All at once his face became inflamed with a purple color, his lips half opened as if about to deliver some deadly insult.

He advanced rapidly, his hands raised; but after a few steps the old man suddenly stopped, beat the air with both hands, as if seeking some support, then staggered and fell forward, striking his head against the marble mantelpiece, rolled on the carpet and remained motionless.

Then there ensued in this chamber a sinister silence.

A stifled cry from Eugene broke it. At the same time he threw himself on his knees by the side of the motionless old man, touched first his hand, then his heart.

He saw that he was dead.

One look of Eugene told Cora Elliston she was a widow.

She threw herself on the divan, buried her face in the cushions and sobbed aloud.

Eugene still stood, his back against the mantelpiece, his eyes fixed, wrapped in his own thoughts.

He wished in all sincerity of heart that he could have awakened the dead and restored him to life.

He had sworn to deliver himself up to him without defense if ever the old man demanded it of him for forgotten favors, betrayed friendship and violated honor. Now he had killed him. If he had not slain him with his own hands, the crime was still there in its most hideous form. He saw it before him, he smelt its odor, he breathed its blood.

An uneasy glance of Cora recalled him to himself, and he approached her. They then conversed together in whispers, and he hastily explained to her the line of conduct she should adopt.

She must summon the servants, say the Senator was taken suddenly ill, and that on entering her room he had been seized by an apoplectic stroke.

It was with some effort she understood she was to wait long enough before giving the alarm to give Eugene sufficient time to escape, and until then she was to remain in this frightful tete-a-tete alone with the dead.

The surgeon testified that Senator Sherwood Elliston had died from the rupture of a vessel in the heart.

Two days after the interment in Greenwood took place, at which Eugene Cleveland attended.

The same evening he left New York to join his wife, who had gone to Roxbury the preceding week.

CHAPTER XXXII.

TREMBLING IN THE BALANCE—JEALOUSY.

One of the sweetest sensations in the world is that of a man who has just escaped the fantastic terrors of nightmare, and who, awaking, his forehead bathed with icy sweat, says to himself: "It was but a dream!"

This was, in some degree, the impression which Eugene felt on awaking the morning after he arrived at Roxbury, when his first glance fell on the sunlight streaming over the foliage, and when he heard beneath his window the joyous laugh of his little child.

He, however, was not dreaming; but his soul, crushed by the horrible tension of recent emotions, had a moment's respite, and drank in, almost without alloy, the new calm that surrounded him.

He hastily dressed himself and, descending to the garden, raised his son in his arms.

He embraced him with unusual tenderness, and bending over him spoke to him in a low voice, and asked after his mother, about his plays, with a singularly soft and sad manner. Then he put him down, and walked away with a slow step, breathing the fresh morning air, examining the leaves and the flowers with extraordinary interest.

From time to time a deep, sad sigh broke from his oppressed bosom; he passed his hand over his brow as if to efface the importunate images. He sat down among the luxuriant verdure, called to the nurse to bring his son again to him, held him on his knee, interrogating him again, in a low tone, as he had already done, then drew him toward him, and clasped him tightly for a long time, as though to draw into his own soul the innocence and peace of the child's heart.

Flora surprised him in this gush of feeling, and remained mute with astonishment. He rose immediately and took her hand.

"What splendid care you take of him!" he said. "I thank you for it. He will be worthy of you and your mother."

She was so surprised at the soft and sad tone of his voice that she replied, stammering with embarrassment:

"And worthy of you also, I hope."

"Of me?" said Eugene, whose lips were slightly tremulous. "Poor child, I hope not!" and rapidly withdrew.

Flora and her mother had learned, the previous morning of the death of the Senator. The evening of Eugene's arrival they did not speak to him on the subject, and were cautious not to make any allusion to it. The next day and the succeeding ones, they practiced the same reserve, though very far from suspecting the fatal circumstances which rendered this souvenir so painful to Eugene. They thought it only natural he should be pained at so sudden a catastrophe, and that his conscience should be disturbed; but they were astonished when this impression prolonged itself from day to day, until it took the appearance of a lasting sentiment.

They began to believe that there had arisen between Cora and himself, probably occasioned by the Senator's death, some quarrel which had weakened the tie between them.

A trip to New York, which he made some two weeks after his arrival, was to them a confirmation of the truth they before suspected, but his prompt return, his new tastes, which kept him at Roxbury for some time, seemed to them favorable impressions.

He was singularly sad and pensive. He took long walks alone. Sometimes he carried his little son with him, as though by chance. He sometimes attempted a little timid tenderness with his wife; and this awkwardness on his part was quite touching.

"Flo," he said to her one day, "you are a fairy; wave your wand over this place and make of it an island in mid-ocean."

"You say that because you know how to swim," she rejoined, laughing and shaking her head; but the heart of the young woman was joyful.

"You embrace me now every moment, my dear child," said her mother to her. "Is this really all intended for me?"

"My beloved mother"—while embracing her again—"I assure you he is really courting me again. Why, I am ignorant; but he is courting me and you also, my mother. Notice it."

Mrs. Leland did notice it. In his conversation with her, Eugene seemed to wish to link all that was good in the past with his new life; to forget the rest, and pray of them to forget it also.

It was not without fear that these two charming women abandoned themselves to their hopes. They remembered that they were in the presence of an uncertain person; they little trusted a change so sudden, the reason of which they could not comprehend. They feared it was some passing caprice, which would return to them, if they were its dupes, all their misfortunes, without the dignity which had hitherto attended them.

They were not the only ones struck by this transformation. Mr. Norton and all his friends noticed it. Even the inanimate things—the woods, the trees, the heavens—should have borne the same testimony, for he looked at and studied them with a benevolent curiosity with which he had never before honored them.

In truth, a profound trouble had invaded him and would not leave him. More than once, before this epoch, his soul, his philosophy, his pride, had received a rude shock, but he had no less pursued his path, rising after every blow, like a lion wounded, but unconquered.

In trampling under his feet all moral belief which binds the vulgar, he had reserved honor like an inviolable limit. Then, under the empire of his passion, he said to himself that, after all, honor, like all the rest, was conventional. Then he encountered crime—he touched it with his hand—horror seized him, and he recoiled.

He repulsed with disgust the principle which had conducted him there—asked himself what would become of human society if it had no other.

The simple truths which he had misunderstood now appeared to him in their tranquil splendor. He did not yet distinguish them clearly; he did not try to give them a name, but he plunged with secret delight into their shadows and their peace. He asked for them in the pure heart of his child, in the pure love of his young wife, in the daily miracles of nature, in the harmonies of the heavens, and probably already—in the depths of his thoughts—of God.

In the midst of this approach toward a new life he hesitated.

At the end of the month Eugene returned to New York and to his counting-room.

Business over for the day, before returning home, he paid a visit to Cora.

He had neglected her a little of late; in fact, had only visited her at long intervals, as politeness compelled him.

Cora wished to keep him for dinner, as she had no guests with her. She pressed him so warmly that, blaming himself all the time, he consented.

She was never more beautiful. Her deep mourning embellished yet more her languishing and regal grace; it made her pale complexion yet more fair, and it brightened the brilliancy of her look.

She had the air of a tragic queen, or of an allegory of night.

The reserve, which for some time had marked their relations, was forgotten. Eugene found himself as in olden times, at the foot of Cora—his eyes in hers, and covering with kisses her lovely hands.

She was strange that evening.

"We might be so happy," she said.

"Are we not so?" asked Eugene.

"No! I, at least, am not, for you are not all mine, as I am all yours. This appears harder now that I am free. If you had remained free—when I think of it! or, if you could become so, it would be heaven!"

"You know that I am not so! Why speak of it?"

She drew nearer to him, and with her breath more than her voice, answered:

"Is it possible! Tell me."

"How?" he demanded.

She did not reply, but her fixed look, caressing and cruel, answered him.

"Speak, then, I beg of you!" murmured Eugene.

"Have you not told me—I have not forgotten it—that we are united by ties stronger than all others; that the world and its laws exist no longer for us; that there is no other good, no other bad for us, but our happiness or our unhappiness! Well, we are not happy, and if we could be so—listen, I have thought well over it!"

Her lips touched the cheek of her lover, and the murmur of her last words was lost in her kisses.

Eugene roughly repulsed her, sprang up, and stood before her.

"Cora," he said sternly, "this is a trick, I hope; but trial or no, never repeat it, never! Remember!"

She also quickly drew up her figure.

"Ah! how you love her!" she cried. "Yes, you love her; it is she you love—I know it, I feel it, and I—I am only the wretched object of your pity or of your caprice. Even Mildred Lester is no longer remembered. Very well; go back to her—go and protect her, for I swear to you she is in peril!"

He smiled with his haughty irony.

"Let us see your plot," he said! "So you intend to kill her?"

"If I can!" she said; and her superb arm was stretched out as though to seize a weapon.

"What! with your hand?"

"The hand shall be found."

"You are so beautiful at this moment," said Eugene, "I am dying with the desire to fall at your feet. Acknowledge only that you wished to try me, or that you were mad for a moment."

She gave a savage smile.

"Oh! you fear do you?" she said, coldly; then raising again her voice, which assumed a malignant tone, "you are right; I am not mad; I did not wish to try you; I am jealous—I am betrayed, and I shall revenge myself, no matter what it costs me, for I care for nothing more in this world! Go, and guard her!"

"Be it so; I go," said Eugene, with flashing eyes. He immediately left the room and the house; he reached the Grand Central Depot on foot, and that night reached Roxbury.

Something terrible there awaited him.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

DESPAIR.

Oscar Slyme had been making the most of his time, though thus far matters had not turned out as he had expected or desired.

Baffled in bringing about Eugene's ruin through the Senator, he determined to separate him from Flora, whom, notwithstanding what had happened, he still loved as much as he hated Cora Elliston.

He dare not go to her himself, but while in the service of the Senator and Warren Leland he had become acquainted with a connection of the Leland family, a sour-minded old maid, who affected religion and all the virtues, and professed to despise wealth and the pleasures of this world, and who, as a matter of course, hated her younger, prettier, and more fortunate relative, Flo, and all her family with an intense and perfect hatred.

Oscar Slyme knew and understood this woman thoroughly, and determined to make her his tool.

He went to her, told his story—a fearful story it was—and when he saw she was almost bursting with the information she had received, suggested that she should go to Roxbury and pay the Lelands a visit, especially, as he happened to know, Eugene Cleveland was out of the way.

She jumped at the idea, and the very next eastern-bound train had her on board as a passenger.

It is almost needless to say that Mrs. Leland and Flora were greatly astonished when informed that their connection, Miss Phebe Craven, had arrived to pay them a visit. They could not understand it. Their intercourse with her had always been very constrained. Neither their character nor their religion coincided with hers.

After a moment's reflection Mrs. Leland said:

"Of course we must receive her and treat her well. You go down, Flo, and entertain her for a while. I will come later and relieve you."

"Very well, mamma," and with a resigned sigh Flo descended to the reception-room.

At sight of her Miss Phebe started to her feet, and rushing forward, threw her arms about her neck and kissed her. Flo, however, did not return this greeting quite so cordially.

In truth, she had no great aversion for her maiden relative; she simply contented herself with not liking her; but Phebe Craven hated Flo intensely, and now she had found a good occasion to prove it to her, and she would not lose it. What wonder, then, she began with a kiss?

The death of the Senator had destroyed all Slyme's high hopes of the fortune which he believed he would receive for opening the eyes of the deluded old man; and in his rage and disappointment he had been very bitter against Eugene. Phebe learned through him that Eugene had been in the chamber of Mrs. Elliston the night of the Senator's death. On this foundation of truth she did not fear to frame the most odious suspicions; and Slyme, baffled in his vengeance, and like her in his envy, had sided her.

On Flora's invitation, she again took her seat, but forced her young relative into a chair by her side, and still held her hand.

Soon she affected to make the Senator's death the theme of conversation—shed a few tears over her old acquaintance, and kissed Flo's imprisoned hand with a burst of tenderness.

"My poor little thing!" she said to her; "it is for you also I weep, for you will be yet more unhappy than heretofore, if that can be possible."

"I do not understand you, Phebe," answered Flora, coldly.

"If you do not understand me so much the better," replied Miss Phebe, with a shade of bitterness. Then, after a moment's pause: "Listen my dear little thing! this is a duty of conscience which I comply with. You see, an honest creature like you merits a better fate; and your mother, too, who is also a dupe. This man would deceive the Almighty himself. In the name of humanity, I feel bound to ask pardon for both of them."

"I repeat, Phebe, that I do not understand you."

"But it is impossible, Flo! Come, it is impossible that all this time you have suspected nothing."

"I suspect nothing, Phebe Craven," Flora, "because I know all."

"Ah! continued Phebe, dryly, "if this be so, I have nothing to say. But there are persons, in that case, who can accommodate their conscience to very strange things."

"That is what I thought a moment since, Miss Craven," said Flora, rising abruptly.

"As you wish, my dear; but I speak in your own interest; and I shall reproach myself for not having spoken to you more clearly. I know your husband better than you will ever know him; and the other also. Notwithstanding you say so, you do not know all, let me tell you. Senator Elliston died very suddenly, and after it is your turn! Be very careful, my poor child!"

"Oh, Phebe Craven!" cried poor Flora, becoming ghastly pale, "I will never see you again while I live!"

She left the room on the instant, ran up-stairs, and found her mother.

She repeated to her the terrible words she had just heard, and her mother tried to calm her; but she herself was disturbed.

She went down to Miss Phebe, and supplicated her to have pity on them and to retract the abominable innuendo she had thrown out, or to explain it more fully. She made her understand that she would inform Mr. Cleveland of the affair in case of need, and that he would make it unpleasant for her.

Terrified in her turn, Miss Phebe judged the best method was to destroy Eugene Cleveland in the estimation of Mrs. Leland.

She related all that had been told her by Slyme. She informed her of the presence of Eugene at the Senator's house the night of his death. She hinted at certain reports that were circulated, and mingling calumny with truth, redoubling at the same time her affection, her caresses and her tears, she succeeded in giving Mrs. Leland such an estimate of Eugene's character that there were no suspicions or apprehensions which the poor woman from that moment did not consider legitimate as connected with him.

Miss Craven finally offered to send Slyme to her, that she might herself interrogate him. Mrs. Leland, affecting an incredulity and a tranquillity that she did not feel, refused, and shortly after the mischief-making old maid returned to the city.

On rejoining her daughter, Mrs. Leland exerted herself to deceive her as to the impressions she had received, but she did not succeed; for her anxious face belied her reassuring words.

Accustomed so long to think, feel, and suffer together, these two women now met, so to speak, in the same reflections, the same reasonings, and in the same terrors. They went over in their memories all the incidents of Cleveland's life—all his faults; and under the shadow of the monstrous action imputed to him, his faults took a criminal character which they were surprised they had not seen before.

They discovered a series and a sequence in his designs, all of which were imputed to him as crimes—even his good actions. Thus his conduct of late, his strange ways, his fancy for his child and for his wife, his assiduous tenderness toward her, was nothing more than the hypocritical meditation of a new crime—a mask which he was preparing in advance.

What was to be done? What kind of a life was it possible to live in common under the weight of such thoughts? What present—what future?

These thoughts bewildered them.

Next day Eugene could not fail remarking the singular change in their countenances in his presence.

He walked and played a part of the day with his child. Just as night fell, clear and pure, he proposed to Flora an excursion in the woods. He spoke to her of a view which had struck him shortly before on such a night, and which would please, he said, her romantic taste.

He would not permit himself to be surprised at the disinclination she manifested, the disquietude which her face indicated, or at the rapid glance she exchanged with her mother.

The same thought, and that a most fearful one, entered the minds of both these unfortunate women at the same moment of time.

They were still under the impression of the shock which had so weakened their nerves, and Eugene's sudden proposition, so contrary to his usual habits, the hour—the night and the solitary walk—had suddenly awakened in their brains the sinister images which Phebe Craven had laid there.

Flora, however, with an air of resolution the circumstances did not seem entitled to demand, prepared immediately to go out, then followed her husband from the house, leaving her child in charge of her mother.

They had only to cross the garden to find themselves on the edge of the woods which almost touched the dwelling, and which stretched to some distance beyond.

Eugene's intention in seeking this interview was to confide to his wife the decisive determination he had taken of delivering up to her, absolutely and without reserve, his heart and life, and to enjoy with her his first taste of true happiness.

Surprised at the cool distraction with which Flo replied to the affectionate gayety of his language, he redoubled his efforts to bring their conversation to a tone of more intimacy and confidence.

While stopping at intervals to point out to her some effects of light and shadow in their walk, he asked what visitor she had seen yesterday. She named two or three; then lowering her voice against her will mentioned Phebe Craven.

"That one," said Eugene, "you had better not have seen. I no longer recognize her."

"Why?" asked she, timidly.

"Because she is a bad woman. When we are a little more intimate with each other, you and I, I shall edify you on her character. I shall tell you all—all, understand."

There was so much of goodness in the accent with which he pronounced these words that Flo felt her heart half comforted.

The phantom disappeared, little by little, from her mind, and she commenced to say to herself that she had been the sport of a bad dream and of a true madness, when a singular change in her husband's face renewed all her terrors.

Eugene, in his turn, had become absent and visibly preoccupied with some grave care. He spoke with an effort; made half replies, meditated, then stopped quickly to look around him, like a frightened child.

There was an extraordinary similarity in the thoughts which occupied them both. At the moment when Flora was trembling for fear near her husband, he was trembling for her.

He thought they were being followed; he thought he heard in the thicket the cracking of branches, rattling of the leaves, and finally the sound of stealthy steps.

These noises always ceased on his stopping, and then commenced again the moment he resumed his walk. He thought, a moment later, he saw the shadow of a man pass rapidly among the underbrush behind them.

The repeated menaces of Cora Elliston against Flora's life—the passionate and unbridled character of this woman, soon presented itself to his mind, and suggested this mysterious pursuit, and awakened these frightful suspicions.

A Comic-Opera Girl in a Tight Place.

During a burlesque opera the other night a little accident occurred at a point where the comedian has occasion to present various young women with medals for having taken part in brave deeds on the field of battle. These honored warriors are attired to kill, being for the most part tightly compressed within thin affairs of silk. One of them is very tall and sturdy, a very Juno, encased in tights of a soft pearly gray, and, as she stepped forward for her medal, she looked every inch a conqueror of men. The comedian extended the medal to her, but, as she reached out, it fell to the stage. The lovely woman's impulse was to stoop and pick it up, but at the first bend of her knees she stooped and looked at the comedian as though she expected him to perform the service for her. But that comedian was a wicked chap, and he had no intention of rescuing the medal.

"Why don't you pick it up, my brave soldier?" he asked, looking at the tall, blushing girl with an expression of comic surprise.

The girl was plucky, though nervous, and she quickly made up her mind that she would not be made fun of before the audience, so she began at once the process of picking the medal off the stage. She dived down swiftly at first, but only got half as far as she expected and stopped. There seemed to be a resistance at the knees. The audience was interested, and the comedian regarded the proceeding as though it were a feat of acrobatism. The girl swung up and down with an elastic movement for an instant, and, as the blood poured in a crimson wave over her face, neck and arms, she strained with all her force to reach the medal. At last, with one last sharp, determined dive, the thing was in her hand, but at the same time an ominous sound was heard. It was the ripping of tight-woven cloth. The comedian jumped backward, every opera glass in the house was raised as though by a signal, and, as the confused beauty struggled to an erect posture and staggered from the stage, a gleam of snow white was visible at each knee against a ruin of pearl-gray silk.

"Well," said the comedian, a little sorry that the joke should have resulted so disastrously, "I think she came through very handsomely in that scene.—Louisville Post.

How to Write a Letter.

Write the date distinctly, the day of the month and the year—not just the day of the week.

Write on plain, unlined paper.

Write your "q's" and "y's" differently, their tails turned in opposite directions.

Write your "t's" with a cross and your "i's" with a dot.

Write an answer to your friend's questions; if she had not wanted to know she would not have asked you.

Write with black ink—pale or faded ink has broken off more friendships and love affairs than one would imagine.

Write your name distinctly. If you are a married woman, sign it, for example, "Virginia Andrews," exactly as if you were not married; but if it is a business letter, the Mrs. should be put in parenthesis before your name; or, better still, the letter may be written in the third person. The same rule applies to an unmarried woman.

Write a short, crisp letter; a concentration of brightness. It will be much more appreciated than one longer drawn out.

Write as little as possible on the subject of love. Words of love are much better said than written.

Write yourself down a bright, sensible girl, and you will then have written the very best letter that a girl can possibly write.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Samaria of To-day.

From an article on "Some Wayside Places in Palestine," in the Century, we quote the following:

I am free to confess that I did not meet the proverbial good Samaritan as I journeyed through this much-favored country. If one meets a tiller of the soil he will sidle off as far as the narrow path will allow, and scowlingly watch the traveler's approach. The offer of a piaster will bring him to a standstill.

"How far is it to Nain?"

"God knows," comes the fervent answer.

"How long will it take to go there?"

"As long as God pleases," he answers, with a shrug of his shoulders and a pull at his pipe.

"Shall I reach there by noon?"

"If God permit."

"But may I hope to make the distance in an hour?"

"As God may direct," he answers, walking away.

"Is Nain distant, or is it very near?"

"There," he answers, moving his finger through a wide arc. If one extracts a more neighborly spirit than this from a Samaritan he must have the mysterious power of a dervish.

No Indication of Love.

"But do you love me, Alberta?"

The speaker, judging from the tone of his liquid voice, had evidently had enough of trifling.

"Why, Ambrose, you certainly cannot doubt that I am attached to you," and she put a little more arm leverage in the full Nelson neck hold she had on him to emphasize her remarks.

"Yes, Alberta, but that is not sufficient. I am not satisfied. The dog may be attached to the tin-can, but does he therefore love it?"—Philadelphia Times.

Great Expectations.

Mrs. Tiptop—Why in the world did you allow your daughter to engage herself to Mr. Churchmouse? He hasn't a cent."

Mrs. Highup—No, not yet; but think of his prospects.

Mrs. T.—Prospects? Why, there are ten lives between him and the family fortune, and they are all strong, healthy young men.

Mrs. H.—Yes; but not one of them can get from his home to his business without crossing Broadway.—New York Weekly.

THE most monotonous city in its buildings is Paris, the houses there being almost all alike. An attempt is now being made to vary this by building houses of the style of the Renaissance and Louis XI. and hope is expressed that the example will be followed generally.

Of DeKalb County.
For Joint Representative,
DR. NORMAN TEAL,
Of Noble County.

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

Jugde of the Supreme Court—J. A. S. Mitchell, of Elkhart county.

Secretary of State—Claud Mathews, of Vermillion county.

Auditor of State—J. O. Henderson, of Howard county.

Treasurer of State—Albert Gall, of Marion.

Attorney-general—A. G. Smith, of Jennings county.

Clerk of the Supreme Court—Andrew M. Sweeney, of Dubois county.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—Hervey D. Vories, of Johnson county.

Chief of the Bureau of Statistics—Wm. A. Peelle, jr., of Marion county.

State Geologist—S. S. Gorby, of Dearborn county.

THE democratic state platform declares for the abolition of fees for county officers, and in favor of giving them fixed salaries.

CAPT. HILLEGAS, who asked a nomination for secretary of state, is just as solid for the whole ticket as be could have been had the plum dropped into his own hand.

E. D. CAHOTA is believed to be the only Chinaman who was a soldier in the rebellion. He served in the twenty-third Massachusetts, and was an excellent soldier, was in the fierce fight at Cold Harbor and many others.

LIEUTENANT BROWNELL, the man who shot Jackson after the latter had shot and killed Col. Elsworth at the Marshall House at Alexandria, Va., early in the war, is now an employe in the pension office at Washington.

VERMONT'S recent election showed heavy republican losses. In 1888, the republican majority was over 27,000. This year it goes but a little above 12,000. About one more such falling off, and she will be democratic.

REED, the bulldozing Speaker of the House, is holding out a promise to members, that he will get votes for their various big appropriations, if they will vote for the Force Bill, otherwise known as the federal election bill. The people's money is used to bribe members to vote against the people's interests.

BRECKENRIDGE, the sitting member from the second Arkansas district, was unseated, and his place declared vacant by the majority in the House last week. It is not claimed that he did not receive a majority of the votes, but that there was intimidation and violence. He will appeal to his people by making the race agnin.

THE Senate last week decided to put binder twine on the free list. Now if the House will agree to this we shall see whether the price will be reduced. Republican editors about here, say a tariff duty makes a thing cheaper. And if that is true, we suppose they will claim that taking off the duty makes a thing dearer. We think they are wrong.

RAUM, commissioner of pensions seems to go on the plan of "make and let make." When he took the office, he was poor. But Pension Agent Lemon had got rich in the pension business. So he endorsed $15,000 of Raum's paper, same as giving him that much and the very next day Raum "advanced and made special" 6,000 of Lemon's pension cases. This was worth more than the $15,000 to Lemmon. But it was a fraud on other soldiers and agents.

REPUBLICAN newspapers have not yet tried to explain why their state officers do not stay at home and attend to work, and earn their salaries, save the state's money, and so keep down expenses, in order that the state debt may be diminished. Nor do they explain where their state officers get the money to carry on big loan companies, nor why their state attorney-general draws $2,400 for help in his office when the law gives him but $600. At this rate the state will be in debt till we get in democratic officers.

ALUMINUM is a rare metal that promises great usefulness if it can be produced cheaply. It seems to constitute one twentieth part of the earth's crust. It is therefore abundant. The great cost of producing it from the clay of which it is a part, has prevented its general use. It is obtained mostly now from Iceland spar, and is becoming cheaper, as new methods of making it are discovered. Ten years ago it was worth $30 a pound, but can now be produced for $3 a pound. Will protectionists claim that the tariff has made this article cheaper?

KOSCIUSKO county is all torn up over the result of the investigation into their county finances. It will be remembered, that some time ago, the COURIER noted the strange fact that that strong republican county was not in the habit of publishing the commissioners allowances and similar financial matters in which the taxpayers had an interest. Complaint was made at various times, and at last public opinion forced them to show up. A committee of one republican, one democrat and one prohibitionist, examined the accounts, finding the people's money had been slung around loose by the thousands. Double, and even triple prices were paid, and the business conducted carelessly everywhere. A favorite business seemed to be keeping and feeding tramps, the books showing that several thousands of these gentlemen had been cared for during each year. The city is likely to be called "the tramp's paradise."

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

The wife of Prof. Davis is still very sick.

A new walk is being laid on the north side of Main street.

R. M. Lockhart took a business trip to Mishawaka Tuesday.

Rev. Londy will preach for the "Radicals" the coming year.

Mr. Weaver, of Brimfield, visited his son, N. H., over Sunday.

Mrs. Bigler is home again making ready for a brisk fall business.

The Indian doctor, Whitefeather, of Sturgis, Mich., spent Sunday in Waterloo.

It was Sam Beck's bid that located the Wabash railroad through Waterloo.

Charles Bassett, Jr., has gone to Chicago to perfect his skill in fine engraving.

Miss May Davidson returned last Saturday from a pleasant visit at Flint, Mich.

W. W. Ferrier and wife left for their home in Port Townsend, Wash., last Monday.

Isaac Speer is attending the U. B. conference at Hicksville, O., as lay delegate.

Frank Smith and Frank Howard went to Kendallville to start a broom factory last Tuesday.

Rev. Retts and wife and Dr Carpenter and wife dined with Mr and Mrs. S. P. S row last Sunday.

Born—to the wife of Lee Stamets, on Sunday, Sept. 7th, a daughter. No wonder they are happy.

A fine young horse owned by Isaac Speer was badly cut up on a barbed wire fence last Saturday.

A meeting was held last Monday evening in the interest of the proposed extension of the Wabash road.

Mrs. J. G. Johnson and Mrs. John Fisher went to Chicago this week. Mrs. J. goes to learn the new styles in millinery.

Mrs. Prof. Davis has a sister from Hillsdale Mich., here attending her. Mrs. D. is a very little better at this writing.

Miss Maggie Wilson, who has been visiting relatives and friends in Ohio, returned last week to Waterloo, with Mrs. Bigler.

Mr. L. Stamets, who was called here some weeks ago by the illness of his mother, left Tuesday morning for his home in Kansas.

Friday last Dr. Carpenter returned from Defiance, Ohio, where he has spent several days. His mother returned with him for a short visit.

Our schools commenced last Monday. It seems very pleasant to again hear the school bells and see the scholars wending their way to and from school.

Abby Sinclair has recently returned to her home after visiting relatives in Chicago, and others in Iowa. Her brother, who had been west returned with her.

The Epworth League gave an entertainment at the M. E. church Tuesday evening. R. H. Lock gave a lecture. There was also music, singing and recitations.

Mr. Bigler and wife were at Goshen attending a family reunion at the residence of Mr. Wm Bigler's brother, since which time Mrs. B. has passed two weeks with relatives in Ohio.

E. R. Blattner and family leave to-day Thursday, for Toledo where they will make their future home. We regret to lose them, but wish nothing for them but happiness and prosperity in their new home.

The burglars have again made an attempt to get in their work. Some nights since some one or more persons made an effort to enter N. H. Weaver's house, and on two other nights similar attempts were made on other houses.

The original and famous "Blind Tom" passed through here Tuesday, stopping off from the north-bound train to go west on the delayed train on the Air Line. His odd actions attracted a good deal of attention. A lady and gentleman had him in charge.

Last Friday night about 1 o'clock, the fire bell rang out its alarm. It proved to be McCague's saw mill that was in flames, which was at that time beyond saving. Some lumber was saved but the building was a total loss, as there was no insurance. Not even the books could be got out.

On Thursday evening of last week the commodious parlors of John Maxson were well filled on the occasion of the musicale by Miss Mattie's instrumental class. Miss Maxson has a fine musical education, and it is evident, is very thorough in her instruction and drill. It was a pleasure to listen to all, not forgetting the wee ones. All acquitted themselves well, some exceedingly so. The opening was an instrumental trio, "Gipsy Maiden," by Mrs. Jennie Beidler, Mattie J. Maxon and Geo. Kennedy. Mesdames Fisher and Brysland sang a duet, and each a solo. The program was principally piano and organ, solos and duets by members of the class. Miss Maxson has reason to congratulate herself that this annual entertainment by her class has been a complete success, and was thoroughly appreciated and enjoyed by those present.

SUMMIT.

Items are scarce this week.

Mrs. Betsy Camp, of Michigan was in town last Monday.

A. Sweigart's little boy has been quite sick with lung fever.

Mr. Joseph Penick's baby who has been sick for some time is getting better.

During the month of August H. D. Snowberger paid out for wheat at this place the sum of $15,865.35.

DEKALB.

Mother Hall continues about the same.

Considerable wheat sown and up very nicely.

W. A. Feagler has got a fine slate roof on his house.

B. F. Myers has been sick a few days, but is better at present.

Mr. Daniel Walter has been quite sick but is better at present.

Mrs. H Probst had her house moved out to the road over a cellar.

J. F. and H. P. Housel made a flying trip to Bluffton, Wells Co., on business.

A. McKinley and D. N. Terry and families and J. Munro took in the show at Garrett Monday.

A list of advertised mail at DeKalb, Sept. 1, 1860: Mrs. C. Gehring, Mr Henry Barnhart, J. C. Roy.

Mrs. Lane reports that school will commence Sept. 15. Get your books together and be ready. Inks, pencils and foolscap paper at J. F. Housel's, grocer and P. M.

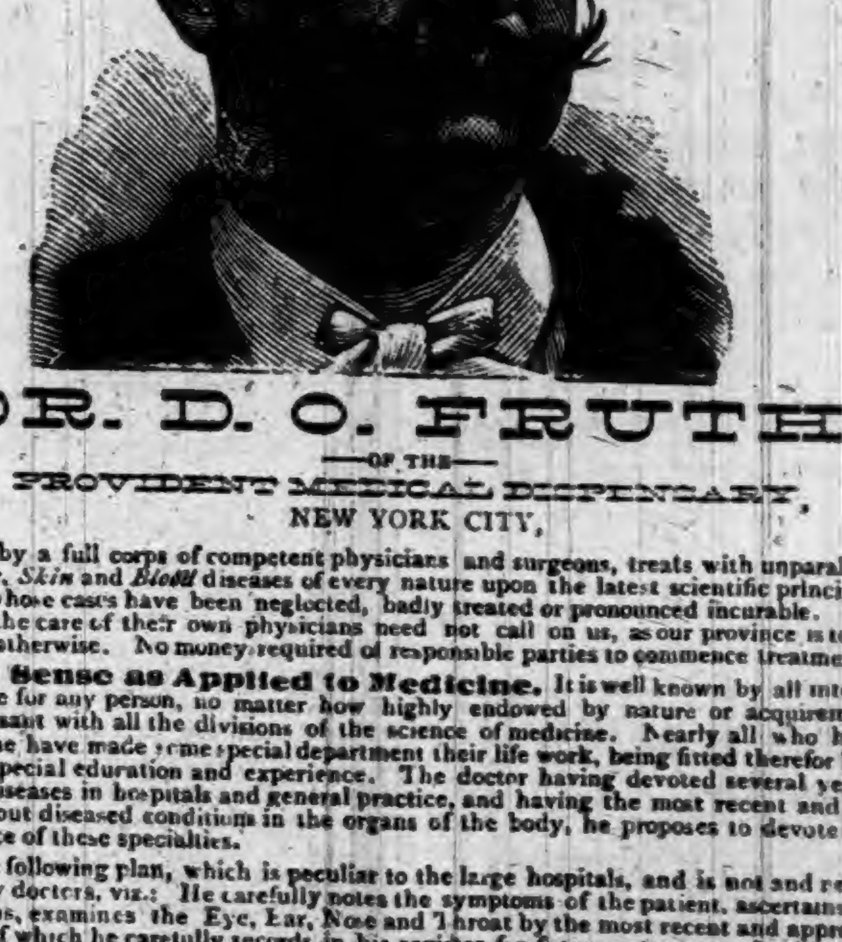
DR. FRUTH.

Of New York, the well known and successful Specialist in Chronic Diseases, and diseases of the Eye and Ear by request of many friends and patients, has decided to visit

AUBURN, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1890.

Consultation and Examination free and confidential in his parlors at the SWINEFORD HOUSE from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. One day only.

CHRONIC DISEASES, —AND— DISEASES of the EYE and EAR A SPECIALTY



FREE. Consultation and Examination

DR. D. O. FRUTH,
—OF THE—
PROVIDENT MEDICAL DISPENSARY,
NEW YORK CITY,

— Ably assisted by a full corps of competent physicians and surgeons, treats with unparalleled success all Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood diseases of every nature upon the latest scientific principles. He particularly invites all whose cases have been neglected, badly treated or pronounced incurable. Patients who are doing well under the care of their own physicians need not call on us, as our province is to treat those who cannot find relief otherwise. No money required of responsible parties to commence treatment.

Common Sense as Applied to Medicine. It is well known by all intelligent observers that it is impossible for any person, no matter how highly endowed by nature or acquirements, to become thoroughly conversant with all the divisions of the science of medicine. Nearly all who have obtained distinction in medicine have made some special department their life work, being fitted therefor by natural adaptation or selection, special education and experience. The doctor having devoted several years to the special study of chronic diseases in hospitals and general practice, and having the most recent and improved instruments for finding out diseased conditions in the organs of the body, he proposes to devote the whole of his time to the practice of these specialties.

He adopts the following plan, which is peculiar to the large hospitals, and is not and never has been the practice of country doctors, viz.: He carefully notes the symptoms of the patient, ascertains the condition of the internal organs, examines the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat by the most recent and approved instruments and methods, all of which he carefully records in his register for future reference. In this way he ascertains the true nature of the disease and its cause. Knowing the disease, he knows the changes it produces in the tissues, and, knowing the changes, he checks them with specific remedies, and places his patient on the high road to recovery. When sick people consult him he readily tells them whether he can cure or help them, or if they are beyond hope.

The examinations are in accordance with anatomical and physical science, as he will convince the most skeptical. By an examination he will convince anyone of the nature and extent of disease, amount of danger to life, and chance of a perfect cure. Believing that science is truth and "truth is mighty and will prevail" when known, and knowing that disease can be cured with positive certainty, he invites the afflicted to call and receive advice free and be cured of their diseases.

There is no subject that requires so much study and experience as the treatment and cure of chronic diseases. The astonishing success and remarkable cures performed by him is due to a thorough knowledge of the structure and functions of the human system, and the cure of diseases by natural remedies. Let those given up by others call for examination. He has successfully treated the following diseases since his arrival in this State: Eye and Ear diseases, Chronic Diarrhoea, Chronic Inflammation of the Womb, Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, Painful or Irregular Menstruation, Fever Sores and Ulcers, Incontinence of Urine, Tape Worms, Crooked Limbs and Enlarged Joints, Spinal Curvatures, Club Foot, Hip Joint Disease, White Swelling, Discharging Abscesses, Sterility or Barrenness, Nervousness and General Debility, Impotency, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Leucorrhea or Whites, Blotches, Pimples, Skin Diseases, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Dropsy, Cancer, Epileptic Fits, Erysipelas, Gravel, Goitre, Gleet, Gonorrhoea, Hydrocele, Heart Disease, Headache, Piles, Hysteria, Syphilis, St. Vitus Dance, Chronic Dysentery, Enlarged Tonsils, Fistula in Ano, Hernia or Rupture, Ovarian Tumors, Paralysis, Prolapsus Uteri, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Scrofula, Consumption, Chronic Cough, Female Weakness, Spermatorrhoea, Rheumatism, etc. All surgical operations performed.

Curing of Piles guaranteed. Will give $1,000 for any case of failure. No money required of responsible parties.

Young Men who through ignorance or the careless exuberance of youthful spirits, have been unfortunate and find themselves in danger of losing their health and embittering their after lives may call with full confidence.

DR. FRUTH—Has attained the most wonderful success in the treatment of the cases to which he devotes his special attention. After years of experience he has discovered the most infallible method of curing weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, loss of memory, trembling and timidity, diseases of the nose, throat and lungs, affections of the liver, stomach and bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary habits of youth and secret practices, blighting the most radiant hopes and rendering marriage impossible.

Epilepsy, or Fits, positively cured by a new and never-failing method.

Private Diseases.—Blood Poison, Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. No risks incurred. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Medicine sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

Middle Aged Men, who find their vigor and vitality weakened by the [illegible] of old complaints and their bodies racked with pain at a time when they should spend their declining years in peace and comfort, should consult Dr. Fruth at once and find the sympathy and [illegible] positively require. His cures are thorough and permanent.

Diseases of Women.—We shall continue as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration and skill the diseases peculiar to women. Our operations for Fistula, Ruptured Cervix Uteri, Ruptured Perineum, and for Stricture of the Cervical Canal, a condition resulting in Sterility, have been alike gratifying both to ourselves and our patients.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Remarkable Cures perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible personal consultation preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. List of questions free. Western Address, DR. FRUTH, [illegible]

REFERENCES—We, the undersigned, do cheerfully and conscientiously recommend Dr. Fruth as a gentleman of rare professional ability, ripe in judgment, [illegible], and we therefore urge the afflicted to avail themselves of his superior skill:—Granville M. Weeks, M. D., L. L. D., President Provident [illegible], N. Y.; T. Meredith Maxwell, A. M., M. D., N. Y.; Orrin Pomeroy, M. D., N. Y.; V. M. Davis, M. D., N. Y.; W. E. White, M. The poor crops this year will probably make the editor of the Butler Record happy if no one else. He not long ago, decided that the great evil of low prices on farm products could only be remedied by "not producing so much." This summer sees the partial failure of nearly every common crop, and we suppose he will now say that farmers ought to get rich and be happy, because "they have not produced too much." This is on a par with other protection arguments.

L. D. Miser, democratic candidate for county coroner, was over here last Thursday. He has not given much attention to the canvass as yet, as he has been very busy at his trade, he being a carpenter. But he is a thoroughgoing, whole souled, hardworking man, and we believe will make a good officer.

At the Opera House Monday evening Dr. Watson was the fortunate man who guessed the number of beans in a jar. The actual number was 929, and he guessed 925. This the manager said is the best guess ever made on that jar. The Doctor received as a prize, a reserved seat ticket for the season.

English Spavin Liniment removes all hard, soft, or calloused lumps and blemishes from horses, blood spavin, curbs, splints, sweeny, ring-bone, stifles, all swollen throats, coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle, warranted. The most wonderful blemish cure known. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Indiana. tf

The many DeKalb county friends of Curtis F. Ash, will be pleased to hear that he is prospering in Kansas. He is a special correspondent and traveling representative for the Kansas City Daily Globe, one of their leading dailies, and it is no flattery to Mr. Ash to say that a fair share of its prosperity is due to his ability, industry and energy. It always pleases the Courier to hear the success of the DeKalb boys.

An old adage says: "Remembrance is the only tie which lingers when all others die." A direct application to this truthful saying has made us persistent in our efforts to bring Loose's extract of Red Clover to your notice. We are daily coming in contact with people who say to us: You remember what I was, how I looked and how I suffered before I was induced to try Red Clover. Ask any one who has taken Red Clover for any form of blood disorder and skin eruptions, for indigestion and rheumatism. Ask them, we say, what their recollection of Red Clover is what did it do for them, and they will convince you of the truth of all our statements. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

The Forum for September will contain a political essay on "Money Interests in Political Affairs," by E. L. Godkin, editor New York Evening Post, in which Mr. Godkin traces to the growth of protection the enormous and alarming increase of the influence of money in politics, which he regards as the most important political factor of our time. In the same number Senator John T. Morgan, of Alabama, replies to Senator Chandler's recent article on "The Federal Control of Elections." Other articles in this number will be "The Training of Teachers," by President G. Stanley Hall, of Clark University; "The Christianity of the Future," by Professor John S. Blackie, of Edinburgh, Scotland; "The Latest Astronomical News," by Professor Charles A. Young, of Princeton; "Protection Against Tornadoes," by Lieut. John P. Finley; as well as articles by Simon Sterne, Edward Everett Hale, James E Murdock, M. J. Savage, and Alice E. Ives.

If you could see your own scalp through an ordinary magnifying glass, you would be amazed at the amount of dust, dandruff, and dead skin thereon accumulated. The best and most popular preparation for cleansing the scalp is Ayer's Hair Vigor.

Our readers will find much space devoted to work at the teachers' institute. But we hope they will read it over carefully. Especially do we ask that parents who have children at school do this, as they can see the character of the training that teachers are expected to give their pupils.

S. R. Heberling is now associated with Joseph Kichler in the flouring mill at the south end of town, taking the place of Mr. Rogers. As one of the best known citizens of Auburn, we see no reason why Mr. Heberling should not prove a valuable partner, and we believe the new firm will prove a success. At least we hope they will do well.

W. H. McIntosh was out in Wisconsin last week to attend the reunion of his old regiment, the Twenty-Second, Wisconsin. The meeting was at Racine at their old camp ground, Sept. 2, that being the day they were mustered in twenty-eight years before. He says the meeting was one of the most pleasant he ever attended. They meet at Beloit next year.

Among the young people of the institute who called up to renew acquaintance with the editor, last week, were Miss Clemma Duncan, daughter of ex-commission, Geo. H. Duncan, W. H. May, who teaches the fourth reader grade in the Waterloo schools, and Miss Minnie Wallace of St. John. We are always glad to meet our young friends, and especially those working in the interest of the schools.

The One Hundredth Indiana Volunteers, will hold their fifth Annual reunion at Frankfort, Ind., on Wednesday, Oct. 1, 1890. There is an interesting program, and everything possible will be done to make the comrades welcome This is Dr. Swarts' old regiment, and we presume he and many others in Northern Indiana will attend. From this corner of the state, the best route, would probably be to go by way of Logansport, and there go south on the Vandalia road to Frankfort, which is in Clinton, the second county south. It will likely be held here next year.

Mrs. Sthair is ready to supply and suit the public with any thing in the corset line which she guarantees to be the most perfect fit and best setting corset ever made; expanding front and back; always sells on sight; made of best satteen and satin; white, drab and black; long or short hip, one or two lacings in the back. Fancy colors, pink, pale blue, red, old gold, cardinal, tan, garnet and cream. Nursing corsets all style and in fancy colors. Nursing or adominal. Children's waists, white or drab. She is also prepared with the best fitting vandyke and comfort ever make, hose supporting and braces. The sole agent for DeKalb county for the Hygeia or Great Western Combination Corset and Waist. Call and see Mrs. A. E. Sthair. tf

The Holden Company that is at the Opera House this week proves to be one of the very best we have had. They won the good will of our people the first evening, by their masterly rendering of that splendid play "Queena." Marie Brainerd and Company gave this here, a year or two ago, and did excellently well. But we think the Holden troupe did even better. Then they have many new features, including four colored singers, who "bring down the house" every evening. They have a very large troupe, and our people are having a treat in this line. Saturday afternoon they give a matinee, at which children are admitted at 10 cents, and ladies at 25 cents to all parts of the house.

Mr. Baker, who used to live across the creek east of town, is back on a visit. He resides in New York state.

Perry Harkey of Butler township, spent a day or two here this week. He was a delegate to the Kendallville convention.

Miller & Hooperty, our candy men were in full business at the Davis corner this week. They are always popular.

Sitting at our open window, we seem to hear a voice saying. "Right this way to the fair ground. Only one more and off we go."

Milo Thomas, of Corunna, was driving about the beautiful streets of Auburn, Saturday afternoon, accompanied by his wife and child.

Cal. Day was married this week to Miss Clara Voss, daughter of Charles Voss of Waterloo. The Courier extends the heartiest good wishes.

An Ohio lady was so frightened by a snake that her glossy black hair turned white as snow. In was soon returned to its original color by Hall's Hair Renewer.

James Pyle, of Girard, Kansas, is back to attend the fair. He has grown to be almost a giant since he went west. He is marshal for his town, a bright little city of 3,000.

C. W. Kaley, of Red Cloud, Neb, has been here a few days. He and his wife have been at the old home in Ohio, and stopped here to visit with A. Lewis' family and other friends.

Drive up there Jim, and get out of my way. I want to get to the Palace barn before all the room is gone. West of Swineford House, corner of Ninth and Jackson. J. C. Henry & George Swineford, Props. 37

Dr. Casebeer is at home again after a summer of hard reviewing study in New York. He returned by way of Washington, where he met Judge McClellan, W. J. Bowman and many other people from Indiana.

Notice to Settle: All parties knowing themselves indebted to J. A. Potter, are requested to call and settle the same before Sept. 25, at which time all unsettled accounts will be left for collection Let none fail to attend to this.

I say George did you see that run-away up Main street in Auburn yesterday? Those parties were trying to get to the Palace livery and feed barn west of Swineford House, corner of Ninth and Jackson street. J. C. Henry & George Swineford, Props. 37

Rickel & Sprott's horse "acted up" in a queer way the other day. Dr. Adams had it in training, with one fore leg strapped up, when all at once it began to rear and kick, and finally stood right up on one fore foot, kicking like mad with both hind feet at the same time. It was a pretty difficult thing for a horse to do.

Lagrange Democrat: Democratic editors who fight democrats more than they do republicans are not just the sort to put your fath in. In nine cases out of ten they have been "sat down on" and their assumed regard for the welfare of the people is a cloak that illy conceals a hatred of some man who has succeeded where they failed.

The Century for September, is as full of interesting matter as usual. Among the subjects treated we find: Our New Naval Guns; Proposed Yosemite National Park; An Artist in Japan; How California came into the Union, which includes several branches, as, the seizure of California, disputes as to boundary and date of discovery of the Yosemite valley. All are of great historical interest.

Ezra Foltz has been working out in the country, repainting the residence of J. L. Ferguson. Those who know his ability in this line, will know that Mr. Ferguson will have a fine job done. Those who have seen it, say it is in excellent taste, and so fine that "Jim" won't lie abed mornings "dreaming dreams" while his good wife gets breakfast, but will hustle out to look at it.

The Jackson township Sunday School convention was held in Lawhead's grove Sunday, August 31. A large crowd of people assembled in the beautiful grove, and a good interest shown by all who took part in the exercises. Conventions of this character are being recognized as an especial feature in the promotion of effective Suday school work, and the questions usually chosen for discussion are such as have a direct bearing upon the subject. This particular meeting was looked forward to with a great deal of interest on the part of workers in that township, and it is evident that Mr. O. Zimmerman is a gentleman well fitted for the position he occupies, as president of that body. The next meeting of the Jackson Township S. S. Association will be held at Hopewell church, Sunday, Nov. 30, 1890.

We send this week a copy of the Courier to every teacher who attended the institute, as far as we had their correct address. The supplement contains a full report, in brief form, of the entire week's work of the institute. We hope they will keep this for reference, for it is valuable to them, and we have been at considerable expense to prepare it for their use. Read it over. It will do you good. The Courier itself is a fair sample number, not up to the average, perhaps, for this is fair week, and we are crowded. But we feel that, as a whole, the Courier is the most valuable paper in the county, all things considered, and hope those teachers who are so situated as to need a paper will become subscribers. The Courier will continue to furnish the most home reading matter of any paper in the county. Take it, and we will try to do you good.

Read Dr. Fruth's notice.

The Wabash road continues to have trouble with her chances to get into Chicago. The new owners of the Chicago & Atlantic, the Erie road, want the Wabash to stop running over their tracks from Laketon Junction to Hammond. If they can force them to this, then the Wabash must hurry up its Chicago extension all the more rapidly, as it gets vast quantities of freight from Chicago and points farther west.

Hon. A. P. Edgerton is writing some very able and interesting articles on civil service reform and the civil service laws, in the Hicksville News. As he has been himself a prominent member of the commission, it is plain he is fully prepared to discuss the subject in a sensible, and above all, in a practical way. The thoughtful men of the country will agree with him, that the law and its execution must be radically changed before we see the desired results And especially must we have a more sincere policy on this important subject, than is likely to be carried out by Harrison, Quay, Wanamaker and others of their style.

Our Big Fair.

The fair commenced on Monday, as the Courier said it would. As the Dispatch would say, "The Courier's policy was adopted." At all events the road to the grounds began to be thronged early, and the space in the halls soon showed up in fullness and beauty. The stalls for horses, both show and speed, were soon full to overflowing, and many of them owned near here, were brought home for accommodations. Floral hall, or Exposition building was soon ablaze with fine work in beautiful forms, and all was a scene of busy activity. Among the displays we noticed, were A. F. Fleming, of Auburn, and S. Z. Dickinson, of Waterloo, each with a fine display of flowers. The Eagle Iron Works, of the Junction, had a fine display of their home-made stoves. They are equal to any made abroad. J. L. Davis has a splendid array of granite iron ware. C. C. Shaffer shows a lot of the nicest upholstered goods ever seen in this country. Hague & Raut have an exhibit of nice boots and shoes. W. P. Harter and Co., have a space to show their fine laces, carpets and millinery goods. Schaab Brothers have a nice exhibit of laces, carpets and other fine goods. Brown & Culbertson have fine pianos and organs in the expo. building, and a great display of agricultural machinery in the machinery hall. Frank Teeters has fine sheep, and G. W. Reed some fine horses. Every department is full. We had good races so far, and to-day and to-morrow will have still better ones. The second balloon ascension will be to-morrow. We have been obliged to omit further mention of the hundreds we would have been pleased to notice, because the paper is full. Will try to give a personal mention next week.

Joint Representative Convention.

This convention met Tuesday, Sept. 9, in Kann's Hall, Ligonier, and organized by electing J. A. Barns, of DeKalb, chairman and J. E. McDonald of Ligonier, as secretary. Brief remarks were made by the chairman, and nominations being declared in order, the counties were called for names. Only one name was presented, that of Dr. Norman Teal of Kendallville, and his nomination was made unanimous. He made a fine speech declaring strongly for democratic principles and methods throughout. On being called out, speeches were made by Mr. Roscoe, candidate for the legislature, Mr. Darrow, candidate for treasurer, J. A. Barns of the Auburn Courier, and a number of others. The meeting adjourned with the best of feeling on the part of all. It should be said that Dr. Teal was a surgeon in the army serving three years or more with the old Thirtieth. He is a physician in high standing and a respected citizen. We believe he can be elected.

Great Kendallville Fair.

The famous Kendallville Fair this year opens on Monday, Sept. 29th and closes Friday, Oct. 3d. More features of genuine public entertainment will be crowded into these five days than has ever before been attempted by this popular and successful agricultural association. Soldiers' Day, this year, occurs on Oct. 1st, and it will be, as has truthfully been said by the Chicago Tribune and Toledo Commercial, a soldiers' gathering unequaled in the history of Northern Indiana. Gen. R. A. Alger, ex-Commissioner-in-Chief the Grand Army of the Republic, will positively be present and address his old comrades, whose friendship and respect he so valiantly won on the fields of war. Hon. Clem. Studebaker, the senior member of one of the greatest manufacturing industries of the world, and other prominent public men have promised to be present. On this day all honorably discharged soldiers will have full freedom of the grounds. All departments of the great fair have been enlarged and improved, new buildings added, and all accommodations increased for every manner of exhibits. The stock show promises to be the largest and most varied ever exhibited in the State, the horses including such famous stallions as Wilkeswood, Bassett M., etc. Special trains on the L. S. & M. S., G. R. & I. and B. & O. R'ys have been secured at very low rates. 37 39

Judicial Convention.

The democratic judicial convention to nominate a candidate for prosecutor for Steuben and DeKalb counties, will be held in Waterloo at 1 o'clock p. m. Delegates will please take notice, so as to be present as far as they can.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 13, 1890,

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY's first friend in the United States was Horace Greeley. Penniless, without acquaintances, seeking only employment, O'Reilly carried to the great editor one of his poems, "The Amber Whale," a ballad of extraordinary power and beauty. It was printed and paid for, and from this beginning started a career rich in promise and performance.

GHOULISH relic hunters have succeeded in getting small pieces of Kemmler, which they exhibit in bottles. Why such a filthy and horrible outrage on decency should have been permitted is not known. Kemmler more than settled his debt with society when he was broiled alive. The relic hunter has no more right to a piece of the dead murderer's flesh than he would have to chop off a toe or finger from the body of the late John Jacob Astor.

IT is cited as a remarkable fact that not an island has risen or sunk from sight in the Pacific Ocean for thirty-four years, and geologists say that nature is resting for a starling movement in real estate in that quarter. An English geologist predicts that within fifty years a convulsion of nature will sink the whole of New Zealand fifty feet below the surface of the sea, and advises the inhabitants to make early preparations to pack up and swim out.

HERE is a story about Stanley that has never seen print. On his last lecture tour in this country one of the dignitaries at Amherst wrote to him expressing the hope that while in Amherst Stanley would be his guest. He was pained and puzzled at receiving from Mr. Stanley's secretary a curt reply to the effect that the gentleman need have no fear, as Mr. Stanley was always a gentleman. The lecturer did not accept the invitation, and later it came out that the gentleman's invitation to "be my guest while in Amherst" had been read "be very quiet while in Amherst." And the worst of it was, that Mr. Stanley's reading of the blind chirography was the natural and ordinary one.

THE increase in population in some of the Western States in the past decade was phenomenal. Minnesota and Nebraska increased 600,000 each. The population of Colorado is estimated at 400,000. It was 193,327 in 1880, thus showing that it has doubled during the past ten years. Washington will probably show a population of 350,000. In 1880 the territory had 75,116 inhabitants, so that the population has more than quadrupled since the census of that year. It is now considered a settled fact that Illinois will take Ohio's place as the third State in point of population. The enormous increase in Chicago—nearly 600,000 in ten years—has contributed greatly to this result.

ADVENTURERS have an advantage over the rest of the world which women detect at once; they are always amusing. The prosaic virtues of a good husband and father, and of honorable workers will sometimes lie like a pall on the dinner party and the festive scene, while the adventurer, who is not encumbered by much moral baggage, can afford to be light, witty, and salient. The truth is, that cultivated American women spend much of their time in being bored. The adventurer amuses them. A famous Western belle said she wished to have a graceful good-for-nothing. Fate was kind to her; she married a bogus Lord who had two other wives living. But she always said that he was the most enchanting man she ever met.

THERE is but one opinion among Western farmers regarding the horse thief. Though they may differ widely on politics and many other questions they are unanimous in believing that the man who steals a horse is the vilest of criminals and should be lynched on sight. This unanimity of sentiment has led the farmers of Kansas and Missouri to organize for the protection of their horseflesh and the summary punishment of horse thieves. They have formed an anti-horse thief association, and intend to make Kansas and Missouri uncomfortably warm States for the purloiner of horses. The organization is already in a very flourishing condition. It held a picnic near Atchison recently, which was attended by over 2,000 members, and at which a big dinner was consumed and the principle, "Death to horse thieves," reasserted with complete unanimity.

I HEARD from an old comrade of General Lew Wallace, who lived for many years in the same town with him in Indiana, some points in the career of that now distinguished author, writes a correspondent. "I was a member of the military company of which Wallace was Captain before the war," said my informant. "General Simon Bolivar Buckner was at that time Captain of the Louisville Grays, a Kentucky organization just across the river from us. I remember the companies camping together in 1858 or 1859, when Wallace and Buckner sat up night after night discussing the probabilities of war between the sections. Buckner was positive that there would be war and that the South would be invaded. Wallace did not believe there would be any war and ridiculed the idea of invasion. He used to tell Buckner that so many persons in the North were opposed to war and invasion of the South that any army raised for that purpose would be checked before it reached the Ohio river. He changed his mind about that later and led the invaders himself."

A WESTERN savings bank has adopted a plan which is new in this country, but is in use in the postal savings system in Europe, for gathering little savings and bringing the advantages of the bank within easy reach of everybody. Agencies are selected in various parts of the city, such as drug stores, groceries and other reputable places, where adhesive labels of different denominations and colors, resembling postage stamps, will be sold. Cards corresponding in color with the labels will be furnished upon which the depositor will affix the labels as they are furnished until the twenty spaces on the cards are filled. For instance, suppose that a depositor determines to save 5 cents a week. He is furnished with a card corresponding in color to the 5 cent labels. He purchases the label weekly at the nearest agency and affixes it to the card. When the card is full it is worth $1, and is then sent to the savings bank for deposit, when the amount is entered upon the usual deposit book. Labels will be for various convenient denominations, making the cards when filled even amounts, as $1, $2, $5, and so on. It is expected that the agents will do the work as a labor of love and public benefit, though small commissions may be paid. This system brings the savings bank to the people who need it most.

THE candying of fruit, whole or cut, is carried on at Genoa and westward along the French Riviera, as well as in Spain and Portugal; but Leghorn may be said to occupy the first place in Italy, and perhaps on the Mediterranean in the preparation of candied citron and orange-peel. The citron is brought for the purpose from Corsica, Sicily, Calabria and other southern provinces of Italy, as well as from Tunis, Tripoli and Morocco, and the candied peel is exported to England, Germany and North America. The Corsican citrons are the best; then follow those of Southern Italy, the African fruit taking the third place. The oranges used nearly all come from the islands of Sardinia, Corsica and Sicily. Every requisite to the industry comes from abroad. Egypt furnishes the sugar, England the fuel and distant provinces of Italy the wood for the boxes in which the product is exported. The Province of Leghorn contributes nothing but the labor.

A Practical Joke.

Three brother officers were traveling from Umritser to Lahore, where they had been playing polo during the afternoon. One of them, tired after the game, fell asleep on one of the seats. His railway ticket, which was sticking a little out of his pocket, was promptly annexed by one of the others and transferred to his own pocket. When nearing Lahore his brother officers awoke the sleeping youth, saying:

"Now, then, old man! Get up! Here we are!"

It was still broad daylight and for some reason or other the train was pulled up some little way outside the station.

"All tickets ready, please!" shouted the ticket collector.

Two of our friends promptly found theirs, ready for the ticket collector when he should make his appearance. The third searched his pockets but could find no ticket.

"Good gracious! where is my ticket?" he said; "I know I had one right enough when I started; you fellows saw me get it, didn't you?" he asked.

"Yes, you had it right enough," they said; "where on earth can you have put it?"

"I don't know," he replied in desperation.

"You'll pay the fare," said the others, consolingly; "it's not much."

"But I haven't a cent with me," he returned; "will you fellows lend me some dibs?"

Both said they were as high and dry as he was in regard to money.

"Tickets, please!" said the collector at last quite close to the carriage.

"What the dickens shall I do?" said the ticketless one.

"Oh, get under the seat," said the others; "quick! quick! man! here he comes!"

Under the seat like a shot went the man without a ticket! When the ticket collector came to the door three tickets were handed up.

"You have given me three tickets, sir," he said; "but I see only two gentlemen; where is the third?"

"Oh! he's under the seat," they said with the greatest nonchalance, as if it were an ordinary every-day affair.

"Under the seat!" echoed the ticket collector, in a tone of surprise, "what is he doing there?"

"Oh! he always travels under the seat," they said; "he prefers it!"—London Tid-Bits.

IN SPITE OF CLARKSON.

MR. LEONARD BROWN, OF IOWA, IS OBDURATE.

Specious Casuistry Wasted by the Post-office Mogul on a Dissentient from the Infamous Legislative Enactments Proposed by the Republicans.

[Des Moines Cor. Chicago Herald.]

Some interesting correspondence showing the trend of public sentiment away from the Republican party in Iowa has just been published here. The first letter is from First Assistant Postmaster General James S. Clarkson, written to Leonard Brown, of this city, remonstrating with the latter gentleman because he had denounced the Harrison administration for its autocratic tendencies, and the Republicans in Congress for defeating the free coinage of silver and for urging the passage of the Lodge force bill. Mr. Brown is a prominent figure in Iowa among the industrial classes. He is a writer of force upon industrial questions, and an orator of rare power and genius. Clarkson recognized his strength when he took him East in the Presidential campaign and kept him on the stump continuously all the time in the doubtful States. Fully aware of what effect his defection will have on the Republican party, Mr. Clarkson has written him a letter full of flattering allusions and praise of that organization. He begs Mr. Brown, when he raises his hand and voice to strike at President Harrison, "to remember that he had a boyhood of poverty; that the best blood of America came down to him through men who proved their patriotism in every time of the country's need; that he went to the war for the Union and offered his life; that he has remained poor despite his large legal practice and his public office—he is not worth $10,000 to-day."

But Leonard Brown is obdurate and fails to be convinced by Mr. Clarkson's pathetic appeal. He quotes from Mr. Clarkson's own paper a serious indictment of the reigning powers at Washington, wherein it is charged that the creditor class control legislation and that the executive officers of the administration are in line with this policy, interpreting the statutes to the extreme limit in that direction. He then contends that the free coinage of silver was demanded by the platforms of all the political parties, and was defeated in Congress by the threat of a Presidential veto. With regard to the poor people of the South and the Lodge election bill, Mr. Brown says:

We are treading on dangerous ground when we would take the ballot box out of the hands of the people. Capital menaces labor to-day. The capitalist who has become a millionaire cares nothing for the rights of labor. He cares nothing for the rights of the poor man. He cares nothing for American liberty. That is the rule, to which, to the honor of human nature, there have been and are glorious exceptions. But the love of money is still the "root of all evil." It is true that the "less than a quarter of a million of persons" who practically "own the American Republic" own the courts, own Congress and the President. Our government to-day obeys implicitly the commands of the rich men, and is deaf to the voice of the people. The petitions of the toiling millions, white and black, go unregarded. Under the pretext of "protecting industry," it enriches the few. Under the pretext of "paying off the public debt," it pillages the Treasury, buying in its own obligations at 127 per cent., thus making a present of hundreds of millions of dollars to millionaire bond owners, until, after twenty years, the amount of our national debt—though 60 per cent. of it has already been paid—measured by the number of days' work, bushels of wheat, bales of cotton and barrels of pork that would be required to pay it, is as much now as it was in 1868.

This accursed policy has resulted in piling upon the farms of the Mississippi Valley mortgages amounting, according to General Butler, to $4,500,000,000 and reducing prices of farm products below the cost of production. Under the pretext of "increasing the currency," it stops the coinage of silver, creates a money "as good as gold" to the usurers, but that will not pay a mortgage debt "when otherwise especially stipulated" in the mortgage, which is already being done by the loan and trust companies, and opens the way for indefinite currency contraction by "booming" the price of silver to where it was prior to 1860, above par with gold. Under the pretext of "preserving and protecting the freedom of the ballot" it aims at the destruction of popular liberty by taking the ballot-box from under the control and supervision of the people and placing it under the control and supervision of irresponsible agents of an irresponsible power in the election of a Federal President and representatives, placing the nation above the States, as England is above Ireland, centering the powers of government in a junta of dictators for life and destroying the power of the people.

The Lodge bill is a bad law. It is the culmination of a series of bad laws. It is the dagger plunged into the heart of the American republic—not accidentally but designedly—the result of a conspiracy of plutocracy to destroy democratic liberty. It is the winding up of American liberty and the inauguration of an autocratic and plutocratic despotism. Before I will see the ballot-box wrenched from the hands of the trustees elected by the town meeting and handed over to the tender "guardianship" of United States marshals, appointed by a for-life-appointed "supervisor," appointed by a for-life-appointed judge, appointed by a President elected at a "supervised" election, I will give up willingly my life upon the scaffold as Sir Henry Vane did his, as Sir Walter Raleigh did his, as Robert Emmet did his. I love my country as intensely as did Warren, so I believe. I love the flag of my country with as deep a fervor as did Jasper, so I fondly think; but "loyalty to the Government and the flag" will cease in my heart the moment the ballot-box has been wrenched by Federal usurpation from the hands of the people. As Jeremiah mourned the lost liberties of Judea, so would I mourn over my ruined country. But before I put on sackcloth I will fight. Like Kosciusko on the ramparts of Warsaw, I will do battle against the despot. I would take down the old flint-lock musket from over my cabin door that my great-grandfather, Daniel Brown, carried in the revolutionary war, and with which, under Stark, in the ranks of the New Hampshire militia he fought the British at Bunker Hill, and I would rebel against this accursed tyranny and fight for my freedom till I die. If the star-spangled banner is to become the emblem of this kind of usurpation I would trample the stars and stripes under my feet as our fathers did the British flag when it became the emblem of their oppression. If the whites and the blacks can not harmonize their interests and live together in peace, the history of the Indian on this continent will be repeated in that of the negro. But their interests are in harmony and the two races will live together in peace if let alone.

Extend, then, dear Mr. Clarkson, the great confidence and faith you have in man to the Southern white people. "A lover of fair play and a believer in human nature," believe that our white Christian brethren of the South "are growing better all the time" in their feelings toward their former slaves, as time's effacing fingers are rapidly wiping out the prejudices of the past, reconciling the people to the "new order of things;" so that the revolution that was of force is becoming intellectual; which it must be to be permanent and worthy the name of revolution. Believe that our fellow-countrymen intend to be good. They are our kinsmen. You have near relatives in the sunny South, no doubt; so have I. What, then, will we do by our kindred in the southland? Why, let them attend to their own concerns while we attend to ours. Beware! Let not the stealthy, cunning enemy, the money power, under the specious pretext of "protecting the blacks in their right to vote" rob the American people of free government, guaranteed by the Declaration of Independence of 1776. We of the North cannot "solve the race problem" for the people of the South by means of coercion. We may help them by words fitly spoken. Those most vitally affected can alone solve the problem.

Tin Plate.

Tin plate was always admitted free until 1842, when it was taxed 2½ per cent., and that increased to 15 per cent. in 1846 to increase revenue. In 1857 it was reduced to 8 per cent., and it was increased to 10 per cent. in 1861, and again increased in 1862 to 25 per cent. as a war measure, and reduced to 15 per cent. in 1872. In 1875 the duty was made specific at 1.1 cents per pound. In 1882 the tin plate combine was formed that is now demanding the monstrous tax of over $15,000,000 per annum on the people for the benefit of a few monopolists, and it then appealed to Congress to increase the duty to 2½ cents per pound. There was such a popular revulsion against it that Congress was compelled not only to refuse the demand of the extortionate combine but to reduce the tax to one cent per pound, and it has remained at that figure until now.

"If the tin-plate cannot be manufactured in this country with a tax of 34⅘ per cent. on consumers, it should not be manufactured at all. It point of fact, it could be made here now at a fair profit, but that industry has been delayed solely to compel such increased taxes upon the people as would establish a complete tin-plate monopoly; and the whole battle now is for monopoly and greed against the hundreds of thousands of farmers who grow vegetables and fruits for canning and are general consumers of tin, and the nearly 800,000 workingmen now employed in the tin industries. There is only one side of the question outside of Washington among the people who pay the taxes, but the national capital is besieged by a greedy and powerful monopoly, and the truth is seldom heard where truth should be mightiest in the cause of the sovereign people of the republic.—Philadelphia Times.

THE "HOME MARKET" FALLACY

An Object Lesson for Our Agricultural Friends.

[From the Detroit Free Press.]

"Give us protection for tin plate," say the tin-plate men, "and the farmer can send his product to Pittsburg instead of to England, for the workers in tin will be transferred to the former!" This is the "home market" idea in the concrete. Put on the duties so as to enable the American manufacturer to compete with his foreign rival and the population of the manufacturing towns will increase so much that the farmer will find all the market he wants here instead of being compelled to go abroad for it.

It is an attractive theory, and it is not to be wondered at that the farmer has been attracted by it. The wonder is that he has not learned long since that it is only a theory, and that the facts do not support it. One would think he would have learned this, when, after nearly thirty years of experience with the workings of the home market theory, he finds himself still dependent on foreign countries for a market for his surplus products and for the price in his home market. Perhaps he has learned it—at all events there are some indications this year that he is no longer following the home market theorists as blindly as he once did. But if he has not learned it, the indications are that the forthcoming census will open his eyes completely.

Among the instructive facts which the census will show are the workings of the "home market" theory in Connecticut. This State, as every farmer knows, has been one of the chief beneficiaries of the protective tariff by reason of the number and importance of its manufacturing establishments. Here, if anywhere, the beauties of the protective system and the resultant fruit of the "home market" should show themselves. But, alas! for the "home market theory." From the figures already received the New York Evening Post has constructed a table showing that the theory in Connecticut has proven a lamentable failure. In this table each of the twelve cities of the State has been selected as the center of the group of farm towns lying nearest it—the towns which should profit by the establishment of a "home market." "In a large number of cases," says the Post, "the farm towns selected adjoin the city, which is their natural market, and in no case are they more than a few miles away. The population by the last two censuses of these twelve 'farm groups,' consisting of the three rural towns nearest each of the cities—except in the case of Hartford, the State capital, where four towns are taken—is approximately as follows:

Group.	Population 1880.	Population 1890.
New Haven	2,491	2,301
Hartford	6,010	5,492
Bridgeport	6,216	6,323
Waterbury	2,910	2,179
Meriden	3,767	3,307
New Britain	3,215	3,098
Norwalk	3,927	3,498
Danbury	5,956	5,195
Norwich	2,689	2,210
New London	2,972	2,608
Middletown	3,705	3,386
Rockville	4,457	4,040
Total	48,315	43,567

On this table the Post comments thus:

"The decrease, subject to very slight revision in the final returns, during the ten years in these twelve groups is 4,748, or about 10 per cent. In the thirty-seven 'farm towns nearest cities' which make up the whole twelve groups, two or three towns have been used twice over, in cases where they adjoin two cities—a point to which the ardent protectionist cannot object, as in that case the farm town is supposed to receive 'protective' benefits from both its urban neighbors. It will be observed also that in only a single group of towns has there been a gain of population during the ten years, and in that but the merest trifle. The figures, however, derive their chief value from the fact that they test and vitiate the 'truck-farm' and 'proximate-farm-town' theory on the choicest protection ground—in a New England State, in towns close to bustling and prosperous cities, where the farmer may be supposed to encounter no problems of transportation, and where the competition—in 'garden sass' at least—with other regions of the country is reduced to its lowest terms."

The Western farmer, who is being urged to demand the privilege of paying an enhanced price for his tinware in order to sell more grain in Pittsburg, should take this little lesson to heart.

Foreign and Home Prices.

Much has been said about the fact that the price of farm machinery has steadily decreased under the protective tariff. While nobody denies the fact that the price has decreased, some have maintained that it was owing to other causes than the tariff, and claimed that the tariff has prevented the price of these machines from going still lower. To prove this they have claimed that our manufacturers have really sold and are now selling their wares abroad cheaper than they sell them at home. This claim has been denied, but now it appears that tangible proof of its correctness has been found. The Ann Arbor (Mich.) Agricultural Machinery Co. advertises by publishing cuts of its implements, with the price annexed. These cuts have been published in both foreign and home papers. Cuts which are identically the same are published in a Spanish paper and in an American paper. The following table gives the result of the comparison:

	Spanish price.	American price.
Advance plow	$ 9.00	$18
Advance plow	4.00	8
Haytedder	30.00	45
Mower	40.00	65
Horse rake	17.00	25
Cumming feed cutter, No. 3	60.00	90
Ann Arbor cutter, No. 2	28.00	40
Ann Arbor cutter, No 1	16.00	28
Clipper cutter	9.50	18
Level cutter	4.25	8
Cultivator	22.00	30
Sweep	60.00	90

Or an aggregate difference of $165.20. We do not publish these figures to prove any preconceived idea. They are facts, and are submitted as such.—Northwestern Mail.

WHEAT IS IN DEMAND.

LIGHT CROPS IN NEARLY ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

Millers Buying Freely but in Most Cases Unable to Secure Stocks for More than Thirty Days—The Drought Broken but Soaking Rains Still Badly Needed.

[Chicago dispatch.]

With the exception of the Northwest, little rain, if any, has fallen during the present week either in the corn or winter-wheat belt. While in one sense of the word the drought has been broken, yet the areas just referred to stand to-day greatly in need of good, soaking rains, something that they have not yet had. Pastures and meadows are in need of rain. Stubble fields ought to have it to enable farmers to plow and put the land in good condition for seeding wheat. The oat crop is now all thrashed and secured. Country elevators report the receipts from farmers as exceedingly small.

Taking the winter wheat belt as a whole there has been no time since harvest when millers from Texas to Michigan have been as free buyers of winter wheat as during the last ten days.

Central Kansas reports that millers are buying all the wheat they can get; that the demand for flour is good and that they are pretty well stocked up for the time being. Potatoes are scarce. Selling now at $1.50 a bushel and will be shipped in from Utah or Colorado.

Southern Kansas reports that country mills are buying carefully, not stocking up, and generally have enough to last them thirty days. The ground is mostly plowed for the new crop and seeding has commenced, with prospects for a large acreage.

Northern Missouri reports that mills have enough wheat to run them for sixty days. Southern Missouri reports that local mills are busy stocking up with wheat. Farmers have not been delivering much. Mills have sufficient stock on hand for thirty days.

Central Missouri reports that millers are buying all the wheat they can get hold of. Stocks of old wheat all gone, and orders for wheat are coming in from Iowa and also from Illinois.

In Southern Illinois millers are generally buying all the wheat that is offering. Farmers, however, have not been selling freely. Millers are generally stocked up with wheat to keep them running from sixty to ninety days.

In Central Illinois mills are fairly well supplied with wheat, but few of them have more than a ninety days' stock. There is a steady Southern demand, and some Ohio and Indiana mills are in the market for wheat at St. Louis prices. Southern demand for wheat is an unusual thing at this season of the year.

Potatoes have not shown any improvement since the late rains and the crop will not be sufficient for home wants.

As a rule the millers in Northern Indiana at present are all buyers of wheat. So far they have no stocks ahead and are grinding their daily receipts.

In Southern Indiana millers have been buying wheat freely at $1. The stocks are generally light. There is a good demand from other States both for seed wheat and for grinding. Millers generally have enough on hand to keep them going for sixty days. Good progress has been made with plowing the ground and seeding will soon commence. Potatoes are practically a failure.

In Northern Ohio, millers are buying wheat at present prices, but there is no great disposition to accumulate a large stock for future use. Eastern wheat dealers are bidding strongly for wheat, but without securing very much. Some of the largest mills in Northern Ohio are carrying stocks of wheat sufficient to last them thirty days, but the small mills have much less.

In Southern Ohio, most of the mills have no stock to amount to anything; hence they are buying all the wheat they can get. Farmers are not selling freely, and will not unless $1 becomes the general price. Good progress has been made in plowing for wheat, but the ground has been so dry that more rain would be beneficial.

In Southern Michigan millers have been buying considerable wheat within the last ten days. There has been a good demand for flour, and many of the mills have sold ahead for a month. Mills are not generally heavily stocked with wheat. The land is dry; nevertheless farmers have been plowing, and the prospects point to an increase of acreage over last season.

All things considered, it has been a good week for maturing corn, and the prospects are now that within ten days a large proportion of the corn crop will be out of the way of frost. Nebraska reports that there is yet no corn in that State out of the way of frost. Recent rains have improved the condition of corn in sections where there were fair prospects before the rain; but in a large portion of the State the damage done to the crop was too extensive for rains to be of any material benefit.

Taking the State as a whole, the prospects now point to about 40 to 45 per cent. of last year's crop. The local price of corn during the past week was 40 cents a bushel. This price was based upon Western markets and local feeders. The price has declined to from 33 to 35 cents, and is getting down to a shipping basis to Eastern markets. There is about 10 per cent. of old corn in farmers' hands. The potato crop will be extremely light, with none to ship out of the State.

In Southwestern Iowa no corn is yet out of the way of frost. The recent rains have had the effect to stop further damage to the crop caused by the dry weather. The ears will fill out better, but it will not make any more ears or any longer ones. The improvement is more in appearance than anything else.

A small percentage of the corn in Central Illinois will not be hurt by a light frost. The remainder of the crop will require from fifteen to twenty days. Southern Illinois reports half a crop to a total failure and farmers are using new corn already for seed.

Reports from North Dakota are that wheat that was cut with binders is being thrashed. The quality is poor and the yield light, averaging six to fifteen bushels per acre. Rains have put the grounds in good condition for plowing. Few cases are reported where the wheat has turned out much more than one-half as much as was estimated during harvest. This is owing to the shrunken condition of the berry and the heads not being more than half full. The straw was heavy, more so than last year, and this is the reason why so many are now disappointed in the final outcome.

It is thought that farmers will be free sellers at present prices, and heavy receipts at Duluth and Minneapolis are looked for in the near future.

Reports covering stations on the Milwaukee and St. Paul Road through Wisconsin, Minnesota and Dakota say the spring wheat crop has now been secured in fairly good shape. The quality is fully one and one-half to two grades lower than last year. An early and free movement is looked for.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN
NERVINE TONIC
AND
Stomach and Liver Cure
The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.
It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.
To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.
My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every-one.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.
The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

LOVE IN NEW ORLEANS.

BY ROBERT YULEE TOOMBS.

MARIA, I or the blazing fire,
Which was the warmest would defy a
Thermometer maker to decide.
The fire popped hot sparks, and Maria
Was popping corn while I sparked by her—
Popping the question—close beside.

The fire grew higher and I sat nigher,
'Twas my one desire to be close by her,
And Maria wanted me there.
I could not defy her, nor aught deny her
That love or labor or money could buy her,
To me she was so very dear.

"'TWAS MY DESIRE TO BE NEAR HER."

Maria and I there beside the fire,
As our love flamed higher, began to perspire
With passion and caloric in surplus.
I sat nigher by her, my love, to try her,
My heart beating higher, resolved to die, or
To win her and hold her forever thus.

"AS I RAINED HOT KISSES ON HER FACE."

The fire's ruddy blazes swept up higher,
The snow-white popcorn was now wrapt in fire,
As were our hearts in love's close embrace.
My arm was now about her a "live wire,"
Her yielding lips granted my heart's desire,
As I rained hot kisses on her face.
NEW ORLEANS, La.

FACE TO FACE AT LAST.

BY EVA RICHMOND.

It was the ball of the season, and I was the beauty and the belle. Many a one envied me, I suppose, as I swept down the long rooms, flushed, triumphant, smiling, elegantly attired, and with my titled lover by my side.

He was my lover, openly enough, though we were not engaged; that was my fault entirely.

"You will grant me an interview to-morrow," pleaded Sir Edward, softly.

I knew well what that meant, he would be trifled with no longer. I bowed a cold assent. Then Mrs. Gray came up to me and said: "I have a charming surprise for you, my dear. Who do you suppose is coming here to-night—coming, too, expressly to see you? You remember your old schoolmate, Viola Wilton? She married abroad recently, and has come home for her wedding tour. They arrived only yesterday. I could never have persuaded her to be present to-night but for her longing to see you."

My heart beat wildly. Viola coming home, and so anxious to see me! What might it mean? Pretty Viola, about whom Frank Bascome and I had quarreled because of my jealous fancy. I realized now how idle that jealousy had been. What if Viola was the bearer of some message from Frank! Some precious olive-branch of peace and hope! Oh, if it were but a word, to tell me that, in spite of pride, his heart had been as constant as my own, how I would welcome it! Hope sprang high in my breast.

"Sir Edward may be disappointed to-morrow, after all," I thought; and then I inquired as calmly as I could:

"Who did Viola marry?"

"An old acquaintance of your own, dear, which makes it so much more agreeable. Pretty Viola is Mrs. Bascome now—as pretty as ever, and much more stylish. It seems to me that you and Frank Bascome were good friends two years ago. It will be pleasant for you all to meet."

And then some one else attracted her attention, and she ran merrily away.

I don't know how long I may have sat there, quite still, without realizing anything but the anguish of the wound she had so innocently given my heart. The first thing that aroused me to a sense of the present was Sir Edward's voice.

He was bending over me with an air of lover-like solicitude. It would have angered me at another time, but it was welcome now.

"I fear you are not well," he said, "you look so pale."

I arose and took his arm. I did it pointedly, with a certain air of appropriation that all might see.

"I am not well," I said. "If you will take me quietly to my carriage, and then return and make excuses to Mrs. Gray——" I paused, then added, meaningly, looking straight into his eyes: "I shall be sufficiently recovered to receive you when you call to-morrow, I dare say."

A look of triumphant pleasure flashed into his face.

"Dearest Christine!" he murmured.

He had never presumed to call me by my name before. I shuddered with a feeling of repulsion for a moment, then controlled myself and leaned upon his arm. Many eyes followed us understandingly as we made our way slowly through the crowd. At the carriage door he kissed my hand. That was seen also. I did not care. What did it matter? He was not to be disappointed to-morrow, after all.

As I bowed good-night from the window another carriage drove up to the door, and I saw its occupants descend. A gentleman came first; tall, with a face that seemed familiar to me. Then sprang out, into his very arms, a little dainty figure, clad in bridal white—Viola!—pretty Viola! Prettier, indeed, than ever, and sparkling with happiness and joy. Another figure followed her—Frank Bascome—the man I loved!

Oh, heavens! the sight of him, after those two long years. How it drove all other thought, all other memory from my mind, save only that of how I loved him. I leaned forward, drinking in eagerly every detail of his dress and form and face, noting, in one second, all the changes of two years. A noble form, a brightly happy face; no trace of long, unsatisfied heart-yearning there.

I had forgotten that he was Viola's husband. All memory of Sir Edward's hopes had vanished from my mind. One little incident recalled it all. As I gazed he took Viola, laughingly and with gentle force, from her dark companion's arms and conducted her in merry triumph into the house himself, the other following gayly.

I think the cry of anguish that broke from my lips at that sight would have had its way, though all the world had stood by to hear. Lost to me—lost! The man I loved—adored—who once had loved me well, for whose return I had waited, hoped, and prayed through weary years—lost! lost! given to another woman, and caressing her before my eyes! Oh, heaven, what was pride or the world's opinion worth to me in that bitter hour?"

I sank down in the bottom of the carriage and cried aloud. The rattle of the wheels upon the stony road prevented my being heard. Nowhere else could I be so utterly unheeded and alone; never again could I give way to such abandon of misery. To-morrow I should be my cold, proud self again, and Sir Edward's promised bride. To-night I was Frank Bascome's faithful lover, forsaken, heart-broken and despairing. I sent up an exceeding bitter cry to heaven for the love I so prized and had lost.

Oh, to recall the past—the fatal, cruel, torturing past—that is gone beyond all recall! Had he been true to me at the first, after all? Did I wrong him, as he said—as he swore? Was it the mad folly of my own jealousy that first put the thought of Viola into his mind? Was it my own hand that had struck down the happiness of my life?

Vain, vain questioning, to which there never comes an answering voice. One thing alone was given me to know surely—that I loved him, and had lost him forever!

A long, long night of tears and jealous pain.

"This night I will give to grief," I thought; "all the rest of my life to endurance."

The gray light of dawn stole in at my window before at last I sobbed myself to sleep.

My maid awoke me, standing by my bed. I was bewildered at first; then suddenly the recollection of my grief returned like a fresh calamity. I hid my face upon the pillow with a groan.

"My head aches sadly. Rose, why did you wake me?"

The girl looked distressed.

"A lady was here to see you, miss. It's ten o'clock. I told her you were asleep, and she said she'd come again in an hour. Here is her card, miss."

I took it listlessly. What was the lady to me?

"I will not see her, Rose, whoever she is."

Then I read the card: "Mrs. F. Bascome." She! I let it fall as if a snake had stung me. She—she seeking me! I sprang up from the bed.

"Dress me quickly, Rose—a loose white wrapper only. Tell them to send a cup of tea to my boudoir; when the lady comes again show her up there."

Of course I must receive Viola. Appearances must be considered.

Why did she force herself on me? That question racked my brain. Had he told her of our love in those old days, and had she come to feed her pride upon my sorrow? Oh, but she shall lose her time, then! Last night has gone, like all the rest of the sweet and bitter past—to-day finds me Sir Edward's promised bride.

Viola stole into the darkened boudoir like a stray sunbeam in a gloomy day. It is easy for happy hearts to be gay and bright. How easy for her! She had stolen my share of life's sunshine to add to her own.

"You poor dear girl!" she murmured, gently drawing my unwilling head to her breast, and softly caressing my hair. "How glad I am to see you again, and how sad it is that you are suffering! I suppose it seems cruel of me to persist in talking to you to-day, but I must Christine, for your own sake and another's.

I felt my face flush. He had told her, then, and the little fool thought to set herself right with me, perhaps. I would not suffer it.

"I fear I must beg you to excuse me to-day," I said, icily. "I expect a visitor shortly, for whom I must prepare. Sir Edward Vane, my future husband——"

She stopped me with a cry of horror. "No, no, Christine; don't say that. You don't know that man, dear. No woman who knew him would marry him. He is bad. He is wicked, he is heartless, Christine. His first wife died of his cruelty. I assure you his character is known in London well, and still better in the village where the fine estate lies of which he asks you to be the mistress. Oh, Christine! all those who love you would rather see you in your grave. I promised Frank I would tell you. He would not let me rest until I came. Christine, we stayed near Sir Edward's home for a while. Oh, Christine!"—the lovely, earnest, sympathetic eyes watched me now through streaming tears—"oh, Christine, pause before you ruin your whole life. Will you marry this wretch just because he is rich and titled? Can wealth atone for the want of respect and love? For the sake of the old love you once bore Frank—Frank who loves you so well——"

But I stopped her there. The passion of her words had fairly borne me down and carried me beyond my proud reserve. I forgot my pride. I remembered only my wrongs, my love, my pain.

"You say this?" I cried, trembling with passion. "You speak to me of Frank's love? You—you——"

Resentment and anguish choked me. I burst into a storm of weeping. She drew away from me, startled and subdued.

"I am sorry if I have done wrong," she said, half timidly. "I but yielded to your lover's prayer. Perhaps I had no right to interfere. He had better come to you himself. But I thought Christine, that, as we were old school-fellows and friends, and as by my marriage to Fred I am Frank's sister now——"

I sprang to my feet with a sudden cry. What—what was she saying? I caught her hands in mine.

"Frank's sister—not Frank's wife?"

She threw her arms around me.

"Was that the mistake?" she cried, joyfully. "Dear, dear Christine! Frank has loved none but you—will love you ever!"

Then she whispered slyly in my ear:

"He is waiting now below. You can't refuse, dear."

And in another minute I was in Frank's arms.

Pride and resentment had vanished, jealousy was ended. The night of grief was past, indeed, and a joyful day of love and joy had dawned. When the first June roses bloomed, I became my own true lover's happy bride, and Sir Edward was disappointed, after all.

Cost of Conveying Power.

A French authority has made these comparisons of the cost of different methods of transmitting the power of a steam engine: (1) Comparative cost on 10-horse power transmitted 1,093 yards: By cables, 1.77 per effective horse power per hour; by electricity, 2.21; by hydraulics, 2.90; by compressed air, 2.98. (2) Comparative cost on 50-horse power transmitted 1,093 yards: By cables, 1.35 per effective horse power per hour; by hydraulics, 1.87; by electricity, 2.07; by compressed air, 2.29. (3) Comparative cost on 10 effective horse power transmitted 5,465 yards: By electricity, 2.64 per effective horse power per hour; by compressed air, 4.66; by cables, 4.69; by hydraulics, 5.29. (4) Comparative cost on 50 effective horse power transmitted 6,465 yards: By electricity, 2.37 per effective horse power per hour; by cables, 2.65; by compressed air, 2.99; by hydraulics, 3.02. For long distances electricity is the most economical.

"IT was a pretty piggish thing in Eve to eat the apple when she had everything else she wanted." "Oh, well what could you expect? She was only a sparerib, anyhow."

MUCH time is necessary to know people thoroughly.

MANY fine dinners are served in a course way.

THE REWARD OF PERSISTENCY.

An Italian Peddler Gets More for His Wares than He Bargains For.

The persistency of the street fakir in pressing his wares on reluctant purchasers is well known, and in many cases defeats its own object, but in an equal number of cases, probably, it succeeds. One offensive Italian peddler met with a rather mixed reward, however, last Sunday, which must have left some doubt in his mind as to whether he had done well on the whole or ill. He was selling small pin-wheels of bright colored paper, near the main entrance to Prospect Park, when a well-dressed young mechanic came along with a bright, clean, handsome little boy of five years. The fond mother who accompanied them never took her eyes long from her darling son, and her eyes seemed to say to all who beheld her: "He is just as good as he is pretty."

The peddler "spotted" them for his prey from afar off, and moved down on them with his dozens of gay little wheels whirring in the wind. Seductively he said: "Only five cents, buys one for de little man." The little man's eyes danced with glee, but his father waved the Italian aside and said to his son: "No, no, Johnny. You don't want one to-day. We're going to have a ride in the boat on the lake instead."

Little Johnny was evidently on his best behavior, for he resisted the temptation to cry, and allowed himself to be dragged along by his father. But he cast a longing look over his shoulder at the toys and lagged a little behind. The wily Italian saw his chance, and taking a particularly gaudy wheel in his hand, stepped up behind the parents, and offered it to the little fellow. Johnny's face beamed with joyful anticipation, as he thought the Italian was going to give him one. He stretched out his disengaged hand to receive it, but just as his fingers seemed to clutch the fluttering wheel the peddler withdrew it, still holding it up temptingly just beyond the little fellow's reach.

This was altogether too much for Johnny's self-control and he burst into a howl of rage and disappointment which nothing could quiet. His parents, not wishing to spoil their outing, bought him a wheel at last and turned his tears to laughter, while on-lookers thought that Johnny's father was altogether too soft-hearted to allow himself to be forced in this manner into making a purchase from the impertinent peddler.

The latter was putting his coin into his greasy pocket with a shrug and impertinent grin, when a well-directed and powerful blow on the tip of the jaw sent him sprawling on the pavement, with his wares under him.

"Take that, you dirty dago," hissed the heretofore placid father, who had struck the blow. His high hat, that had been balanced so nicely on his head a moment ago, was now jammed down tight to the nape of his neck; the cuffs of his well-brushed coat were turned up; the lapel, that had a flower in its button-hole, was now buttoned tight across the chest, and the angry eye and set jaw showed that the peaceful promenader was now full of fight. "I'll teach you to bother people with your greedy cheek after you have been civilly refused once," he shouted. "Pull your knife now, for of course you have one, and come on!"

The swarthy peddler picked himself up, and the scowl of the vendetta was on his face, his hand sought the pocket of his loose blouse, but the unfriendly looking group that gathered behind the angry father seemed to bode no good; so he slunk away amid the jeers of the crowd, to find other and less belligerent customers."—New York Tribune.

How He Wished.

A peculiar-looking fellow went into a Chicago restaurant, and taking up a bill of fare drew a line under "sirloin steak" and leaned back in his chair. When the waiter brought the steak the fellow seized it and began greedily to devour it.

"Does the steak suit you, sir?" the waiter asked.

The fellow, without looking up, answered: "Wonderful, wonderful; how I wish pap was here."

The waiter laughed and, beckoning to another waiter, whispered: "Ask that fellow a question."

"Is everything all right?" the other waiter asked.

"Wonderful, wonderful; how I wish pap was here."

The two men ducked their heads and tittered and then beckoned to the head waiter and whispered to him. The head waiter, eager for a compliment and thinking one was in store, turned to the customer and said: "I hope everything suits you, sir."

"Wonderful, wonderful; how I wish pap was here."

The cashier, getting a suggestive whiff of the fun the men were having, came out from behind his desk and, approaching the customer, said: "I hope you are well enough pleased to give us another call."

The man replied: "Wonderful, wonderful; how I wish pap was here."

The cashier snorted in his handkerchief and then went out to invite a friend, who was a great student of character, to come in and see the fellow. The waiter made out the check and placed it on the table, and then, with his companions, turned round to indulge in another snort. When they looked back the fellow was gone. Just then the cashier came back with the character student. "Where is our friend?" he asked.

"Don't know—slipped out while we were not looking."

"Did he pay his bill?"

"I made out the check and he must have taken it up, for it ain't on the table."

"Here it is on the desk," said the cashier. He took up the ticket and read the following, written with a blue pencil: "Wonderful, wonderful; how I wish pap was here."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Extreme French Politeness.

A Frenchman was walking calmly along, when from behind he received a blow from a knife, just between the shoulder-blades. The wounded man turned quickly round and displayed to the horrified would-be assassin a face quite unknown to him.

"Oh, I beg your pardon, sir; I mistook you for some one else," he exclaimed, most politely, as raising his hat with one hand, with the other he withdrew his weapon.

The wounded stranger was not to be outdone in politeness by his mistaken assailant.

"Oh, pray don't mention it," replied he, as with a low bow he hurried off to the nearest surgeon.

A MAN learns from experience in everything except in marrying.

The Cossack Cavalry.

The Cossack contingent is an important part of the Russian army, numbering nearly one hundred and fifty thousand cavalry and several batteries of artillery. When all mobilized there are 164 regiments of six divisions made of 128 men each. Cossacks have a decidedly barbaric taste for color, which they usually gratify by wearing shirts of amazing hue. The uniform is simply and even quaintly cut, but it is worn with a jaunty style that almost amounts to a swagger. In actual service they wear a short frock coat of dark-blue cloth with ample skirts. The trousers, also of blue cloth, are large and full, and are worn inside long boots. The cap is a flat-topped Russian one, like a sailor's cap, with a leather visor, and is seldom worn straight on the head but jauntily cocked on one side.

As the ordinary Cossack has little means of gratifying his vanity by the adornment of his person, he is very particular about the cut of his hair, which is combed back from the forehead and then trimmed straight and even around the base of the skull. The weapons consist of a Berdan carbine, usually slung across the shoulders in a leathern case, a saber of peculiar shape, having no guard for the hand, and entering the scabbard nearly to the top of the hilt, and a long lance, which is slung the right arm by a leather strap, and rests in a socket attached to the right stirrup.

On a long march a halt is usually made, if practicable, about the middle of the day. The regiment is divided into sotnias, which correspond to our companies, and when the halt is made at noon each sotnia dismounts in double file, the lances are stuck upright in the earth, and the horses picketed to them. Two or three sheep have been bought or captured on the road, and the men kill them, cut up the flesh while it is still warm, and plunge it in the pots, or string it on great wooden spits to roast in front of the fire. After the customary prayer with uncovered heads, the men sit on the ground around the large kettles and pans, and a dozen or more all dip in the same dish with their clumsy wooden spoons, or hack pieces of roasted mutton from the bones with their sharp daggers.

Cost of an Introduction.

Brown and Smith step into a saloon and meet Jones. Brown and Jones salute each other and then Brown says, Mr. Smith, let me introduce you to my friend Mr. Jones.

Mr. Smith (who has had several social glasses)—Now, Brown, this introduction is not at all necessary. I've known Jones longer than you have. Jonesey, old boy, put it there! (They shake hands effusively.)

A while after Brown and Smith go out and Smith says, "Confound it, Brown, why did you introduce me to that man Jones? He borrowed ten dollars of me."

"You said you knew him better than I did," returned Brown.

"Oh, well, I said that just for effect."

"Well, it had its effect, you see."

"Yes, and I am out ten dollars."—Texas Siftings.

Safety from a Pestilential Scourge.

Protection from the disease, not a medicinal agent which merely checks the paroxysms, is the grand desideratum wherever the epidemic scourge of malaria prevails. Quinine does not afford this protection. The chief reason why Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has won such immense popularity is that it prepares the system to resist the malarial pest. This it does by bracing and toning the physical organism, regulating and promoting an equal flow and distribution of the animal fluids, and establishing digestion on a sound basis. Not only is fever and ague prevented, but the worst types of the disease are conquered by it. Such is the only conclusion to be drawn from the overwhelming evidence in its favor. It is equally efficacious in dyspepsia, constipation, liver complaint, general debility, and rheumatic complaint, and is a reliable diuretic and nervine.

"The Darnedest Nose You Ever Seed."

I was talking with one of the old settlers of Maine the other day, and he said:

"Don't know Hen Jones, do you? Wall, when you see him you'll know him; he's got the darnedest nose on him you ever seed on a live being. T'other day I see Hen coming down hill into the village and he was driving horse with one hand and makin' queer motions with t'other. When he got up to me I seed what he was doin'. He was pickin' up pebbles from a pile in his wagin and was stonin' mosquitoes off'n the end of his nose."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Afraid to Pray.

The New Minister—Do you mean to say, madam, that you fear to pray?

Old Lady—Yes, I know the prayers will be answered, of course, but they're not answered with discrimination. For years and years my husband had to get up before daylight in order to reach his work on time; and the long, slow rides in street cars were injuring his health. Well, I prayed that he might be relieved of this great trouble and danger and, in six months, a great, big, ugly elevated railroad was run up our street and I haven't seen a ray of sunshine since.—Life.

A GREAT mistake perhaps was made when Dr. Sherman named his great remedy Prickly Ash BITTERS: but it is presumed that at that time all remedies for the blood, etc., were called Bitters. Had he called it Prickly Ash "Regulator," "Curative," or almost anything but Bitters, it undoubtedly would have superseded all other preparations of similar character. The name Bitters is misleading; it is purely a medicine, and cannot be used a beverage.

The McClellan Banking Bill.

Judge McClellan last Thursday introduced into the House a bill to retire all bills of national banks, and to supply their place with legal tender notes. It was read twice and referred to the committee on Banking and Currency, and ordered to be printed. The full text reads:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that from and after the passage of this act no national banking association now organized, or hereafter organized, shall issue any circulating notes, and within one year from the passage of this act every national banking association shall deposit with the Treasurer of the United States lawful money of the United States sufficient to redeem all its outstanding circulation, and upon deposit shall receive back the bonds deposited to secure payment of its notes and thereafter be discharged from all liabilities upon its circulating notes, which notes shall be redeemed at the Treasury of the United States. And if any such bank shall fail to make the deposits and take up its bonds within said one year the comptroller of the currency shall have the power to sell the bonds pledged for the circulation of such bank, at public auction to the highest bidder, at the office of the assistant treasurer of the United States in the city of New York, after giving the bank owning said stock thirty days' notice in writing of the time of such sale, and after providing for the redemption and concellation of said circulating notes and the necessary expenses of the sale, shall pay over any balance remaining to such banks.

SEC 2. That for the purpose of the redemption of the interest-bearing public debt and the retirement and redemption of the circulating notes of the national banking association outstanding at the date of the passage of this act, the secretary of the treasury is hereby authorized and required, immediately upon the passage of this act, to cause to be prepared and issued United States legal-tender notes in amount equal to ninety per centum of the paid-up capital stock of all the national banks at that time organized, in denominations corresponding to the denominations of all such outstanding national bank notes, and the said United States legal-tender notes shall be in the same form and words and under the protection of and subject to all the laws touching the present United States notes known as greenbacks or legal-tender notes, and as fast as said national-bank notes shall be received at the treasury of the United States, or any assistant treasury, or any designated depository of the United States, they shall be retired and canceled, and the legal-tender notes issued under the provisions of this act shall be applied to and used in the redemption and payment of interest-bearing public debt of the United States, under the same rules and regulations as are now provided by law.

SEC. 3. That hereafter national banking associations may loan money on real estate security as well as on personal security.

SEC. 4. That all acts and parts of acts in conflict with the provisions of this law are hereby repealed.

Latest from the Wabash.

While Mr. Dills was at Detroit last week, attending the exposition, he came across Mr. Joy of the Wabash road, and the latter at once began to ask about railroad matters down here. He finally said he wanted to know just how much the people along our proposed line, could and would do for the road if it is built to suit us. On coming home, Mr. Dills and Mr. Davis had a called meeting of the directors held here Friday, and it was decided that Davis and Dills should go to Detroit on Saturday where Mr. Joy had asked them to meet him at 10 a. m. They went, and had a long interview, Mr. Joy listening carefully to their statement of the advantages of the proposed line from Auburn, and took great interest in the map of the route, and of the towns along it, which Mr. Dills had made while the survey was in progress. He said his people had not really come to any conclusion in the matter, and he could not say what would be done. But on Monday, they would hold a meeting of the stockholders in St. Louis, and he would have the matter discussed. Thus the matter at present. There is nothing as yet to be encouraged at, and in fact nothing to be discouraged over. We have done all that could be done. Nothing has been left undone. And now we can only wait the action of the railroad company itself.

COURIER SUPPLEMENT, SEPT. 11, 1890.

Exercises at The Institute.

Monday morning, exercises opened at 10 o'clock, and after roll call and a few brief remarks by Supt., devotional exercises were led by Dr. Bassett, after which, Superintendent introduced Dr. Chas. DeGarmo, of Normal, Illinois, who discussed the teaching of language, as follows:

Make every lesson a language lesson, after gaining the pupil's confidence, which may be done by object lessons and sentence training. This language work might be profitably begun at home. As a first element of succes, the child must be interested, his attention secured. After this, give him a basis of grammatical forms, and introduce morals as often as practicable. To accomplish these ends, use the Imaginative Story, observing the following methods, viz:

To tell the story one or more times, the same way.

Pupils tell the story one by one, making corrections.

Dr. Bassett then discussed the purposes of the Teachers' Institute, briefly. The great point to be remembered, being, that the institute was for the teachers' benefit, and not that of the instuctors.

MONDAY AFTERNOON.

Exercises opened at 1:40, with song and roll call, after which Dr. Bassett treated the subject, "Requisites for a successful Teacher." The Doctor gave as his idea, that the first requisites are a man or a woman.

Work of the teacher as compared with other occupations illy paid.

Do not enter the business because it is easy, for there is the mistake.

The work is of the kind which wears on that part of the system most destructive to health.

The teacher must be strong physically as well as mentally; a manly man and womanly woman, morally strong and mentally active. Great duty of the teacher to develop moral and christian character, and "A thorough knowledge of the things to be taught." Thorough knowledge, means more than a mere pretense, or mere form of teaching--leaning on the text book. A better teacher of English knowledge, if qualified in the languages from which the English language is taken. 3rd A knowledge of child mind. To teach well, the teacher must know the object upon which he must operate. Even a care of animals requires a knowledge of the animal; so with child training. Must know how the mind grows and operates. 4th, Love. No person can do his best work in anything in which his heart is not engaged.

The Doctor believes in a call to teach which consists in a love for the work. You can have no influence over children unless you love them. 5th, Faith Power of believing in humanity. 6th, A correct theory of education. Educate for the profession, and practice your education.

Dr. DeGarmo then discussed Educational Psychology. He very strikingly illustrated the manner in which the mind is affected

Dr. Bassett now discusses the subject of reading, defining it as the interpretation of discourse—the key to all technical knowledge The chief aim in teaching this branch should be to aid the pupil to interpret the printed page and to create a love for good literature.

MONDAY EVENING

Prof. DeGarmo, of the Illinois State Normal school, at Normal, Ill., lectured on "German Universities" It was intensely interesting, for the speaker had spent some years at the University of Halle and knew their student life in all its phases. The great Opera House was crowded.

TUESDAY MORNING.

The next thing on program was a talk on General Methods of Teaching by Dr. DeGarmo.

There is a general method for teaching every branch. In the beginning when the child learns, he learns the individual thing, and from that derives the classifications and generalizations. We can learn by any method if we take the time, but in these modern times when we have so many branches of study, we must economize. In teaching primary reading we must associate the written word with the ideal, directly. Before teaching a child a rule to solve a problem, teach the facts. Scientific Methods always begin with the single thing and from that to classes In all branches of study we should begin with the individual thing.

The second exercise by Dr. Bassett on School Government, was very interesting.

Most of us never get beyond childhood in the matter of attention. How many exercises were explained from the books. of us can carry a consecutive line of thought followed by a minister or talented public speaker, ten or twenty minutes?

"How can I best govern my school (?)", is the question teachers ask themselves on beginning their duties. This is certainly a vital point. Government should be for the benefit of the governed. Some teachers seem to have the element of government within themselves. For others, it becomes very hard work. Ability to hold the interest of the pupils is one of the first requisites of good government. This may be termed "teaching power:" Second, energy. Teachers must keep things in condition, and moving. Energy does not necessarily imply noise or confusion. Third, System. This means a time for everything, The condition of the school desk may be a type of the school.

Vigilance is necessary for encouragement, as well as censure. Perhaps more so.

Dr. DeGarmo continued the discussion of "sensation." In receiving a sensation, we have: 1, The external, exciting cause; 2, The attack upon a sensitive spot; 3, An excitation of the nerves; 4, The conducting of the nerve excitation through the nerve centers to the brain; 5, The sensation. There are three ideas in connection with every sensation: 1, contents, or quality; 2. Strength of a sensation, or quantity; 3, Tone, which is the agreeableness or disagreeableness of a sensation. The sensations do not have one of these classes alone, but all of the classes are united in them. The mind, strictly speaking, can only attend to one thing at a time. The sensations are always conveying many impressions to the mind. What, then, is the effect of the number of stimuli appealing to the mind at one and the same time?

Dr. Bassett started out by saying that it was such a wonderful thing to him that only after centuries of study and observation a few men had learned how the child mind works; and added that a good many did not know yet. Do not adopt other people's methods of teaching reading, without reasons for it. In considering any discourse to be read, there are three things to be considered—purpose, thought and expression.

Prose is read for thought or matter of fact. Dr. DeGarmo, in his talk on primary language, said that primary language can be used as a bridge to help us over mechanical reading to vivid, lifelike reading. About a dozen stories for the first year will be enough. These are to be related by the teacher, section by section, and have the children relate them, no one to tell the whole. The best teachers, in teaching language in primary grades, find the best method is copying short sentences. These sentences should be short, so as not to tax the patience. It is a great auxiliary to spelling, as it puts the printed word before the eyes

Dr. Bassett began his exercise by saying that he would talk upon a subject of the most intense importance to him, that of school morals The teacher must teach morals, whether he will or not. There is no connection between head culture and heart culture, but they should be united. Education is a gift of power. Next to our American home, the school is the greatest American institution. There are 10,000,000 pupils and more than 300,000 teachers. The teacher's responsibility is greater than preacher, or even father and mother.

TUESDAY EVENING.

The institute sermon, by Rev. C. C. Albertson, was a grand effort It is a new feature, but will hereafter be a part of the regular institute programme.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Opening exercises led by Dr. DeGarmo after which Dr. Bassett gave a very interesting and instructive talk upon school management. He should have only such rules as underlie school regulations; they should be few, general, popular, positive and educational. To secure regularity we should make our school so interesting that the pupils would be glad to come. We should have promptitude, decorum, quiet, no communication except through the teachers, and morality in the schoolroom. He discussed the following heads: Principles Underlying School Regulations: 1, Few; 2, General; 3, Popular: 4, Practicable; 5, Positive; 6, Educational.

REQUOTATIONS.

1, Regularity; 2, Promptitude; 3, Decorum; 4. Quiet; 5, Communication; 6, Morality.

Dr. DeGarmo followed with a most excellent talk on Educational Psychology. He reviewed the subject of sensation under the divisions of conduct, strength and tone. There must be great strength to the idea you wish to impress. The child must be interested to secure his attention. He then discussed the the series of ideas, showing we must associate things which belong together: When parallel series enter consciousness at the same time. 2 Members of a series become starting point for minor series.

The next on the program was another interesting talk by Dr. Bassett on reading. After a brief review of the previous work done, the talk was continued on "How shall I teach words?" The talk was short but was full of interest to every teacher who is anxious to make reading one of the best taught instead of one of the most poorly taught branches in our common schools.

DEGARMO ON METHODS

Teach Latin without the mother tongue. Comenius was the first to teach by means of objects. Let your children know as much of a word as possible. Disputes arise generally from difference of meaning of words. Use the picture in teaching language. Our language a great symbol of generalization. Begin with the concrete, the centers of interest. Make biography the concrete in history. Result, an organized knowledge of history. Association between ideas and words the beginning in primary reading. From this they learn the value of letters.

WEDNESDAY P. M.

The first exercase was given by Dr. Bassett on Moral training in the school. He was well convinced of the difficulties of teachers when they ask, "How can I teach morals?" It is easy to cultivate the intellect, but not so easy to teach morals In the first place he told us the things we should not do. The things we should avoid 1, You should not give abstract, moral lectures. 2, You should not be constantly upbraiding them for every fault. Your pupils are not angels. If they were, you would be pretty fellows to take charge of them. Remember, first, their inherited tendencies; second, their surroundings at home may be evil. We must expect that they will have some faults. 3, We should not be continually pasting creeds upon their minds. 4, We should not scold them. He insisted that to scold meant more than to upbraid. "Don't scold" paste that in your memories. "How should I train my pupils in morals?" 1, Make the surroundings good. Have the school room well lighted. Darkness will do for owls and bats, but not for children. 2, Give them plenty of fresh air. If they do not have this, they will get dull and droway, and the devil will soon get at them, and they will soon become mischievous and wicked. 3, By constantly training them to be good. 4, By loving them The Doctor wished we could realize the power of love. He stated we could influence our pupils by love. And, if we could not love our pupils, we should keep out of the schoolroom. 5, You are to have confidence in them. You must let them know that you will be sad and dissappointed, if they should do wrong. It will inspire them to be good 6, Through the child himself Through his love for the beautiful. 7, Through good moral stories. If neccessary, he did not think it would be a sin to invent one. He commended these thoughts to the teachers for their consideration.

After recess came a song and roll call, which was followed by a talk by Prof. DeGarmo on language. A number of books on language were distributed among the members of the institute. He spoke upon form, and illustrated a form upon the board for composition in the lower grades, and explained from the books the form of putting words together Language in the lower grades should be taught, and grammar almost unconsciously to the pupils. Arrangement of sentences, changing subjects and predicates and a great variety of

He thought the teachers should insist upon the pupils learning the spelling of all new words and getting the thought in the sentence. The session of the afternoon was closed by a recitation by Miss Lucia Wiant.

WEDNESDAY EVENING

Miss Lucia May Wiant, the well known and highly talented elocutionist, occupied the hall in the evening. She has wonderful ability in this, her chosen field, and the vast audience enjoyed her recitations and impersonations to the utmost. The Opera House has never been so full on the occasion of any evening entertainment before. All were highly pleased.

THURSDAY MORNING.

Dr. DeGarmo gave a very interesting talk upon psychology, bringing out many important points, the first of which was the importance of teaching by series, and keeping the one line of thought until perfectly clear to those being taught. He also brought out many thoughts upon the subject of perception and the importance of the proper assignment of lessons.

Dr. Bassett then gave a very able talk upon school punishments, dividing them into four classes, and strongly emphasizing the importance of using mildness, deliberateness and kindness in punishing, and the necessity of making the punishment reformatory and beneficial to the punished. The person punished should be made to see that punishment is a natural consequence of offense. Several classes of punishment were talked upon, all of which were very important.

After recess, Dr. DeGarmo gave a talk on "Order in Word Method;" showing the necessity of having the object if possible before the child—if not, the picture—so that it may have a vivid idea of the thought. The teacher may draw the picture of the object if she deem it best. The child should be taught phonetic spelling, which may be done by pronouncing the word slowly, and special attention should be given to the correct oral utterance of the word. Script should be adopted in the beginning, instead of printing, and as the child enjoys seeing a thing made, the teacher may write the words, "in air." The value of pictures in the reading lesson was clearly set forth. In advanced reading, the ideas should be learned and the principles deducted therefrom.

In primary arithmetic, the symbol should be learned with the object. The same principle holding good in advanced arithmetic that was used in advanced reading. The child in primary geography must associate ideas with his home surroundings, and as he advances, form a series of facts.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The discussion was opened by Dr. Bassett in a talk on reading. He spoke of the importance of a teacher's ability to discuss the subject of the lesson, but not to be setting himself up as an absolute censor. A continuation of his former talk on word endings was then given. He admonished the teachers to proceed slowly with their work, allowing the substance of the lesson to settle into the mind before advancing.

Following recess came Dr. DeGarmo's lecture on outlines of short stories for composition exercises. He followed closely the language exercises already given. This method has to do with stories that have been already written.

THURSDAY EVENING

Frank Beard, the chalk talk man, the inimitable delineator and caricaturist, occupied the stage and gave a vast audience samples of his great skill and exhaustless wit. He called his work that evening "Stories in Pictures," a very proper name for it. It would be utterly impossible to describe the brilliant points he made and illustrated by rapidly drawn, yet correct and natural pictures. Let anyone of the hundreds who heard him, try to write out a description of it, and see how it goes. His entertainment will not soon be forgotten.

FRIDAY.

Institute opened with a song, after which devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. Bassett.

Dr. Bassett then continued his talk on school punishments, emphasizing the fact that punishment must be inflicted for the benefit of the school and pupil punished. Suspension of pupils should be made by the teacher after having considered carefully the offense and offender. No school board should reverse the action of the conscientious teacher. But the teacher should have sufficient cause for suspending a pupil, in case of an appeal. Among these causes are insubordination, immorality and inharmonious conduct. Expulsion should be the last resort. But be sure that it is the last resort. This cannot be considered a punishment, because it is not inflicted for the benefit of the pupil. It is for the benefit of the school. The reformatory is the place for the miscreant. The world is about equally divided on the question as to whether or not corporeal punishment should be resorted to. Nowhere in civil law is it sanctioned. But in a great many states the teacher is placed in the same relation to the school as the parent exercises over his children in the family, and may use such means in management and under such circumstances as the parent might use under similar circumstances.

Here Dr. Bassett gave several of his own experiences; from which we gathered the fact that corporeal punishment should be used sparingly; should never be used when angry or without due consideration of the offense and the constitution of the pupil.

Next was a very interesting and instructive talk by Mrs. O. P. Kinsey, of the chair of geography in the Valparaiso Normal, on a trip she and a party of tourists took to Alaska. The report of this talk was quite full and complete, but the copy was mislaid and did not reach us. It is said that Mrs Kinsey is a most pleasant talken, and her descriptions of the country and the customs of the people was full of interest and gave all her hearers much information hitherto unknown to them

After recess, Dr. DeGarmo gave a talk on the subject of methods. He said, we should learn to understand how we understand. In addition to perception, there must be imagination. When we study grammar, we study our own thoughts. The sentence is a symbol of our thoughts

He gave sentences showing analytical, identical and synthetical judgments. The teacher can take the child's ideas when he enters school, and by a proper analysis of these, will give the child a pretty good education. In teaching new facts, we must use the synthetical method. There must be a practical application of our knowledge, or it will amount to very little. There must be observation, generalization, application.

Talk on grammar by Dr. DeGarmo. He says the sentence is the unit of thought, and that the sentence or thought is divided into the different elements, namely: 1, Subject; 2, Predicate. The logical subject may be either simple or modified. The logical predicate may be either copulative (asserted) or attributive (what is asserted) Being able to do this, the pupil is ready to begin etymology proper Etymology properly begins with the noun. This be subdivided into proper and common. The proper noun being one of a particular or individual name. The common noun a general name, subdivided into (a) class (b) mass (c) verbal (d) abstract (e) collective nouns. Thus he does with all the other parts of speech, the adjective, pronoun, verb etc.

Dr. Bassett, in his last talk, thanked the superintendent, the teachers and the citizens for the extreme kindness shown him during his stay among them. He also congratulated the teachers on having a very energetic superintendent, and pointed out to them what he was doing for them and the schools of DeKalb county. He spoke in very complimentary terms of the schools of DeKalb county, but thought that the teachers were not receiving a proper compensation for their labors He said he would be glad to see the day when every country teacher would receive $4 per day, and then make the requirements just as strong. He was also glad to learn that the lady teachers of this county were receiving the same wages for their labor as the gentlemen. He hoped to see the day when the ladies would stand side by side with their brothers and fathers in any profession which they decided to enter, and could go with them to the polls, and aid by their votes in making the laws of the land. He said that no teacher had any moral right, although the government gave them the right, to drink any kind of intoxicating drinks or to enter a saloon. He said if he were superintendent, he would cancel the license of any such teacher. He also held that a teacher had no moral right to use tobacco or to do anything that would tend to break down his influence in his school. He also said that every teacher should conduct himself in such a manner that he would be a fit example for his pupils to imitate. again thanking the teachers for their kind attention, he bid them adieu.

After Dr. Bassett's talk, Superintendent Merica gave the teachers some very encouraging words, and thanked all who had shown an educational interest and progressive spirit by attending the institute. He spoke of the special good attention given by the teachers, and expressed the most implicit confidence in their desire and intentions of doing the best work possible in their respective schools, and of their determination, individually, to raise the standard of teaching and the condition of the schools in every respect, to the very best possible. He also thanked the teachers for their assistance and hearty co-operation in all his work, and especially for that given in the various new systems of work, management, discipline, instruction supervision etc., inaugurated during his administration of the school work. He then closed by extending his best wishes to the teachers for their future welfare and prosperity.

Dr. DeGarmo next gave a short closing talk, and the exercises closed with the song, "God be with you till we meet again," and the benediction by Dr. Bassett.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

Mrs. E. J. Davis is yet seriously ill.

Charles Bassett, Jr. has returned from Chicago.

A few days ago, Mr. Oloy, of Economy, was in our town.

Monday, J. B. Taylor, of Kendallville, was in Waterloo.

Monday, Messrs. Philips and Yeagy went over to Auburn.

Rev. W. O. Butler spent Sunday at home with his family.

Several days ago, I. E. Elliot, of Goshen, was in Waterloo.

Mrs. Metzger will have a house built yet this fall, in Waterloo.

John Meeks has gone east with a car load of cattle for John Jackman.

Miss Minnie Taylor, of Kendallville, was in Waterloo a few days last week.

S. J. Locke moved his family last week into the Blattner house, on North Wayne street.

Mr. Schoville, of the firm of Beck & Schoville, has taken a car load of poultry to New York.

The work on J. A. Dennison's house has so far progressed that the painting is now being done.

John Metzger, who hurt his hand badly in his saw mill a little time ago, has since died with lockjaw.

Miss Belle Blair and her brother Don are visiting their uncle, General Blair. They are the son and daughter of B. F. Blair, Newville.

The writer is informed of three houses and a kitchen that are contracted to be built yet this fall, and probably there are several more.

French & Co's show is billed for the 24th of September, at Waterloo. It ought to be worth seeing, since they want three acres of ground to exhibit.

The carpenters are all busy, and indeed everybody is, excepting only those persons who are always complaining that "there is no work to be found."

Hite & Sons abandoned the notion, tin and stove business, or at least have given up their room on Wayne street, where they have for some time conducted business.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Bigler, of Elkhart, and little son, have gone back to their home, after a week's visit with the parents of both, in this place, as well as with other friends.

Several young ladies from our town went to Auburn last Friday, probably to attend the fair at that place. Of the number, were Miss Ella Phillips and Miss Deventer.

Mr. F. Howard and Mr. Frank Smith have associated themselves together to engage in the broom manufacture at Kendallville. Mr. Howard moves his family there this week.

Nearly everyone raising fruit complains of the depredations of sneak thieves. Whether it is the boys alone who are guilty, is questionable. There are numbers of people who never spend either time or money to raise fruit, but are ready enough to help themselves to that raised by others.

Miss Ida Blair is acting as secretary to the fair, at present. She has had abundant experience, having been the regularly elected secretary one year, and has always been familiar with the work. All who come can make entries and transact other business as well as when the regular secretary, Mr. Kiplinger, is present.

AUBURN JUNCTION.

The Junction day school commenced this week.

There was a large crowd at church last Sunday evening.

Frank Campbell was seen in this place last Sunday, with his new rig.

The majority of the children here will attend school in Auburn, this term.

The Home Literary Society will spend the evening with D. W. Greenawald, on the 29th of this month.

Lee Robbins has moved to this place with the intention of helping the Monitor Mfg. Co. this winter.

Harry Stafford, the B. & O. night operator, has taken a lay off during the fair, but will commence work soon.

Business was quite lively here, as there were about 9 or 10 hacks at every train, which kept things moving.

We understand that next Sunday will close our Sunday school at this place, and all the members of our school are especially requested to be present.

Judicial Convention.

The judicial convention met in the office of J. F. Shuman, at Waterloo, last Saturday, and was called to order by Herman Freygang, of Angola. Gen. Blair was made chairman, J. A. Barns and J. F. Shuman, secretaries. The chairman stated the object of the meeting in a short speech. The counties were then called to name candidates. Hon. Freeman Kelley, for DeKalb county, named L. J. Gengler, of Garrett, Vic. Hendry, of Angola, named Joseph Butler, as a candidate for Steuben county. Before a vote was taken however, Mr. Gengler arose and in a well worded little speech, withdrew his name, promising Mr. Butler his hearty support. Mr. Butler's nomination was then made unanimous, and after some informal talk, the meeting adjourned. Samuel Brandon, one of the delegates for Auburn was present, S. L. Campbell, the other delegate being detained by business at the last moment. Mr. Butler is a well known citizen of Steuben county, and was elected auditor some years ago, on an independent ticket. He is in every way a first-class man, and we hope to see him elected.

Our Druggists.

F. E. Davenport says they are selling more of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup than any other preparation, for coughs, colds, etc., it being cheaper, more pleasant to take and guaranteed to cure. The price is only 25cts, making it the cheapest reliable cough medicine in the market. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

They All Failed.

The following letter from W. A. Thomson, of Columbus, Wis., is peculiarly interesting: "My wife," says he, "has been treated for her head, stomach, and nervous prostration by three doctors in New York, two in Chicago, one in Philadelphia, one in Cincinnati, and at the large institute in Buffalo for 16 months. They all failed. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine helped her wonderfully." This should be used in all headaches, backaches, changes of life, nervous disturbances, fits, rheumatism, etc. Ask at F. E. Davenports' drug store for a free trial bottle and Dr. Miles' new book on the nerves and heart. 2

Lightning struck the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston recently, detaching three large granite blocks, one of which weighed 500 pounds, and which fell 125 feet to the sidewalk below. Fortunately no one was injured.

Remarkable Rescue.

Mrs. Michael Curtain, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement that she caught cold, which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking ten bottles found herself sound and well, now does her own house work and is as well as she ever was.—Free trial bottles of this Great Discovery at Robbins & McCords drug store, large bottles 50c and $1. 2

Consul Meyers, of Hawaii, is authority for the statement that that there are twenty-eight Chinese lepers at Hawaii who make considerable money by encouraging drinking, gambling and opium using among the members of the leper colony.

HAPPY HOOSIERS. Wm. Timmons, Postmaster of Idaville, Ind., writes: "Electric Bitters has done more for me than all other medicines combined, for that bad feeling arising from kidney and liver trouble." John Leslie, farmer and stockman, of same place, says: "Find Electric Bitters to be the best kidney and liver medicine, made me feel like a new man." J. W. Gardner, hardware merchant, same town, says: Electric Bitters is just the thing for a man who is all run down and don't care whether he lives or dies; he found new strength, good appetite and felt just like he had a new lease on life. Only 50c. a bottle, at Robbins & McCords drug store. 2

Some of the farmers in Greenbush are using oxen in the place of horses to do their haying with. A few days ago one was seen in a horse rake, and last week a man had a yoke of oxen hitched to a mowing machine and was mowing with them.

DRUNKENNESS—LIQUOR HABIT—In all the world there is but one cure, Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been cured who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and today believe they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effect results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and full particulars. Address in confidence, GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race Street, Cincinnati, O

The Western Rambler.

INDEPENDENCE, KAN. Aug. 31, 1890.

COURIER AND READERS:—I have just returned from an extensive ramble in the Indian Territory, and as I promised, will give a brief outline of that beautiful country and its natural scenery as viewed by the eyes of The Rambler. Our party was made up of quite a select cast of pleasure seekers, well equipped with everything in the line of pleasure seekers' outfits, consisting of heavy spring wagons, sunshade tents, camp stools, cooking utensils, bread, crackers, coffee, and in fact everything necessary for the comfort of these trips. We get all the meat required for our use for the shooting. All kinds of wild game, such as, deer, turkeys, squirrels, ducks, prairie chickens, etc. The broad, deep creeks and rivers plentifully abound with fish of the best quality, which we caught and supplied our wants in that line. We were supplied with a good stock of ammunition and repeating rifles. The luscious meat of wild game was enjoyed to our hearts' content while out on this trip. We were not alone on this ramble, but joined a sort of "colony train," numbering about thirty persons—ladies and gentlemen from Indiana, Ohio and Illinois, who came here for the purpose of beholding these wild scenes of nature, consisting of broad prairies, beautiful valleys, narrow vales, grand hills, broad rivers, deep, rushing creeks, beautiful waterfalls and deep, shadowy glens. All of these are so exquisitely and delicately studded with numberless wild flowers that grow here in a grand profusion of rich colors, commingled with fragile, embracing vines laden with odorous and tinted blossoms which cause one to pause and exclaim, "Could you but stand where I now stand, and view this landscape o'er." Not the beauty of Arkansas river, with its wild waves, can hurry us from her shores. And then, too, the music of the myriads of song birds, warbling their wild songs, all these are beauties of nature. The pretty mockingbird, which inspired that old song, "Sweet Halley," is a prominent singer among the wild flock that awakes our morning slumbers to prepare us for our day's travel, to see new beauties. Our party aims to make from 25 to 30 miles a day, and we are provided with those swift, never-tiring broncho horses, while the roads are dry and nice, with an occasional rain to lay the dust, making it easy to reach any point we desire for a camping ground at night. While in camp, we have fine amusement. Sometimes we have a literary entertainment, and the Indians at the agencies are spectators, and are greatly amused. We have several good musicians with us, with violins, guitars and mouth organs, and you see, though far from home we are enjoying life. The Indians dress in wild costumes and look quite odd to us. They are quite talkative, and seem disposed to have sport at our expense. Some of the Indian girls are expert riders, and one of them challenged our party to a race. It happens a lady is with our party on a vacation, and is a fine equestrian rider in a show that is now traveling in Kansas. She accepted the challenge and won, and the chief, Big Rush, exclaimed: "O! Ugh! White girl, he good rider." But I must tell you, where we have traveled in this territory among the tribes, the Cherokees are the civilized ones. The Osages are yet living by tribes. Cherokee strip, which is expected to come in for settlement soon, is one of the prettiest pieces of land I ever saw, with plenty of water, and good soil. Grain, cotton, fruit and vegetables grow with little cultivation. The Creeks, Cheyennes, Pottowattomies, Iowas and Kickapoos are in an uncivilized state, and dress in blankets and high-water pants, if I may use the expression, and live in huts. They receive a pension from the government quarterly. There are many things I could say about this grand country, but space will not permit. Oklahoma is badly hurt by drouth this season, but her population is increasing at a rapid rate. Guthrie and Oklahoma City are building a large number of fine blocks this summer and the people have good hopes of the fuutre.

With kindest regards for the COURIER and readers, I am

Yours truly,

Save Your Hair

BY a timely use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. This preparation has no equal as a dressing. It keeps the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, and preserves the color, fullness, and beauty of the hair.

"I was rapidly becoming bald and gray; but after using two or three bottles of Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair grew thick and glossy and the original color was restored."—Melvin Aldrich, Canaan Centre, N. H.

"Some time ago I lost all my hair in consequence of measles. After due waiting, no new growth appeared. I then used Ayer's Hair Vigor and my hair grew Thick and Strong.

It has apparently come to stay. The Vigor is evidently a great aid to nature." —J. B. Williams, Floresville, Texas.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past four or five years and find it a most satisfactory dressing for the hair. It is all I could desire, being harmless, causing the hair to retain its natural color, and requiring but a small quantity to render the hair easy to arrange."—Mrs. M. A. Bailey, 9 Charles street, Haverhill, Mass.

"I have been using Ayer's Hair Vigor for several years, and believe that it has caused my hair to retain its natural color."—Mrs. H. J. King, Dealer in Dry Goods, &c., Bishopville, Md.

HURRICANE HURLS

Twelve Men to Death and Terribly Mangles Four Others.

New York special: Capt. Collier, of the steamship Normandie, which has landed her passengers, reports that when 250 miles east of Sandy Hook, she sighted the three-masted American ship Challenger, bound west from Hartlepool to this port. Danger signals were streaming from every available point on the Challenger's boards. She was dismasted and her sails torn to ribbons. The Captain of the Normandie, despite a terrific gale that was still blowing, sent a boat and crew to the assistance of the Challenger. The frail craft was tossed up and down like a cockleshell in the trough of the sea, and the return journey was equally dangerous. The report was horrifying. They said Captain Thompson, of the Challenger, had reported that during a terrific hurricane on September 1 twelve of his crew had been washed overboard, and that the majority of the remainder were too ill to work the ship. In addition to the twelve men lost, four of the crew had their legs and arms broken, leaving but four men to work the ship. The Challenger was in a terribly crippled and dismantled condition. Her mizzen mast, fore and maintop and topgallant mast, bowsprit, headgear and standing rigging were gone, and she was making about three knots per hour under her foresail and high-reefed mainsail. Officer Marshall offered medical assistance and food, but the Captain of the Challenger declined. saying all that he wanted was for the Normandie to take a letter to the ship's owners, and mail the same upon their arrival in this city. Speaking of the affair in the morning, Third Officer Marshall of the Normandie said: "The vessel was in horrible shape, and her dismantled condition attracted my attention, being on the bridge at the time. When I went to her in the relief boat the Captain, after telling his mishap, declined all aid. I offered him every assistance, even to tow him into port, but he declined."

"RUBE BURROWS,"

The Famous Outlaw, Killed by Detectives.

Birmingham (Ala.) special: A well-known private detective in this city says that Rube Burrows, the noted train robber, was killed by detectives in Lamar County a year ago last July. Soon after the murder of Postmaster Graves by Burrows, a large number of detectives hurried to Lamar County in search of the desperado. There was no doubt about the identity of the man who had shot down the postmaster for daring to meddle with his affairs, and the officers knew that Burrows was hiding in the hills of that county. The express company sent a number of men over there at that time, and a score of private detectives from all over the country joined in the search in the hope of getting a share of the reward. After the detectives had been there four days they suddenly left for home and reported that Burrows had succeeded in escaping, and was making his way west across the Mississippi. Since that time this detective smiles at the newspaper stories of Burrows' robbing trains in various parts of the country. He says that some of the men who went to Lamar County on that trip in July 1889, came upon Burrows, and in the fight which followed the outlaw was killed. The dead man having on him more money than were the rewards offered for his capture. The detectives who killed him divided the money, buried the body and said nothing. The rewards offered for Burrows' capture aggregated $7,500, but it would be impossible to collect more than $2,500 of that amount. Detective Maurice Scanlau is authority for the murder of Burrows and will testify at the coming investigation.

Inhuman Treatment.

Another case of inhuman treatment of insane has been unearthed, the case being in Richland Township, Venango County, Pa. The victim is a woman named Margaret Orr, and she has been kept by her brothers on a farm near Emlenton Station on the Allegheny Valley Railroad. She is about 40 years of age, and has been confined in chains in a smoke-house for over fifteen years. Superintendent Culpp, of the County Poor Farm, made the horrible discovery. It was with difficulty he could induce the brothers to allow her removal to the Warren Insane Asylum where she now is.

Killed by Lightning.

Provinceton (Mass.) special: During a thunder storm a funnel shaped cloud with a rushing noise swept directly over the Union Wharf Store. Lightning struck the building and instantly killed Solomon Stanley aged 22, and Capt. Ralfph Atwood, aged 62. Capt. Atwood's son Henry, and Fred Williams, one of the proprietors of the store, were prostrated and a dozen others received slight shocks.

An Ohio Jail Delivery.

James Murphy and James Dolan escaped from the Zanesville, Ohio, jail by sawing heavy iron bars in the corridor and one of the bars at the attic window, reaching the ground by means of a rope made of sheets and bunk chains.

Entombed in a Mine.

Cologne special: A disaster in a mine at St. Wendel is reported to have occurred; 125 men are said to be entombed, most of whom are believed to be dead. Parties are at work in the endeavor to save any that may be alive.

Congressional Nominations.

The Republicans of the Twelfth Indiana district have nominated Orlando Kimmell, of Noble County, for Congress.

OPPOSED BY SECRETARY PROCTOR.

He Condemns the Idea of Filling in the Lake Front at Chicago.

Secretary of War Proctor, in an interview, expressed himself opposed to the lake front site for the World's Fair at Chicago if it involves filling in any portion of the lake upon which the Government has spent so much money to construct an outer harbor. Speaking of the intended visit of a committee to secure his approval of such a filling in, the Secretary said he, of course, had no authority in the matter, as Congress alone could authorize such a proceeding, but for himself he would say that it seemed the height of folly for the Government, after spending so much money at the request of the people of Chicago for the dredging out of this outer harbor to turn around at once and allow it to be filled up again. The measure would not have his approval nor would it be looked upon with favor by the engineer authorities. The Secretary further said that if his advice were asked in the matter by other than the President or Congress he would condemn the filling in proposition in unmeasured terms.

HIGH WATERS.

Heavy Rains Cause Great Damage in Western Pennsylvania.

A special from Pittsburgh, dated the 14th inst., says: The rivers here are rising steadily, and although not near the danger point as yet, advices from all along the Allegheny and Monongahela Rivers promise much higher water. At the headwaters of the Allegheny the rain has been especially heavy, and has been falling without intermission for a week, the fall averaging six inches in the past three days, something unprecedented in these counties. All the tributaries of the Allegheny are overflowing. At Oil City, Penn., the Western New York and Pennsylvania tracks are covered, while trouble is feared on the Allegheny Valley Railroad. At New Castle, Penn., the Neshannock River is higher than it has been for years and now completely covers the lower portion of that city, and hundreds of houses are covered in the first floor with from one to six feet of water and the families have been obliged to move to higher ground. The washout has stopped freight traffic on the New Castle branch of the Harrisburg and Western, while the passengers must all be transferred. Miles of the Western New York and Pennsylvania have been washed out near New Castle, while the New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio is washed away in scores of places. A score of mills and furnaces in New Castle along the Nashannock are covered with water and have shut down. The deep Shenango River is also rising, and danger is feared from that stream. All the reports indicate a great loss to mills, houses, roads, and farmers. Nothing extraordinary in any one case, but enormous in the aggregate.

FATAL FALL

Of a Tree on a Train, Killing Two and Wounding Seven.

Rapid City (S. D.) special. The advent of a railroad into Deadwood and Lead City has not opened under very favorable circumstances. One of the saddest accidents that has ever happened in the Black Hills country occurred on the narrow gauge line just completed between Piedmont and Lead City. The Masons, to show their appreciation of the new Black Hills and Fort Pierre Railroad, gave an excursion. The train was made up of two coaches and a number of flat-cars, with seats arranged to accommodate passengers, and departed from Lead City at 9:45 in the morning. About 200 Masons and their families went to make up the excursion party. As the train was passing a point near Elk Creek, twenty-five miles from Deadwood, a large pine tree, which had caught fire from a passenger engine, fell, striking the last car, which was packed with human freight, killing two people and wounding seven. When the massive piece of timber struck the car a panic took place. Following is the list of the killed and wounded: H. J. Belding, of Deadwood, instantly killed; Mrs. J. K. Snyder, of Lead City, killed; Miss Snyder, daughter of Mrs. J. K. Snyder, leg broken and badly bruised; George Deemer, of Lead City, finger broken; Mrs. J. E. Brooks, of Lead City, severely injured; Mrs. Klingler, of Lead City, slight injuries; J. V. Lilling, injured in the head; Samuel Gilbert, badly bruised about the body. A son of Andy Grey, of Lead City, was also severely injured. This is the third accident within ten days, due in each instance to the imperfect construction of the road.

Driven Like Dogs.

San Francisco special: The barkentine Catherine Sudden has arrived at Port Townsend from Siberia. Her commander, Capt. John Thomas, has sent to this city a description of the Russian exile system as witnessed by him. He describes the brutal scene which he witnessed on Laghalien Island, a famous Russian exile prison. A large party of exiles of all ages, heavily manacled, were being taken to the island. A few old men whose strength gave out fell from exhaustion. The brutal driver, acting under the orders from his superior, shot the unfortunate men and removed their chains. No mercy nor discrimination was shown. Wives saw their husbands killed before their eyes; mothers saw their daughters outraged and insulted. The exiles were driven like cattle, a heavy whip being used to urge them on. The prison cells were filthy and the treatment barbarous.

Silenced Forever.

While James McGough was digging a well at 1320 Sansome street, Philadelphia, part of the sides caved in, burying him to the waist and imprisoning him at the bottom. His fellow workmen at the top of the well at once proceeded to his assistance, but as the well was narrow and over eighteen feet in depth, the work of extricating him was necessarily slow. McGough held a light and directed his rescuers in their work, and although another workman named Charles Jones, was overcome by the noxious gases arising from the disturbed earth, and was removed in an unconscious condition, McGough was unaffected by them, and continued to give his directions. While he was in the midst of a sentence, the whole side of the well caved in on him, burying the unfortunate man under several tons of earth and bricks and silencing him forever.

Result of the Wyoming Election.

Cleveland special: Returns show beyond question the Republican State ticket elected and that the Republicans have control of the Legislature. Laramie County, in which Cheyenne is located, will give Warren at least 300 majority, an increase of 150 over the majority given the Republican delegate in Congress two years ago. Albany County goes Republican by about 400, a slight Republican loss. Carbon County is probably a Democratic gain of about 800 Democratic votes. Sweetwater is probably slightly Democratic. Uinto, on the Utah border, which contains a heavy percentage of Mormons, has gone Republican by a majority of from 450 to 800. Converse, Framont, Johnson and Cook are Democratic. Weston, Natrona and Sheridan, Republican. The Republican majority of two years ago is reduced from 2,894 to 1,000 or 1,200.

Chemung Valley Flood.

A special from Elmira, N. Y., says: The Chemung River is not rising now and the worst is over. The Inter-State fair grounds are flooded. The water stands two feet deep on the race course and on the lower ground it is over three feet deep. A great deal of damage has been done to crops throughout the Chemung Valley. At Addison the water is the highest known in twenty-six years. Charles Townsend made a wager that he could swim the Canistoe River, and insanely plunged in. His body has not been recovered. The damage to crops and personal properties in the Conhocton Valley is great. The trains are still at a standstill on the Erie and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western roads.

Movements to Get Neebe Pardoned Out.

Springfield (Ill.) special: A delegation of nearly thirty persons, representing the Women's Alliance, the Labor party, and the Personal Rights League, called on Gov. Fifer in the interest of a pardon for Oscar W. Neebe, one of the anarchists who is doing time in the penitentiary. The pressure that has been brought to bear on the Governor is very powerful, but there is absolutely no ground on which to base an intelligent opinion as to what he will probably do.

Fatal Electricity.

As the audience were leaving the new Park Theater, New York, a lineman climb the electric light pole in front of the theater and many stopped to watch him. Suddenly it seemed that something was wrong. The man became limp and the siss of burning flesh was heard by the crowd below who stood horrified. It happened that Superintendent Fipps, of the Brush Electric Light Company, had visited the theater. He came out at this moment and taking in the situation he procured assistance and released the man from his terrible position. But the victim was past all help, and died before reaching the hospital, where he was taken. It was learned that the man's name was Kopp, but no other information concerning him was obtained.

One Thousand People Starved to Death in a Month.

Berlin special: A Sonntag reporter, just back from the upper Silesian district of Rebrik and Leosian, says that poverty, such as the world never knew, prevails there. The crops have been almost a total failure, but the present distress is due to the exorbitant prices for meat and flour caused by the prohibition of foreign pork. Outside of farming, weaving is the chief industry of the district; and that trade is now paralyzed. The Sonntag's account of the horrors of the situation says 1,000 deaths in the past four weeks were directly due to starvation or disease consequent upon insufficient food. The scenes of misery are past portrayal, and hunger rules in every house.

Insult to Our Flag.

Toronto (Ont.) special: Colonel Gray, who is a Brigadier Major of the Canadian militia, ordered to be taken down a handsome United States flag, which was fluttering from one end of the grand stand at the industrial exhibition. The act was greeted with mingled cheers and hisses. Manager Hill, of the exhibition, ordered the flag put back, and "Old Glory" was again in place. Major Gray again ordered the "flag of an alien people" to be torn from the flag staff. This Manager Hill refused to do, saying it was only a graceful compliment to the American people, who every year visit the exhibition in large numbers. The board of directors will pass upon the question.

Loose Lightning.

New York special: A terrible thunder storm passed over Sodam, near Brewsters, on the Harlem Railroad, recently. At the new Sodam reservoir there is a shanty where Italian workmen live. When the storm began 100 Italians huddled themselves into a group in the building. Lightning struck the shanty and instantly killed four of them. The Italians became crazed with fright, and rushed from the building amid the wildest confusion. The shanty was not shattered in the least, the lightning having entered an aperture in the room. A half mile from the fatal scene a woman was stunned by a shock of lightning and has not recovered.

Indian Troubles.

Miles City (Mon.) special: The Coroner went to Cheyenne Agency and held an inquest on the body of Hugh Boyle, who was murdered by the Indians. The feeling of the settlers against the Cheyennes is very high, and another murder by the reds would bring on a war of extermination. The whites are now armed, and as they are not protected by the Government, they propose to fight for themselves. Major Carroll, who commands a detachment of troops at the Agency, is blamed by the settlers for the trouble and is charged with aiding the Indians to escape punishment in a former murder case.

A Bold Plan to Kidnap Children.

An audacious plan which contemplated the wholesale kidnapping of children for ransom, was revealed at Kansas City, Mo., when the Grand Jury found a true bill for that offence against Henry C. Wilson, who keeps a feed and livery stable. The plan was to kidnap the children of wealthy parents, conduct them to a secret place in some distant State and keep them there until their ransoms should be paid. Wilson took for an accomplice the coachman of Mrs. Jeff Dunlap, a wealthy widow living on McGee street. Mrs. Dunlap's 3-year-old boy was to have been the first victim.

Asiatic Cholera Appears in Ohio.

Carrollton (O.) special: An epidemic has been raging in the eastern part of this county for the past week, and many deaths have resulted. Six deaths occurred in one day. It was claimed by some to be typhoid fever. The other day Dr. Williams, of this place, was called to the house of John Toole, who lives in Washington Township, who was taken ill in the morning. He died at 4 o'clock, of cholera, after intense spasms and frequent fits of vomiting, purging and other symptoms of that dread disease. Dr. Williams pronounces it a genuine case of Asiatic cholera.

Highway Robbery at Buffalo.

A highway robbery, complicated with a deadly assault, was perpetrated on the North street circle, Buffalo. A man named Gaffney, living at 175 Fourteenth street, was returning home from his work when a man dashed upon him and attempted to steal his watch and money. A struggle followed, when the assailant drew a revolver and shot Gaffney through the body, and then gashed him with a knife. Gaffney fell, and the robber emptied his pockets and fled. Gaffney is seriously injured. There is no clue to the robber.

Embezzlers Arrested.

Messrs. Walter Potter and W. D. Lovell, of the firm of Potter, Lovell & Co., were arrested at Boston on warrants charging them with embezzlement and larceny. The complaint is made by Mr. Chas. Richardson, of Philadelphia, a member of the firm of C. Richardson & Sons, a Director of the National Bank of the Republic of Philadelphia, and President of the Edge Hill Furnace Company, and it alleges the embezzlement and larceny of $70,000 worth of bonds of the Edge Hill Company.

Running a Saloon Under Difficulties.

Jacob Burke persisted in running a saloon at Lockport, Ind., and his establishment was blown up with dynamite. He then opened a bar in his dwelling house. The other night incendiaries applied the torch, and upon running to his spring for a supply of water, he found it filled with bowlders, and the water supply had also been cut off. The house was destroyed, together with its contents, but the next day Burke moved into an old blacksmith shop and again renewed his stock of liquors.

Fired at a Train.

When the New York Central, which leaves Poughskeepsie, N. Y., at 5:15 p. m., was just north of Cold Springs, a bullet and stone crashed through a window of the middle coach. Charles H. Smith, of Binghampton, a passenger, was slightly cut by flying glass. No one on the train saw the persons who fired the missiles. No search was instituted, as the train was going at full speed.

The Largest Gas Well in Indiana.

A tremendous flow of gas has been struck on the farm of E. G. Brecker, near Tipton, Ind., and it is estimated that the supply will be 20,000,000 cubic feet a day. The well is thought to be one of the largest in this State. The other night the gas caught fire and in an explosion which followed several persons were badly scorched.

A Bad Preacher.

The Rev. Thomas Owens, a primitive Baptist preacher, was convicted in the Circuit Court at Vernon, Ala., of disturbing public worship, and using obscene language in the presence of ladies. Owens, while conducting a revival meeting, which was attended by a number of ladies who were not members of the church, denounced these ladies, who refused to believe his teachings and join his church, in unmeasured terms, applying to them the vilest of epithets. This brought on a riot, the friends of the ladies trying to mob the preacher. Owens was warned never to preach in the neighborhood again.

With His Own Invention.

San Francisco special: John Murphy had been in the city some time attempting to introduce a fire escape, invented by himself, consisting of a belt and wire rope by which he was automatically lowered to the ground. Recently he attempted to make a descent from the top of the Chronicle building. The first part of the descent was made safely. At the foot of the first story he stopped and swung on the window and took his little son in his arms. The additional weight was too much, the belt broke and father and son fell to the ground, both seriously injured, but may not die.

Contraband Chinamen.

The Treasury Department has informed the Collector of Customs at El Paso, Tex., that "the department has decided that the law providing for the exclusion of Chinese, contemplates the return to China as 'the country whence they came,' of Chinese found and adjudged to be unlawfully within the United States, whether they entered from China direct or from some intermediate country, and that such Chinese should be returned to China via the port of San Francisco, Cal., as the most convenient point of exit from your district."

Detective Killed at Chicago.

D. M. Avery, a detective for the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, was fatally stabbed at Chicago by Louis Dickman, who is under arrest. The two men met in a saloon at Sixty-seventh street and Ashland avenue and Dickman being half drunk and quarrelsome, Avery stepped outside to avoid trouble. Dickman followed the detective and without warning plunged a pocket knife into his jugular vien. Avery fell to the sidewalk and in a few minutes bled to death.

Burglar Caught.

John Kuhns, the younger of the brother horse thieves and general desperadoes, who have terrorized Noble County, Indiana, was arrested in Iowa and brought to Albion, where he is now in jail. It is thought he will "peach" on his tougher brother, Marion, who is yet at large. Five hundred dollars was offered for their arrest. His brother was the one who nearly killed a detective near Columbus, Ohio, and escaped, a short time ago.

Killed His Rival.

As the result of a quarrel over a young girl at Grand Rapids, Patrick O'Connor is dead, while his murderer, William Eagen, is locked up at the police station. The rivals met in a public highway, and a fight ensued in which O'Connor was killed. Eagen claims that O'Connor struck him first and that he struck back and knocked him down. He had no intention of killing him. Both were employed in the railroad shops.

A Land Slide.

A dispatch from New Philadelphia, Ohio, says the incessant rains for the past forty-eight hours have caused a land slide on the Cleveland and Mariett Railway, which will delay trains a long while. The bridge on the Cleveland, Lorain and Wheeling Railway has been washed away near the city. The Tuscarawas River raised twenty and one-half feet in one hour. The whole valley is inundated.

Death of Guiteau's Executioner.

General Crocker, warden of the United States jail in Washington, is dead. General Crocker was Guiteau's executioner and was also the hangman some years ago when the culprit negro was decapitated by the rope. It is said only two instances of decapitation by accident of this sort are known to history, the other occuring more than a century ago in England.

A Reporter Kills His Man.

Tom Riley, of Newport, Ky., who is a reporter on the Cincinnati Enquirer, shot and instantly killed City Engineer Zimmerman at Newport. The latter had taken offense at an article published in the Enquirer, of which he supposed Riley was the author. The two men met and a quarrel ensued, which resulted in the death of Zimmerman.

A Lynching.

Steve Crump and George Bolter, colored, charged with rape, were taken from the Sheriff on the way to jail at Amory, Miss., by a mob of 300 and lynched by hanging.

Shot Three Times.

Dr. James E. Rogers was fatally shot by William F. Boyd, near Alexander, N. C. Rogers received three balls in his head and died in three-quarters of an hour.

Deadly Duel.

In a duel at New Berne, Ala., both antagonists were killed at the first fire.

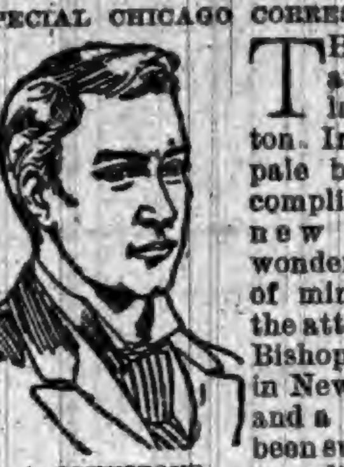
WILD WORK OF A MIND.

PAUL A. JOHNSTONE PERFORMS A GREAT FEAT.

With Bandages Over His Eyes He Drives Through the Crowded Streets of Chicago and Performs a Marvelous Feat Over a Hotel Register—It Nearly Cost Him His Life.

[SPECIAL CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

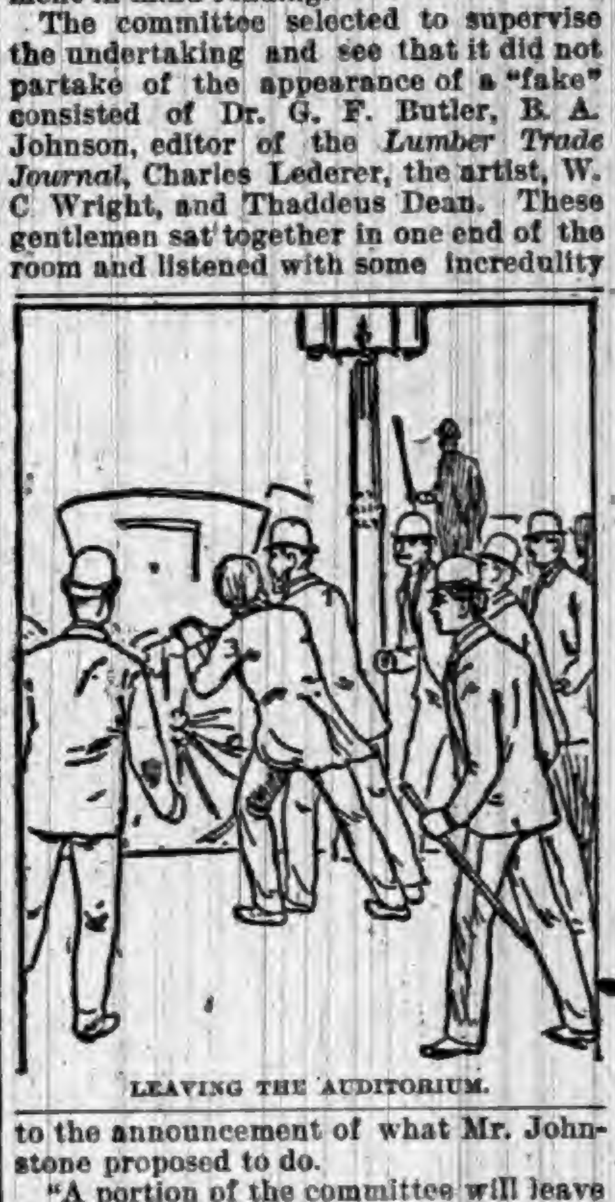


P. A. JOHNSTONE.

THE performances of the late Washington Irving Bishop pale before the accomplishments of a new psychological wonder. The feat of mind-reading, in the attempt of which Bishop lost his life in New York a year and a half ago, has been successfully accomplished in Chicago by Paul Alexander Johnstone. Mind-reader Johnstone drove blindfolded through the crowded streets of the city from the Auditorium to the Grand Pacific Hotel, and, still with a handkerchief tightly bandaged over his eyes, picked out of an old register a name that had been selected for the test by a committee of disinterested citizens. It was a similar feat which killed Bishop and it nearly killed Johnstone. A doctor worked over him for three hours to drag him out of an attack of congestion of the brain into which he had been thrown by his adventure. The doctor saved him, but he will never attempt the feat again. He has had enough.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon a score of people comprising representatives of the press and a special committee sat in the south parlor of the Auditorium Hotel and watched with considerable interest the nervous antics of a pale-faced young man in a closely buttoned Prince Albert coat, who was about to undertake what is conceded the most difficult accomplishment in mind-reading.

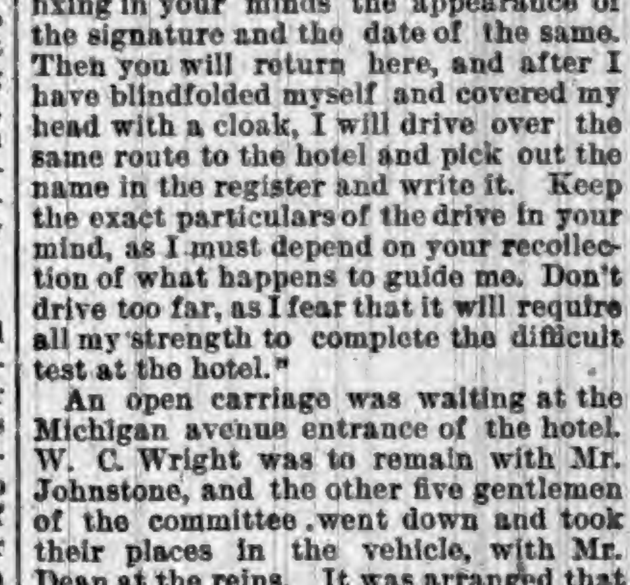
The committee selected to supervise the undertaking and see that it did not partake of the appearance of a "fake" consisted of Dr. G. F. Butler, B. A. Johnson, editor of the Lumber Trade Journal, Charles Lederer, the artist, W. C Wright, and Thaddeus Dean. These gentlemen sat together in one end of the room and listened with some incredulity to the announcement of what Mr. Johnstone proposed to do.



LEAVING THE AUDITORIUM.

"A portion of the committee will leave here in a carriage and drive by some circuitous route to the Grand Pacific Hotel," said the restless and excited young man. "There you will select a hotel register and mutually agree upon a name therein, fixing in your minds the appearance of the signature and the date of the same. Then you will return here, and after I have blindfolded myself and covered my head with a cloak, I will drive over the same route to the hotel and pick out the name in the register and write it. Keep the exact particulars of the drive in your mind, as I must depend on your recollection of what happens to guide me. Don't drive too far, as I fear that it will require all my strength to complete the difficult test at the hotel."

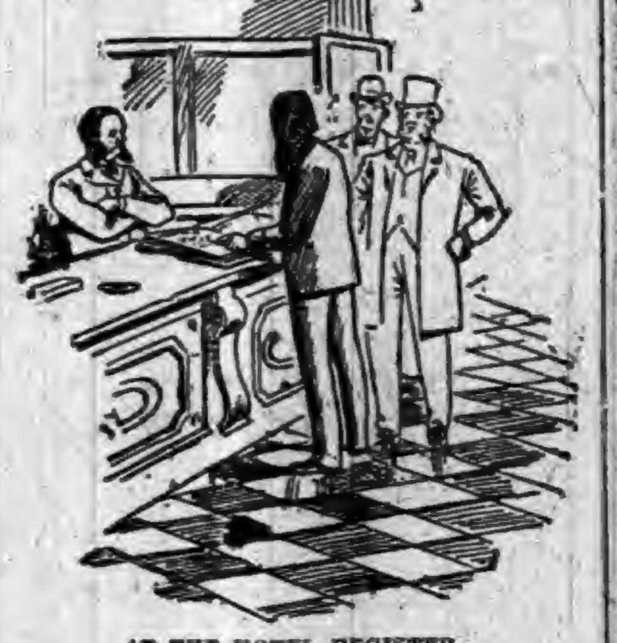
An open carriage was waiting at the Michigan avenue entrance of the hotel. W. C. Wright was to remain with Mr. Johnstone, and the other five gentlemen of the committee went down and took their places in the vehicle, with Mr. Dean at the reins. It was arranged that he should do all of the driving and not leave the seat during the test. The committee drove north on Michigan avenue to Monroe street, west on Monroe street to Wabash avenue, south on Wabash avenue to Adams, west on Adams to State, south on State to Jackson, west on Jackson to Clark, and then north on Clark to the entrance of the Grand Pacific Hotel. Leaving Mr. Dean at the reins, the other committee-men went to the desk and were given a register full of names. The book was taken out to the carriage, and, after some discussion, the committee decided on the name of J. G. Butler, Jr., Youngstown, Ohio, the date being Aug. 25, 1890. Leaving Mr. Lederer to guard the register, and see that no one touched it in the meantime, the committee drove back to the point of starting.



DRIVING BLINDFOLDED THROUGH CROWDED STREETS.

During their absence Johnstone paced the floor like a caged tiger. Dr. Butler and Mr. Johnson were selected to take charge of him in preparation for the drive. They blindfolded him and then placed over his head the velvet cloak. Then Dr. Butler traced on the wall with his finger the route they had driven, indicating the turns made and the number of blocks in each direction. When he concluded the young man clutched his hand and rushed down the stairway two steps at a time to the carriage. He was assisted to the seat beside Mr. Dean, given the lines, and in a moment was guiding the spirited team along Michigan avenue, while a dozen cabs and carriages filled with students of psychical phenomena rattled along behind. When the cloaked driver swung his team west on Adams street, instead of Monroe, it looked as though he had failed at the very start. It was the only mistake he made. He drove west on Adams one block to Wabash, then south to Jackson, west to State, south to Van Buren, and west to Dearborn. Here he seemed to lose his bearings or realize that a mistake had been made. The drive up to this point had been attended with several difficulties and delays. The streets were filled with vehicles and a crowd of 500 curious people followed the carriage. At the corner of Adams and Dearborn streets the tongue of the carriage ran into the wheel of an express wagon and the consequent stop and excitement probably assisted in diverting the mind of the driver.

At the corner of Dearborn and Van Buren streets Johnstone alighted and led a member of the committee to the middle of the street. After standing a moment he appeared to recover his bearings, for he hurried back to the carriage and drove without further hesitation to Clark street, where he drew up in front of Gore's Hotel, just one block south of the Grand Pacific, thus proving that the only error he had made was in turning from Michigan avenue to Adams instead of Monroe. When informed of his mistake he asked Mr. Dean to fix his mind on the proper direction to take. Mr. Dean apparently selected the right direction, for a moment later the venerable gentleman was being violently pulled along the pavement toward the Grand Pacific. A jostling crowd fell in behind. Turning into the entrance, the mind-reader hurried to the exact spot where Mr. Lederer had been left with the register. Here his strength appeared to desert him, and he would have fainted had not a glass of liquor been put to his lips. He was allowed a few moments' rest in a private room and then was led behind the desk in the rotunda, with the book before him and the members of the committee standing about.



AT THE HOTEL REGISTER.

Taking Mr. Lederer by the hand, the blindfolded man began rapidly turning the leaves. When he reached the proper place he exclaimed:

"That's it, Aug. 25! Is that right? Tell me, quick, is that right?"

"Yes, that is the right page," said Dr. Butler. At this point the young man again came very near going into a nervous collapse, and it was several minutes before he could proceed.

"Now, gentlemen," said he, "think intently of the appearance of this signature."

He leaned over the page, beat it with his hands, passed his palms nervously across the foreheads of those about him, and then asked that a coat be thrown over his head. This was done, and after further lightning maneuvers suddenly called out: "A paper and pencil, quick." They were handed him, and leaning on the book he wrote an almost correct facsimile of the signature before him, "J. G. Butler, Jr." As if doubting the correctness of this, he again called for a pencil and wrote the name a second time.

"Am I right?" nervously shouted Johnstone.

"You are," shouted the committee, and the big crowd cheered the accomplishment of a wonderful effort.

Johnstone burst into tears when he heard the shout, and he was carried away sobbing. His temperature and pulse were remarkably high, and his heart-beat was as rapid as the thumping of car-wheels on the joints of a short-railed track. Nearly everybody else who saw the torture he endured while he was trying to find the name felt about as bad, and the committee looked like ghosts in plug hats. When Johnstone came down from his room he reeled between his attendants. He was driven home and there he had the attack which nearly ended him. He fell over onto a lounge, his face became purple, his jaw dropped, and his eyes lost all their natural light and seemed about to pop from his head.

J G Butler Jr

THE NAME ON THE REGISTER.

"This ends him," said his manager, but there was life in the boy when Dr. J. H. Law came. The Doctor labored over him and brought him to consciousness.

"I will never try it again," he muttered, and then became delirious. In his ravings he went over the afternoon's adventures and three men fought hard to keep him from jumping through a window. The Doctor said the strain had produced congestion of the brain.

But he had successfully accomplished the marvelous feat, and not one of the committee was in any doubt as to the exhibition being a genuine case of mind-reading, self-induced hypnotism, or something else just as wonderful.

The Summer Home of Gen. Custer's Faithful Widow.

Mr. Hutton, in his literary notes in the current Harper's, compares Mrs. Custer with her books commemorating her gallant husband to Queen Victoria, with her Albert memorials scattered broadcast over England, and the comparison is to the advantage of the former. Mrs. Custer seems more solicitous of giving the world a true picture of "the General" than of recounting her own adventures. Mrs. Custer, by the way, spends the summer at her cabin near the Delaware Water-Gap. There she lives from May to October with an elderly lady companion, roughing it almost as much as when she lived on the plains. Her home is two miles from a lemon, but is near enough to a farm-house where butter, eggs, milk and chickens are to be had in abundance. Twice a day mechanics going to their work at a factory in the nearest town stop at her door—in the morning to take her mail and in the evening to bring it. Her cabin is rudely furnished—that is, its equipments might seem rude to you or me; but Mrs. Custer, who likes luxury in her city apartment, despises it in her woodland cabin. The first summer she spent in this retreat she lived the life of a hermit, but now the people who go to the Water-Gap and neighboring resorts have found her out and her cabin is a point of attraction for the summer visitors for miles around. She manages, however, to do a good deal of work there, and it was there that her last book, "Following the Guidon," was written.—The Critic.

INDIANA REPUBLICANS.

PROCEEDINGS OF THEIR STATE CONVENTION,

Col. Richard W. Thompson, President—The Nominees and Balloting—Harrison and Hovey's Administrations Indorsed—Tribute to Speaker Reed.

A special from Indianapolis says: Chairman Michener, of the State Central Committee, called the Republican State Convention to order.

The committee on permanent organization reported R. W. Thompson, Ex-Secretary of the Navy, for Chairman, and Charles S. Landis, of Delphi, for Secretary. Ex-Secretary Thompson was then introduced as Chairman and was received with tumultuous applause. He said that fifty years ago he attended a convention in this city whose chief duty was to Condemn the Democratic party for its policy of government. He said that the history of the last fifty years had shown that the Democratic party was still incompetent to take charge of the Government. He spoke for the better part of an hour, going into a history of the Republican and Democratic tariff interest, etc.

Mr. Thompson closed by a strong plea for absolute protection, and indorsed the present silver bill.

The platform was then reported.

It indorses the administration of President Harrison and the conduct of Speaker Reed; condemns the Democratic doctrine of free trade, favors reciprocity, approves the pension legislation of the present Congress, approves the silver bill; opposes convict labor and child labor, favors the Lodge bill; opposes alien ownership of land, and demands laws to prevent food adulteration; denounces trusts and combinations; favors reasonable river and harbor improvements; indorses the administration of Governor Hovey; demands non-partisan control of State benevolent institutions; denounces the White Cap outrages; demands local option and approves the original package bill; demands the election of United States Senators by popular vote; demands public improvement boards for cities; demands regulation of foreign building associations; condemns the last Democratic Legislature for filling offices with partizans; denounces the Democratic platform for making charges against the State and Federal judiciary; favors free text books for the public schools; opposes any interference with private or parochial schools; condemns the financial administration of the State finances; opposes any increase in State taxation; condemns the legislative gerrymander;

Heartily approves the action of the Republicans in Congress. Under the brilliant leadership of Thomas B. Reed they have again proved that the Republican party can be relied upon to meet and solve great public questions, and have once more demonstrated its capacity for intelligent and patriotic government. The important treaties concluded and pending; the liberal pension laws; the revision of a system of import duties; the provision for certain and impartial collection thereof; laws authorizing States to deal with articles deemed harmful; legislation to secure pure food for our people; to remove all objections to the products of our farms in foreign markets; the provision for increasing the volume of sound currency; laws designed to make elections fair and pure; legislation for the protection of railroad employes; laws against trusts and monopolies; to suppress lotteries; to prohibit convict labor on public works; to prohibit importation of foreign laborers under contract; for the protection of miners; to endow colleges of agriculture and mechanic arts; the statutes adding six stars to the flag of the union, each representing a commonwealth already great and populous, constitute a work completed or well advanced, which in character and value has rarely been equalled in any single session of Congress.

The plank indorsing Harrison is as follows:

"We indorse the administration of Benjamin Harrison and the able statesmen selected as his co-laborers and advisers as being wise, vigorous, and patriotic. It has kept the pledges made to the people, has carefully guarded and zealously promoted their welfare, and elevated the condition of the public service.

The plank referring to the tariff is as follows:

We reaffirm our belief in the Republican doctrine of protection to American industries. Home markets with millions of consumers engaged in varied industries are the best in the world and for many perishable articles the only ones accessible. American markets should be first for our own citizens, and to this end we favor levying import duties upon products of other nations, often the result of degraded labor, selecting such articles as we can produce profitably and as will bring revenue to the Government and impose the least burden upon our own people.

We condemn the doctrine of free trade under the operation of which thousands now engaged in manufacturing, mining, and like industries, must be driven to agricultural pursuits at once increasing our farm products and destroying the best and most reliable market for them, and commend the policy of reciprocity proposed in connection with pending tariff legislation to the end that when our markets are opened more freely to the products of other countries we should obtain as a consideration therefor more favorable trade privileges with countries to be benefited. We will thus secure, especially in Mexico, the Central and South American States and adjacent islands, such a market for our agricultural and manufactured products as will enable us to pay for our sugar and coffee with the product of our mills and farms.

Every reference to Speaker Reed was greeted with prolonged applause.

A resolution was adopted selecting the eagle as the emblem of the Republican party, to be used on the ballot provided for by the Australian ballot system.

A resolution was adopted ordering the Secretary of the Convention to send a congratulatory telegram to Thomas B. Reed, "formerly of Maine, but now of the United States."

The following is the complete ticket: Secretary of State, Milton Trusler, of Fayette County; Auditor of State, I. N. Walker, of Marion County; Treasurer of State, George W. Pixley, of Allen County; Attorney General, John W. Lovett, of Madison County; Judge Supreme Court, R. W. McBride, of Elkhart County; Clerk Supreme Court, Will T. Noble, of Wayne county; Statistician, John Worrell, of Hendricks County; Superintendent Public Instructions, James Henry, of Morgan County.

The only fight was on State treasurer, and Pixley was nominated on the second ballot. The convention closed with cheers for President Harrison, Speaker Reed and the State ticket.

Too Extravagant.

An old lady had invited another old lady to take tea with her. After the departure of her guest the hostess, who was of a penurious turn of mind, said scoffingly: "Well, Betsy Blake makes a mighty loud perfession of being a good church member and all that, but I watched her to-night, and she up an' put three heapin' teaspoons o' sugar in one cup o' tea, an' if she calls that Christianity, I don't!"

Too Fly.

Armand—Come! Fly with me, implore you!

Camille—Never! Sir, you insult me.

Armand—What! You will not go?

Camille—I will resist you with all the strength of my woman's nature. If you would tear me from the place, you must first drug me and render me unconscious. You will find a bottle of chloroform on the bureau over there.—From an unproduced drama by Dumas.

Irreparable.

There is no class of persons, perhaps, who follow their chosen profession with more enthusiasm than do the members of the medical fraternity. One of our exchanges reports this little dialogue between two of them:

Doctor A.—You didn't get to the society meeting last night. Dr. Jay's paper on "Germs" was very interesting.

Doctor B.—Had several calls in the evening; sorry I couldn't attend.

Doctor A.—Well, the paper will be published.

Doctor B.—Yes, I know, but the supper won't.

CONTENTMENT.

BY WILL A. RICE.

Contentment is the noblest prize
  That man can ever win on earth,
Yet to its heights few ever rise,
  Thus few appreciate its worth.
But if, like things of common trade,
  Its blessings could be bought and sold,
What margins for them would be paid
  By those whose only wealth is gold.

Although contentment is a gem,
  'Tis one we nearly all might own,
To crown life as a diadem
  Worth more than any monarch's throne,
A gem that decks not folly's path,
  Nor other ways that lead to vice,
Lest heaven, in its holy wrath,
  Place on its worth too small a price.

In tempers smooth, serene, and sweet,
  In souls where passions never rage,
Contentment builds its blest retreat
  Without regard to class or age.
And to compass this boon of bliss
  One need not seek it with his gold,
Nor woo it with a fawner's kiss,
  But seek it with an honest soul.

When won, it makes the best of life,
  Whichever way it comes and goes,
And makes it minus half its strife,
  And minus more than half its woes;
For of life's various shapes and modes,
  He who views the brightest side,
And learns his feet the smoothest roads,
  Is of all men best satisfied.

LIFE, Tenn.

BETRAYED;

—OR—

A DARK MARRIAGE MORN.

A Romance of Love, Intrigue and Crime.

BY MRS. ALICE P. CARRISTON.

CHAPTER XXXIII.—(Continued.)

He did not imagine for a moment that Cora would charge herself personally with the infliction of her vengeance; but she had said, he then remembered, that the hand would be found. She was rich enough to find it, and this hand might now be here.

"Flo," he said, "let us walk a little faster, I beg of you! I am cold."

He quickened his steps, and resolved to return to the house by the public road.

When he reached the edge of the woods, although he still thought he heard at intervals the sound which had alarmed him, he reassured himself and assumed his flow of spirits as if a little ashamed even of his panic.

He detained Flora to look at the pretext of their walk. This was a small wall of rock over a high excavation. Two trunks of trees had been thrown across the narrowest part of the excavation, forming a species of bridge—always giving those who ventured upon it the most complete and picturesque view of a most wonderful and romantic spectacle.

Flo had never before seen this species of bridge, which her brother had recently placed there. After some minutes of contemplation, as he was showing her with his hands the two trunks of the trees:

"Must we pass these?" she asked, in a broken voice.

"If you are not afraid," said Eugene; "and, after all, I shall be with you."

He saw she hesitated, and her face, under the moonlight, seemed to him to become so strangely pale that he could not refrain from saying:

"I thought you were braver."

She hesitated no longer, but put her foot on the perilous bridge against her wish, always cautiously advancing.

She half turned her head, and her steps became unsteady.

All at once she staggered.

Eugene rushed to catch her, and in the trouble of the moment his hand struck her with some force.

The unfortunate woman uttered a shriek, made a gesture as if to push him off, and, repulsing him, rushed wildly over the bridge and ran into the woods.

Eugene, repulsed and frightened, not knowing her thoughts, followed her in great haste.

He found her near the bridge, with her back against a tree, her face turned toward him, terrified yet menacing.

"Coward!" she exclaimed.

He looked at her with real bewilderment, when he heard the sound of rapidly approaching footsteps, and a shadow passed out of the depths of the woods.

He recognized Mrs. Leland.

She ran toward them, palpitating, excited, seized the hand of her child, and turned to him.

"Both here!" she cried.

Now he understood all.

A strangled cry rattled in his throat; he pressed his forehead convulsively between his two hands, and let fall his arms despairingly; then he said in a hoarse voice:

"You take me for a murderer?" and stamped in the wild agony of his rage.

"Well, what are you doing here? Save yourselves then!"

Terrified, they obeyed him—they fled—the mother dragging her daughter with long strides; and he saw them disappear in the night.

He remained there, in this wild place. The hours passed on without his numbering them. Sometimes he went up and down in the narrow space which separated the bridge from the abyss; sometimes stopping suddenly, his eyes lowered and fixed, he seemed as immovable and senseless as the trunk of the tree against which he leaned.

If there is, as we hope, a divine hand which weighs in a just balance our griefs against our faults, these moments ought to have been counted for this man.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

RESTORED MEMORY, AND SORROW.

Warren Leland's journey to Roxbury resulted in a disappointment.

An interview with Clara's father revealed—what he had half expected to hear—that the remittances for the support of Mildred had all been made anonymously.

This knowledge filled him with a strange and undefined fear.

The liberal amounts supplied, and the regularity with which they were remitted, indicated that Mildred's brother must be a wealthy man, yet the fact that his address was not known, nor even that of his banker or agent in New York, lent an air of decided mystery to the whole transaction.

Without waiting even to see his mother, the perplexed and anxious young man hastened to catch a New York train.

Once seated in the rapidly moving coach, he gave way to serious reflection.

"There's something back of all this," he decided, after he had run over in his mind all that was known to him of the history of his affianced bride. "I should have thought of this before. I'll be surprised if I don't run against something in the way of villainy before I fathom it, as I surely shall."

The love which Warren Leland had entertained for Clara Denton had been pure and sincere, but it had been but a prelude to that which he now felt for her beautiful protegee, Mildred Lester.

Clara had done much to remove that which was gross from his nature, but his love for Mildred had purified him as with fire.

Her gentle influence had operated upon him in a manner exactly opposite to the way Eugene had been affected by the beautiful siren whose baneful love had wrecked his life.

It was nearly evening when he reached the Grand Central Depot.

Calling a carriage, he was driven rapidly to the house of his friends, whom he had not seen since parting with them the preceding evening. Clara and Mildred were there to receive him.

"Where's Edith?" he asked, when he had briefly informed Mrs. Denton of the uselessness of his journey.

"She went this afternoon to call on her new-made friend, Miss Fielding, and has not yet returned," was the response.

"Hasn't she, though?"

This query was attended by the closing of a door, and followed by the tinkling of little feet, and a moment later the little maiden in question danced into the drawing-room.

"I'm always at the very place I'm expected to be," laughed Edith, merrily.

"That you are, daughter," replied Clara, greeting her with a kiss.

"And what did you find out?" asked Warren, eagerly.

"I found Miss Fielding out."

"How did that happen?"

"A misunderstanding as to the hour. They said she would be home at five o'clock."

"And you didn't wait?" interrupted her mother.

"How could I? Why, the wedding day is almost here, and I've lots and lots of things to buy for Mildred, yet."

The sprightly girl here opened her reticule, and disclosed a number of small packages.

"But I didn't forget my errand," she added, checking Warren, who was about to speak. "I left a note for Miss Fielding, inviting her to tea, and promising that you should escort her home."

"But I was out of the city. You knew that I was to leave for the East on a morning train."

"True, but trains run West, as well as East, and there was an attraction here."

She laughed and pointed to the now blushing Mildred.

"By the way," she rattled on, "I saw the doctor, and told him about it. He said it might turn out to be the cure of Mildred."

At that instant there was a tingling of the door-bell.

"Miss Fielding," announced the servant.

All rose, and an instant later Meta presented herself.

"Mr. Leland——" said Edith, beginning the introduction of Warren.

She was interrupted by a sharp cry of seemingly mingled surprise and pain.

All eyes were upon Mildred, who, with uplifted hands, was swaying to and fro.

Warren Leland presented his strong arms none too quickly to prevent her from falling to the floor.

In an instant Clara was using restoratives to recall her from the swoon into which she had fallen.

"Stand a little back, please, Miss Fielding," said the young man as he saw signs of returning consciousness in the fair, young face. "It will be better for her not to see you at first."

"Meta! Meta!" cried Mildred, upon opening her eyes. "I'm certain I saw her."

An instant later and the two old-time friends were clasped in each other's arms.

"You are better, darling?" queried Warren, as he half-jealously withdrew his affianced wife from the embrace of Meta. "You remember the past now?"

"Remember the past?" she repeated, as if not understanding the question.

"Yes. You knew Miss Fielding long ago?"

"And my brother Ray?" added Meta.

"Yes, yes!" shrieked Mildred. "Oh, God! Better death than this!"

"Her mind wanders," said Warren, anxiously. "Come, rouse yourself, darling; my little wife that is soon to be."

"Your wife? Oh, God! What do you say? I am a wife already."

She gently disengaged herself from the yielding arms of her bewildered lover, and stepped toward Meta.

"She raves," said Clara. "This shock, instead of restoring, has overthrown her mind."

But Meta shook her head sadly.

"Mildred is right," said she. "She was married some years ago."

"To whom?" demanded Leland, frantically.

"To Eugene Cleveland!" cried Mildred, answering for herself.

"My sister's husband?" shouted Warren Leland. "The scoundrel!"

"My husband married again?"

With a moan of anguish the deeply wronged and suffering woman fell senseless to the floor.

CHAPTER XXXV.

A HOUSE OF SORROWS.

Unhappy, distracted, Eugene Cleveland had no doubt that he knew who had dogged the footsteps of himself and wife in their strange ramble through the woods.

The appearance of Mrs. Leland and the vague expression of suspicion on her part had convinced him that she had been the spy.

In this he was mistaken. Becoming alarmed at the long absence of her daughter, and filled with a vague fear that the warning of Phebe Craven might contain an element of truth, the mother had hastened to find Flora, that she might protect her, if necessary, from the murderous hand of her husband.

She had arrived upon the scene at the moment calculated to confirm her suspicious fears.

But it was a man who had followed the pair before the unfortunate, almost fatal, episode at the rustic bridge, which had convinced Flora that at heart her beloved, idolized husband, the father of her child, was a murderer.

This man was the degraded, revengeful Oscar Slyme.

Rendered desperate by the failure of his diabolical schemes, and burning with a desire for vengeance, he had persistently dogged the movements of young Cleveland.

He had seen Eugene emerge from the Elliston mansion and had followed him to the Grand Central Depot, and taken passage on the train which bore him to Roxbury.

After the flight of the two terrified ladies, the wretch whose name was so truthful an index to his character, watched the distracted young man for some time.

He had come to Roxbury bent on taking his enemy's life, and now saw an opportunity to accomplish his end without danger of being suspected of the dastardly crime.

"It'll be reckoned a case of suicide," muttered he at length, as he produced a revolver and started forward.

But almost instantly he checked himself, and a smile of triumph swept his rage-distorted features.

Returning the weapon to his pocket, he glided swiftly from the spot.

With the good fortune which seems sometimes to favor the evil-minded, he caught a train, and was, not long afterwards, entering a cab at Forty-second street, New York.

Alighting after a short drive, he boldly ascended the marble steps leading to the Elliston mansion

The hour was late for calling upon a lady, yet Slyme lost no time in ringing the bell, and in notifying the sleepy footman who answered it that he desired to see his mistress upon business of urgent importance.

Cora Elliston, looking peerless in her widow's weeds, received him in the library.

At first she had resolved not to see the ex-secretary, but upon reflection had changed her mind, deciding that he must know something of a startling nature to communicate.

"What brings you here?" she asked abruptly, without taking a seat.

"Your interests——"

"Bah!" interrupted the siren, looking more beautiful than ever, in scorn.

"And my own," added the man, diplomatically.

"That's more to the point. State your errand, and that briefly.

"You despise me, and, perhaps, rightly; yet we have one interest in common."

"I can't imagine what."

"You love and would possess for your very own Eugene Cleveland."

Flora smiled bitterly, but made no reply.

"While I have but one object left in life."

"Revenge on him?"

"No. I love Flora Cleveland, his wife. She must be mine."

"I still fail to understand what interest we have in common."

"To accomplish our several ends, we must separate the two, and that in a way that will leave no lingering trace of affection between them."

"I'm becoming interested," smiled the siren, as she threw herself languidly upon a sofa, and waved her caller to a chair.

Then, in hurried tones, Slyme related how Flora believed her husband guilty of her intended murder.

"A bold move now," said he, in conclusion, "and the thing will be accomplished."

"I will join you in the enterprise."

Oscar Slyme noted the changed expression upon the beautiful woman's face, and inscribed it to the inward promptings of her insane and guilty love.

With all his shrewdness, he was wrong; indeed he could not have been farther from the truth.

Love for Eugene Cleveland had forever departed from the heart of Cora Elliston, or rather it had turned to hate, and that of the kind which the poet placed a degree below that engendered in the infernal regions, when he wrote: "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned."

This change of sentiment on her part was favorable to Eugene Cleveland, for the love of such a woman is more blighting and destroying than her bitterest most implacable hate.

It was a full hour before Slyme withdrew, and when he did so a plan had been agreed upon.

But let us return to Roxbury, toward which all indications point as the scene of a coming tragedy.

How Eugene Cleveland passed that dreadful night, he never fully realized. The wickedness of his past life rose before him like a veritable phantom.

He realized now that what he had thought to be love for Cora had been passion only. Even in his despair and black remorse, he could not comprehend how he had been so long enslaved, and had been led into such guilty courses.

As he thought of his loving, trusting wife and innocent child, a full sense of what he had lost, or rather cast aside, dawned upon him, and he burst into bitter tears.

"I never loved another," moaned he.

Then, with a feeling akin to guilt, he thought of his lost Mildred.

"She was pure and good," said he, "and had she lived we might have been happy together, and this frightful nightmare, from which I have just awakened, been avoided; but I now know that I never entertained for her the love I do for Flora. I have trifled away my life, my earthly happiness, and my hope of heaven."

Thus tortured by bitter reflections, he had wandered away from the rocky chasm and approached the highway, near the house.

The night had long since passed, and the sun was mounting high into the heavens.

With a start he raised his eyes and realized his position.

A second shock ran through his nerves as he saw two persons approaching the house.

One he recognized as Warran Leland. His companion, a closely veiled lady Eugene did not recognize, though he thought he detected something familiar in her carriage.

Another moment and they had entered the mansion.

With the privilege of a story-teller, let us follow them.

As the reader has no doubt surmised, the veiled lady was Mildred, the wife, the lawful wife of Eugene Cleveland.

The scene which ensued was too painful a one to describe in detail.

Flora had been crushed before. She was overwhelmed now.

To be widowed without having been ever legally a wife, was a thought too terrible for her to hear, and for a time her reason seemed likely to be overthrown.

As for Mrs. Leland, Warren, and Mildred, their condition was but little better.

"I have regained my memory, came back to my old life, only to encounter misery," moaned Mildred. "I loved Eugene once, but that is now a thing of the past; I am bound to him by the law, while my heart is bestowed upon another."

At this juncture the door-bell rang, and to clap the climax, to add, if possible, to the anguish that possessed the quartette, Oscar Slyme and Cora Elliston were ushered into the parlor.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

CONCLUSION.

Cora Elliston took a backward step, as her eyes fell upon Warren Leland, whose presence there she had not calculated upon, while her companion started in dismay as he recognized the fair girl he had claimed as his sister and whom he had so deeply wronged.

"You here?" cried Flora, indignation momentarily surpressing her grief.

"And why not?" returned the other, almost instantly regaining that wonderful self-possession which had always characterized her.

"Why not, indeed? I ought not to have asked that question of one like you who dares anything. What is your pleasure?"

Before replying, the wicked woman cast a quick glance upon her companion.

Cora Elliston was quick-witted, and the look was a revelation to her.

She had never before seen Mildred, but she intuitively knew that the pale, trembling girl upon whose face the eyes of Slyme were fixed, could be none other than the one whom she had so cruelly separated from her newly wedded husband.

The two wives of Eugene Cleveland had met; the secret had been disclosed; there could be no doubt of it.

The plan which she and her guilty associate had agreed upon was destroyed. But Cora was a woman of great resources, and a surprise like this could not discomfit her.

"I have no pleasure," replied she, with a calm dignity. "My business here is of most painful nature."

"Have done with preliminaries," spoke up Warren impatiently. "To the business which brings you here."

"Very well, sir. I will speak, and without reserve. I have come here to make public a fearful and long hidden wrong."

"You might better have left that task to others," said Flora, scornfully.

"Save your reproaches. I will not affect to misunderstand you. I learned last night that vile slanderers have been trying to sully my fair fame. Such charges are false, infamously false!"

"I ought not to have expected a confession," replied Flora. "What hidden wrong do you seek to make public, then?"

"When Eugene Cleveland married you he had a wife already."

"I know it. There she stands."

Cora looked in the direction indicated, uttered an exclamation of well-feigned surprise.

"Is it possible?" she cried.

She started forward, but a repellant gesture, and a look of disgust on the part of Mildred, repressed her.

"You knew very well that she was alive all the time," said Warren, rather warmly. "Was it not your tool, Slyme, there, who pretended to be her brother and presented proof of her death?"

"Yes, but not with my knowledge, far less at my instigation."

"At whose, then?"

"Oscar Slyme was working under the orders of Eugene Cleveland. Ten minutes after he was married he received a letter from my husband notifying him that as a bridal present he would make him a partner in the publishing house where he was employed. This changed his ideas at once. He saw that he could look higher. Excusing himself, he sought Slyme and set a plot in motion which sent Mildred flying from the city that very night. Is not that true, Mr. Slyme?"

The beautiful woman paused, laid her white hand upon her heaving bosom and turned her dark eyes, so full of witchery and fascination, upon the face of the ex-secretary.

Slyme hesitated a moment. That he had lost all chance of gaining the love of Flora Cleveland he fully realized. He wavered for a moment. The eyes of the siren seemed burning their way into his very soul. An instant later his resolution was taken.

"The lady is right," he faltered. "I hate to acknowledge it, but I acted for Cleveland in the matter. He held a whip over my head, an old folly of which he had gained knowledge, and I was forced to perform the dastardly part."

"And you were the catch he had in his mind," added Mrs. Elliston, speaking to Flora, and bestowing a glowing look of gratitude upon Slyme.

"It is false!" cried Flora. "Your wiles have led Eugene to wrong me, but he was never capable of such perfidy, such infamy."

"Thank God!"

These words in fervent tones, caused every one present a start of surprise.

At that instant Eugene Cleveland bounded through the window that opened on the veranda and stood in the midst of the astonished company.

He had seen Slyme and Cora enter the house, and from a place of espionage had seen and heard all that had transpired.

The knowledge that Mildred still lived had been a shock, but its effect had lost much of its weight, so great was the mental excitement under which he was laboring.

"I know all," he went on, speaking rapidly, almost incoherently. "I have sinned beyond all thought, all hope, of pardon, but I am not the cold-blooded, heartless wretch that woman would make me appear to be.

"This man Slyme acted for her, and I have written evidence to prove it. Convinced that my Mildred was no more, I fell a victim to her wiles, and have until lately continued in her toils. I urge it not in mitigation of my grievous offenses, but at last I am free from her thralldom, and cannot do less than acknowledge my disgrace and ruin."

As Eugene Cleveland uttered these words, the face of Cora Elliston lost everything of fascinating beauty and took on an expression that would have done credit to an incarnate fiend.

"It is you who have brought me to this," she raved, turning upon Flora. "You came between us—took from me all that I ever valued in this life, his love; but you shall not live to enjoy your triumph."

As she finished speaking she drew from the folds of her dress a small gold-plated revolver, which she leveled at her fair and innocent rival.

No one was near enough to arrest her murderous hand, and Flora Cleveland's doom seemed sealed.

But with the quickness of a cat Eugene sprang forward and covered with his own body that of the woman whom he now loved better than his own life.

There was a report, a wreath of smoke, and the two fell to the floor together.

Without an instant's delay the desperate woman recocked the revolver and placed it over her treacherous, guileful heart.

A second report, a fall, a brief struggle, a parting groan, and she had entered the precincts of another world.

A scene of indescribable dismay ensued.

Flora was found unharmed, but her husband had received the bullet in his breast and was apparently in a dying condition.

Before losing consciousness, he seemed to believe that his death was at hand, and begged and received the full pardon of the wife he had so cruelly wronged.

"Good-by," said he to Mildred. "I see where your affections are placed. Promise me that you will marry Warren and be happy."

"I promise," was the tearful response.

The unexpected often happens in real life, and why not in fiction?

Eugene Cleveland did not die. For a long time his life was despaired of, but the careful watching of devoted Flora brought him back to life and ultimate health and strength.

The existing complication was a sad and trying one, but it was not without a remedy.

Mildred felt that she had no claim upon the husband from whom the beautiful siren had parted her, and as she was devotedly attached to Warren Leland, she procured a legal separation from Eugene, and shortly afterward married the husband of her choice.

As for the truly repentant Eugene and his faithful Flora, they were remarried and constitute a happy, loving pair, whom not all the sirens on earth can put asunder.

Warren never again saw Welch, the old rag-picker, who disappeared from the country with his daughter and her children, but he learned that the old man was an uncle of the wronged wife of Hobert Brownell.

Mr. Metcalf is hale and hearty in his years, and Clara Denton happy in his love and that of her charming and promising daughter, Edith.

Oscar Slyme escaped punishment at the hands of the law, but he never afterwards prospered, and within a year died miserably in a New York lodging-house.

Thus after a storm of passion and wrong-doing has come peace, content and happiness.

Thank God that for sin there remains, even in this lower world, a place for repentance and reformation.

Thank God that virtue and purity still exist to counteract and bring to naught the follies and sins engendered by unbridled passions.

THE democratic state platform endorses cheap school books. It has saved the state several millions.

VANDERBILT owns twenty-six millions of the 4-per cent bonds, and the Standard Oil Co. twenty millions. Now the government is asking them to sell at $1.25. Rich men can get a big profit.

LAST weeks' election in Wyoming gave the republicans a majority. This was made up of mormons, who all voted the republican ticket to pay the delegate in congress, who had all along fought for the mormons.

IF republicans have any other plan as to the state debt, except to raise the tax levy higher, we would be glad to hear it. Perhaps they will make their state officers stay at home and attend their duties. That would save clerk hire.

DOWN in Pennsylvania, there is quite a revolt against the bossism of Quay, and many republicans will vote for Pattison, the democratic candidate for governor. They say Quay has never denied that when secretary of state down there, he defaulted to the tune of about $200,000.

DEMOCRATS are still asking what the republicans have to show for the nearly $5,000,000 of state debt they made. No answer, so far. The democrats made less than four millions of it, and can show four state asylums, two state schools, a $200,000 soldiers' monument, and many other things.

THE esteemed Butler Record is informed that we take nothing back that we have said as to the promise of better prices if Harrison were elected, made by republican papers. Hundreds of these papers made that very promise. We have already re-quoted from such as had not been destroyed. We could have saved quite a stack of such papers.

NOW it turns out that the "free sugar" promised by the McKinley bill, is not of the grade in common use. It is low grade sugar, such as the great sugar trust wants to import for use in refining This comes in free, and they get it that much cheaper, and so make a better profit. But the higher grades of sugar, such as the most of our people use, are still to be taxed, and the consumer pays the tax.

THE republican campaign committee of this state is raking together a big campaign fund once more, in spite of the new law against bribery. Two of their state candidates, Pixley, the Ft. Wayne clothing dealer and John W. Lovett, candidate for attorney general. are both very wealthy, and have been assessed $3,000 each. They kick, but the boodle is needed to secure a few floaters, and have a "fair election."

MONTANA democrats have had their state convention. They have only a member of Congress to elect. They made a ringing platform devoting some space to the fraud by which republicans stole the state last year, when they threw out 174 democratic votes in one precinct. The platform advocates the free coinage of silver; the reduction of the Indian reservations; the passage of laws preventing the acquirement of mineral lands by land-grant railroads; condemns the McKinley and force bills; calls on congress for a reduction of revenue. The administrations of President Cleveland and Gov. Toole are commended, and the contest of Martin Maginnis and W. A. Clark before the U. S. Senate is indorsed. The reference to Cleveland was received with great applause and the mention of his name was received with a great ovation.

BLAINE is out in another letter favoring reciprocity, and against the McKinley bill.

THE Press exults that "the democrats failed to prove the charges against Dudley." That was because a republican judge and prosecutor would not allow Dudley to be brought into court. It is an easy matter enough for a rascal to go scot free if the judge and prosecutor are willing. But we can think of no good reason why a man who claims as much for his own morality, as does the editor of the Press, should take sides with a rascal like Dudley.

THE Raum investigation is about concluded. Raum has been telling under oath that everything is all right in the pension department, and no "refrigerator stock" owned by any of the clerks. A son of ex-Commissioner Tanner is his head clerk, and he swore Sept., 1, that had no stock. Now the trick came out this week. A small sub-company to handle this patent refrigerator in Washington, has been organized in that city and young Tanner is its secretary, having a share of stock presented to him to enlist him in the scheme. It is another case of "Credit Mobilier" on a small scale.

A Skillful Practitioner.

Dr. D. O. Fruth, the well-known and successful specialist, who has been making professional visits to this city during the past three years and whose unparalleled success has given him a wide reputation as a competent and skillful practitioner, will, in order to keep his many patients at this place under his personal observation revisit Auburn, Swineford House, Tuesday, Sept. 23, 1890, one day only. The increasing numbers that throng his parlors at each succeeding visit speaks well for the doctor, and shows a keen appreciation for superior skill and ability on the part of the afflicted. The doctor's wonderful success in handling that class of diseases which are beyond the skill of the general practitioner, is already becoming a subject for comment in our community—and there is but one way to explain a success of this kind—he cures his patients. The doctor is a man not only of most extraordinary skill in his profession, but with a heart full of sympathy and interest that at once gives new hope and encouragement, and patients who visit him once realize that they are in the presence of a friend. To those who have failed to consult him, we say a consultation will cost nothing and it may be the means of bringing health and happiness.

The Coming Fair.

The next fair will be at Waterloo and the managers are making great efforts to have everything in complete shape so as to be satisfactory to all who patronize them. Let all get their exhibits ready and have their entries made a few days before the fair, say on Thursday, Friday and Saturday before. The secretary will be in his office with plenty of help and will wait on you. The time to get ready, is now.

Millinery at St. Joe.

Miss Clara Freeman has purchased the millinery establishment of Miss Bartlett and will continue to give the ladies of this vicinity the best and latest goods and work in her line. She has been at the great opening at Ft. Wayne and returned with all the latest styles in fall goods, such as birds, fancy feathers, velvets, ribbons, hats ornaments and tips. Ladies call and see goods and styles. tf

Harvest Excursions via Lake Shore Route.

On Sept. 23 and Oct. 14, 1890, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern R'y company will sell excursion tickets to points in the south, southwest, west and northwest at one fare for the round trip. Tickets will be good thirty days from date of issue. Apply to ticket agents for full particulars. 38-41

Here are a few extracts from the editorial page of the Chicago Tribune, the leading republican newspaper in the west:

Tariff duties are taxes

Higher duties will increase the burdens put upon the millions.

The high duty is protecting the wool growers and robbing the people.

The increased duty on wool and woolen goods, as provided in McKinley's bill, will work hardship to all classes.

Two Doses.

G. W. Spellman, a prominent merchant of Elkhart, Ind., says: Two doses of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup completely cured my child of a severe attack of croup. I have used a great many different croup medicine but have never found any so efficient as Dr. Marshall's which makes it a very necessary article for the family.

Yours,
G. W. Spellman.

Chicago Inter-State Exposition.

1890.

The eighteenth annual exhibition of this organization will open Sept. 3 and close Oct. 18. Our information gives assurance that the preparatory work is completed. All the available space in the immense building is fully occupied. The novelty and high character of the exhibits in every department of industry, art and science make the exhibition, as a whole, seem more like a rehearsal for the world's fair than like an ordinary local event. The display of electric lights by the "Sun Electric" and the "Edison" companies surpasses anything of the sort heretofore seen in America, and is worth a journey to see. The art galleries contain the best collection ever made in this country, aggregating a value of nearly half a million of dollars.

All western railways transport passengers at excursion rates.

Auburn's Fair.

We had a big fair. That will not be denied, but the clerk of the weather did not do the fair thing by us, especially as this was our first one. There were showers and drizzly weather, and clouds, and but little sunshine the whole week. This made the track heavy, the ground damp, and kept many away who lived at a distance. Still the races were good, the attendance good under the circumstances, and the people enjoyed themselves fairly, when once in the ground. The great floral hall building was the comfort and admiration of all. It was filled to the rafters with exhibits and displays and presented a scene of activity and beauty. Many of our merchants had fine displays, and in connection with them, we shall mention such other exhibits all over the grounds, as we were able to get. In the floral hall we found the fine display of granite goods, by J. L. Davis. Then came Wilson's display of boots, shoes and rubbers, and his creamery machinery, such as butter workers, milk testers, cans, strainers etc., a very valuable display, and of vital interest to every farmer. F. J. Yesbera had fine silverware and jewelry making a brilliant display. Sheffer's harness display, his robes and similar goods called out much favorable comment. C. C. Shaffer, had the finest and costliest furniture ever seen here. A set of upholstered willow goods attracted a great deal of attention, especially from the ladies, who never tired of admiring them. Cowan Sisters had some of their nicest goods and fine work in millinery and fancy materials, all very lovely. Here, we saw a most wonderful bunch of flowers, or rather the flowers and plant. It was a Johnsonian lily, the property of I. O. Bachtel, with its scores of bright flowers, it was an object of special admiration. The great center of attraction was Flemming's display of flowers in bloom and beautiful plants. It was the first sight that struck the visitor on entering the hall at the main side entrance, and all stopped to admire. He got first premium on display, while Mrs. S. Z. Dickinson of Waterloo, received second. She also had a fine display. It was near the east end of the great hall, and presented a lovely appearance. We believe that both got some single premiums besides display, and also disposed of many choice plants to lovers of flowers in attendance. G. W. Stahl made a display of the White Sewing Machines, the only machines we noticed. The Auburn Church Furniture Co., had a good display of their fine wood work, such as seats, desks, tables and upholstered work. W. P. Harter & Co., had a handsome booth elegantly fitted up, and filled with lovely goods. They were the center of attraction for that part of the room, and included millinery and fancy goods, carpets, laces, ladies' cloaks, etc. The Eckhart Buggy Co., had a couple of their buggies in here, one, a light rig finished in white. Out on the grounds, however, was their chief display, where they had all styles of their fine work. J. I. Chaney showed fine pianos and organs, the Hallet & Davis and Kimball. Schaab Brothers had a magnificent booth of fine carpets, laces and expensive goods, such as sealskin sacques, some valued at $250. Hague & Raut had a big display of rubbers, boots and shoes. Davis & Husselman had the Geo. P. Bent organs and pianos, fine instruments. W. L. Meese had his Favorite Washers and wringers, as well as the iron storm thresholds. Geo. Stamets of Waterloo had a display of handles etc. A valuable exhibit was that of the Auburn Woolen Mills. They had yarns, flannels, skirtings, jeans and other cloth, and wool battings for comforters. All home made. J. T. Laugle showed a nice lot of Fischer pianos and Story & Camp organs. He spoke highly of the courtesies shown by the fair officers. D. Stutzman of Ligonier had patent bee hives. Tommy Knoder had fine work in horse shoes, also his minature blacksmith shop. Shaffer & Berg had horse shoes, and iron finishing work, shaved whippletrees etc., and out on the ground they had four fine farm wagons. About everything they had, got a premium. W. H. Bacher, Auburn, had fine turned work, such as neckyokes, canthook stocks, etc. Bacher & Stahl, also had a fine washing machine, which is bound to be a success. They will make them here, and people will have a chance to see their work. They got second premium, the Favorite getting first. The Eagle Foundry had cook and heating stoves, farm bells etc., all made at their foundry at the Junction. People looked in wonder at the fine work made right here at home. The display of fruit was small, but as large as could be expected this year. About half of it was by Daniel Thomas, who seems to be lucky this year. There was considerable canned fruit and a fair display of vegetables, Mr. Thomas getting 25 premiums in these classes, as well as first on heavy draft mare. Abel Brothers, got 11 firsts in 12 entries. They had the big squashes, one weighing 74 pounds. They also had tomatoes, cabbage etc. Brown & Culbertson had a big display of agricultural machinery, including the Empire binder, mower and drill, the McCormick binder and mower Buckeye drill, Thomas rakes and tedder, the Fremont, Wauseon, Malta, and the J. I. Case cultivators, the Flying Dutchman, and the J. I. Case riding plows, the South Bend and the Gibbs plows, Haworth check rower and the Russell and the Huber engines and separators. Their McCormick binder created quite an interest by running with only one horse attached, proving it a light running machine. J. N. Myers had a good line, including the Superior drills and cultivators, Advance thresher and engines, Scotch and lever harrows, Garland sulky plows, etc. S. Z Dickinson had a date tree raised from the seed, quite a curiosity, and many other fine plants and flowers. Smith & Madden had splendid work in monuments of marble and granite. Zimmerman & Co., the Monitor Co., and the Auburn Windmill Co., each had full displays of their work, and all excellent. Each had a windmill in actual operation, pumping water at different places on the grounds. The Auburn Foundry had a Gaar Scott engine and separator running, and the Eagle Foundry had specimens of their immense iron tubes for iron culverts. J. A. Potter took several premiums on his chickens, but we found other owners absent, and no cards on coops to show who were the owners. H. E. Richey had a number of nice buggies and a road cart made at his factory south of the jail. The Hammock Road cart, made by Kain & Rhinehart made a good show, and received many good words. In the display of needle work, we found some work of the old times. There was a piece of linen made by a grandmother of Mrs. D. S. Ober, in 1776; a sampler made by Mrs. Esther Little, mother of Mrs. Ed. Orr, in 1806; stockings in silk, made by T. J. Saxton's grandmother, 128 years ago. There were pillow cases made in 1782, and a sampler made in 1812 by a relative of Mrs. Reed, mother to Mrs. H. E. Coe. Fin Gibson had a display of fine cakes, etc., for the Weyer bakery. They got a number of premiums. In the horse exhibit there were 156 entries, all nice horses, we presume, but it is not very interesting for a visitor to walk along a half mile of neat stables, with the doors shut and locked. So we can give but few items. Michael Whetsell had a fine a colt as one could wish to see. He got a second premium on it in roadster class. A. D. Moore and son got 9 firsts and 2 seconds on Poland China hogs, 3 firsts being on one hog. Also on 7 head of short horns, got 5 first and 2 seconds. That's hard to beat. A. B. Walsworth had two Poland China hogs, and got a first on one, and second on the other; and on his short horn bull, got first.—that is, on everything he showed. Moore, Casebeer & Matheny, got fourth money on their Billy Morgan in 3 minute trot of nine horses. Phil Parnel could not bring any of his fine hogs, but he paid 25 cents for eight ears of seed corn, so as to be sure and have something for them to eat next year. Ed. Weeks showed the Champion binders and mowers, splendid machines, if we are able to judge. Fred. Yesbera had some fine Jerseys there, as did also G. I. Patterson. M. S. Kutzner and A. Lewis had fine Holsteins and got premiums. Irvin Lockwood showed two grade Galloways and two registered Aberdeens. He got first premium on every one. G. H. Dunn got 6 firsts and 3 seconds on his Holsteins as well as sweepstakes on milk breeds. He also got a number of premiums on his Shropshire sheep. Geo. Gilbert, Pleasant Lake a lot of prizes on his Galloways and a lot of them on his chickens. Jud. Baer got first on Jersey cow, and second on bull of same class. C. P. Glazier and C. C. Hoffman, showed fine Jerseys and Holsteins. A. R. Spencer, Rockport, O., had a lot of fine Ayrshires. He is a relative of Mr. Spencer who used to be in business at Waterloo. Lockwood & Clark got both first and second premiums in heavy draft imported horses, and second on French Coach horse. They also took a dozen or more premiums on colts belonging to their patrons. J. M. Brumbeck got the premium on Clydesdales, and Cleveland Bays, and on a number on Southdown sheep. C. Brouse had many premiums on fine wools and on hogs. Ed. Wise, east of Auburn, got a number of premiums in Hampshire downs and Jerseys. J. E. Walter had fine Liecestershire and Hampshire sheep, getting 13 firsts and 7 seconds. C. S. Norris, Frontier, Mich., had fine American Merinos, ten in all, getting 2 firsts, 2 seconds and sweepstakes. In fine art hall, Walter Hartman, had Indian curiosities; Mrs. Wm. McIntyre curiosities in minerals and shells; Willie Campbell had a valuable collection of birds' eggs, and elsewhere a fine fishing rod, which he had made. Marion Willis had a collection of butterflies; Mrs. A. J. Little had some beautiful pictures in pastel work, as did also Etta Heist. Edna Davis, Mrs. Tillie McCord, Mrs. Frank Hogue, Mrs. W. H. McQuiston, Laura Ober and Claude Benedict had fine oil paintings; Alza Ralston had a beautiful fire screen; Mabel Hartman and Mr. Barron, had specimens of crayon work; Mrs. McMichael, of Manton, Mich., a sister to Mrs. G. H. Yesbera, had a nice oil painting; Rice had a big display of photo work. In all we are told there were 175 entries in this department. F. M. Landis of the City Gallery also, had fine photo work, making a good exhibit of various styles of art in his line. Most of those we have named, we believe, drew premiums. G. S. McCord had a valuable and interesting collection of stuffed animals in this room; deer, herons, loons, owls, squirrels, and a case of birds, that proved a scientific puzzle, seeming to show the same birds changing to other kinds. This was caused by mirrors that separated four different kinds of birds. It was as fine a thing as we ever saw. Mrs. Rallie Schaab had very fine work, and got 5 first, and 1 second premium. There were many entries by parties from Waterloo, especially in ladies' departments. Among them were Mrs. W. H. Leas, Mrs. Brysland, Mrs. J. G. Johnson and others whose names we did not get. The whole display was fine. In spite of unfavorable weather, the tickets sold will foot about $3,200, and privileges about $800,—$4,000 in all. The premium list will be about $2,500, and after paying running expenses, there may be a few hundred dollars left.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly

For October, 1890. A portrait of Speaker Reed, and a full-page picture of the ways and means committee of the house, which formulated the McKinley tariff bill, are included among the illustrations accompanying an interesting and spicy article on "The House of Representatives," by Frederick S. Daniel, in the October number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. A powerful poem, "The Cyclone," by Joaquin Miller, is dedicated "to the destroyers of forests." James Ricalton describes Simla, the summer capital of India; and Pierre Morand contributes some highly entertaining reminiscences of foreign residents and old times, in New York City. Other illustrated articles are, "Life in Bologna," by Herbert Pierson; "Haruko, of Japan; the Oriental Empress and her Court," by Eliza Ruhamah Scidmore; "Fish-culture at Lake Sunapee, N. H.," by Frederic M. Dey; and "Tails, and the Services they Perform," by Ernest Ingersoll. Beyond the End," Professor Boutelle's new serial story, begins in this number.

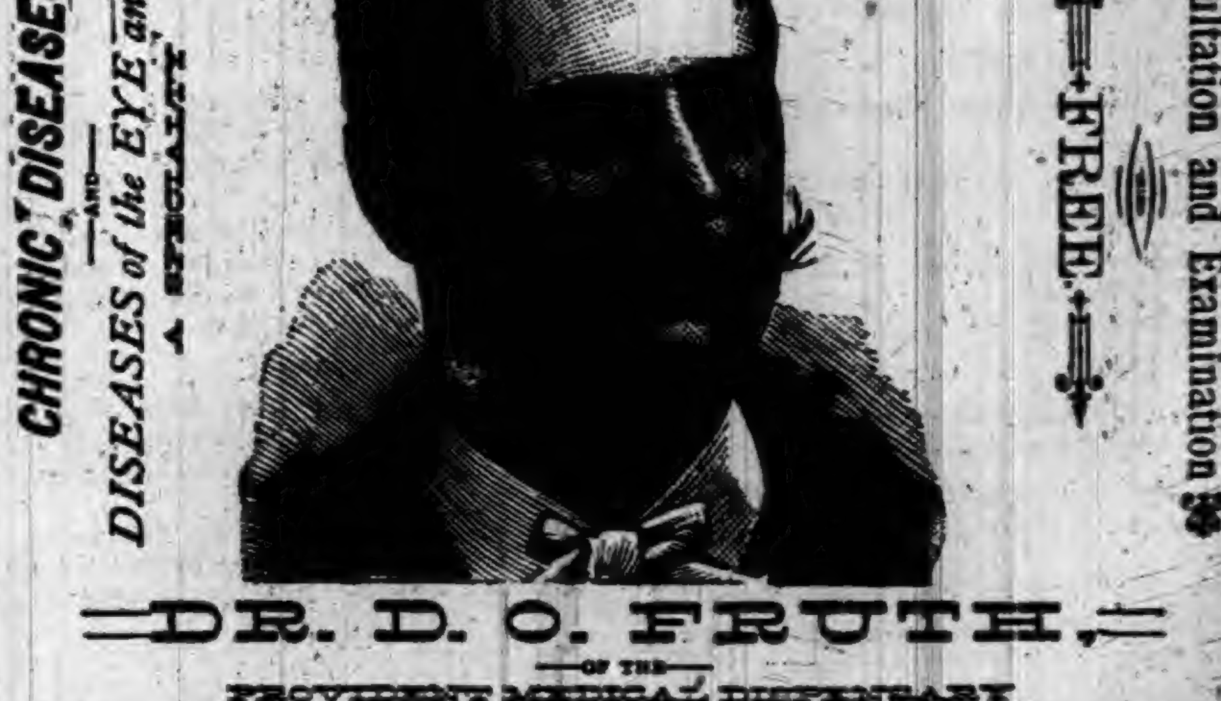
DR. FRUTH,

Of New York, the well known and successful Specialist in Chronic Diseases, and diseases of the Eye and Ear by request of many friends and patients, has decided to visit

AUBURN, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1890.

Consultation and Examination free and confidential in his parlors at the SWINEFORD HOUSE from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. One day only.



DR. D. O. FRUTH,

OF THE

PROVIDENT MEDICAL DISPENSARY,

NEW YORK CITY,

Ably assisted by a full corps of competent physicians and surgeons, treats with unparalleled success all Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood diseases of every nature upon the latest scientific principles. He particularly invites all whose cases have been neglected, badly treated or pronounced incurable. Patients who are doing well under the care of their own physicians need not call on us, as our province is to treat those who cannot find relief otherwise. No money required of responsible parties to commence treatment.

Common Sense as Applied to Medicine. It is well known by all intelligent observers that it is impossible for any person, no matter how highly endowed by nature or acquirements, to become thoroughly conversant with all the divisions of the science of medicine. Nearly all who have obtained distinction in medicine have made some special department their life work, being fitted therefor by natural adaption or selection, special education and experience. The doctor having devoted several years to the special study of chronic diseases in hospitals and general practice, and having the most recent and improved instruments for finding out diseased conditions in the organs of the body, he proposes to devote the whole of his time to the practice of these specialties.

He adopts the following plan, which is peculiar to the large hospitals, and is not and never has been the practice of country doctors, viz.: He carefully notes the symptoms of the patient, ascertains the condition of the internal organs, examines the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat by the most recent and approved instruments and methods, all of which he carefully records in his register for future reference. In this way he ascertains the true nature of the disease and its cause. Knowing the disease, he knows the changes it produces in the tissues, and, knowing the changes, he checks them with specific remedies, and places his patient on the high road to recovery. When sick people consult him he readily tells them whether he can cure or help them, or if they are beyond hope.

The examinations are in accordance with anatomical and physical science, as he will convince the most skeptical. By an examination he will convince anyone of the nature and extent of disease, amount of danger to life, and chance of a perfect cure. Believing that science is truth and "truth is mighty and will prevail" when known, and knowing that disease can be cured with positive certainty, he invites the afflicted to call and receive advice free and be cured of their diseases.

There is no subject that requires so much study and experience as the treatment and cure of chronic diseases. The astonishing success and remarkable cures performed by him is due to a thorough knowledge of the structure and functions of the human system, and the cure of diseases by natural remedies. Let those given up by others call for examination. He has successfully treated the following diseases since his arrival in this State: Eye and Ear diseases, Chronic Diarrhœa, Chronic Inflammation of the Womb, Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, Painful or Irregular Menstruation, Fever Sores and Ulcers, Incontinence of Urine, Tape Worms, Crooked Limbs and Enlarged Joints, Spinal Curvatures, Club Foot, Hip Joint Disease, White Swelling, Discharging Abscesses, Sterility or Barrenness, Nervousness and General Debility, Impotency, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Leucorrhea or Whites, Blotches, Pimples, Skin Diseases, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Dropsy, Cancer, Epileptic Fits, Erysipelas, Gravel, Goitre, Gleet, Gonorrhoea, Hydrocele, Heart Disease, Headache, Piles, Hysteria, Syphillis, St. Vitus Dance, Chronic Dysentery, Enlarged Tonsils, Fistula in Ano, Hernia or Rupture, Ovarian Tumors, Paralysis, Prolapsus Uteri, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Scrofula, Consumption, Chronic Cough, Female Weakness, Spermatorrhoea, Rheumatism, etc. All surgical operations performed.

Curing of Piles guaranteed. Will give $1,000 for any case of failure. No money required of responsible parties.

Young Men who through ignorance or the careless exuberance of youthful spirits, have been unfortunate and find themselves in danger of losing their health and embittering their after lives may call with full confidence.

DR. FRUTH—Has attained the most wonderful success in the treatment of the cases to which he devotes his special attention. After years of experience he has discovered the most infallible method of curing weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, loss of memory, trembling and timidity, diseases of the nose, throat and lungs, affections of the liver, stomach and bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary habits of youth and secret practices, blighting the most radiant hopes and rendering marriage impossible.

Epilepsy, or Fits, positively cured by a new and never-failing method.

Private Diseases.—Blood Poison, Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. No risks incurred. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Medicine sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

Middle Aged Men, who find their vigor and vitality weakened by the traces of old complaints and their bodies racked with pain at a time when they should spend their declining years in peace and comfort, should consult Dr. Fruth at once and find the sympathy and relief you positively require. His cures are thorough and permanent.

Diseases of Women.—We shall continue as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration and skill the diseases peculiar to women. Our operations for Fistula, Ruptured Cervix Uteri, Ruptured Perineum, and for Stricture of the Cervical Canal, a condition resulting in Sterility, have been alike gratifying both to ourselves and our patients.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Remarkable Cures perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failure. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible personal consultation preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. List of questions free. Western Address, DR. FRUTH, Toledo, Ohio.

REFERENCES—We, the undersigned, do cheerfully and conscientiously recommend Dr. Fruth as a gentleman of rare professional ability, ripe in judgment, humane to a fault, considerate in price and enthusiastic in relief of his fellow men, and we therefore urge the afflicted to avail themselves of his superior skill:—Granville M. Weeks, M. D., L. L. D., President Provident Dispensary, N. Y.; T. Meredith Maxwell, A. M., M. D., N. Y.; Orrin Pomeroy, M. D., N. Y.; V. M. Davis, M. D., N. Y.; W. E. White, M. PILES, PILES, PILES: Loose's Red Clover Pile Remedy, is a positive specific for all forms of the disease. Blind, bleeding, itching, ulcerated and protrupiles. Price 50c. For sale by F. E. Davenport.

The use of calomel for derangements of the liver has ruined many a fine constitution. Those who, for similar troubles, have tried Ayer's Pills testify to their efficacy in thoroughly remedying the malady, without injury to the system.

L. H. Klotz and Sanford Smith, of Waterloo were among those who attended the fair Friday. Mr. Smith lost heavily by the fire that destroyed the mill owned by him and J. P. McCague, as mentioned in last week's COURIER. But he has the pluck, and will likely rebuild.

English Spavin Liniment removes all hard, soft, or calloused lumps and blemishes from horses, blood spavin, curbs, splints, sweeny, ring-bone, stifles, all swollen throats, coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle, warranted. The most wonderful blemish cure known. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Indiana. tf

We are sorry to see that in our report of the institute in last week's issue, we forgot to mention the lecture of Mr. Wendling on Friday evening. It was all the more to be regretted, as we consider it the best thing of the whole week's work. It was grand in every way, and from all points of view, the best lecture ever given at any institute in this county. Mr. Wendling is a master of oratory and a genius in the matter of original thought.

The Waterloo Press of last week has this strange note: "We understand that Ex-Judge McBride expects the nomination as judge on the ticket, provided the necessary funds can be obtained for campaign purposes." Now what we wish to ask is, how can it be shown that money is needed to secure the election of an impartial judge? The Press gave away the campaign subscription matter last election, but has lately been engaged in denying it all. But a republican campaign without boodle would be a flat affair.

It sometimes occurs that some young men deem it highly essential, decidedly humorous and practically advantageous to keep the community in awe and doubt as to the time they took flight from the sweet, ambrosial bowers of single blessedness, to link their lives and prospects with the tender, wooing influence of some fair maid o' the land. It also happens that the inky printer does not always get the correct dates in his hymeneal report. The result is, someone will bounce around the terpsichorean circle in the crude imitation of a Sioux Indian with his war paint on—wanting to kill the printer for being such a careless manipulator of the truth, thereby hoodooing the boys out of the coveted cigars that were to have been theirs on that occasion. The COURIER last week contained the notice of Cal. Day's marriage to Miss Clara Voss, of Waterloo. Cal. says that the report is in error, he having enjoyed sweet matrimony for several weeks. The boys lost their cigars—the rest you can imagine to suit your own pleasure, inclinations and convenience. We are pleased to welcome Mr. Day and his estimable wife as citizens of our bright little city.

See notice of Landis the photographer.

Hicksville fair Sept. 23. Always have a good time.

Miss Blanche Nichols, of St. Joe, is visiting with Miss Jennie Askew.

The new paper started last week, but so far we have not had time to look it over.

The Monitor Company lately put up a 14-foot windmill for parties who wanted it for power.

The Misses Berowned, of Ft. Wayne, were in this city a part of last week taking in the sights and visiting the family of B. F. Stahl, the south end barber.

J. C. Miller did a good business in candy and popcorn at his uptown stand all the week of the fair. He gives good measure when it comes to warm candy.

Walborn is putting down a cement sidewalk along by the photo gallery of L. Rice, on West Seventh street. This will complete the entire line on that side.

An ammonia tank in the ice factory at Ft. Wayne exploded last week and the stuff ran into the St. Mary killing all the fish for some distance. They lay along the banks in piles.

Mrs. John Geisler, mother of Mrs. Ed. Smith of this place is lying very sick at her home at Corunna. Her friends are quite alarmed about her. Later reports are that she is improving.

O. C. Clark, of Altona, was here at the fair. He has just returned from a visit to the old home in Onondaga county, N. Y. He brings back many items from the old-time neighbors and friends.

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

Among the Albion people who attended the fair last Friday were J. J. Martin and son Herbie, Charles Clapp and wife, and Elsa Shaffer and wife. They all had a chance to visit briefly their many friends over here.

Miss Woodhull will be in Auburn tomorrow and next day, Friday and Saturday, to meet her pupils in music and begin the regular lessons. Anyone wishing any information can meet her at Mrs. Don Garwood's.

Last week we received a paper, "The Daviess County Democrat" published at Washington in that county, and marked "Frank F. Leas." This is the first news, we believe that has been received from him in several years.

Dr. Breeding of Glasgow, Ky., says: "My chickens are thriftier, healthier, finer, and larger, and have beautiful plumage since I began using Ganter's Magic Chicken Cholera Cure." Sold by Robbins & McCord.

Prof. Horace A. Hoffman was here for a day last week at his old home, then went on to take charge of his work as Greek professor at Bloomington. His summer in Greece will be valuable to him in his work at the University.

I am compelled to collect my book accounts, and to all those who call at the office and settle with me I will deduct the expense of a collector. I must have this matter attended to by October 1st. Dr. W. H. Nusbaum. 38

Hank Lesh enjoyed himself at the fair where he had charge of the J. L. Davis exhibit. The boys do say, he can roast more potatoes on that fine gasolene stove than any professional French cook could possibly do. And the boys ought to know.

Trentman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

Chicago Herald: The present congress has already created 1,161 new offices at a salary of $1,235,406 a year, and it is not yet done. The spoils system, as generously and vigorously applied by Harrison, is so good a thing that it inevitably leads to an increase of the spoils.

Samuel McEnterfer, son of Simon McEnterfer, who used to live north of Waterloo, was back here last week. They are located in Russell county, Kansas, and are all doing well. All the sons and daughters are married. Mr. M's wife came part way home with him stopping to visit relatives in Missouri.

Fort Wayne News: Dr. E. L. Siver, captain of the Summit City Division Uniform Rank K. of P. received a notice from Angola stating that he had been made master of military ceremonies for the grand dedication of the Pythian hall at Angola October 14. It will be one of the prominent events in Pythian circles in Indiana. Divisions from Bryan, O., Butler and Garrett, Ind., will be in attendance.

Samuel Pepple started away again on Monday, after an extended visit with his people here. He went from here to St. Louis, and will likely have a situation as engineer on one of the Southwestern roads. His long experience will secure him a place almost anywhere. But he don't care to go back onto the Mexican railways, preferring to stay in his own country. Mr. Pepple is a young man of unusual ability, and is brimful of valuable information.

Isaac Cobler and wife came back last week from Allegan county, Mich., for a two weeks visit with the old friends here. Miss Etta Thomas, daughter of Uriah Thomas came with them. They were here in time to see the fair. They report everything up there as in fine shape. Mr. Cobler, had been up in Benzie county, with his father. They went up to see his brother Griffith Cobler, who was getting ready to move to southern Oregon, where he is now located. They did not get to see James Draggoo, who happened to be absent at that time. Mr. Cobler likes the Michigan country well, and will remain there.

Big show at Waterloo.

The Dispatch calls Green Smith a usurper. What did he usurp?

David Luttman, near Corunna, has had an increase of pension.

The French & Co's, big show is at Waterloo next Wednesday, Sept. 24.

Baker & Stahl are going into the manufacture and sale of their new washers.

Mr. and Mrs. Haskin, of Butler, spent several days the guests of W. B. Brown's family.

The Misses Tomlinson, of Butler, sisters of Mrs. Ernest Sheets were here to see our big fair.

The new cement walk at the school grounds, is a great improvement and the pupils appreciate it.

Miss Minnie Finch has returned to her home at Corunna, after a stay of several weeks with friends in Auburn.

A sister of Mrs. Eli Cochran, Miss Shook, who has been here some weeks, returned to her home at Corunna Tuesday.

W. H. Dills went to Ft. Wayne Tuesday to pay a visit to his brother, Dr. T. J. Dills. He will also take a look at the fair.

E. J. Coder, now a resident of Cleveland, was back last week. He met many of his old neighbors, especially on the fair ground.

J. S. Burpee, of Oakland, Cal., has been here a few days visiting the family of James Griswold. He is a brother of Mrs. Griswold,

The nickel social of the M. E. church will meet with Mrs. Albert Robbins next Friday afternoon, A very cordial invitation is extended to all.

Miss. Mattie Buchanan, of Concord, visited over Sunday in town with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rush, and her young friends.

Get your big corn, fine wheat, big pumpkins, garden sass, fine arts, fast horses, fat cattle and hogs ready to take the premiums at the Waterloo fair.

The Dispatch says Judge McBride's term in the district "was marked with rare ability." Yet the voters repudiated him in a district about 800 in his favor.

Mrs. Dr. Sears, of Quincy, Mich., and J. W. McCrory and wife, of Angola, were here at the fair. Both ladies are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Shaffer, and have many friends in Auburn.

MARRIED: At the residence of the officiating clergyman, W. L. Meese, in Auburn Sept. 11, 1890, Mr. Alva Washler to Miss Nancy Kester, both of this county. The COURIER sends congratulations.

H. E. Little, editor of the Garrett Bologna, showed up several days at the fair in a state of blear-eyed drunkenness. He managed somehow to keep in the buggy, but as the fellow in Holden's Comedy Company sang, it was "The same thing over again."

Mrs. Sherman Dickinson got back last week from her trip to attend the reunion at the Deaf and Dumb asylum at Indianapolis. There were over 200 in attendance and all had a very pleasant time. A Miss Coe, a schoolmate, now a teacher at the Institute came back with her.

Miss Della Weaver takes charge of the children who attend the ward school in the north part of town. Children of the lowest grades, who reside north of Fifth street will attend at that building. It has been neatly fitted and is in good shape. We believe the plan of putting these children there will prove a wise one.

John Kruger and wife, together with their son John and their daughter Mrs. H. J. Mossey, are off on a ten days' trip to Detroit, Toledo and Wyandotte, as well as other points near the great lakes. They will have a pleasant trip, at least we hope so. Mr. Kruger is now out of business, having sold the grocery store to Mr. Mossey, who will continue the business in the same room.

Mrs. W. J. Hillegass, of Muncie, is here, the guest of Mrs. Capt. Silver, who is an old-time friend. Mrs. Hillegass' husband is editor of the Muncie Herald, and was a prominent candidate before the democratic convention for secretary of state. He is a most worthy man, and Mrs. H is a lady of more than average refinement and intelligence. She will return to her home next week.

J. P Ensley started back to California yesterday, to his home at Ontario. He has been here with the old friends since April, and found many warm hearts to greet him, all of whom wish him a happy future in the land of his choice. He has substantial property interests out there and is prospering. His little son will remain here with Joseph Stafford's family.

A nice bath tub is on exhibition at the store room lately occupied by Louis Lemle. It is so arranged that it can be folded up and stood in one corner or at one side of a room, and so occupy no more space than a chair. It is of usual size, however, and so arranged that one can take a hot or cold bath or a Turkish vapor bath. The water is heated by a small gasolene stove, which is also enclosed in the case into which the whole apparatus is folded, when not in use. It is the best arrangement we ever saw for the purpose, and the fact that it can be moved makes it more desirable to those who reside in rented houses, as it can be moved easily, should they desire to change location. It is in charge of Dr. W. S. Depew, of Grand Rapids, Mich., but is manufactured at North Manchester. Wabash county. The establishment could easily be secured to come to Auburn, we believe if proper inducements could be held out to them, as they are not able to get proper facilities where they now are. Our business men should look to this and secure the plant, if possible. Dr. Depew will remain here till Saturday, and in the meantime, all who can should call early and have him show them the new bath tub.

"Two Old Pals," next Monday.

St. Joe G. A. R. will hold a big camp fire Sept. 27.

Remember the Opera House, Friday and Monday.

Read what our Butler correspondent says about the Auburn fair.

Miss Susie Sowle and aunt, of Angola, came down to see the fair last Friday.

Mrs. George Lanning and little daughter Bertha, are off on an extended visit with friends at Salem, Ohio.

Miss Hellreigle, of New York, is visiting Miss Mary Young. She will remain several weeks.

Miss Carrie Ortman, and Misses Josie and Kittie Raab of Ft. Wayne, have returned home, after a week's visit with Maggie Snyder at her home at DeKalb.

Some of our heretofore staid citizens came out of the fair with more experience than before, owing to their fancy for betting on another man's game.

The children of the Presbyterian church will give a picnic on the fair grounds Saturday forenoon. They will take their dinners and appetites along.

Flemming, at the greenhouse now has all kinds of vegetables ready for market, cauliflower, cabbage, celery, etc. Call on him and he will deliver at your homes.

'Squire Ralston had the case of Trentman vs Cartright before him Tuesday. The latter had threatened to stab Trentman with a knife. Fine $5 and costs, about $20 in all.

Mr. and Mrs. Shoemaker, of Decatur, Ill., were here over Sunday, the guests of Drs. Swartz. They are the parents of Harry Swartz' wife, and are quite prominent citizens in their home town.

The town is putting down a cement crossing from the Swineford House across Main street to the First National Bank. A good idea. They are also making one north of the public square Another good idea.

Mrs. D. Y. Husselman has been several weeks up at Petoskey, but went away so quietly that even the sharp eyed COURIER reporter did not find it out. It is the annual pilgrimage she makes for relief from hay fever.

The famous and popular H. Miller Howard's "Two Old Pals" company will be at the Opera House next Monday. Said to be one of the best things now on the road. A leading feature is the popular comedienne Miss Nellie Esmond.

Several of our citizens expect to go up beyond Petoskey next week to hunt and fish. Clerk Bishop, John Leasure, J. A. Potter, Will Stimely, G. C. Ralston, C. B. Weaver, J. S. Boots and possibly Dr. Watson and others are to be of the party.

Mrs. Fanny Smith and granddaughter Fanny Casebeer, started for Ohio yesterday. Mrs. Smith will visit friends at Canton. Miss Casebeer will soon return and after spending a few days with friends in Chicago, will go to Omaha, Nebraska, to be present at the wedding of Miss Ada Austin, daughter of John W. Austin, who formerly resided here.

Among the attractions in the forthcoming number of Harper's Bazar (published September 19th), will be a story by Kate Upson Clark, entitled "Solly: A Story of a Gentleman"; Miss Elizabeth Bisland's fourth paper on "An American Woman's First Season in London"; and a new chapter on bird-lore, entitled "The Scarlet Tanager's Nest," by Olive Thorne Miller.

That indefatigable Shakespearian scholar and editor, Dr. William J Rolfe, has prepared a new edition of Shakespeare's Poems, which will soon be issued by Harper & Brothers. This will be the first thoroughly annotated edition of the poems published in this country. The notes will embrace the results of the late investigations and discoveries relative to the history of the sonnets, together with much bibliographical and other information of great value to the Shakespearian student. The text of all the poems is given without ommission or expurgation.

The Press about three weeks ago, brought out the case of a Waterloo resident as a sample of how men get rich on a high tariff tax. The German named he had said picked up quite a property, in a short time since coming to the land of high tariff. The fact now leaks out that the man brought about $300 from Germany, and has only paid about $100 on his house, and still owes the rest. He has had employment a few months at $1.25 a day from the Lake Shore road. But it appears he got along about the same in Germany. In fact Germany is a high tax country, and perhaps it was by paying those high taxes that he managed to accumulate $300.

The Queen Pays all Expenses.

The Queen's last "Free Trip to Europe" having excited such universal interest, the publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 extra for expenses, to the person sending them the largest list of English words constructed from letters contained in the three words "British North America." Additional prizes consisting of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Gold Watches, French Music Boxes, Portiere Curtains, Silk Dresses, Mantel Clocks, and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a sealskin jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland pony to girl or boy (delivered free in Canada or United States) sending the largest lists. Send six U. S. 2c. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample number of The Queen. Address The Canadian Queen, Toronto Canada.

Great Kendallville Fair.

The famous Kendallville Fair this year opens on Monday, Sept. 29th and closes Friday, Oct. 3d. More features of genuine public entertainment will be crowded into these five days than has ever before been attempted by this popular and successful agricultural association. Soldiers' Day, this year, occurs on Oct. 1st, and it will be, as has truthfully been said by the Chicago Tribune and Toledo Commercial, a soldiers' gathering unequaled in the history of Northern Indiana. Gen. R. A. Alger, ex-Commissioner-in-Chief the Grand Army of the Republic, will positively be present and address his old comrades, whose friendship and respect he so valiantly won on the fields of war. Hon. Clem. Studebaker, the senior member of one of the greatest manufacturing industries of the world, and other prominent public men have promised to be present. On this day all honorably discharged soldiers will have full freedom of the grounds. All departments of the great fair have been enlarged and improved, new buildings added, and all accommodations increased for every manner of exhibits. The stock show promises to be the largest and most varied ever exhibited in the State, the horses including such famous stallions as Wilkeswood, Bassett M., etc. Special trains on the L. S. & M. S., G. R. & I. and B. & O. R'ys have been secured at very low rates. 37 39

Grand Opening

THE Pope has forbidden Catholics to cremate their dead.

AMONG the legal firms in Lansing, Mich., is one whose title is "Judge Lucas and Wife, Attorneys."

A BELL, cast recently for the Kharkow Cathedral, contains 68 per cent. of pure silver. It weight 646 English pounds, and its vibrations last several minutes.

THE Associated Press has given instructions to its telegraph operators to learn the manipulation of the typewriter, as it is found that the instrument materially increases the speed of receiving messages.

"SOMETIMES," writes a correspondent of a trade paper, "I have had to make holes in steel that was too hard to cut easily. Then I make a mixture that will cut a hole. I mix one ounce of sulphate of copper, quarter of an ounce of alum, half a teaspoonful of powdered salt, a gill of vinegar and twenty drops of nitric acid. This will make a hole."

IN Marion County, Ga., a man dreamed the other night that hogs got in his cornfield. The hogs ran under an old gin house, where there was only one small hole as an outlet, and he was there kicking to keep them from coming out. When he waked he was standing on the floor kicking the wall, with his big toe broken and his ankle badly sprained.

PRINCE LOUIS, of Battenberg, formerly took a fancy to the career of a printer, and became so far a master of his profession as to set up type in a highly commendable fashion. Subsequently, when the star of Battenberg rose to its zenith in the political firmament, Prince Louis relinquished his unpretentious calling and became an officer in the British Navy. A short time ago, when serving on the Dreadnought, it occurred to him to turn his early training to account, so he printed a history of the Dreadnought and presented a copy to each of his shipmates.

THE Count of Paris in a personal letter to a friend in New York speaks of his approaching visit to America and says: "I come as a former soldier of the Army of the Potomac to see our battle-fields, and to see how my old friends are doing. Having been with the United States in some of the darkest hours of their history, it will be a pleasure to me to witness their present happiness and prosperity." So far so good. As an ex-soldier of the Union army the Count is welcome. But when he speaks of the United States he should speak of the Nation in the singular.

IN the Berlin law courts a person who was "caught red-handed" has been proceeded against for stealing roses from a prettily decorated grave. The accused produced in court a copy of the inscription on the tablet over the grave, which runs as follows: "Traveler, pause a moment at this spot and pluck a rose in remembrance of what I was." The defendant, on the strength of this, contended that he was acting simply in accordance with the expressed wishes of the deceased, but the Judge thought otherwise. He said the inscrption stated plainly that the traveler was to pluck a rose, and not a handful of roses and he therefore pronounced the defendant guilty.

JESSE JAMES, JR., is evidently a lad to whom the admirers of his distinguished father may turn with high hopes for his future. He is a bright boy of 13 and already takes an intelligent interest in crime that is quite surprising for a lad of his years. Train robberies, especially, are his delight. He is perfectly familiar with the exploits of his father, the places and dates of which he can rattle off as readily as his a, b, cs. His mind is stored with the history of the James and Younger brothers and accounts of contemporaneous train robberies he reads with absorbing interest. With his inherited bent of mind and precocious interest in crime, he promises to rival his illustrious father and it is not apt to be wondered at that he is regarded with pride and hope by the latter's admirers.

PROBABLY the last survivor of the soldiers who helped to garrison Fort Fish, in 1814-15, is Col. Charles B. Tappan, of New York, who marched out to McGowan's Pass in the company which Thomas Addis Emmett commanded, and, like all the youth of the period, was as ready to work on the glacis with the shovel as to shoulder a musket and watch out for red coats. The only trouble with this youthful veteran of ninety-five is that he prefers to talk of what he will do next year to telling of what he did seventy or eighty years ago. Only recently this hale survivor of Fort Fish took it into his head that he would like to visit California, and resisting all entreaties to take a valet, or wait for friends, he started out alone with the physique of sixty, and the heart of twenty, on his voyage of exploration.

SEVERAL California papers recently contained a matrimonial appeal, signed by "a young and beautiful Hungarian maiden, an orphan without means, but well educated and with domestic tendencies, who seeks a companion for life." The answers were to be directed to Paris, where the young lady was employed as a nurse. Incredible as it may appear a dozen offers from marriageable young 'Frisconians came over the sea. A lively correspondence ensued, and finally each of the wooers received an exquisite photograph and an affirmative answer from the beautiful Hungarian maiden, with the request that the lover should send the necessary cash for a transatlantic passage ticket. The swindler or syndicate of swindlers, netted 6,000 marks in all by the trick. And now the prospective bridegrooms, among whom are some well-known names, dare not whisper their misery.

T. DE WITT TALMAGE is the most popular preacher in the world. He preaches to a very large congregation outside his church, for his sermons are reported in thousands of papers in two hemispheres, and he makes as much from the newspapers as he does from his regular church salary. When he first came to Brooklyn, the newspapers used to ridicule his eccentricities, and criticise his style and manner. But Talmage has long since ceased to be a target for the funny man. He has taken his place as the most popular preacher in the world, and there is no one to share his eminence. But Talmage is neither graceful nor handsome. Neither is he a profound thinker. But he appeals directly to the popular heart, and talks in terms that are easily understood. He is full of tropes and metaphors, and his style is florid and dramatic. No one has ever been known to go to sleep in his church. It is impossible.

A CURIOUS old ceremony was lately performed by the Worshipful Girdlers in London, by which a new master of the guild was crowned. After the crowning ripe mulberries were plucked from a fine tree in a garden belonging to the guild. The Girdlers' Company, it may be mentioned, seems to have owed its origin to a lay brotherhood of the Order of St. Lawrence, who maintained themselves by the making of girdles, and voluntarily associated for the purpose of mutual protection and for the regulation of the trade which they practiced. This regulation extended to the power of seeking for bad work, and when found, of having it burnt. Instances are on record of the exercise of the right of search and of the imposition of fines upon the delinquents. The subsequent disuse of the girdle, which was formerly an important article of costume, has made the trade obsolete as a separate craft for the last two centuries. The company was first incorporated by a charter of Edward III., granted in 1327, conferred by Henry VI. in 1449.

DURING one month the soldier who does patrol duty about "Old Faithful" geyser in Yellowstone Park, picked up pocket handkerchiefs enough about the bowl of the geyser to last him a lifetime, and suppiy all his near relatives beside. More singular still all these handkerchiefs came out of the geyser; half a dozen are sometimes thrown out at a single eruption of the hot water. They gush up with the roaring fountain to a height of 150 feet in the air, and fall on the steaming rocks outside the bowl. This seeming phenomenon is explained easily enough. The handkerchiefs are originally dropped into the geyser by tourists—mostly lady tourists—and in violation of the law which forbids putting any foreign substance in the hot fountains. It is quite the custom to put handkerchiefs into "Old Faithful," for its waters contain some substance which acts like soap and cleans the worst soiled handkerchief. Then there is the fun of seeing it spouted out. It is usual to tie the handkerchief into knots, the better to insure their being thrown out, but even the geyser takes large tolls. Sometimes it keeps an entire batch, and it usually retains two or three out of every half dozen. These tolls are quite apt to be cast up later on, and here is where the soldier, who makes the rounds early every morning, reaps his harvest, for "Old Faithful" spouts regularly every sixty-five minutes, and during the night has had time to disgorge what it has retained.

The Indian Problem.

A teacher in an Indian Reservation recently told a story which has not been included in the official reports.

A young Omaha man, the son of a chief, who had graduated at one of the Eastern schools for Indian youth, spent two years on the Reservation with his tribe, in vain efforts to use the training which he had received for their benefit or his own. Then he returned to the East and married a Sioux girl, a hereditary enemy of his tribe, but also a graduate of the same school, and the married pair disappeared from view for several months.

When discovered they were found in a snug little dwelling in a suburb of Philadelphia. The husband was working as a conductor on a horse-car, and the wife had opened a little candy-shop. They were busy, happy, and gay; they had their pew in a neighboring church, they subscribed to a library, they went to a concert sometimes in winter, and to the park often in summer.

"But this," said the philanthropist who visited them, "this is all very well, but it is not the way we proposed to settle the Indian problem!"

"It is an odd way," said the young son of the savage Omaha chief. "But is it not as good a way as any?"—Youth's Companion.

"Hit Me, Too."

A certain genial old Bostonian, who is a gentleman of leisure, likes nothing better than to watch the sports of children and contrive pleasant surprises for them. The Transcript tells this story about him:

At one time, while loitering near the border of the pond in the Public Garden, which is not far from his residence, Mr. B—— observed several small boys on the curbstone, in stooping postures, paddling the water with their hands. The temptation to tap the back of one of these bending urchins was great, and Mr. B—— did tap one briskly. The boy straightened up like a flash, looked around and called out:

"What did you strike me for, sir?"

"So that you might rise and take this piece of money, my lad," said the old man, handing him a dime.

The boy, entirely appeased, grinned broadly. And instantly all the other boys flocked up to Mr. B——, each one shouting at the top of his voice:

"Say, mister, hit me, will yer, mister?"

SPRINGER TO FARMERS.

HE TELLS WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH THE FARMERS.

The Great Depression that He Found in New York State and His Explanation of It—Why the Home Market Fails to Make the Farmer Prosperous.

I have been talking to the farmers this week in regard to the effect that the tariff has upon them, and I will endeavor to point out some things which came under my observation. I found they were very attentive to their business, and I have been greatly surprised to find so much agricultural depression in the rural districts. The values of the farms have depreciated within the last five, ten, or fifteen years one-half on the average, sometimes much more. Numerous instances were pointed out to me showing that farms sold under mortgage brought only one-third and even one-fourth of their value some years ago. Farms are heavily mortgaged as a rule, and I was informed by a gentleman in Broome County, N. Y., that of the farm mortgages foreclosed there were not five per cent. of them that sold for enough to pay the debt, in other words, the mortgagee had to take the farm for less than the amount of the mortgage.

It is very important that the farmers should understand the cause of this depression. The leading Republicans are trying to discover some plausible reason outside of the effect of the protective tariff. Senator Warner Miller said a few days ago in a speech at Oswego that overproduction was the cause of agricultural depression. Nothing could be further from the truth or more absurd, and every farmer knows that there is no overproduction of his product. The reason is simply this: The farmers of the United States can produce more of the products of the farms than can be consumed in this country. The surplus must be sold abroad. The price at which the surplus is sold abroad fixes the price of the home product. When a farmer sells his products, whether he sells to his next-door neighbor, to the elevator man, to the commission merchant, or whether he ships it to New York, he sells at the price fixed in New York, less the cost of carrying it there and commission, and the New York market is fixed by the Liverpool market, which is the cheapest free trade market in the world. There the products of the farmers of this country come in direct competition with the products of Russia, Germany, France, Italy, India, and all the countries of the world, and in competition with all the pauper labor of the world.

How is it when he comes to buy what he needs to support his family and keep his farm going? He must buy in this home market, this protective market, the dearest market in the world. If he should take his goods abroad in person, and should sell them in England; or France, or Germany and invest the proceeds in such articles as he needs on his farm and in his household affairs, when he reached New York he would be required to pay, on an average, $50 tariff on every $100 worth of goods he bought abroad. This, then, reduces the purchasing power of the products of his farm one-half.

It he does not buy abroad and approaches the American manufacturer of goods, the manufacture of which is protected by a tariff, he finds this American manufacturer charging him the foreign price with the tariff added. So that in every event, whether he uses the home product or the foreign product, in buying them he finds the purchasing power of his own products only one-half what it would otherwise be were it not for the tariff.

Now this process will not destroy in a night—it does not come upon the farmer like a cyclone, and wipe him out of existence in a few minutes; but it is like the dropping of water upon a stone—it is gradually wearing him out all the time. Notwithstanding the great fertility of his land, the application of improved machinery and the use of fertilizers, notwithstanding his extraordinary industry and frugality, every day he is confronted with the inexorable fact that the products which he has to sell are lessened one-half in purchasing power by reason of the tariff. This gradual depletion has had its inevitable effect. After twenty-five years of protective tariff, maintained principally by the votes of farmers, he finds that his situation is getting more desperate, his toil less remunerative, his farm depreciating continually in value, his indebtedness becoming greater. What consolation is it to him to reflect that a few favored individuals have become millionaires? Some of them have accumulated fortunes of twenty, thirty, forty and fifty million dollars in one lifetime. None of this is for him; he is getting poorer every year.

If protection insures the prosperity of the farmer, why is it that agriculture is languishing and groaning under the burden of tariff taxes? Surely the tariff is nothing to the benefit of the farmers of the country. Why should they, therefore, cling to the delusion longer? Why should they support the party that maintains this robbery, that fosters these great monopolies and trusts, that makes millionaires of the few and paupers of the toiling millions?

What farmers need in this country is to be permitted to purchase in the same market in which they are compelled to sell. When this privilege is accorded them, and the purchasing power of their produce is increased fifty per cent., they will begin to emerge from the depression which is now bearing so heavily upon them. If they will turn at once from the error of their ways something may be saved from the wreck of their fortunes, but if they persist in their partisan blindness, if they continue to vote for the G. O. P., which keeps up this spoliation of agriculture, they must prepare for the inevitable result. Their farms will soon pass into the hands of capitalists and be consolidated into great baronial estates; private parks and hunting-grounds will be constructed; and the present occupants, gathering up the debris which they may find scattered about, must seek new homes in the far West, or move to the cities and seek employment in factories, or roam the streets. The alternative is inevitable. Will they choose this fall between a policy which oppresses them and one which will deliver them?

WILLIAM M. SPRINGER.

The Boom in New York.

It is reported that there is a great boom in the dry goods trade in New York. Many of the most prominent firms unite in saying that there has not been such an outlook for the immediate future in years.

Do they explain this as being caused by the prospective passage of the McKinley tariff bill? No, indeed! Out of a large number of leading merchants that have been talked with on the subject only one was found who would venture the opinion that the prospect of McKinley's towering duties was the cause of this boom. Most of these merchants, indeed, agree that it is caused by the fact that the expectation of McKinley's high duties caused merchants to buy enormous quantities of wools in Europe and to hurry them into the country before the McKinley bill was passed, in order to avoid paying those increased duties. In this way immense quantities of goods have been thrown upon the market, and hence the boom. Everybody wants to stock up well with goods before McKinley lays his chilling hands on trade.

The same view is confirmed by a market report from Chicago, which says:

"Until recently jobbers appeared to feel confident that the McKinkly tariff bill would either be defeated in the Senate or shelved until December. They now think the bill will become a law ere the close of the present Congress. They have taken advantage of the condition of the market caused by the enormous importations, and made heavy purchases of all descriptions of foreign goods, including large lines for the spring trade. Ordinarily such purchases would not have been made until the close of the year, but the opportunity to save 35 to 40 per cent. by immediate purchases was too great to be neglected."

All this shows that no man likes tariff taxes when he has to pay them; that everybody wants to pay as little of them as possible; also, that the man who buys under the lower tariff is sure that he can undersell the man who buys under the higher tariff, for the tariff is a tax, talk as you will.

TARIFF LETTERS TO FARMER BROWN.

NO. I.

The Meaning of Some Tariff Words.

DEAR FARMER BROWN: Your letter asking me to tell you all I can about the tariff is at hand. I need not tell you I am glad to know that you are interested in that subject, and that your son Joe, too, wants to know the meaning of "all this talk about the tariff, anyway."

One thing, though, at the start. We shall have to talk politics; or, rather, there shall be a division of the labor. I will do all the talking and you all the listening. Yes; we shall have to talk politics. We cannot do as a Farmers' Alliance in a Western State did. They met together not long ago to try to find out what is the matter with the farmer; but, as some of these farmers were Republicans and some Democrats, they agreed beforehand that there should be no talk about politics. When they ruled out politics of course they ruled out the tariff, too; for, although the tariff is not at bottom a political question at all, it has unfortunately become such by the action of the two political parties, and you and I shall have to accept things as they are. Well, these farmers talked a long time about their depressed condition; one thought this was to blame and another thought that was at fault—all agreeing unanimously on one point—that there was a very big screw loose somewhere. These good farmers thought it was better to have harmony than to let anybody talk tariff in the meeting. Well, they got their harmony—all they bargained for—but after a fruitless discussion they prudently passed a resolution to the effect that they did not know what was the matter with them, and they went home.

I do not claim that the tariff is the only screw loose in the farmers' machinery, but I do know that the tariff screw is loose, and as you have asked me to tell you all I know about the tariff, I shall confine myself to that particular screw.

This letter I intend mainly for Joe as a sort of tariff A B C. We shall start right down at the stump; and as there are many other Joes in your county, I shall send a copy of this letter, and of all my letters, to the county papers, in order that these other Joes and the daddies of these Joes may read them, too.

Now, then, after all this preliminary rubbish, we will teach Joe the tariff A B C. By this I mean the simplest terms that he hears in "all this talk about the tariff anyway"—such as per cent., ad valorem, duties, specific duties, and compound duties. Other expressions will be explained hereafter when we come to them.

The first thing for me to make plain is the expression per cent. The full form of it is per centum, which is a Latin expression meaning, "By the hundred." If you put it into dollars and cents it means precisely the same as the expression we hear so often, "so much on the dollar." A man fails and settles with his creditors, we say, "at so much on the dollar," or we sometimes say he pays a certain per cent. of his debts—and the two things are precisely the same in meaning.

Now let us apply this to the tariff. When the law says that a duty shall be so much per cent, the meaning is that the tax to be added to the first cost will be so much on the dollar. For example, the new tariff bill taxes common spectacles such as yours and old Auntie Brown's at 60 per cent. This means that when the New York merchant brings these spectacles into the country he has to pay the Government 60 cents on every dollar's worth of them. If, for example, he brings in $100 worth of spectacles he will have to pay the Government $60, making the total cost to him $160.

Let us go a little further with these spectacles and see how the New York merchant will sell them. In calculating the money which he intended to make, he counts it by per cent. also. We will suppose that he set out to make 20 per cent., that is to say, 20 cents on the dollar. Twenty cents on the dollar on this $100 worth of spectacles would be $20, and if there were no duty he would sell the spectacles for $120. But we have already seen that the Government has made him pay $160 for the spectacles, so he will have to count his profits on this basis. Twenty cents on the dollar, then, or twenty per cent of $160, will be $32, and he will have to sell his $100 worth of spectacles for $192. In this way each pair of spectacles will cost about three prices by the time they reach you.

Those duties which are counted at so much on the dollar are called "ad valorem" duties. "Ad valorem" is Latin, again, and means "according to value," just like "so much on the dollar." But most of the duties are not counted in this way; by far the larger part are what are called specific duties, that is to say, a certain fixed sum on each pound, bushel, gallon or yard. A duty of this kind looks simpler than an ad valorem duty; but if you do not know the first price of any article by the pound, bushel, gallon or yard you are all at sea; you cannot tell whether the duty is high or low. For example, the new tariff bill puts a duty of $2.75 a pound on leaf tobacco, if the stems have been removed. Now, if this tobacco costs $5 a pound, $2.75 would not be a very high duty under our present high tariff. But get the average price of this tobacco, and you have smooth sailing. The average price, as stated by the Senate committee, is 57 cents a pound. Now change this specific duty into an ad valorem duty, and we find that for every dollar's worth of this tobacco the buyer will have to pay a duty of $4.81—or a total of $5.81—instead of $1, the first cost of the pound of tobacco. For $100 worth, therefore, we would pay $581.

Besides these two kinds of duties, there is a third called "compound duties," and this is a very wicked kind. It means that both kinds are put upon the same article; after the buyer has paid so much by the bushel, pound, or yard he has to pay so much on every dollar's worth; in other words, the duty is both specific and ad valorem, a cross-fire from two directions.

As an example let us take the new duty on the cloth from which women and children's dresses are made. This duty is 12 cents a yard and 50 per cent. ad valorem. Now, the average first cost of goods of this kind, as stated by the Senate committee, is about 20 cents a yard. Fifty per cent. of this would be 10 cents, then adding the 12 cents a yard we get 22 cents, and the yard costing 20 cents is made by the tariff to cost 42 cents. On every dollar's worth, therefore, the duty is slightly more than 110 per cent. In other words, when a merchant buys $100 worth of such goods the total cost will be $210.33.

Of course he is compelled to charge this increased price up to his customers, and it goes on along the line till it reaches the women and children who wear the cloth, and there the head of the family pays the whole bill finally. No more shifting down the line then. That will do for the present. Watch for next. Yours truly, RICHARD KNOX.

Blaine's Brilliant Foreign Policy.

Mizner, the United States Minister to Guatemala, is a Jim Blaine sort of a diplomat. He evidently took the Secretary of State at his word, and made up his mind to give the United States a spirited foreign policy, so far as Central America was concerned. He has been involved in scandal ever since he reached his post, and he is now in danger of losing his life.

Mr. Blaine has a paternalistic and adventurous policy as to Central and South America which takes no thought of the independence or the pride of the republics to the south of us. He would marshal them into line and make them our satellites. He would quarter his friends upon them, and when they got their arms into the spoils up to their elbows he would send such choice diplomatic messages as that which Minister Hurlbut in Peru received from him in 1881, viz.: "Go it, Steve!" He would boss the continent, and, if war came, he and his contractor friends would profit by it as they did from 1861 to 1865.

Mr. Mizner went to Guatemala thoroughly impressed with Mr. Blaine's brilliant foreign policy and has sought to carry it out. He has forced this country to make one humble apology already and now he has managed to get a man killed on an American ship where he had sought refuge, and probably we will be compelled to pay a big indemnity for that. Heretofore Mr. Blaine's dazzling foreign policy has been largely in your eye, but Mr. Mizner has given us an ocular demonstration of its real nature.—Chicago Herald.

Why He Left the G. O. P.

Mr. W. F. Neat, of Kentucky, a Republican ex-State Senator, has deserted the G. O. P. He is proud of having been "a Republican, who voted for Abraham Lincoln for President, and for every other Republican candidate since his election," but now Mr. Neat finds McKinleyism too heavy a burden to be borne, and so he shakes off the tariff dust from the soles of his shoes forever. He says: "I am opposed to fostering and building up monopolies. I am opposed to the McKinley tariff bill, gotten up, as the report of the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee clearly shows, in the interest of the capitalists and against the common people. I am opposed to legislation under the guise of protection so fraught with evil to the country that Secretary Blaine, a protectionist, becomes alarmed.

McKinley Not a Hero, but a Dupe.

McKinley is the creature and tool of a gigantic conspiracy against the United States. He is not a hero. He is a dupe. He is not even the author of the conglomeration of selfishness and plunder that is known by his name. It bears the finger-marks of all the monopolists in the country. It was cooked up by them in the room of the Committee on Ways and Means, where no man appeared for the people and where there was no pretense that the measure was other than spoils and plunder. The Ohio Democrats who gerrymandered him into a Democratic district dignified a weak sister by giving him an opportunity to raise the cry of persecution. That is all there is in McKinley.—Chicago Herald.

Who Is Favored?

Some years ago the salt makers in Western New York State asked for protection and it was given to them. This protection enabled them to make such handsome profits in the home market that they could afford to sell their salt at lower prices in Canada than in the United States. For some years Canadian farmers bought New York salt at lower prices than New York farmers living a mile from the salt works.

The same thing is still true of many of our protected manufactures, especially of our farm implements. It is proved beyond all doubt that our plows, harrows, horse-rakes, in fact, all farm machinery, is sold at much lower prices abroad than at home. This fact is admitted by manufacturers themselves.

The Binding-Twine Trust.

It is one of the well-known Republican doctrines that the tariff has nothing to do with building up trusts. But we are making progress; fifteen Senators from the Northwest voted with the Democrats to put binding twine on the free list. This was done in order to break up the iniquitous binding-twine trust and to give the farmers cheaper twine. Evidently these fifteen Republican Senators understand that the tariff tax makes the wall behind which the trusts take shelter. These Senators, however, are not the majority of their party. Still we must be thankful for small favors. That there should be even fifteen in protection's Sodom who admit that the tariff builds up trusts is a startling event.

"Straws Which Show," Etc.

They (the farmers) are for tariff reform, for one thing. They have lost sympathy with the high protective tariff notion. They do not like the McKinley bill, because they know it can't do them any good. They are beginning to see that they want relief from the other end of the string—a reduction of tariffs on articles they consume rather than the imposition of duties on articles they produce. It is pretty certain there will have to be a change of front on that question.—Hon. John M. Pearson (Rep.), Illinois Live Stock Commissioner.

The Salt Duty.

The "operation of the tariff laws," according to Mr. Blair, has reduced the price of salt by twenty-four twenty-fifths in the last fifty years, and yet the salt manufacturers regularly demand its retention and increase. Does it ever occur to a high taxer that there is nothing in the Constitution of the United States that requires a man to believe everything that monopolists and their agents tell him? If the tariff reduced the price of salt, would the salt monopoly permit Quay to fry the fat out of it every year on a promise that his party will give it more and more tariff?—Chicago Herald.

"Proof of the Pudding."

The binding-twine trust declare that the action of the Senate in admitting twine duty free will destroy their industry, whereas it had so flourished under protection as to make $35,000,000 for the monopoly in a few years. Now, is this fact proof or not that protection fosters a trust while free trade kills it?—Chicago Globe.

IF anybody doubts whether the tariff is a tax, let him reflect upon the meaning of this fact: In France there is a duty on coffee of slightly less than 14 cents a pound; and the very same coffee that retails with us for 30 cents a pound is retailed at 44 cents in France. And yet there are so-called Republican statesmen who try to make people believe that the tariff is not a tax!

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN
NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach AND Liver Cure
The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.
It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.
To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.
J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.
My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every-one.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.
The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

—Goshen is on the eve of securing a new industry which will give employment to about fifty hands.

—Dr. E. B. Tilford's farm residence, near Burgersville, was burned. Loss, $3,000; covered by insurance.

—The Muncie Presbytery held a very profitable two days' meeting at the Presbyterian Church, Winchester.

—Hugh Goodman, an employe at the blast furnace at Terre Haute, had both eyes burned out by molten metal.

—Wife and daughter of Postmaster Bobitt, of Eckerty, caught measles from handling mail, and both are dead.

—A fellow named Newkirk demanded royalty of Carroll County farmers on a wire fence. The farmers fired him.

—James Culver, aged 101, was the oldest man present at the old settlers' and soldiers' reunion at Martinsville.

—John Shilland's big barn, 2,000 bushels of wheat and several horses burned near Winamac. Loss, $9,000.

—James Doan, of Cass County, was sandbagged in Logansport by foot-pads, and robbed of his watch and money.

—John Eastman and a colored man were instantly killed by being struck by passenger train No. 3 on the Big Four.

—Going to make it sultry for physicians at South Bend who fail to report births, deaths and contagious diseases.

—Maj. W. W. Carter, recently removed from the Insane Asylum at Indianapolis to his home in Brazil, has escaped and is now at large.

—Large headed incendiary near Washington sets fire to barns by putting cheese in boxes of matches. Rats sets matches off going for the cheese.

—Ernest Reileiz, a freight brakeman sat down on the end of a tie at Fort Wayne, to rest, went to sleep and a passenger train passed. He will die.

—William Reynolds, 50 years old, a prominent farmer of Miama County, has been arrested for attempted assault upon his niece, Belle Triplett, 16 years old.

—Mrs. Anna B. Langaus, of Posey County, has filed suit for $25,000 damages from the E. & T. H. Railroad. Mrs. Langhaus was almost killed in a wreck.

—William Kelley, who was the first baggage-master at the Union Depot at Terre Haute, and recently employed at the car works, was horribly mangled and killed by a switch engine.

—A Mr. Oliver, of Crawfordsville, has been placed under a $100 bond to keep the peace on account of his avowed intention to kill his wife because she has applied for a divorce.

—Mrs. Sarah Johnson, of New Cory, lay down as usual Saturday night, Aug. 31, to go to sleep, but has failed to awaken since, despite the best efforts of physicians to arouse her. She sleeps and breathes naturally, and the peculiar freak of sleep is baffling the oldest physicians.

—Patents have been issued to Indiana inventors as follows: Harry W. Deeds, Indianapolis, electric valve controller; Jos. Y. Hotchkiss, Jay, pulley vise; Louis Lane, jr., Auburn, lace drier, Jno. H. Ramer, jr., and A. Ramer, Santa Fe, base for fence posts.

—Harvey Pickerell, a young farmer, living near New Goshen, was struck by lightning during a storm and killed instantly. The young man had been at work in a field, and had taken shelter under an immense walnut tree. An instant later he was struck by a bolt and was dead when found.

—Atlas Clark, Warwick County, swore to the age of an eloping bride. He's been arrested by the girl's father for perjury.

—Ida Hunsucker was sent to the Women's Reformatory from Seymour for perjury. She is handsome, aged 23, and well connected.

—The farmers and Knights of Labor of Delaware County held a picnic at Muncie. About four thousand people were in attendance.

—Gabriel Poindexter, aged 63, ex-Mayor of Jeffersonville, and one of the largest fruit growers in Southern Indiana, died at Bartel.

—At Ladoga, John Peffly, a brickmason, fell from the house of John Knieff, and broke his left leg and sustained internal injuries.

—The melon crop of Jackson and other Southern Indiana counties proved very valuable this season. The hot dry weather has its advantages.

—Kenneth, the 9-year old son of conductor Hendrix, while attempting to board a moving train at Fort Wayne fell under the wheels. Both legs were cut off.

—A. U. Hamilton's barn, west of Waynetown, was burned by an incendiary, a valuable mare and colt perishing in the flames. Loss, $1,510; insurance, $400.

—Andy Bowles slashed Sue Gordon to death with a razor, at Evansville, and escaped to Kentucky. Both colored. Sue was Andy's mistress and he was jealous.

—The proposition to pipe natural gas to Crawfordsville from Hamilton County, via Thorntown, has failed, because Crawfordsville could raise only $80,000 of the $100,000 needed.

—George Bright, a prominent Daviess County farmer sued for slander by Rev. Coochman, a Methodist minister. The preacher says Bright charged him with immoral conduct.

—Esther Benson, the venerable widow of Michael Benson, aged 70, died very suddenly at Madison, of heart disease. Her sister, Mrs. Aaron Marks, died similarly five years ago.

—Wm. Starkey, a well-known citizen of Jeffersonville, was found dead in his bed. He was in his usual apparent good health when he retired. Heart failure was the cause of death.

—A thief entered the residence of Fred Sheetz, Superintendent of the Water Works at Crawfordsville, and took from under his pillow $10, a gold watch worth $75 and a $100 diamond stud.

—Connersville thought it had another horrible murder mystery. There was much gore and flesh scattered about, and a new made grave in the woods. Only a worthless canine.

—The soldiers' memorial fountain, purchased by the Grand Army Post and the city of Seymour after a long delay, was placed in position in the City Park by the veterans attending the reunion.

—Walter King, a 12-year-old youth of Richmond, was induced by a stranger to ride with him in a wagon. After going some distance, the boy says, something struck him on the head and he knew no more. He was found unconscious in an out-building wrapped in a piece of old carpet.

—Romeo Mertz, a young teamster, had his left hand caught by a revolving shaft, in Cammack's saw-mill at Mulbery. His left arm was wound about the shaft, broken above the elbow, and his thumb torn entirely off at the third joint. Mertz is the only support of a widowed mother.

—Barn burners are again at work in Daviess County. Milton Jett, of Steele Township, is the last victim of their wrath. His barn was destroyed, together with the house. This is the twenty-third barn burned there in eighteen months, and it is known to be the work of incendiaries.

—A valuable Durham bull died recently near Goshen. In its stomach was found a rattlesnake two feet long. As it was in advanced stage of decay it had evidently been in the animal's stomach for a long time. How it could have gotten there is a mystery. Some are inclined to the opinion that while coiled in the pasture the bull swallowed it.

—Under the new election law the Governor is required to appoint two Commissioners, one from each party, who will have general charge of the election tickets and returns. James B. Black, of Indianapolis, and James McCabe, of Warren County were appointed as such Commissioners, the first being a Republican and the second a Democrat.

—Mrs. Henry Staags, of Cory, died last week. On Saturday, August 30, she retired in her usual good health, but did not awake the next day, despite the efforts of her family to arouse her. She continued to sleep in what appeared to be a natural sleep until she died, never once recovering consciousness. Even a post-mortem examination failed to reveal any physical disability.

—A balloon ascension took place at Lakeside Park, Wabash, and, while engaged in inflating one of the balloons, an employe of the park, in some manner got underneath the same and was not discovered until he had been there a half hour or more. He was almost suffocated by the hot air, and his death is hourly expected, as all efforts to resustitate him have so far been of no avail.

—Augustus Paris, the hardware merchant who deserted his family and business three years ago to escape punishment for forgeries and other criminal transactions, has been returned to Frankfort and placed in jail.

—George Bright, a prominent farmer of Daviess County, has been sued for slander by Rev. J. Coochman, a Methodist minister. He is alleged to have charged the preacher with immoral conduct. Much excitement is the outgrowth of the suit.

—Henry Meyer, a wealthy and influential farmer living four miles south of Sunman, blew his brains out with a shotgun. Temporary insanity, superinduced by a severe attack of la grippe last winter, was the cause.

—John Partlow, a brakeman on an Indianapolis & Vincennes freight train, while switching at Martinsville, fell under a moving car and had both legs mangled. One will have to be taken off below the knee, but the other can possibly be saved. Mr. Partlow has five children living in Hamilton, O. His wife is dead.

REVIEW OF THE COUNTRY'S COMMERCIAL SITUATION.

The Money Market Stringent at Most Important Commercial Centers—Speculation Said to Be the Cause—Government Efforts to Relieve the Stringency.

Dun's weekly review of trade has this to say:

"The last week has fully justified those who gave warning that the money ease, caused by treasury disbursements, could be but temporary. The market here has been tight; with extreme rates paid in some cases. At Boston and Philadelphia monetary pressure also affects business; at Chicago the market is somewhat firmer and the demand active; at St. Louis stiff at 7 to 8 per cent; at Kansas City more firm; at Omaha a trifle close, but fairly supplied; at Milwaukee very active and to some extent disturbed by a large lumber failure in the interior; at Detroit the demand is strong at 7 per cent; at Cleveland the tightness is rightly ascribed to the volume of business; at Pittsburg the demand is fair at 6 to 7 per cent, and only at New Orleans of the cities reporting is the market easier.

"The immediate fright at New York was about supposed eonrmous demands for payment of duties if the new tariff should go into effect Oct. 1. The fact, as officially reported, is that less than $9,000,000 will pay full duties on all goods in warehouse on which the rates have been increased, but no one supposes that the entire quantity would be taken out, and meanwhile the treasury is now offering to pay out $20,000,000 for 4½ per cents and $23,000,000 more in prepayment of interest on the 4½ per cents. If there were no speculative tendency interfering with free movements of crops, commercial bills would soon draw money from abroad, but an unfavorable crop report causes higher prices for staples, and prior to that the exports had been very light, prices here being too high for foreign markets.

"The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 193, as compared with 203 the previous week and 199 the week previous to that. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 193."

Washington dispatch: Gen. Nettleton, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in response to inquiries has issued the following information:

"The Treasury Department to-day, in addition to its regular disbursements, which were unusually heavy, paid out $2,348,539 on account of bond purchases and advance interest as follows: Interest prepaid, $2,062,000; redemption of 4½s, $335,505, purchase of 4 per cents $750,000. The 4 per cents purchase to-day were accepted at 125. This is the first considerable purchase of 4 per cents for some time, and the price paid is 1 per cent above that hitherto paid under the circular of July 19. It is thought that there may be an impression among holders of 4 per cent bonds that the government has withdrawn from the market for 4 per cents. This is not the fact, as the treasurer is ready to take a considerable amount of 4s if they are to be had.

"The inquiry instituted yesterday by the Secretary of the Treasury developed the fact that the total balance of duties due on all imported merchandise in bond at the port of New York on Oct. 1 was only $17,500,000. Only a moderate portion of these goods will be subject to increased duty under the schedule in the new tariff bill. These facts would seem to indicate that anxiety based on this feature of the situation has been largely without foundation.

"As a further measure of relief, in so far as the existing stringency can reasonably be said to be due to the inevitable operations of existing laws governing the collection and disbursement of the government revenue the Treasury department will not hesitate to apply such effective remedies as the law permits and the situation requires. The Secretary of the Treasury on his return to Washington from New England will be in New York to-morrow and will adopt such a course as shall seem to him timely and calculated to meet the difficulty as it exists."

Cresson (Pa.) dispatch: The President is watching the tone of the money market with a view to meeting any further emergencies. He swent nearly two hours yesterday conferring by telegraph with the Treasury Department. The result was the issuance of orders by the President to anticipate the interest on outstanding currency 6 per cent bonds to an amount not exceeding $5,000,000; to offer to pay 125 for outstanding 4 per cent bonds instead of 124, the rate heretofore offered.

PROTEST AGAINST THE GRANT.

Coffee Merchants Object to Privileges Given Promoters of Auctions.

Rio Janeiro cable: The coffee merchants met in this city the other day to protest against the grant made by the government to the organizers of the proposed coffee auctions of the privileges of shipping coffee sold at those auctions without immediate payment of export duties. This grant, which allows the first payment on account of the duty to be make at the end of two years, and the other payments gradually thereafter, is called by an evening paper a usurpation and a scandal. One of the grounds on which the minister of finance attempts to justify his measure is the assertion that within a few months congress will approve the constitution published by the government abolishing export duties. This paper asks him whether he thinks the future congress so servile that he can anticipate its action. It is stated that the person obtaining the grant is a relative of Deodoras.

THREE INDIANS KILLED.

The Prairie Band of Pottawattamies Wind Up a Council with a Row.

Topeda (Kan.) dispatch: Information has been received here that the council of the Prairie Band of the Pottawattomies, held a few days ago on the reservation in Jackson county, this State, terminated in a row, in which three of the leaders were killed and several others wounded. There are two bands, one known as the Little Soldiers, composed of all Indians, and the other known as the Big Soldiers, composed of full-bloods, half-bloods and squaw men. The trouble grew out of the President's order to sectionize, for the consideration of which the council has been called. The Little Soldiers' band favor obeying the President's order which the Big Soldiers' band oppose.

The Sailor Prince in a Row.

Montreal (Que.) dispatch: Prince George had an exciting adventure here a few nights ago. With one of his lieutenants he started out as a sailor to do the town. They were attacked by six ruffians who demanded money, and being hard pressed stood back to back and fought their assailants. Three of the ruffians were laid low by the Prince, and two by the lieutenant. Then a policeman coming along and seeing five men stretched on the ground, arrested the Prince and his companion and took them to the station. Soon afterward, the chief being summoned, they were recognized and released.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capitol—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

AFTER a debate that has lasted practically without intermission since July 22 the tariff bill was read a third time in the Senate on the 9th inst., and is now ready for its passage. The Senate met at 10 o'clock and resumed consideration of the tariff bill. A number of amendments were proposed and rejected, after which Mr. Aldrich moved to insert a proviso that imported merchandise deposited in any public or private bonded warehouse prior to Aug. 1, 1890, may be withdrawn for consumption at any time prior to Nov. 1, 1890, on payment of the duties in force prior to the passage of the act. Agreed to—yeas, 32; nays, 27. Mr. Aldrich's amendment authorizing the President to remit under certain conditions taxes on sugars, molasses, coffee, and tea imported from countries where duties are abolished on the principal agricultural products of the United States was adopted—yeas, 37; nays, 28. All the Democrats and two Republicans (Edmunds and Evarts) voted against the reciprocity amendment. The next vote was on the amendment to paragraph 703, lowering the sugar standard to be admitted free of duty from No. 16 to No. 13. It was agreed to—yeas, 39; nays, 24. The bill was then reported to the Senate and all the amendments that had been adopted in committee of the whole were agreed to in the Senate except those on which separate votes were demanded. The first of these was Mr. Plumb's amendment for a customs commission, on which Mr. Gorman demanded a separate vote. The amendment was agreed to—yeas, 31; nays, 29. The commission is to be composed of five disinterested persons, to be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The commissioners are to continue in office six years, but any of them may be removed by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. No more than three of them are to be appointed from the same political party. By a vote of 38 to 25—a strict party vote—the Senate ordered the tariff bill to a third reading and engrossment. The bill was ordered printed with the amendments, and the Senate went into executive session and soon after adjourned. The House wasted the day in an ineffectual attempt to call up the Virginia election case of Langston against Venable.

THE Senate met at 11 o'clock on the 10th inst., and after a few moments spent with routine business the tariff bill was taken up—the question being on its passage—with six hours allowed to close the discussion, after which the vote was to be taken. Mr. Hoar was the first to address the Senate. Referring to the reciprocity proposition, he said that he had voted for it with some hesitation and should not have done so if he had thought that the scheme contained in the amendment was all that was likely to come out of entering on that policy. He, however, regarded the amendment rather as a declaration of purpose than as a definition of legislative policy, and it was in that view that he had given it his support. After speeches by Messrs. Hiscock, Turpie, Gibson, Vest, Vance, and Jones (Nev.) the vote was taken and the bill was passed—yeas, 40; nays, 29—a strict party vote. Mr. Aldrich moved that the Senate insist on its amendments to the House bill and ask for a committee of conference—the committee to consist of seven on each side. The motion was agreed to, and Messrs. Aldrich, Sherman, Allison, Hiscock, McPherson, Vance, and Carlisle were appointed conferees on the part of the Senate. The Senate then adjourned. In the House the day was wasted in an ineffectual attempt to get a quorum to approve the previous day's journal.

IN the Senate, on the 11th inst., on motion of Mr. Plumb, the conference report on the railroad land-forfeiture bill was taken up. The main proposition in the report is contained in the first section, as follows: "That there is hereby forfeited to the United States, and the United States hereby resumes the title thereto, all lands heretofore granted to any State or to any corporation to aid in the construction of a railroad opposite to and coterminous with the portion of any such railroad not now completed and in operation, for the construction or benefit of which such lands were granted; and all such lands are declared to be a part of the public domain; provided, that this act shall not be construed as forfeiting the right of way or station ground of any railroad company heretofore granted." Mr. Morgan opposed the report as a log-rolling scheme, got up for the benefit of all the land-grant roads. After speaking for over four hours Mr. Morgan said that he knew that the questions which he had been discussing were going to their grave in the passage of the bill, but that he had desired to give them a decent burial. He had wished to erect a headstone over the graves of the rights of the people on the line of the Northern Pacific, so that the historic record might be read hereafter. Whenever the bill was passed, the forfeiture of the Northern Pacific Railroad lands would be dead and buried, and nothing more would be heard about it. Without finishing his speech, Mr. Morgan yielded for a motion to adjourn, which was carried. The House wasted the day without securing a quorum to approve the previous day's journal.

IN the Senate, on the 12th inst., Mr. Ingalls presented a petition from citizens of Missouri asking for the passage of the Federal election bills. Many petitions were presented for and against the passage of the compound lard bill. At the suggestion of Mr. Edmunds it was agreed that one hour be given each day (after the routine morning business) to bills on the calendar unobjected to. The following bills were passed: Authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi at Winona, Minn.; Senate bill to subject to State taxation national bank notes and United States Treasury notes the same as other money. House bill to limit to six years the time within which suits shall be brought against accounting officers and their sureties. The conference report on the railroad land forfeiture bill was taken up, and Mr. Morgan continued his argument in opposition to it. During the argument Mr. Gorman presented a telegram received by him from Senator McPherson, stating that he was indisposed and would not be able to act as a member of the conference committee on the tariff bill, and asking to be excused from serving. The request was complied with, and Mr. Voorhees was appointed a conferree in place of Mr. McPherson. After Mr. Morgan had spoken about two hours, the Senate was addressed by Mr. Sanders in favor of the adoption of the conference report. Mr. Hearst took the contrary view, and insisted that the mineral lands were specially reserved by the original grants and must be kept for the use of the people at large. Mr. Saunders said that in courts of his own State, of the State of California, and in the Supreme Court of the United States, the term "mineral lands" has been held to mean lands commercially valued for mining purposes. Without concluding his argument Mr. Saunders yielded for a motion to proceed to executive business, and the Senate soon adjourned. In the House, during the roll-call, a message was received from the Senate announcing the passage of the tariff bill, with amendments, and by direction of the Speaker it was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. On the approval of the journal the quorum disappeared, and on motion of Mr. McKinley the House adjourned.

IN the Senate, on the 13th inst., Mr. Quay offered the usual resolutions of sorrow and condolence in regard to the death of Mr. Samuel J. Randall, and proceeded to address the Senate. Mr. Barbour and Mr. Plumb also eulogized the dead Speaker. Further eloquent tributes were paid by Senators Daniel, Cullom, Blackburn, Morgan, Gibson, and Hiscock, and then as a further mark of respect the Senate adjourned.

The Effects of Mental Exhaustion.

Many diseases, especially those of the nervous system, are the products of daily renewed mental exhaustion. Business avocations often involve an amount of mental wear and tear very prejudicial to physical health, and the professions, if arduously pursued, are no less destructive to brain and nerve tissue. It is one of the most important attributes of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters that it compensates for this undue loss of tissue, and that it imparts new energy to the brain and nerves. The rapidity with which it renews weakened mental energy and physical vitality is remarkable, and shows that its invigorating properties are of the highest order. Besides increasing vital stamina, and counteracting the effects of mental exhaustion, this potential medicine cures and prevents fever and ague, rheumatism, chronic dyspepsia and constipation, kidney and uterine weakness and other complaints. Physicians also commend it as a medicated stimulant and remedy.

A GREAT mistake perhaps was made when Dr. Sherman named his great remedy Prickly Ash BITTERS; but it is presumed that at that time all remedies for the blood, etc., were called Bitters. Had he called it Prickly Ash "Regulator," "Curative," or almost anything but Bitters, it undoubtedly would have superseded all other preparations of similar character. The name Bitters is misleading; it is purely a medicine, and cannot be used a beverage.

PURIFY YOUR BLOOD.

But do not use the dangerous alkaline and mercurial preparations which destroy your nervous system and ruin the digestive power of the stomach. The vegetable kingdom gives us the best and safest remedial agents. Dr. Sherman devoted the greater part of his life to the discovery of this reliable and safe remedy, and all its ingredients are vegetable. He gave it the name of

Prickly Ash Bitters!

a name every one can remember, and to the present day nothing has been discovered that is so beneficial for the BLOOD, for the LIVER, for the KIDNEYS and for the STOMACH. This remedy is now so well and favorably known by all who have used it that arguments as to its merits are useless, and if others who require a corrective to the system would but give it a trial the health of this country would be vastly improved. Its Excellent Qualities

Commend to public approval the California liquid fruit remedy, Syrup of Figs. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, and by gently acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels, it cleanses the system effectually, thereby promoting the health and comfort of all who use it.

THE most appropriate pastry for a free-lunch counter—sponge cake.—Philadelphia Call.

Copyright, 1890.

A departure from ordinary methods has long been adopted by the makers of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. They know what it can do—and they guarantee it. Your money is promptly returned, if it fails to benefit or cure in all diseases arising from torpid liver or impure blood. No better terms could be asked for. No better remedy can be had. Nothing else that claims to be a blood-purifier is sold in this way—because nothing else is like the "G. M. D."

So positively certain is it in its curative effects as to warrant its makers in selling it, as they are doing, through druggists, on trial!

It's especially potent in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands, Tumors and Swellings. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

U. B. Conference.

The North Ohio Conference of the United Brethren in Christ, convened at Hicksville, O., Sept. 10, 1890. The conference was largely attended by ministers, lay delegates and visiting brethren. The venerable Bishop Weaver presided. The reports showed that the conference had made material progress in the past year. The membership as reported last year after the withdrawal of the seceding members was 3,295. The number reported for 1890, is 3,650; an increase of 355. Missionary money collected $1,102-68. Amount collected for all purposes, $14, 212.72. Great encouragement was given our people by the reports of the Bishop and officials from Dayton, who are intimately acquainted with our general church work in all its relations. The conference took active measures to gain control of, and protect all of our church property within the bounds of the conference. To this end, a fund of $3,000 was provided, and placed in the hands of a central committee, who are to have charge of all litigations The committee are Rev. D. B. Keller, Pres.; Isaac Speer, Sec'y, Waterloo, Ind.; J. W. McQuillan, Treas., Delta, O.; Rev. J. W. Lilly, Hicksville, O, and Rev. J. S. Smith, Waldron, Mich. The committee will move cautiously, but firmly. The woman's branch missionary society held a large and enthusiastic meeting on Friday night, at which a cash collection of $24.93 was taken. The people of Hicksville entertained the conference most royally. The next conference will be in Waterloo, Ind. Miss Ida Stoy was official short hand reporter for the conference.

The conference is divided into two districts, running east and west, divided by the Lake Shore railroad. Rev. D. B. Keller is presiding elder on the south, and Rev. J. W. Lilly on the north district.

The ministers were stationed as follows: "North district, J. W. Lilly, P. E. Waterloo, S. P. Klotz; Steuben, D. Brosy; Branch Mission, L. Durler; Sugar Grove, A. J. Coder; Mt. Pleasant Mission, Daniel Ledron; Hillsdale, D. F. Thomas; Montpelier, C. M. Eberly; Pioneer, I. W. Lohman; Waldron, J. S. Smith; Delta, M. F. [illegible]; Raisin, S. H. Yager; Monroe to be supplied. South district, D. B. Keller, P. E. Sherwood Mission, J. Lower; Black Creek, W. W. Landis; Hicksville, A. E. Gaff; Maysville, S. L. Valentine; Churubusco, J. S. Tedrow; Butler, A. F. McCloe; Bryan, S. O. Fink; Stryker Mission, S. W. Redman; Wauseon, D. C. Sheldon; Mt. Carmel, C. E. Moorman; Liberty Mission, C. C. Manning; Maumee, J. C. Albright; Newville, W. J. Stoy.

Obituary.

Sebastian Eckert was born in Germany, Hesse Darmstadt, Nov. 6, 1822, departed this life Sept. 6, 1890, aged 67 years, 9 months and 27 days.

The deceased at the age of seven years emigrated to America with his widowed mother and five sisters, and settled in Franklin county Penn. where he was reared to manhood. In the year 1845 he came to Wayne county, Ohio, and in 1855 to Fairfield township, DeKalb county, Ind., and settled on the farm which he occupied until the time of his death. On Dec. 14, 1848 he was united in marriage to Susannah Cox, of Wayne county O. To this union were born five sons and seven daughters. Two sons and the seven daughters had preceded the father. He leaves a wife, three sons and one grandchild to mourn the loss of an affectionate husband and kind parent.

In the fall of 1876 the deceased received a fall from which he has suffered intensely until death gathered him into the haven above and released him from his long suffering. The funeral services were held in the Lutheran church at Fairfield Center, Sept. 9, 1890, at 10 a. m., of which he has been a long and active member. The services were conducted by Rev. Waltman, after which the body was interred in the Fairfield cemetery.

Libby Prison in Chicago.

A visit to Chicago is not complete unless the visitor has spent a few hours in that wonderful institution, so full of patriotic memories, the Libby Prison War Museum. It is barely a year since this famous old prison was removed from its old home in Richmond, Va., to the great World's Fair metropolis, and yet in that short time it has been visited by nearly a quarter of a million people. One of the most interesting facts in connection with this statement is the gratifying one that not one visitor has left the museum with any feeling of displeasure toward the exhibit, but thousands were displeased because they did not have time enough to stay and study everything. In no other place in America is there to be found such a grand exhibit of war relics, and it is alone worth the price of admission to see the celebrated old prison itself. During the war there were confined within its bare walls nearly 12,000 Union officers, and to-day the old structure stands as a monument to the patriotism of these heroes, and no more fitting home than this could be thought of for the thousands of valuable war relics it contains. There are relics from every battle field, original manuscripts of personal letters, official documents, and war orders from such men as Lincoln, Grant, Hancock, Sheridan, Sherman, McClellan, McPherson, Meade, Hooker and others of the North and from the pens of Gen. R. E. Lee, Jefferson Davis, Alex. H. Stevens Stonewall Jackson, Albert Sidney Johnson, Jubal Early, Beauregard, Thompson, Stuart, Pickett and other famous men of the South. The walls of the old structure are covered with the life size oil portraits of these men, with battle scenes, camp life sketches, war maps and other exhibits full of interest and instruction. Another interesting feature is the famous Yankee tunnel through which 109 Union officers made their escape from this prison. But words cannot tell all there is to see in this museum. The Rev. Joseph Cook, the eminent Boston orator, says: "It is an invaluable memorial." Prof. David Swing, one of Chicago's most noted clergymen, says: "It is liberal education. Millions ought to see it."

An event has happened in Kensington, N. H., which has set the inhabitants wild with excitement. The first house to be built in the place for thirty years is approaching completion, and a grand celebration is expected when the inmates take possession.

CORRESPONDENCE.

HAMILTON.

Emily Hagerty is improving very slowly.

T. P. French will move to Corunna in the near future.

John Somerlott and wife visited her parents, north of Angola, last Sunday.

O, say! We think we will get the railroad. Everything looks very favorable for this line.

Edward Sewell moved into the Jack Sewell property, on the north side of Bellefontaine street, last week.

The best place to get millinery goods is at Misses Hammond & Beecher's, of this place. Latest styles and best trimmings.

Indus Farley is teaching the Summit school, which began last Monday. Hamilton ranks first in school teachers, for the number of its inhabitants.

We received intelligence this morning that William Houghy, living two miles east of Otsego Center, died at three o'clock Monday morning. Supposed to be cancer in the stomach.

BUTLER.

Mrs. Sullivan, of Chicago, is visiting friends in town.

School commenced Monday, with a good attendance.

Quite a number of fine residences are being erected here this fall.

Kiplinger has moved his family into the house vacated by Prof. Teeple.

Mrs Levi Till, of Waterloo, visited several days with friends in this place.

Miss Ora Parker, of Coldwater, Mich., was the guest of Mrs. Gene Pinchin last week.

Miss Sylvia May, of Auburn, was the guest of Mrs. Plank several days last week.

Dame rumor is inclined to think there will be a wedding in the north end of town, soon.

The P. Ls have failed to negotiate with any of the Butler merchants, up to the present.

Mrs. Cole, an aged and much esteemed lady, died here last week and was buried at Newville.

The Ladies' Society, of the M. E. church, will meet with Mrs. Rowe next Friday afternoon.

John Watson, the popular clerk of Morse's grocery, is in Detroit attending the exposition.

We are anxious to know what has become of the Newville correspondent. Please wake up, brother!

Mrs. Coffrin, of Angola, has been visiting a few days in town, the guest of her daughter Mrs. J. Lower.

Mrs Lotta Hoisington expects soon to join her husband in Springfield, Ill., where they expect to remain.

Frank. Ray, the popular clerk at the Hotel Aldrich, paid a flying visit to his home in Auburn, last Saturday.

Adam Sternberg, Sr., has erected a neat cottage for himself, at the extreme west end, and already occupies it

Rumor has it, that a woman in this place received a sound whipping at the hands of a couple of young boys, recently.

We understand the contract for building the new flour mill has been let to A. J. Mason & Son, of this place and the work will be pushed forward with the utmost possible dispatch.

Butler schools opened last Monday, under very favorable auspices, with Rev. Krieble as principal, assisted by Miss May Mounts, Miss Porter, Miss Minnie Ulom, Mrs. A. J. Baxter and Miss Minnie Diehl.

Fred. Plum is spending a few weeks with his sister Mrs. E. W. Drake, at Matteson, Ill. The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Drake, will be pleased to learn that they have purchased them a cosy residence, and expect to make that their future home.

Quite a number of our people attended the Auburn fair, and all seem to be agreed on the point that it was good one, with the finest display of fancy work ever brought to a fair in this county. Owing to our inability to be present, we can speak only from report, which we in no wise doubt.

The rainy weather kept nearly all the Butler people away from the Auburn fair. The writer visited the fair, after having visited the Toledo fair, and had to acknowledge that the hall display at Auburn was far in advance of the hall used for a similar purpose at Toledo All the fair lacked to make a success was fair weather.

Nearly all the Lake shore through trains now make their stop at the new coal chute, about a half mile west of the depot. By that means, the trade of the Aldrich House lunch stand has nearly come to a standstill. J. C. Handy, an enterprising Lake Shore employe has taken advantage of the situation and has erected a neat little building and started a lunch room near the docks.

The large barn on the Munn farm, ten miles northeast of Butler, burned last week. The entire contents, hay, grain, implements and one valuable horse, perished. A strong suspicion of foul play prevails in the neighborhood, as this is only one of many buildings destroyed in the vicinity, within a short time. A barn in less than three rods of this one, burned about a year ago, under very suspicious circumstances. They are all at sea as to who the incendiary may be. The loss will aggregate fully $1,000. which is about covered by insurance.

SUMMIT.

Mr Farley, of Hamilton, commenced teaching our school Monday.

F. N. Rose and wife were the guests of Bert Conrad and wife last Sunday.

Mr. Warren Boyer and wife were the guests of Henry Snowberger last Sunday.

Isaac Barker, of this place, commenced teaching the Maple Grove school Monday.

A. Ferrier shipped three car loads of cattle and hogs from this place last Saturday.

John Ho[illegible]berger and family visited the family of Thomas Hammond, Jr., last Sunday

TO THE CITIZENS OF AUBURN AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC.

We have opened a new Livery, Sale and Feed barn, first door west of Swineford House, corner of 9th and Jackson streets, where we have put in an entire new stock, at a very great expense. And we hope by keeping up with the times to be able to merit and secure a fair share of your patronage. Our terms shall always be reasonable, and our rigs all good and safe.

Yours Respectfully,
J. C. HENRY AND GEO. SWINEFORD,
Proprietors.

Farmers.—Your Timber.

A. H. Provines and wife and H. Elson and wife, of Jackson township, were the guests of J. Baker, last Sunday.

The thieves seem to think G. W. Reed's grain the best. Last Friday, someone stole his oats, on the fair ground

Misses Mollie Hennesy and Libbie Wasson spent a few days in Ft. Wayne this week, the guests of Mrs. Mat James.

Some people are becoming very smart when away from home. Hereafter, they will be more careful about picking things up and dashing them down.

Last Monday, Sept 15, at three o'clock, a goodly number congregated at the new church, to see the corner stone laid and deposits made. A brief but pointed address was made by Rev. S. S. Stanton.

James Pyles, of Girard, Kansas, was here during fair time, shaking hands with his many friends. We think he has the benefit of the Greeley adage, "Young man, go West and grow up with the country."

CORUNNA.

Hurrah for Cleveland!

N. K Miller is home visiting friends.

Miss Frank Calkins is reported quite sick.

David Luttman lost two of his horses The cause was black fever.

Quite a number of Richalnd teachers attended the institute at Auburn last week.

Miss Tillie Shippy is visiting friends and relatives in the vicinity of Jackson, this week.

Mr. Knaur has recently closed his store on surprising conditions We hope he will soon be able to retain his old customers.

School teacher—Who in this class can name and describe the city farthest north?

Little Charley and Tom raise their hands.

Teacher—Give us your theory, Tommy.

Tommy—It is Hammerfest, inhabited and settled by Dutch.

Teacher—Is that all? Charley, what is your theory?

Charley—Ma said they were curly dutch, and it was so cold their wives had to milk the cows and clean the stables out, and the boss and hands would sit by the stove

Teacher—Havent they hired girls there?

Charley—No, and if one of their wives got sick they would have to hold a birthday collection party to pay the doctor bill.

Teacher—What about their professions? Are they good souls?

Charley—No: there was one that had a soul, and he would go twice a week to get it pegged on.

Teacher—Take your seat, Charley. I will call on you after while.

An expert says the Florida phosphate, though immense in extent, are disappointing as to richness, and the proportion of high grades is exceedingly small.

Two Doses.

G. W. Spellman, a prominent merchant of Elkhart, Ind., says: Two doses of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup completely cured my child of a severe attack of croup. I have used a great many different croup medicine but have never found any so efficient as Dr. Marshall's which makes it a very necessary article for the family.

Yours,

G. W. Spellman.

Sold by F. E. Davenport.

The demand for photographs of celebrities has fallen off so largely in London that photographers are dropping that branch of their business.

Our Druggists.

F. E. Davenport says they are selling more of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup than any other preparation, for coughs, colds, etc., it being cheaper, more pleasant to take and guaranteed to cure. The price is only 25cts, making it the cheapest reliable cough medicine in the market. Sold by F. E Davenport.

West Branch, Mich., was infested so badly by wolves that the berry crop was left almost untouched.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

W. A. Patterson has been painting his new barn.

Mrs. Dr. Broughton is attending the Angola fair.

A child of Mr. Snyder in the country died last week.

Rev. Butler is spending this week in Waterloo, at home.

Great numbers of hogs were brought into town last week.

Last week Thursday Mrs. Smizer, of Ft. Wayne, visited Waterloo.

Mr. and Mrs. Myrtle are the richer for being the possessors of a young boy.

Last Thursday Mrs. J. A. Denison went to Montpelier to attend the fair.

Rev. S. P. Klotz has been appointed pastor of the U. B. church for this year.

Mrs. J. D. Campbell took the noon train Tuesday for Angola, to visit the fair.

On Wayne street in front of the Miller property, a wide cement sidewalk has been made.

Last Saturday S. Z. Dickinson went to Quincy, Mich., to visit a brother who lives there.

Will Patterson is rejoicing over a 9-lb boy, who arrived at his home last Wednesday.

Mrs. A. Richards and Mrs. H. M. Lamport were in Waterloo last Thursday, the guests of Mrs. W. O. Bulter.

A number of persons have passed through Waterloo on their way to Angola to visit the fair there this week.

Ernie Williamson has been quite sick for a couple of weeks and is not improving as rapidly as his friends would wish.

Mrs. Winslow is changing, repairing and papering her house, moving partitions, besides some shingling and painting.

S. J. Locke is improving his property on Wayne street by repainting, and otherwise improving it, in preparation for renters.

Amos Zerwis has moved from Auburn to Waterloo. He occupies a set of apartments in one of Mrs. Winslow's buildings.

William Bigler is arranging to dispose of his business in Angola, and when this is completed, he will make his home in Waterloo.

We understand Dr. Harry Chamberlain had a runaway last week, but was afterward seen driving into the barn, so nothing serious occurred.

Miss Mary Roby died last Friday after a sickness of some days. The funeral took place Sunday at two o'clock, and the services were held at her home at Mrs. Stevens', conducted by Rev. Mr. Arthur, from Angola. The floral offerings were numerous and very beautiful. The grave was lined with white canton flannel, and half way up, at intervals all round, were clusters of purple china-asters. Miss Roby was well known not only in Waterloo, Angola and Pleasant Lake but in all the country around, and she had very many friends. Mrs. Stevens has been smitten the second time in a brief period, and while no loss is like that of husband or wife, this last is more than a sister's loss, as Mrs. Stevens has for many years been both mother and sister to Mary. She has the heartfelt sympathy of many friends in this her second trial.

BUTLER.

Mrs. Ezra Flickinger, living about 2½ miles northeast of town was buried last week.

Ground has been broken for the new mill, and the structure will be pushed forward with all speed.

William Wilson, an aged farmer living three miles east of Butler was buried last Sunday. Mr. Wilson was a native of England, coming to Ohio about thirty-five years ago, and to Indiana about thirty years settling in Stafford township, and dying on the farm where he first settled. His funeral took place from the U. B. church two miles east of Butler, Rev. F. M. Stone, of the M.E. church officiating.

The picnic under the auspices of the Patrons of Industry last Saturday in the grove one mile north of Butler was the biggest surprise that the people of Butler have been treated to in many years. No handbills of mammoth size fluttered from building, bulletin board or road crossing, and but little if any thing was said about it, and our people expected at most a few hundred from the immediate neighborhood to assemble, but the result was far different. Long before the time for the meeting to begin the roads in all directions were dotted with approaching teams, and lenghty processions, until the road from town to the grounds were one continuous string of teams, from the one horse cart to the six-horse carry-all, with brass bands and martial music at close intervals. The procession must have been fully four miles long and the number on the ground at least three thousand. The utmost good feeling prevailed and had there been an able speaker on the ground the occasion would have been an assured success. Altogether the occasion was one of the most enjoyable the writer has been permitted to attend.

SUMMIT.

Miss Margaret Mortorff visited her sister Mrs. Hilt over Sunday.

The P. I. picnic near Butler was largely attended from this place.

Mrs. O. W. Stofer, of Hudson, visited her parents last Sunday.

O. W. Stofer and J. Miller, of Hudson, were in our town last Friday.

H. D. Snowberger and wife visited friends in Waterloo last Sunday.

Miss Noma Haines, of Waterloo, visited her aunt, Mrs. S. Clark a few days last week.

H. P. R. Lawson and wife were the guest of Joseph Rohm and family last Sunday.

Mrs G. D. Coonrod and daughter visited friends near Hamilton last Saturday and Sunday.

Noah Mortorff, of Jennings, Mich., visited his father, Jacob Mortorff last Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. McDougle, of Hudson, and her daughter Mrs. Emma Lawson visited friends in Auburn last Friday.

Specimen Cases.

S H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shephard, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O, had five large fever sores on his leg, doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely, Sold by Robbins & McCord 3

A Linn County, Oregon, man bought a wild young pony for $20. He took him home, where he got out of the barnyard and ran for his life. The new owner got on a $100 horse and followed, catching the runaway, but crippling his horse and reducing his value to about $30.

An Important Matter.

Druggists everywhere report that the sales of the Restorative Nervine—a food and a medicine—are astonishing; exceeding anything they ever had, while it gives universal satisfaction in headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, sexual debility, backache, poor memory, fits, dizziness, etc. L. Failures in Life.

People fail in many ways. In business, in morality, in religion, in happiness and in health. A weak heart is often an unsuspected cause of failure in life. If the blood does not circulate properly in the lungs, there is shortness of breath, asthma, etc.; in the brain dizziness, headache, etc.; in the stomach, wind, pain, indigestion, faint spells, etc.; in the liver, torpidity, congestion, etc. Pain in the left side, shoulder and stomach is caused by heart strain. For all these maladies Dr. Miles' New Cure for the heart and lungs is the best remedy. Sold, guaranteed and recomended by F. E. Davenport. Treatise free. 3

A Farmer's Wife on the Tariff.

[Coshocton, O. Democrat.]

One of the most striking papers ever read before any gathering of agriculturists was the paper by Mrs. I. H. Elliott, of Princeton, captioned "Cackle from the Farm," read before the farmers' institute of the eighth congressional district at its closing session in Sherwood's opera house, in Ottawa, Ill. Speaking of the action of the Ways and Means Committee in hearing suggestions from manufacturers of all kinds she said:

"I believe I could go before that committee myself, if it was not quite so far to walk. If I did Mr. McKinley would probably say:

"Well, madam, what can I do for you?" 'Mr. McKinley, I would say, 'I live on an Illinois farm. I notice by the papers that all the other folks have been here to ask you to arrange matters so as to secure for them a good round profit in their various business. The fact is this, that whisky and tobacco scheme of yours will not be much help out our way. We don't use very much of it in our cooking, and so far as I am concerned I would prefer that you tax them so high that nobody could possibly reach them instead of putting them within the easy access of everybody. Our corn is down to 20 cents, cattle and hogs to 2½ cents, and we are just giving away our hay and potatoes. We haven't made any money for a long time, and I've walked all the way to Washington to ask if you can't let up a little on things we are compelled to buy?

"The Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee would probably say: 'My dear madam, you are really mistaken. Don't you know that a high tariff on everything you eat and use on your farms enables the manufacturer to pay high prices to his employes who with bushels of money and enormous appetites buy everything you can raise and pay a big price for it? Why bless your agricultural heart, don't you know that a war tariff makes a home market, and that a home market is the best market? Why my good woman this country is booming right along and getting richer and richer. I know any number of men who are making a million of dollars a year, and if the country is prosperous of coorse the farmer is prosperous. I am afraid you don't quite know what you are talking about.'

'Mr. McKinley,' I would answer, 'I have heard you say that before. Mr. Randall says so, Mr. Cullom and Mr. Farwell say so, and I have heard a half dozen farmers of my own town say the same thing and I suppose I ought to believe it if the price of everything we raise on a farm did not compel us to say that there is not a word of truth in it. But I have a proposition to make to you. I would like to have you do for the farmers just what you have been doing for other people who come here to see you that is, subsidize us a little. Pay us a bounty of, say, $1.25 on every bushel of corn and oats we raise; $3.25 on wheat, $15 a piece on hogs, $75 on cattle, $150 on horses, and—well, we don't want to ask too much—say 75 cents on an ordinary chicken. Of course these are not war prices, but I think our folks would be satisfied with those rates. From the experience we farmers have had I am sure your committee can so arrange it as to slip this little tax out of the pockets of the manufactures and monopolists without their knowing it. I would like to have you so legislate the tariff as to compel them to buy everything from us, and then Major, I would like to have you stand around and see us whack up the prices on them! I would ask $3 a piece for my eggs. I would charge your friends and Mr. Carnegie eighty five cents for an early rose potato. Jay Gould could not buy a loaf of bread for less than $15. With my first crop of garden sass I'd buy a dress that would make those Washington women who telegraph a description of their dresses all over the country feel silly. Now if you will help us in this little game, we farmers will make you President of the United States. It strikes a woman with great logical force that if this government goes into business of legislating so that one business can receive a sure profit, it ought in all fairness to do the same for the farmers."

Another telling point was this:

"I cannot let the opportunity go by without saying that it would be a slight tribute to agriculture to place salt and lumber on the free list, side by side with the oil of lavender and the attar of roses, thereby giving the American farmer a fair chance with the city dude, and that it is beyond a woman's understanding to discover the wisdom of the statemanship that will lay a tax on the commodities she uses in the kitchen and offer her free whisky and free tobacco?

One other pertinent suggestion to the farm was the following:

"You may raise chickens as large as ostriches; you may grow your sheep and hogs until they are as large as cattle; you may improve your cattle and horses until they are as large as elephants; you may raise pumpkins as large as hogsheads, and it will not help you one particle until you hit upon some plan to sell one bushel of corn and one ton of hay for what you can now get for two and pay $1 tax where you now pay $5. Speed the day when the Illinois farmer may learn just how much it costs to be a fool."

The address created a profound sensation among her audience, and it is probable that she will be called on to repeat it several times yet in other parts of the state.

A Professional Nurse.

One who is thoroughly competent, who is neat, tidy and quiet, whose very touch is medicine, who knows what to do, and when to do it is a blessing indeed, but so few there are who fully understand, know, and are able to use the requirements, the endorsement of a medicine by such a person should carry weight. They have practical experience, and opportunities of seeing and noting the effect better really than the physician in charge, as they are with the patient day and night and every change and sympton is noted and watched. I have myself used and in my profession as nurse administered your Red Clover remedies, and find that it does all and more than you say for it. I cheerfully recommend it for troubles of stomach, liver or bowels, and have advised my friends to use it, which has been done and in every case with the very best results, and all speak of Loose's Extract Red Clover in the highest terms.

THE RIVER RHONE

Overflowing Its Banks and Inundating the Whole Country.

Paris special: The floods in the department of Gard have caused much damage to property. On Sunday the River Rhone rose nineteen feet, and the town of Beaucaire was flooded. At Valcrangue, on the Herault, thirty-nine miles northwest of Nimes, the river overflowed its banks and undermined a portion of a cemetery. A number of coffins were washed out and, together with their contents, floated down the river. The Ardeche River is greatly swollen. At Aubenas a dyke collapsed and the surrounding country was flooded. Houses were undermined by the waters and fell, and the vineyards throughout the district were devastated. Three persons were killed. The Gardon River, in the department of Gard, has also overflowed its banks. The country along the river, with its standing crops, is an immense swamp. The Monssae bridge has been destroyed, and the railroad and telegraphic service have been stopped.

The Avignon and Caderousse districts, along the Rhone, in the department of Van Cluse, are submerged and the workshops and factories have been closed.

Smash-Up in Idaho.

A wreck occurred on the Oregon Short Line about three miles west of Nampa, Idaho. A freight train broke in two between Caldwell and Nampa, and part of it, with the caboose, ran down the grade at a rapid rate. The night east-bound passenger, running at high rate of speed, ran into the freight, reducing the caboose to kindling wood and throwing the rest of the freight cars in the ditch. Patrick Boyle, of Boise River, a passenger, was killed. Engineer Kaiser was severely injured and the fireman badly scalded. Boyle's body was found in the wreck fearfully mangled. All the passengers were badly shaken up. The engineer of the passenger train says there was no light on the rear end of the caboose.

Sad End of a Romance.

Daniel Berry, a carpenter of Henderson, Ky., well advanced in years, has brought suit for divorce from his wife, Amelia Berry. The action is the consequence of a romantic marriage contracted by the old man a year since. He advertised in a Chicago paper for a wife and obtained a spruce looking, middle-aged woman. She came to Henderson after the preliminaries had been arranged by correspondence, and the two were married. The female sharper, for such she turned out to be, only lived with the old gentleman three days. During that time she bamboozled him out of $400, with which amount she skipped the State and has not been heard from.

The Anti-Lottery Law.

The anti-lottery law passed by Congress last week has had wonderful effect on the New Orleans postoffice, and its business has been decreased so that a large reduction in the force has become necessary. Although the law has been in operation only a few days, the business in the registry and the money order department has shrunk from 30 to 40 per cent. It is estimated by the postoffice inspectors that this business will shrink two-thirds in consequence of denying the lottery the use of the mails and that the general business of the office will decline over 33 per cent. The lottery people are using express companies.

False Imprisonment.

Oklahoma City (I. T.) special: H. W. Sawyer, editor of the Times, has commenced suit against Capt. Stiles, in command of the United States troops stationed at this place, for $10,000 damages, the charge being false imprisonment. Last September, during the charter election called by Mayor Couch, the troops under Capt. Stiles were ordered out to quell the riot caused by the opponents of the election call. Conspicuous among the latter was H. W. Sawyer, and so obnoxious was he to the military that Capt. Stiles ordered his arrest and imprisonment. He was released after a few hours confinement and now brings a suit for damages.

A New Pullman.

Minneapolis (Minn.) special: A land scheme, the most gigantic ever formed in the Northwest, has just become public. About 3,000 acres, near the city limits, on three trunk lines, have been bought at a cost of $175,000. The land will be built up with manufactories and mechanics' houses, somewhat after the plan of Pullman, Ill., only on a much larger scale. It is estimated that $7,000,000 will be expended on the land and improvements. Factories employing an aggregate of about 1,000 hands are already secured.

Robbed and Murdered.

A special from Logan, Ohio, says that four masked robbers entered the house of John Krimm, an aged farmer living near Gibsonville, Hocking County, struck him and his aged wife with a blunt instrument, robbed the house and escaped. The old man died from his injuries. No clue has been obtained that is likely to lead to the identity of the robbers.

Terrible Vengeance.

Horace Mercer, aged 17, killed his father, at his home, near Dardanelle, Ark. The father had whipped the son for misconduct in the afternoon. The boy crept into his father's room, and as he lay asleep, blew out his brains with a pistol. The parricide is in jail.

Five Killed.

A train running from Florence to Fiesole, Italy, was wrecked. Five of the passengers were killed and twenty severely wounded.

AN AMERICAN

Ship in a Hurricane and Loses Eight Men Drowned.

Boston special: The ship Challenger, of Bath, but in here in distress. She has nothing but her fore and main masts with fore and main yards standing. Capt. Thompson reports having experienced adverse winds nearly the whole time after leaving West Hartlepool until the hurricane of August 31. Eight men were lost overboard and four injured. During the threatening weather just preceding the hurricane the crew had shortened most of the sails, and when the wind struck the ship all hands were aloft hauling in the others. The jibs filled and carried away the jibboom, topmast and top-gallant mast, and they were either thrown into the sea or landed on portions of the wreckage, a few falling to the deck uninjured. T. C. H. McKean had his left leg broken; Thomas Quinn had two ribs fractured and Seaman Ramon had his right leg broken. Seaman Runk was hauled in from the sea in a badly bruised condition. The following were cast overboard and lost: Thomas Gaul, of Australia; Con Forsburg, of Sweden; O. Gleson, of Sweden; George Bruhn, of Germany; C. H. Ludwig, of Germany; Charles Fleming, of Richmond, Va.; Ole Olsen, of Norway, and a seaman named Winvern, of Germany.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.

Frightful Disaster on the Illinois Central at Chicago.

Chicago special: One of the most frightful railroad wrecks the Illinois Central has experienced for some time, occurred at Western Avenue, in which at least ten persons were killed and a number seriously injured. The fated train was an excursion and had left this city in the morning with several hundred persons on board who went to Fernwood, a small station on that line, to spend the day. While returning they had stopped at the Western Avenue depot to take water. Shortly afterwards they heard a train coming at full speed behind them and before any one realized the situation, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy cannon ball express dashed into the rear end of the excursion train with the above results. The wreck presented a fearful sight, the engine being piled on the top of the rear coach. Men, women, and children were seen to make their way from the windows and other means of escape, while others were pinned beneath seats and window sashes. A mother and daughter by the name of Brennan, who were seated in the rear car, were killed outright, their bodies being terribly mangled. Miss Pilgrim, who tried to make her escape by crawling through the window after she had been injured, was caught by falling timbers and received such a stunning blow that she soon expired. A little boy, whose name is unknown, had his head severed from his body. Mr. Nehman had both of his limbs severed from his body and died soon afterwards. Four or five other victims were taken away in the ambulance to the morgue, and their friends notified. The number of injured is estimated at fifteen, all of whom were taken to the hospital. It is believed that six of this number cannot live, as their injuries are so serious that they cannot long survive. Engineer Dickinson, together with his fireman, who manned the Cannon Ball express, have been arrested, and were locked up in the central police station.

WRECK'S WORK.

Fifteen People Wounded on an Arkansas Road.

A bad wreck occurred on the Warren branch of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railroad five miles west of Colden, Ark. It occurred to the east-bound train consisting of several freight cars, a baggage and mail car, and one passenger coach; about forty-five passengers being aboard. The engine, in passing over a weak rail, broke it. The freight cars passed over without displacing the rail, but the baggage car and passenger coach jumped the track, rolled down the embankment and were badly wrecked. Fifteen of the passengers sustained injuries. The following is the list:

W. J. Cole, traveling salesman, badly hurt about the head and back; seriously injured; A. W. Freeman, of Baxter, Ark., head badly hurt; M. E. Ferguson, of Baxter, head cut and crushed; T. W. Owens, of Dermont, Ark., fractured skull; Miss Nellie Anderson; Dermott, face badly bruised and injured internally; Mr. Manning, of Warren, hip mashed; Mrs. Steve Caston, of Monticello, head cut and arm sprained; Michols, arm crushed; Mrs. Bailey, Monticello, shoulder bruised; J. Bratton, traveling salesman, arm broken and leg bruised; W. H. Sephow, Baxter, ankle mashed; Miss Sephow, Baxter, bruised about head; Conductor W. D. Hobson, badly bruised about the back and internal injuries.

Both Conductor Hobson and Mr. Cole are dangerously hurt, and the chances are thought to be against their recovery, while several of the others are seriously injured. It is not thought, however, that the injuries of any of them are dangerous.

Bloody Battle.

Catlettsburg (Ky.) special: Two or three weeks ago Kehoe, a contractor on the Norfolk & Western Railroad, near Wayne C. H., W. Va., skipped out, leaving debts unpaid. Among the creditors were 200 Italian laborers. As a result of the contractor's flight several men were killed the other day. The contractor who succeeded Kehoe on the railroad put a number of new laborers to work in a cut where the Italians previously had been engaged. To this the Italians objected, and ran the new men out three successive times and demanded the money due them. During each battle several men on either side were badly injured. The contractor appealed to the civil authorities for protection, and the Sheriff of Wayne County, with a posse of twenty men, appeared at the works to arrest the Italians. Immediately upon the appearance of the Sheriff's posse a terrible fight ensued. The Italians surrounded the Sheriff and party and for a time things looked decidedly blue for them. Firing was general all along the line. After the shooting, several men were found, stretched upon the ground, dead. Forty Italians were arrested and jailed. None of the Sheriff's posse were hurt badly. The scene of the fight is fifty miles from here and information is hard to obtain.

"Are You Ready?"

Gustave G. Koch, 36 years old, a crayon artist, born in Vienna, and Emilie Ross, aged 19, and born in Berlin, an actress with Amburg's troupe, committed suicide in New York City. Koch was pacing up and down the up-town station of the elevated railroad at the Bowery and Canal street several times with his hands in his pockets. He stopped at the south end, when a woman put her head out of the third story window of the Bowery building. He said to her: "Yes, I have come, Emilie. Are you ready?" The next moment at the signal "ready" he shot himself, fell dead under the window and the woman committed the same act in her room. Emilie left a letter addressed to her aunt, Mary Koon, with whom she boarded, in which she spoke about her lover Koch, a quarrel with her mother, a determination of Koch and herself to commit suicide and asking that her body be cremated.

Wabash Wreck.

A rear end collision occurred on the Wabash track near Forest Park, just inside the city of St. Louis. The Denver express ran into the local accommodation of the Colorado road, which had stopped to pick up their switchmen. C. W. Howard, engineer of the Denver express, of St. Louis, was killed instantly, and J. S. Croslan, his fireman, badly hurt; Fred Dustford, Pullman conductor, seriously hurt; Joe Nelson, newsboy, badly injured. There are fourteen others who were slightly injured, mostly from St. Louis.

Terrible Massacre.

San Francisco special: Mr. O. W. Owens, a merchant of Manila, who arrived here on the steamship Gealic, states that on August 10 a terrible massacre occurred in the town of Ponapee, in the Caroline Islands. The Spanish soldiers, who were building a fortress at the side of the town, left a number of rifles in the fort. On August 8, the natives overpowered the guard, seized their rifles, and attacked the town. Thirty-two Spaniards were killed. Several Spanish men-of-war have been sent from Manila to quell the disturbance.

Played with Fire.

A terrible accident befell Earl, the 2-year-old son of Samuel Lowe and wife, of Fort Wayne, Ind. With that insatiable curiosity of young innocents, the child investigated the contents of the kitchen stove while his mother was absent from the room for a brief time, and in his dangerous play heaped red-hot coals on the stove hearth. Just how the accident happened will probably never be known, but while thus engaged in playing with the coals, the little one's clothing took fire. His screams brought the mother quickly to the room. She found her darling wrapt in flames. With presence of mind rarely seen in times of emergency, she procured a shawl which she used to smother the fire, but not until the cruel element had burned through the child's under garments to the flesh. The young victim's entire body was more or less burned, and he cannot recover.

The Central Strike.

Albany special: Detective Pinkerton says that the Troy jury, which failed to indict Kuman and Cordial for train-wrecking, was packed with sympathizers of the strikers and that the strikers were known to have had talks with certain of the jurymen. Hamilton Harris, counsel for the railroad company, will probably bring the cases before the grand jury. Vice President Webb while passing through here on his way to New York, said that none of the strikers would be reinstated. They had had ample opportunity to apply before this week when the strike was declared off. He said that the company had enough men now to operate all the departments and that none would be discharged to make places for strikers. If any of the men leave the company will fill vacancies with other new men, as it does not intend to take back any of the 1,300 strikers.

Terrible Tales of the Treatment of Island Savages.

San Francisco special: Late advices from the South Sea Islands tell a startling story of the labor or semi-slave treatment of island savages. Whole islands in the Solomon group in New Hebrides, and in other sections in Polynesia have been depopulated by the ravages of men employed to seize and transport natives to the plantations of New Caledonia and the Fiji islands. Scarcely a vessel arrives here from Australia that does not bring news of the massacre of some white trader or skipper by natives who have been gradually driven into desperation by the treatment they have received from the whites. Thirty or more vessels are engaged in the nefarious traffic and no less than 10,000 native savages have been taken into slavery.

The Conductors.

The Brotherhood of Conductors, in session at Toledo, Ohio, elected the following officers: Grand Chief Conductor, Geo. W. Howard, re-elected; Grand Secretary and Treasurer, D. J. Caar, Los Angeles, re-elected; Grand Chaplain, C. J. Houghwont, Ashland, Wis., re-elected; Grand Senior Conductor, R. V. Ballard, Way Cross, Ga.; Grand Junior Conductor, O. W. Stevens, Hornellsville, N. Y.; Grand Inside Sentinel, Ed. C. Patterson, LeGrand, Oregon; Grand Outside Sentinel, F. Gilluly, San Bernardino, Cal.; Assistant Grand Chief Conductor, J. W. Martin, Temple, Texas; Executive Committee, John R. Long, Seymour, Ind.; George Lovejoy, Evansville, Ind.; William Mattison, Toledo, Ohio. Jacksonville, Fla., was selected as the place, and the third Monday in September the date of the next annual meeting.

Terrific Explosion at Cleveland.

Sparks from a Cleveland and Pittsburgh locomotive set the store of the Excelsior Oil Company, located near the junction of Bessemer and Atlantic streets, Cleveland, Ohio, on fire and the flames immediately spread to the tanks and store houses in the immediate vicinity. Three tank cars, standing on the track near the houses, in which refined oil was stored, exploded with terrific force, throwing iron weighing from 300 to 1,000 pounds down the hillside over 500 feet. A number of employes of the oil company were caught under a sheet of flame while digging ditches around the big tanks that were filled with oil, and six of them were pretty badly burned. The loss will amount to $75,000; insurance, $35,000.

A Bad Wreck.

An extra train on the Erie road, east bound, stopped at the Summit switch, just west of Middletown, N. Y., to allow the Wells Fargo express to pass. It is supposed that the conductor, flagman, and trainmen in the caboose of the train were all asleep, having neglected to send out a flag. The result was, the express train as it rounded the curve, dashed into the rear of the freight train before it could run into the switch. The caboose was crushed and the conductor, Charles Leppert, and the flagman, Wm. H. Duffy, were instantly killed, and their bodies badly mangled. Two brakemen, John Miller and Frank Hegeman, were injured.

Killed Before His Son's Eyes.

Peter F. Johnson, aged 55, was killed almost instantly at Lake Shaft, Mich., by a heavy log which was being hoisted by chains but broke away. Johnson's 14-year-old son was standing a few feet from his father and saw the old man's brains battered out before his eyes.

Miser Who Had Forgotten His Savings.

Just over the county line of Shelby County, on Flat Rock River, lives William Brown, an eccentric old farmer. Last spring Mrs. Brown died, leaving the old man and the youngest child, a daughter, at home. A few days ago he applied to the Court to have a guardian appointed for him. The guardian immediately entered upon the discharge of his duties. The old man turned over about forty thousand dollars of his savings, and told the guardian that he had been in the habit of hiding his money, and the places from which he dragged the large sums of money indicated that he had yet some knowledge of his own eccentricity. The guardian thereupon instituted search for more hidden wealth. Climbing through a scuttle-hole into the garret, he found an old coffee-pot full of gold and silver of the early specie series of the country, amounting to $1,500, and in a nail-keg sitting in one corner was $300, and in an old rag-poke in another part of the house was $60. The money had evidently been hidden for many years, and the old man had entirely forgotten that he had ever had it. He has two children to inherit his fortune at his demise. One is the wife of Marion Covert, who resides in Kansas, and is himself very wealthy. The other is a single daughter, who resides with the old man.

—Earnest Dorsey, a Vandalia brakeman, was caught between two cars, at Crawfordsville and seriously injured. He is yet alive, but fears are entertained that the result will be fatal.

—An interesting feature of the old settlers' reunion on the banks of Grassy Creek, near Nashville, was the marriage of William H. Warford and Miss Alice Henry, each aged 76 years.

—John Swanson was attempting to dehorn a bull on his farm in Jackson County, when the enraged animal pinned him down and crushed him to death. His wife was seriously injured while trying to rescue him.

—There is trouble in the Shelbyville Christian Church. The trustees requested the Rev. Crim to resign and the congregation voted to retain him. The trustees were then asked to resign and they refused to do so.

—Frank L. Burgan, a Vandalia swithman, tried to jump on a car in the yards at Terre Haute. He stumbled and fell, the car knocking him under the wheels. A leg and arm were almost severed and he died a few hours later.

—In the Circuit Court at Greencastle, a verdict for $2,000 was rendered against the Indianapolis, Decatur and Western railway for running over a boy named Wilson, by which he lost his leg. The train was making a running switch, and the boy, in crossing the track, was struck by the cars, knocked down and run over.

—For some time past the farmers along Eel River, near the Owen County line, have suffered from the overflow of its water, caused by the dam at the mill, Grove Mill, in Owen County. The other night, at the hour of midnight, the dam was blown up with dynamite, it is supposed by persons who had suffered in the manner indicated.

—The report sent from New Castle to several daily papers recounting the alleged discovery of parts of a human skeleton in the house of the court-house janitor was a "fake," and the result of a practical joke played upon an enterprising correspondent. The bones were some used in a trial in court some years ago, and their whereabouts have been well known for a long time.

—At Bedford, Zulin, a daughter of Dr. J. W. Trainer, aged 4 years, was playing with matches in company with a little girl of about her age when her clothing caught fire. The children were some distance from home at the time of the occurrence and it was not discovered until the flames had almost entirely consumed the little girl's clothing. A large portion of the surface of her body was burned to a crisp. No hopes of her recovery are entertained.

—The body of Alfred Slinny, a 17-year-old boy, residing with his parents three miles east of Lagro, was found in the Wabash River near Hanging Rock. The lad, with Alonzo Williams, had gone to Andrews, and there obtaining liquor, became very drunk. Upon returning to Lagro Williams propped his companion up in the buggy, fastened the reins over the dash and started him homeward. The horse reached Slinny's, but the buggy was vacant.

—A terrific explosion occurred at Hartford City Glass Company's saw-mill. The owner of the mill was blown one hundred feet, and the head-sawyer and helper were each terribly cut and burned. Pieces of the boiler, a cut-off saw and frame and loose articles in the rear of the boiler were blown several hundred feet. Fidler, the owner, is the worse injured, and there is small chance for his recovery. The explosion is believed to have been due to the use of muddy water.

—Patents have been issued to Indianians as follows: William H. Bonwell, Brookville, wheel cultivator; Omer T. Conger, Indianapolis, water heater; Charles G. Conn, Elkhart, musical wind instrument; Israel Hogeland, Indianapolis, assignor of one-half to B. F. Bangs, Chicago, Ill., churn; W. J. Kerh, assignor of one-half to D. Klotz, Fort Wayne, temporary binder; Daniel E. Reagan, Terre Haute, nut lock; Nicholas Smith, assignor to C. A. P. Smith, Logansport, lift pump.

—At Muncie Fannie Weiley, Doan Nichols and Ret. Shutterly were found guilty of abduction and the two former sentenced to four and a half years in the State Penitentiary. The Shutterly woman turned State's evidence and got but thirty days in jail. The women allured Miss Meade Waters, aged 16, into the Weiley woman's house of ill-fame, at Indianapolis, where her father found and returned her to her home, six miles from Muncie, where she suicided that night with strychnine. The defense used Morton Shoecraft, colored, as testimony that he had carnal relations with the girl, in an attempt to prove her a prostitute before going to Indianapolis, and Shoecraft has fled to evade rough treatment at the hands of indignant citizens.

—The directors of the Montgomery County Fair have borrowed enough money to pay off all premiums and expenses. The sum needed was about two thousand dollars.

—Miss Nora Zellers, of Farmersburg, was taken to the hospital at Terre Haute. She had been run over by seventeen cars of a coal train on the Alum Cane branch, and the surgeons say that she will die if the one remaining leg can not be amputated, which operation she is now too weak to endure.

—Allen Eshelman, a farmer living near Anderson, made a valuable find on his farm. It is nothing more nor less than the discovery of a gold nugget about the size of a hen egg. The Hanshalter Brothers, of Anderson, analyzed the nugget and found it to contain gold dust. Mr. Eshelman is highly elated over the find, and states there are wagon loads of the stuff on his farm. The discovery was made near a stream of mineral water.

—Mrs. Jeptha Turner, aged 80, a pioneer resident of Wayne County, was found dead in bed.

BLAINE'S IDEAS AGAIN.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE WRITES ON RECIPROCITY.

Why This Policy Should Be Entered Into at Once with the Adoption of the Pending Tariff Bill—The West to Be Particularly Benefited.

Boston dispatch: The following letter dated at Bar Harbor, Maine, is given out for publication:

"Col. W. W. Clapp, Editor Boston Journal—My Dear Sir: I am in receipt of your favor asking me if I can attend the annual banquet of the Boot and Shoe club of Boston in October. You add that the members are 'in hearty sympathy with my views regarding the best method of extending American trade, and would be glad to have me address them.'

"I regret that my engagements will not permit me to accept the invitation, but you will please thank the club for the compliment they pay me. I am glad to hear that the members of the club are interested in a system of reciprocal trade with Latin America. They can do great good by counteracting a certain phase of New England opinion, entertained at home as well as in Washington—an opinion which I must regard as in the highest degree unwise and hurtful to New England interests. New England is to receive in the new tariff the amplest protection for every manufacturing industry within her borders, both great and small, and it will, in my judgment, be both inexpedient and injurious for her representatives to disregard a measure which will promote Western interests.

"I have lately received a letter from Mr. J. F. Imbs of St. Louis, a leading representative of the flour interests and president of the late convention of millers at Minneapolis. Speaking for the grain and flouring interest of that great section Mr. Imbs says that 'advices of recent date from Cuba state that the duties now collected on American flour are at a higher rate than was first supposed to be the case.' And he adds; 'I respectfully submit that the American miller will be unable to retain any part of the Cuban flour trade unless immediate relief is secured.'

"In view of these facts is it possible that a protectionist Congress can even think of opening our markets to Cuba's products free while allowing a great Western interest to be absolutely excluded from her market by a prohibitory tariff? With reciprocity the West can annually sell many hundred thousand barrels of flour in the markets of Cuba and Porto Rico, together with a large mass of other agricultural products. Without reciprocity she will be driven more and more from those markets.

"Giving the fullest protection to all Eastern interests, as the proposed tariff does, surely no man of good judgment, certainly no protectionist of wise forecast, wishes to expose a Western interest to serious injury, especially when it is manifestly easy to protect and promote it—manifestly easy because at this very time the boards of trade, the chambers of commerce, and public opinion in Havana are demanding reciprocal trade with the United States. I select Cuba and Port Rico for examples because in certain quarters it has been said that, while we might secure reciprocity with some little countries in South America, we could do nothing with the Spanish islands. Let us at least give the Spanish islands an opportunity to speak for themselves.

"Certain wise men ask: How can we sell farm products in South America when the same things are produced there? Cereals are undoubtedly grown in the southernmost parts of South America, but the wise men will remember that cereals and sugar do not grow in the same soil, and that the sugar countries of South and Central America and the West India Islands contain 40,000,000 of people, who import the largest portion of their breadstuffs. Indeed, the largest part of the sugar product of all Latin America is at our doors, and we can greatly enlarge our exchanges there if Congress will give us the opportunity for reciprocal trade.

"Another class observe that they want time to study the system. To this I might reply that the best method of studying a system is to observe its practical workings. While studying in the abstract and refusing to take some object lessons, these gentlemen propose to open our markets to Latin-American products, free of all charge, without asking Latin America to give us in turn some freedom in their markets. The object lesson immediately before us is the treatment of the sugar question. Shall we make Latin America a gift of that trade? When we have studied that lesson we shall be prepared for the second.

"The worst proposition of all is put forward by those who say: 'Let us put sugar on the free list now and next year we will take up the subject of reciprocity.' If I understand their logic it is to make sugar free this year without condition and next year to ask Spain if she will not kindly consent to grant us reciprocal trade. Holding the complete vantage ground ourselves, the proposed policy transfers the vantage ground to Spain. Instead of granting favor to Spain to-day we are to ask her for a favor to-morrow. Those who take this ground belong to that class of careful guardians of property who prepare a very strong lock for the stable after the horse is gone.

"I do not mean, in anything I have said, to imply that reciprocity is only a Western interest. As I remarked in a note to Senator Frye, it will prove beneficial and profitable both to the farm and the shop. What, for instance, could be more natural or more just than that in giving a free market in the United States to hides from the Argentine Republic we should ask the Argentine Republic to give a better market than we now have for the product of leather from the United States? The many forms in which our business interests will be promoted by reciprocity cannot be known until the active commercial men of the United States shall have developed those forms by investigation and experience. We shall not realize the full benefit of the policy in a day or a year, but shall we therefore throw away countless millions of trade, in addition to the $60,000,000 we have already thrown away, and then ignorantly declare, without trial that the system won't work?

"Finally, there is one fact that should have great weight, especially with the protectionists. Every free-trader in the Senate voted against the reciprocity provision. The free-trade papers throughout the country are showing determined hostility to it. It is evident that the free-trade Senators and the free-trade papers have a specific reason for their course. They know and feel that, with a system of reciprocity established and growing, their policy of free trade receives a most serious blow. The protectionist who opposes reciprocity in the form in which it is now presented knocks away one of the strongest supports of his system. The enactment of reciprocity is the safeguard of protection. The defeat of reciprocity is the opportunity of free trade.

"Yours very respectfully,

"JAMES G. BLAINE."

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capitol—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

VICE PRESIDENT MORTON presided in the Senate on the 16th inst. The House bill to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to sell certain lands and to grant the proceeds of such sale to the town of Pelican, Oneida County, Wis., for school purposes was passed, together with several other unimportant measures. The conference report on the railroad land-forfeiture bill was resumed, and after considerable debate a vote was taken and the conference report was agreed to—yeas, 30; nays, 13—a strict party vote. The House anti-lottery bill was then, on motion of Mr. Sawyer, taken from the calendar and passed without a word of discussion. On motion of Mr. Plumb the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the House bill, to repeal the timber-culture laws. Mr. Plumb, who reported the bill back from the Committee on Public Lands, moved an amendment in the nature of a substitute. The substitute was amended and agreed to and the bill passed. A conference was asked on the disagreeing votes, and Messrs. Plumb, Pettigrew and Walthall were appointed conferrees on the part of the Senate. The Senate then, on motion of Mr. Edmunds, took up from the calendar the Senate bill to establish a United States land court and to provide for the settlement of private land claims in certain States and Territories. The bill having been read was laid over and the Senate adjourned. The House spent the day debating the Enloe resolution regarding Kennedy's speech, which was so modified as to be an expression on the part of the House that it "disapproves and condemns" Mr. Kennedy's speech and a direction to the public printer to expunge it from the permanent Congressional Record. By a vote of 122 to 58 the matter was referred to the Committee on Judiciary. A bill was passed constituting Peoria, Ill., a port of delivery. The Speaker announced the appointment of the following conferrees on the tariff bill: Messrs. McKinley, Burrows, Bayne, Dingley, Mills, McMillin, and Flower. The House then adjourned.

THE Senate, on the 17th inst., considered and passed a number of bills on the calendar and then resumed the consideration of the Senate bill to establish a United States land court and to provide for the settlement of private land claims in the States of Nevada, Colorado, Wyoming, and in the Territories of New Mexico, Arizona and Utah. After a long discussion the bill was laid aside without action. The private pension bills on the calendar were taken up and eighty of them were passed in thirty minutes. The Senate then adjourned. In the House, Mr. Haugen (Wis.) demanded the regular order—being the Langston-Venable contested election case—but Mr. Payson (Ill.) interposed with the conference report on the land-grant forfeiture bill. The House decided—yeas, 62; nays, 117—not to consider the conference report. Mr. Haugen then called up the election case, against which Mr. O'Ferrall raised the question of consideration. During the roll-call nearly all the Democratic members deserted the chamber, leaving but a bare dozen present to look out for their interests. The result of the vote was announced: Yeas, 136; nays, 16—the clerk noting a quorum. Mr. Haugen immediately demanded the previous question on the election case, and the direction "All go out," was given by the Democratic managers. It was not necessary to put this direction into force, for after an emphatic protest of Mr. Cheadle (Ind.) against the stifling of debate, Mr. Haugen withdrew his demand and proceeded with an argument of the case. Mr. Cheadle, of Indiana, spoke against the majority resolution and the matter went over. The Speaker announced his signature to the river and harbor appropriation bill and the House took a recess, the evening session to be for the consideration of bills reported by the Committee on Military Affairs. At the evening session Mr. Allen (Mich.) presided. Several Senate bills were passed and the House at 10:30 adjourned.

IN the Senate, on the 18th inst., the calendar was taken up for an hour and the following bills, among others, were passed: House bill to amend the articles of war relative to punishment on conviction by court-martial; Senate bill to provide for the inspection of live cattle, hogs, and the carcasses and products thereof which are the subjects of interstate commerce; Senate bill to revive the grade of Lieutenant General in the army of the United States; Senate bill for the relief of women enrolled as army nurses; Senate bill granting the right of way to the Sherman and Northwestern Railway Company through the Indian Territory; the Senate bill appropriating $75,000 for a public building at Colorado Springs, Col. Mr. Manderson presented resolutions relative to the death of the late Representative Laird, and after remarks by Messrs. Paddock and Manderson the Senate adjourned. In the House, while attempting to get a quorum for the approval of the journal, the doorkeepers locked the doors to prevent Democrats leaving the chamber. Hardly had this been done before Representative Kilgore (Tex.) presented himself at the door on the Speaker's left hand and sought to go out into the lobby. He found that the door was locked, and the doorkeeper refused to unlock it. Mr. Kilgore gave a sudden and vigorous kick and the frail baize structure flew open and Mr. Kilgore strode out. He was followed by Representatives Crain (Tex.), Cummings (N. Y.), and Coleman (La.), who in turn forced the lock open without opposition from the door-keeper. At the moment Mr. Kilgore drove the door flying wide open Representative Dingley (Me.) was approaching from the other side. The door struck him with full force in the face, bruising his nose badly. Further proceedings under the call were dispensed with. The journal was then approved, the Clerk noting a quorum. Mr. Haugen demanded the previous question on the Langston-Venable contested election case. On ordering the previous question the vote stood: Yeas, 135; nays, 10. This being no quorum, a call of the House was ordered. There were but 151 members present, and the House adjourned.

IN the Senate, on the 19th inst., Mr. Plumb's resolution to recommit the bankruptcy bill to the Judiciary Committee with instructions to amend it by making it apply to voluntary bankruptcy only was taken up, and after discussion the bill was placed on the calendar without action. House bill to reduce the amount of United States bonds to be required of national banks and to restore to the channels of trade the excessive accumulations of lawful money in the treasury having been reached on the calendar, Mr. Sherman said he believed its passage would tend very much to quiet even the present agitation in the money market. Mr. Plumb said the bill had to a certain extent merit, but feared that it would finally result in a contraction of the currency. After further discussion the bill went over. Adjourned. In the House the day was spent in roll calls, the Speaker's count of a quorum being several times questioned and tellers being appointed to verify the count. The question of Venable being duly elected was lost—4 to 155—but on an attempt to declare Venable not elected the quorum was lost. By unanimous consent the House took a recess, the evening session to be for the consideration of private pension bills. At its evening session the House postponed until the 24th inst. the bill granting pensions to the widows of Gens. McClellan, Fremont, and Crook. Seventy-two private pension bills were passed, and the House, at 10:30, adjourned.

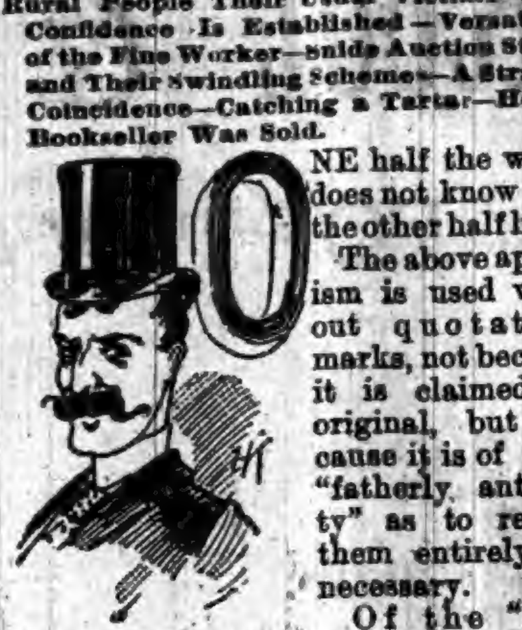
CITY CONFIDENCE MEN.

SHARPERS WHO THRIVE UPON THE CREDULITY OF OTHERS.

Rural People Their Usual Victims—How Confidence Is Established—Versatility of the Fine Worker—Snide Auction Stores and Their Swindling Schemes—A Strange Coincidence—Catching a Tartar—How a Bookseller Was Sold.



ONE half the world does not know how the other half lives.

The above aphorism is used without quotation marks, not because it is claimed as original, but because it is of such "fatherly antiquity" as to render them entirely unnecessary.

Of the "half" which obtains it livelihood by means not understood by its complementary section, a respectable portion—in point of numbers—does so through methods extremely doubtful, if not decidedly knavish. In country places, where each is personally known to every other, roguish genius finds a poor field for the display of its powers, and the knave is quickly marked as such and an embargo placed upon his operations. In consequence of this the rural rascal soon emigrates to the city, where his identity can be changed as opportunity or necessity requires.

CONVINCING MR. OLIVER GREEN THAT HE WAS A FRIEND.

From a "sharper" much may be learned of practical value to a thoroughly honest and consciencious man. It is, however, on the theory that evil must be understood that it may be avoided, that an expose of the modus operandi of sharpers, swindlers, confidence men—all the numerous fraternity of rogues who live by their wits, in fact—is rendered highly desirable.

Many readers will no doubt resent the imputation that such information could by any chance prove of service to them, believing that they "know a thing or two—or three," and, though country born and bred, can "take in" a great city, Chicago, for instance, without employing a personal guide, or carrying printed instructions. As the devil is said to gloat over the prospects presented by those who rely solely upon their own strength and righteousness, so the city sharper lies in wait for countrymen, "wise in their own conceit," whose arrival in town promises a large and, what is still more gratifying, an easily gathered harvest.

Country people are not behind the dwellers in cities, either in intelligence or sagacity; indeed, in both regards they no doubt excel the latter. They are easily victimized by the city "shark," because of their strange surroundings, the unfamiliar manners and customs of those with whom they come in contact, and their inability to comprehend the depravity to which human nature can descend, while at the same maintaining a decidedly prepossessing appearance and most courtly address.

The plans by which people can be relieved of their money without resorting to the sand-bag or other forms of violence, are as various as the brains of the "con men" are fertile in imagination and invention.

It is this great variety of methods which enmeshes and too frequently utterly discomfits the rural visitor. A well-dressed old gentleman will frequently stop him on the street and address him by the name of Thompson, learn that he is Oliver Green, of Greenville, apologizes for his mistake and passes on. A few minutes later he is hailed in his own proper name by a smooth confederate of the old gentleman, who, two times out of three, succeeds in convincing him that he has known his son at school, or his brother in Kansas, or even the visitor himself at Greenville. The particular scheme depends upon the circumstances of the case, especially the amount of information that has previously been secured. Confidence once established, the sharper adroitly learns the manner of man he has to deal with. This determined, the rest is usually plain sailing. If the proposed victim drinks, which fact must be ascertained without making any "breaks," his money is as good as won already. A "tough" saloon is visited, and when the sight-seer comes to himself, often enough in a police station, it is to mourn the loss of his money and watch.

The "con man" is exceedingly versatile, and can furnish any information or render any sevice that the victim may request. Should the latter desire to "see the town," he acknowledges himself to be a sport and takes him in tow, much as a tug-boat does a sailing vessel in the harbor, with the result of wrecking him on some reef, leaving him nothing of value to serve as salvage to whoever may come to his relief. If the stranger proves to be a church deacon, or even a clergyman, the "fine-worker" is not one whit abashed, but knows every preacher in the city, particularly the one his companion wishes to see, who is unfortunately out of town for the day. In the meantime another clergyman is often called on and machinery set in motion by which the visitor is relieved of his "roll."

ROBBED!

Sometimes the smartest "con man" meets his match. Not long ago a veteran in the art of duplicity met a young granger in a Chicago street, apparently convinced him that he was an old friend of his dead brother, and steered him into a snide gambling-house. Once there, he treated the faro-dealer to liquor, with the result of producing his seeming intoxication. Then he won quite a sum from the bank, and induced Mr. Verdant to try his luck. As the latter displayed quite a large amount of money, he was allowed to win at first by way of encouraging him to increase his play.

A STRANGE COINCIDENCE.

In ten minutes he had won twice as many dollars.

"I guess I'll be going," said he, as he pocketed the cash and rose to his feet.

"Don't think of it," remonstrated the "steerer." "You can make a thousand. It's as easy as lying."

"Then you'll be a sure winner. I'm not mean enough to beat my dead brother's friend out of the chance to make a fortune. Look out for him, though, for he might sober up any minute. I never saw such a rum-nosed fellow get so drunk on two drinks before. Go in and win. Twenty dollars will pay for my trip. I don't want the earth. Ta, ta."

SNIDE AUCTION-ROOM.

Not long ago a wealthy Iowa farmer visited Chicago, and stopped at a Clark street hotel. The day after his arrival he spent an hour writing a business letter. He noticed a sleepy-looking individual who sat next to him, but had no idea that that individual had succeeded in reading every word he had written. Half an hour later he stopped before a street mail box to deposit his epistle. As he raised it to the orifice his hand encountered that of a well-dressed man who was engaged in a similar undertaking. Then the farmer uttered a little exclamation of surprise, the name and address on the two envelopes being identical.

"I DON'T WANT THE EARTH."

"Excuse me," said he, "but this is a strange coincidence. You seem to know Prof. Orville Hartshorn, of Denver."

"Intimately," responded the stranger. "I have just arrived from the West to represent him in the negotiation of a block of mining stock which a friend of his, Mr. John Newton, thought of buying."

"I'm the very man! Give me your hand! Strangest coincidence I ever saw! The Professor wrote me that a friend would represent him here."

The identification seemed complete, and before night the farmer had exchanged $5,000 in money for entirely worthless stock.

In these days swindling has been reduced to a fine art, confidence men often making elaborate preparations, and that at no small expense, to discover and properly receive rural visitors.

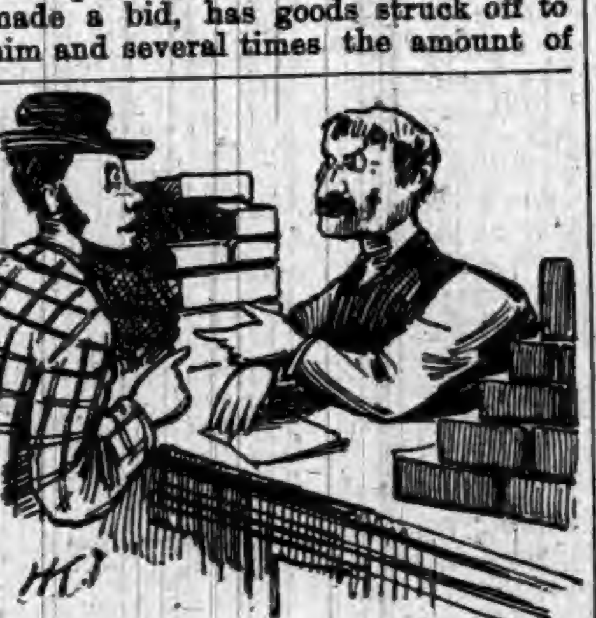
Last spring a well-to-do druggist, located in a thriving town of central Illinois, started for Chicago. On the train he fell into conversation with a very gentlemanly appearing man—in reality a sharper—who soon learned that he was going to the city at the call of Blank & Smith, a prominent and reputable real estate firm. He wished to invest a few thousands in real estate, and so take advantage of the World's Fair boom in prices, and the firm had advised him that they had a rare opening for cash.

The "gentlemanly stranger" soon left the train, and lost no time in sending a long dispatch to his partner in the city. Upon his arrival there the druggist was met at the depot by a young man who had no difficulty in convincing him that he was the confidential clerk of Messrs. Blank & Smith, whose card he presented, together with a forged note on one of their letter-heads, informing him that they had sent their clerk to meet him, as the matter must be closed immediately, or the best chance in Chicago be lost.

The unsuspecting dispenser of drugs entered a hack with the false clerk and was driven to a handsome piece of acre property, where he met the supposed owner. Satisfied with the price and that the title was good, he signed the contract on the spot, advancing $1,000 to secure the purchase.

The above instance is only one of many, which might be cited, where schrewd men, familiar with business transactions, have been duped by sharpers.

Mock or fraudulent actions have always been a prolific source of revenue to the city sharper. A room is secured on a business street, and a loud-voiced auctioneer placed in command of the situation. Seemingly fine watches and jewelry are sold at various prices. It is unnecessary to state that these goods are "snide," or, if genuine, are knocked down to a confederate. Often fine goods are offered for inspection, put up even for sale; a base imitation substituted when they are wrapped up for delivery. Many an unsuspecting countryman, having made a bid, has goods struck off to him and several times the amount of his offer demanded. Upon demurring and protesting he is threatened with arrest, and is often brought to terms. Of course the swindlers use judgment in selecting the victim of such a high-handed proceeding.



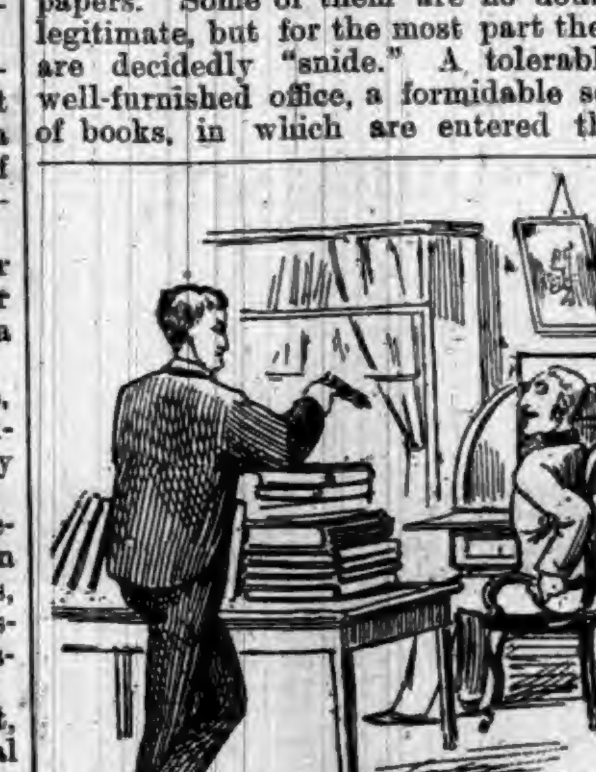
PRESENTING BILL FOR CIGARS.

"This rascal stole the razors, I suppose.
No matter if the fellow be a knave,
Provided that the razors shave."

These lines, from Dr. Wolcott's "Razor Seller," will serve to largely explain the success of the fraudulent auctioneer. The buyer generally supposes that the seller has come dishonestly by the goods he is slaughtering, and is hence eager to share in the profits, without incurring either the odium or legal consequences of the theft. Sometimes the information is given out by the confederates that a descent of the police is feared, and that sales are being rushed on that account. Then business becomes rushing, and no end of fraud is perpetrated in the confusion. Cigars are often sold in this way. Six or seven boxes are put up at a time and knocked down at about one-half their real value. As the goods cannot be delivered during the sale, a liberal deposit is required on each lot. When the entire stock has been disposed of the purchasers, who have been felicitating themselves on their rare good fortune, are astonished and discomfited at receiving a bill in which the price bid is charged at so much a box, instead of for the entire lot, as hey had understood. That being the established rule of such sales and the cigars not being worth the amount, they simply lose their deposit money and resolve to eschew snide auctions and stolen or smuggled goods in the future.

"Partner wanted in well-established real estate and brokerage business; $8,000 profits last year. Rare chance for an energetic man. Z. 59."

Such advertisements may be seen any day and every day in the Chicago papers. Some of them are no doubt legitimate, but for the most part they are decidedly "snide." A tolerably well-furnished office, a formidable set of books, in which are entered the description and terms of sale of a large amount of city and country real estate, which has been picked up here and there without the smallest authority from the owners or agents, and numerous equally delusive applications for large loans and "gilt-edged" security; these, together with a respectable-looking, smooth-talking old man and two or three "stool pigeons," who dart in at critical points during the negotiation with a "sucker" to accept imaginary offers and make imaginary loans, constitute the "well-established business" offered for sale.



"MY MONEY OR YOUR LIFE!"

This scheme has been so frequently exposed by the daily press that native game has become "timid" and difficult to "bag." Hence most of the victims are now secured from the country, where the Chicago papers have a very general circulation.

The price for an interest varies with the ability to pay of the party to be swindled. Once secured, the new "partner" is systematically "frozen out," that is, after various schemes have been played upon him and all his surplus cash secured. One man in Madison street "takes in," on an average, a partner a month. Frequently the swindled parties join the enterprise and get even by finding a new man with money to buy them out, or take a third interest in the "rapidly growing business."

"THE PUBLISHER SADLY CONTEMPLATED HIS WORTHLESS PURCHASE."

Sometimes a "tartar" is caught. Not long ago a prominent "operator" in this line of swindling "took in" a young man from Western Illinois. The latter found out his "mistake" the very next day. Having locked the door he rested a revolver across a pile of the firm's "books," the better to insure his aim, and made the following demand upon his urbane partner: "My money or your life!"

This variation from the stereotyped request of the typical highwayman produced the desired effect. His $500 was returned and a new victim sought.

As before stated, business men, thoroughly "up to snuff," are often taken in by slick confidence operators. One of the leading publishers and booksellers of New York was once swindled in the following unique manner:

A clerical-looking old gentleman called one day, and presented a card which designated him as the President ot a Western college. He stated that he desired to purchase several thousand volumes for the college library, and a complete set of text-books for a new department of theology. After spending a week in examining books, he made out a large order. The one thing he lacked was a particular Hebrew grammar which he had studied in his youth, and upon which he had set his heart. The firm did not have it, but sent out a clerk who found, in a rival establishment, an edition of several hundred volumes and the plates from which they had been printed. The old gentleman was delighted, and ordered the entire lot. This so pleased the publisher that he bought not only the books but the plates, at rather a high price. As the reverend gentleman did not again put in an appearance, he called upon his rival and learned, to his intense mortification, that the former, in reality a confidence man, had left the books and plates, purchased by him no doubt in a junk shop as old paper and metal, to be sold on commission. The sharper had collected the proceeds of the sale, over $800, and decamped. Returning, the purchaser sadly contemplated his worthless purchase.

For three years and more, Chicago will be the Mecca for country pilgrims. The best advice that can be given them is to avoid not only strangers but "friends" who introduce and identify themselves in strange and unexpected ways.

Cornfield Philosophy.

"He who has nothing has nothing to fear," says the Spanish proverb. Any woman, with a red shawl, in a pasture, chased by a pet bull, doesn't believe any such thing.

"Never be in a hurry," is all very well at times. It will never do when the "old man" turns the dog loose when you sit up with his daughter after twelve o'clock.

It is said that a woman paints and adorns herself most for her husband. This does not explain why the wife of a blind man is more careful about such things than any other woman.

The old philosopher said that "a good delayed was an evil done." To the boy whose parents say a whipping is a good, this proverb is a delusion and a snare.

A lady who has to ride in the street cars a great deal remarks that the hogs are not all being slaughtered this year by a great many thousand.

The man who is always giving advice is invariably the man who needs it the most himself. He always allows his own interests to suffer in trying to take care of other people's. Always beware of the man who offers advice freely.

"O, MAMMA!" shuddered a little girl, as she was being bathed one morning, and shrank from the water on her chest. "Don't put water there. It hurts my front back so!"

SHE—What kept you out so late, George? He—Oh, we had a little game of freeze down at the club. She—How very extravagant when ice is so dear.

FIRST POLITICAL GUN!

The Opening Meeting of the Campaign will be in Auburn, Saturday, Oct. 4, beginning at 1 o'clock.

GOV. ISAAC P. GRAY

Will address the people, on the leading questions of the day. He is, to-day, the most popular man in Indiana, and knows every detail of how the republicans have managed to pile up the state debt.

Come and hear him. No democrat can afford to stay away. It will open every republican's eyes, if they will only come and hear him. He will be ably assisted by Hon. W. H. McNagry, of Columbia City, and Hon. O. L. Ballou, of Lagrange, both able speakers.

Come with all your neighbors, from every corner of the county. Let it be the big meeting of the campaign.

THE Sioux City corn palace is now running. It closes Oct 11.

THE republican majority in Maine turns out to be about 4,000 less than it was two years ago.

DION BOUCICAULT the veteran actor and author of plays died last Thursday at his home in New York City.

NEW YORK people are now fighting for a recount of their population, believing that the census is too low.

CONGRESS is not likely to adjourn very soon. Too much unfinished work, and too many cases of disagreement.

GEN. ROSECRANS was last week chosen president of the society of the Army of the Cumberland at its meeting in Toledo.

A CYCLONE swept over Iowa last Thursday. The town of Manning was almost totally destroyed, but a few houses remaining.

THE high tariff McKinley bill has already forced several republican manufacturers in Massachusetts into the democratic ranks. Let 'em come.

CHICAGO has decided to give Washington Park as a site for the great fair of 1893. This will increase the amount of land at the disposal of the fair to about 1000 acres.

FRANKFORT, Ind., has just had a case in court, like our Arford case. The jury disagreed, the republicans voting to acquit their man, and the democrats to convict. The briber went free.

A GREAT wreck on the Reading road last week. About forty lives were lost, caused by a frieght that had just been wrecked and no time to warn the fast train, which was then whirled down into the river.

A TURKISH warship foundered at sea last week off the coast of Japan. The loss of life reached nearly 500 including the famous general, Osman Pasha, who made such a high record as a soldier in the famous siege of Plevna, in 1877.

THE State Board of Election Commissioners is made up of Gov. Hovey, J. B. Black and James McCabe. They will see to the printing of the state tickets. About eleven tons of pink paper will be needed to print a million and a half of these tickets.

SINCE the outbreak of natural gas at Shelbyville, Ind., that treacherous fluid has evidently found out what it can do. Last week it burst through the earth's crust at Bickett's Knob, West Virginia, and tore things up generally. It got on fire and created a great excitement.

REPUBLICANS in the last legislature tried to get the state tax levy made higher. That is their scheme now. The levy is high enough to run the state if their officers will attend to business. Do farmers want to elect men to the legislature whose only object is to raise the tax levy?

BILLS passed by Congress: To revive the grade of lieutenant-general in the army; to provide for pensions for all army nurses, who were employed in any regiment, camp, or general hospital, and who are unable to earn their support. They are to get $12 a month from date of application. A bill also passed giving a railroad the right of way through the Indian Territory.

INGALLS, the loud mouthed senator from Kansas, it now appears has been fleecing the farmers of his state like a regular Shylock. Though the laws allow but 10 per cent. interest, he has so managed as to get as high as 20 per cent. on farm loans. And now, he is part of the time posing in the Senate as a friend of the dear people, and the other part trying to squeeze his big interest out of the farmers, the very men who have made him Senator.

TEN per cent of the tillable land of Vermont is offered for sale, being now in "abandoned farms." The price runs from $5 to $10 per acre. Here is an infant industry that appears to need a little help. Thirty years of protective tariff, have driven the farmers there, off of 500,000 acres of fairly good land. But the petted manufacturers are prospering, and swelling up into millionaires. That is the way a tariff works. And yet we now and then hear of a farmer out this way who believes the tariff protects him.

RECIPROCITY will likely be a feature of the new tariff bill, in spite of the objections of McKinley. It is Blaine's plan. He thinks that when a given nation admits our products free, we should admit as much of theirs free of duty. This he says will open new markets to us, and make commercial relations friendly. He is part right and part wrong. But we believe he is working in the right direction. But they are taking the wrong way to do it. The president should not be given all the say, as to when this shall all be done.

THE republicans last week nominated a candidate for congress at their convention at Lagrange. The choice fell on Hon. Orlando Kimmel, of Noble county. He is one of the wealthiest men in the county, a farmer who has about 1000 acres of land and about the finest farm house in the county. He lives southeast of Ligonier where he has had his home for many years. He was elected to the legislature in 1876, carrying his county by about the usual majority in spite of a very unsavory case in court against him at the time. He is a man of average ability and a very narrow minded partisan. We know of no reason why he should poll a single democratic vote in the district.

THE Dispatch objects to Mr. Coffinberry because he is a railroad man. Of course, as the present editor of that paper is only a recent arrival, he does not know that four years ago his own party ran one railroad man for auditor, Mr. Sullivan; another railroad man for sheriff, Mr. Garrison; another; railroad man, Mr. Crane, for recorder; and elected two of them, Garrison and Crane. The Dispatch's reference to the taxes was also unfortunate for his side. How much taxes did Garrison or Crane pay when they were elected? How much did they ever pay? And as to Sullivan we had the word of a republican officer that even the very small tax he was called on to pay, was allowed to go delinquent. The republican party would do well to choke off its organ.

THE emblem on the democratic ticket will be the rooster. Anyone who wants to vote a straight democratic ticket, will stamp the small square at the words "Democratic ticket." That does the whole business. There will be two ballots to vote in that way, each ballot having the tickets of five parties on it, the democratic, republican, greenback, labor and the prohibition tickets. The red ballot has the state tickets on it. Stamp the square by the words, "Democratic ticket." Then take the white ballot, which contains the rest of the ticket, district and county, and stamp the square by the words "Democratic ticket," and then fold them up, hand the ballots to the inspector, and the stamp to the poll clerk. If a man wishes to vote for some men on the other tickets, he must stamp the square by the name of each man he wishes to vote for, all through that ballot.

"PROTECTION TO LABOR" is the cry of protected industries, and some times even the unprotected farmer takes up the same delusive strain. It is a cheat. Labor is never protected as they think it is, by a tariff. It is capital that is protected. Labor has to protect itself. Labor has to foot the bills that make the protected capitalist rich. But no one has ever invented a plan by which labor could be protected by taxing it. Let those farmers who want to see "protection for labor," vote and act with the party that believes in giving trade laws as nearly free as we can have, and yet raise money enough to run the government. Democrats would give farmers the markets of the world in which to sell their products. The wider the market, the better the prices. Republicans want to confine farmers and all to a narrow, or "home" market. That means low prices.

Personal Journalism.

We call the attention of the republican papers about here, and especially of the Auburn Dispatch, to the honorable and manly course of the COURIER in its treatment of matters connected with the present campaign. We would refer in this connection, especially to our course as to county candidates. The editor of this paper is personally acquainted with every man on both democratic and republican county tickets and is therefore in a much better position to speak of them in a personal way, than is the editor of the Dispatch, who, if he has met them at all, it has been quite recently. Indeed we do not believe he knew all the candidates on his own county ticket until he met them in the convention that nominated them. But it makes no difference to a narrow minded, or bigoted republican editor, whether he is acquainted with the candidates on both tickets, or on either. All he knows of, or cares for, is that no democrat, however pure and honest his life may be, is anything but bad, and that no republican, however dishonest and disreputable he may be, is anything but good and worthy of support. Acting on this principle, republican papers have been gradually edging their way along to the point where they feel most at home, the point where they feel impelled to call names and make accusations as to the democratic candidates. It is "Banker McClellan" for instance, as if the mere fact that a man is a banker, is more against him than if he had chosen some other occupation. McClellan's competitor is spoken of with great reverence, as the "farmer." These terms are intended to deceive. The "farmer" in this case is wealthier than the "banker," and both, we presume prospered by similar means, honorable to both. Then why should one be spoken of in different terms than the other? A chapter could be used up on this. Then there is our own county ticket. Last week the Dispatch came out with two long articles, one a personal matter of Mr. Moody's and the other about Mr. Coffinberry. The one is taken to task because he did not do thus and so, when in the legislature many years ago. The editor does not apparently know whether Mr. Moody's course was proper or improper. But he did one way, and it is easy for the Dispatch to say he should have done the other way. As to Mr. Coffinberry it criticises his dress and his tastes in that direction, and intimates that if his tastes were otherwise, it would be more agreeable to the said Dispatch, etc., etc. There is much more of this truck than it would pay to notice. What we wish to say is this: Suppose the COURIER should descend to such silly work, and try to belittle the personal character, tastes etc., of the republican candidates. How much influence would it have with sensible people, if we should object to Mr. Lockwood because he delights in $3,000 horses instead of diamond pins, or that Lackey wears a brown overcoat, when we think he should wear a black. We might say it is a deadly sin for Hine to raise small fruits, while his opponent on the democratic ticket is a farmer on general principles. So we might go on to illustrate this characteristically silly and unmanly way of treating candidates and running a campaign. The COURIER has not spoken a word against the republican candidates, with one exception, though we might have done so as effectively as the Dispatch possibly can of our men. The one exception is Mr. Diehl, who is now running for surveyor. We have intimated that he was too much interested in the Arford bribery case, to be a fit man to run for a public office. But even on this point, we have said little, though we maintain a very decided opinion as to the propriety of running men for office, under such circumstances. We feel sure, that honorable men of all parties, will agree that the course of the COURIER has been more manly and creditable than that of its republican contemporaries. But we give them fair warning that the vicious course they are taking will compel us, if persisted in, to show up some of the short-comings of their pet heroes. We do not desire to enter on such a course. But we are prepared for it, if it must be.

Crucified a Cat.

Little Johnny Lees and the little three year old daughter of Prof. Harrison took a queer freak into their heads last week, on Thursday, and this queer freak took a strange and cruel form. The little girl had a pet kitten and, as we suppose they had heard something about the crucifixion and nailing to the cross by the hands and feet, they thought it about the proper caper to go and do likewise. The pet kitten was a nice subject. So they got a hammer and nails somewhere, and took the kitten to the vacant part of lot back of Brown & Culbertson's agricultural implement store, and taking up a cover to a box nailed the poor helpless thing to it. There was a nail driven through each foot, not a very smooth nail either, and then as if to make the experiment a certain success, they had driven a nail right through the kitten's neck. There the poor thing lay on its side its head fastened down, lying on its right side and its four legs lying out in one direction, with the cruel nails driven into the soft wood and the blood oozing from every hole. They had taken the board into a large piano box, and were evidently going to close the box up and have a show, when Johnny's mother discovered them. W. B. Brown's attention was called to it, when on going out he found the poor thing yet alive. He killed it at once to put it out of its misery. It is a strange thing, that children so young, were able to carry out such a scheme, and still more remarkable, that their young minds would originate or enjoy a thing so cruel.

The Henry & Swineford Barn.

If anyone wants to see a nicely arranged, and neatly kept livery stable and feed barn, they should see that of Henry & Swineford, west of the Swineford House. The office room is neat, and tidy, and a lady waiting for a team can feel at ease and be comfortable. In this room is the button by which all the electric lights can be turned off or on by a mere touch. The whole establishment is lighted by the incandescent lights, giving it a brilliant appearance, when all are turned on. Between the office, waiting room and the barn proper, is the room where are stored the harness, the robes, blankets, etc., all of which are kept scrupulousley neat and clean. The stables are roomy, well ventilated and neat. They have everything convenient in the way of arrangements for feed and water. There is a chute, at which oats can be taken out and the chute then closed. A similar chute is used to bring the hay down from above. Then the water tub is arranged on very much the same plan, the horses having access to it on one side of a partition only, the well itself being on the other. On the west side is a series of stalls for use of customeres, who wish to have teams fed and cared for. There are also several large box stalls, which are a valuable part of a livery and feed stables outfit. The large central room is clean and roomy and the rigs all bran new and of the latest pattern. The whole establishment greatly improves that part of town, and adds much to business along there.

Three New Stores in Auburn.

We refer to the new rooms south of the jail. The room in the Draggoo building next east of Wilson's shoe store has a new firm, two ladies from Pleasant Lake, who will put in a stock of fancy goods and millinery and carry on a full business in that line. The new goods are arriving this week. The firm will be Snyder & Funk, and they appear to be first-class people, and to have a full share of business ability. We believe they will succeed. Another new business in the harness line Mr Freygang, the well known harness maker of Pleasant Lake, takes the east room in the Sheet's building, the one on the corner, and will carry on harness making and all business connected with it, in first-class style. Our people will give him a fair show, we have no doubt. The third new business, is Edward Bretz who has been some years in the furniture business at Garrett. A full notice of him and his business is found elsewhere in this paper. These three rooms fill out the entire south line of the public square, and will do much to draw business solidly in that direction, as it has already been on the west and north sides, and partly on the east where the great Harter establishment starts business to going south along that street. The time when all business was on the "west side of the court house" has gone by, never to return.

The Coming Fair.

The next fair will be at Waterloo and the managers are making great efforts to have everything in complete shape so as to be satisfactory to all who patronize them. Let all get their exhibits ready and have their entries made a few days before the fair, say on Thursday, Friday and Saturday before. The secretary will be in his office with plenty of help and will wait on you. The time to get ready, is now.

A Foolish Statement.

The Auburn Times of yesterday makes complaint of a certain allowance made me by the town. A parallel case would be if I had the use of a column of your paper one year for a certain sum, would you charge me for the use of an additional half column? My salary is not $75, as that paper stated. W. H. DILLS.

Dedication at Garrett.

The new German Reformed church at Garrett will be dedicated Sunday. There will be two services, one at 10 a. m. in German and then English; one at 2 p. m. in English, and then in German. Two able speakers will assist. All the friends who attend from surrounding towns and county will be provided for by free entertainment at the homes of the Garrett brethren. All cordially invited and made heartily welcome.

B. RUF, Pastor.

The Enterprise Furniture and Novelty Room.

Edward Bretz, who has been so long in the furniture business in Garrett, now has opened up business in the Sheets building south of the public square. He will devote his attention chiefly to piece goods in the general line of his business and can furnish anyone any thing they may need. He will make a speciality of such articles as bath tubs, etc. He is well known as a good business man and one acquainted with all matters pertaining to the furniture business, and will keep a good stock at reasonable prices. Call and see him.

Married.

At the residence of the bride's parents in Wilmington township, Sept. 7, 1890, Mr. Joseph L. Sharrit of Angola to Miss Belle Yarlet. Rev. J. N. Wilson of the Christian church, officiated on the happy occasion. Quite a number of friends were present including county superintendent Merica and wife, of this place. The bride is a well known young lady of Wilmington township, who has been a successful teacher. She is a daughter of D. J. Yarlet, a prominent farmer of Wilmington township. The groom is a young man of high character, and is studying for the ministry, at Bethany college, West Virginia. The happy couple left for Bethany the next day, and they expect to spend their first years of married life there, at least till Mr. Sharritt has completed his studies. Their many friends here, wish them a happy future.

The Indiana Society in Kansas, made up of former Indianians, holds its meeting at Wichita at the time of the district fair and exposition, beginning next Monday, Sept. 29. No doubt quite a number of DeKalb folks will be there, and the COURIER sends them one and all a hearty greeting and our best wishes for their future prosperity. We believe that Indiana people are the salt of the earth.

The Press comes up and denies that his attorney general takes $2400 for clerk hire when the law allows only $600. But Michener does this very thing however, as the records at Indianapolis show. Then the Press says, if this is so, then the legislature is to blame. Then the argument would be this: A man steals from the state. Therefore the legislature is to blame. The fact remains, that the legislature appropriated only $600 and said there should be no more paid out. Michener has no chance to lay it to constructive fees. The democratic legislature distinctly and plainly limited the amount. But Michener spends his time as chairman of the republican state committee and has to get men to do the work in the office, and republican papers defend him when he takes their pay out of the state treasury. No wonder the state is in debt.

The Dispatch feels impelled to excuse itself for some adverse remarks about that wheel of fortune on the fair ground. It says it feels it to be a duty to warn its patrons against such sinful games. But its note of warning apparently had no effect. Perhaps it was because its readers had learned to place little reliance on a paper that tells them a tariff is not a tax, and that a tariff duty is paid by the foreigner, who sends goods over here, and that a tax makes the thing taxed cheaper. Perhaps, believing this last idea, they argued that if a tax was a blessing and would make a man rich, then a sum of money dropped in a game would also make one rich. The reasoning in one case, is as good as in the other. However, we believe the more intelligent people, who read the COURIER know better. They know a tariff is a tax paid by the consumer, and that makes him who pays it poorer, and they also know that money bet on another man's game makes the reckless man who thus bets, just that much poorer, every time he does it. The moral of all this is: Read the COURIER, study the hard sense side of governmental questions, then vote the democratic ticket, keep away from all gambling schemes and you will be prosperous and happy.

An English scientific person has discovered that sitting down is an acquired habit. The majority of mankind do not sit, but simply squat, or, as is sometimes said, sit on their heels. This position the scientific persons thinks, is the natural one, while sitting on a chair is an artificial one.

Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of uric acid in the blood, is most effectually cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony:—

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. R. Irving Dodge, 110 West 125th st., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammatory rheumatism, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.

ALAS!

How wretched is the man who has fallen a victim to Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, or diseased Liver, with all the horrible attendants. Look upon the picture. Poor man, being tired of dragging out a miserable existence, he is the picture of despondency; altogether, he is rather a forlorn specimen. Do we pity him? Of course; but at the same time feel assured that in a measure he is to blame for the bad state into which he has fallen. A sure, safe, speedy and easy cure can be found in Simmons Liver Regulator—Nature's own remedy. No mercury or deleterious drugs, not unpleasant to the taste, and always reliable—just such a remedy as you can pin your faith to without a shadow of disappointment. Read the testimonial, don't take our word for it:

"I have been subject to severe spells of Congestion of the Liver, and have been in the habit of taking from 15 to 20 grains of calomel, which generally laid me up for three or four days. Lately I have been taking Simmons Liver Regulator which gave me relief, without any interruption to business." J. Huec, Middleport, Ohio.

WHAT IS SAPOLIO?
It is a solid handsome cake of scouring soap which has no equal for all cleaning purposes except in the laundry. To use it is to value it.

What will SAPOLIO do? Why it will clean paint, make oil-cloths bright, and give the floors, tables and shelves a new appearance. It will take the grease off the dishes and off the pots and pans. You can scour the knives and forks with it, and make the tin things shine brightly. The wash-basin, the bath-tub, even the greasy kitchen sink will be as clean as a new pin if you use SAPOLIO. One cake will prove all we say. Be a clever housekeeper and try it.

Davenport's. tf

A. P. Shoaff, now of Sydney, Ohio, was back here last week. He is doing a good business in the line of musical instruments, and prospering generally. Sydney is a city of about 7,000, and even Porter's census men have not been able to reduce it below that figure. Mr. Shoaff met a warm greeting wherever he went in Auburn.

DIED: Sept. 20, 1890, Ruth Burk, infant daughter of A. J. and Kate Burk, aged 7 months and 10 days. The funeral was from the residence of the parents, Monday Sept 22, at 2 p. m. Rev. T. C. Smith officiating. The sad and bereaved parents wish to extend their very hearty thanks to their many friends for the great kindness and help rendered in this time of their great sorrow and trial, for they have realized that a friend in the time of need is a very friend indeed.

Prof. Nottingham has completed arrangements for conducting his second penmanship school in this city, which will commence Thursday, Oct. 2. His school which was held here last January was a grand success, giving universal satisfaction. A large class will no doubt be organized here this time. In speaking of him last week the Albion New Era says: Prof. O. W. Nottingham has the largest penmanship school in progress that has ever been organized in this city. We are pleased to see the interest manifested by the young people. Prof. Nottingham is no doubt a practical instructor of penmanship.

MILWAUKEE DAILY NEWS SEPT. 11:—Yesterday was quite an exciting day on the streets. The Cleveland Minstrels made a street parade up East Water street, when they met Fitzpatrick's Rip Van Winkle Company which shut them out in the way of music and costumes. The Rip show was headed by old Rip in a chariot drawn by two large dogs which created a large crowd of children, and the Knickerbocker Demon Band. We must say that their costumes were simply gorgeous, and about 25 Demons followed the parade carrying banners calling the attention of Rip Van Winkle, The company plays at the Standard Theater all this week.

A new pole for the electric light near the Wabash station has taken the place of the one lately in use, so as to put the light up higher. As there are no low trees for some distance, a high light is desirable. It will be about sixty feet from the ground.

English Spavin Liniment removes all hard, soft, or calloused lumps and blemishes from horses, blood spavin, curbs, splints, sweeny, ring-bone, stifles, all swollen throats, coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle, warranted. The most wonderful blemish cure known. Sold by Robbins & McCord, Auburn, Indiana. tf

"The American Home" is the name of the new monthly paper just started in Butler. It is edited and published by our friend Alvan W. Ash, formerly a teacher, and more recently a minister of the U. B. church. It is in the interest of temperance, and while we do not think it will bring the publisher riches, it may do good. At least we hope it may.

Uncle John Miller, who resides near Corunna, was over here the other day. He is looking even better than usual, and does a good deal of work. His crops this year were at least as good as the agerage over the county. He is still a full sized democrat and enjoys the unanswerable arguments the COURIER has been firing at republican papers.

We shall begin next week, the publication of a series of articles on matters pertaining to the early life of the town of Auburn, and residents connected therewith. It is from the pen of one of our prominent citizens, who has taken great pains to look up and discuss matters of this kind. It will prove interesting not only to the older inhabitants, but especially so to those who have recently joined us as citizens of one of the liviliest towns in northern Indiana.

The "Old Pal" company did not have a very good house Monday evening, and the entertainment was not such a one as our people care for in general. The managers of the Opera House cannot always tell whether they are getting a good company or a weak one, and are therefore not to blame. They refuse poor troupes when they have a chance to know what they are. But the most careful men, are sometimes overreached. They will, however, spare no pains to secure only the best companies.

The Foundry and Machine Works have arc lights in the bridge department of their establishment, and this week, they put in a full set of incandescent lights in all other departments. Their business is increasing so they have to work a good deal at nights. Mr. Brandon is off at present a great deal of the time, showing their new road machine at the various fairs. He finds it suits the people who are interested in working roads.

If anyone wants to see one of Auburn's neatest improvements let them take a look at the new building recently erected by Doctor Swarts on north Main street. The building itself is a pretty one, in fact very tasty as well as a strong and substantial structure. The inside arrangements are also very admirable, in good taste and very convenient and business-like. It is occupied by Kessler Brothers with their cigar manufactory. We presume some of the good taste shown in the interior arrangements should be credited to them. At all events, the entire outfit keeps pace with all the bright new modern improvements of which Auburn is getting so many.

Oct. 4, big rally in Auburn.

Kendallville fair next week.

Gov. Gray in Auburn Oct. 4.

Waterloo fair week after next.

Buy a stylish hat at Yesbera's.

The street sprinkler has been busy again this fair weather.

Miss Woodhull is here each week to assist her pupils in music.

H. B. McCord went to Toledo last week during the cheap rates.

Mrs Tillie McCord went up to visit her people in Waterloo this week.

Mrs. Wm. Crane, of Waterloo, spent Sunday with her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Schaab.

W. B. Campbell, of the Dispatch, went to Roberts, Ill., to visit his parents over Sunday.

Mrs. J. M. Hook returned Tuesday from an extended visit with her people who live in Illinois.

Look to Simmons Liver Regulator for relief from all sickness resulting from a diseased liver.

F. B. Gonser, one of the live young men of Smithfield was over here on some business yesterday.

J. N. Myers goes this week to Indianapolis in the interest of his house's make of agricultural machinery.

The U. B. conference will be held in Waterloo next year. It will be the thirtieth for this conference.

P. F. Ryan was able to go to Ft, Wayne Tuesday, and is attending the fair at Columbia City to-day.

Mrs. Frank Zimmerman and Mrs. Sylvester Zimmerman accompanied their husbands to the State Fair at Indianapolis, Tuesday.

Kiblinger got on a carload and a half of buggy shafts alone this week. No such big stock of shafts were ever seen before in Northern Indiana.

J. H. Row and Miss Georgia Buss were down here Sunday afternoon. They called on A. B. Richards and family, Miss Buss being Mrs. R's sister.

Ab. Kelley, chairman of the democratic county committee was here yesterday to make arrangements for the great campaign opening here Oct. 4.

The Ligonier Banner says the Auburn fair was not a success financially. A mistake, brother. We have several hundred dollars left after paying expenses.

Mrs. Frank Rush of Aurora, Neb., came back Tuesday, for an extended visit with her husband's people, W. E. Rush and wife, also with her sister, Mrs. Geo. Grund.

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

M. Boland, S. J. Zimmerman and Frank Zimmerman went to Indianapolis Tuesday to attend the State fair. They will exhibit the Zimmerman windmill there and will be gone all the week of course.

Rip Van Winkle, is Joe Jefferson's great play, and it is said that those who present it at the Opera House to-morrow, Friday evening have a strong company, a fine band, and everything that goes to make this great drama a success.

Trautman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

Gov. Gray assisted by Hon. W. H. McNagny of Columbia City, and Hon. O. L. Ballou of Lagrange, will speak in Auburn, Saturday Oct. 4, at 1 p. m. All come and hear the live questions of the day discussed by these talented and able speakers.

Boils, pimples, and skin diseases of all kinds speedily dissapear when the blood is purified by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has no equal as a tonic alternative, the results being immediate and satisfactory. Ask your druggist for it, and take no other.

Invitations are out for the marriage of Miss Mary E. Gengler, daughter of L. J. Gengler, of Garrett, to Mr. John T. Clark, on Tuesday of next week, Sept. 30. The ceremony will take place at the Catholic church. It will be one of the most notable social events of the season.

The P. I picnic held in Showalter's grove north of Butler, on Saturday Sept. 20, 1890 was a success. It is estimated that 5,000 people were in attendance. There were a number of speeches, among them one by Hon. Freeman Kelley, and one by a lady from Allen county.

The Pat. Maloney Company played to a good house last Friday evening. It was all comic business and the audience had evidently come to laugh, and they had abundantut cause. But coming after the Holden Co. of the week before they did not make such a good impression as they otherwise might,

We should have given John Treesh credit for the big walk of cement leading to the school house. It is the largest single piece of cement walk in the county. Mr. Treesh has been in the work long enough to understand it fully and we do not know of anyone better preparded to do a first-class job in that line. Last week, he laid down the sidewalk along Mrs. Barclay's property.

In our write up of the fair, we forget to speak of two worthy young ladies who got a premium for making the nicest cake. They are Misses Reba and Edna Houser, and we think they should have all the more good words and good premiums, for the reason they are taking pains to master one of the most popular and essential of all the trades and professions, cooking. And we wish to remind the two young ladies that good cooks are always popular with the gentlemen.

Mammoth boot and shoe store.

Rip Van Winkle, at the Opera House Friday evening.

The Mammoth has more shoes than any other store in the county. Call in and see them.

Dr. James Adams and wife were at the Ft. Wayne fair one day last week. They report the racing good.

Mrs. John Lawrence went this week, to visit her mother at White Pigeon, Mich.

A letter from F. K. Blake at Wichita says, Mrs. Blake reached home in safety, Sept. 10, and that all are well and prospering.

Lane, at the laundry, has just secured a patent on his lace drier, a very valuable invention for the use of laundries. We believe they will have a good sale.

J. S. Weaver of Jackson township, not only takes the COURIER, but sends it to his friend Jacob Shaffer in West Virginia. That is the kind of democrats to have.

Mrs. James Draggoo and her daughter Mrs. W. D. Rickel and niece, went to Goshen, Tuesday, to visit friends and attend the fair at that place.

Big fair at Kendallville next week. Soldiers' free day Oct. 1, when Gen. Alger will be there. Biggest stock show, and lowest rates on railroads.

The L. L. C. will meet this week with Mrs. Houser, Leader, Mrs. Hodge; Lesson; Great Events of the Sixteenth Century; Paper, Origin of the Church of England, Mrs. Rose; Humorous Reading, Mrs. McCord.

George Weamer has been at Petoskey, for several weeks in order to escape the hay fever, but returned Tuesday morning and went to Angola the same day, to be present at the fair in the interests of the Zimmerman Windmill.

Voters, read our list of the precincts, as now fixed by the commissioners. This is the second time the COURIER has published it, because it is important that you know just where you are to vote. Cut it out and keep it for if you live in some of the small precincts, you may find it hard to remember.

Those who were at Ft. Wayne at the fair last week say the races were good, though the attendance was only moderate, except on Thursday when they had a big crowd. The show of stock was excellent, but in halls, and elsewhere on the grounds, it was not so good. They had good weather.

The Dispatch says the people can vote for McBride with a "conscious pride," etc. Two years ago about 500 republicans in three counties voted against him with "a conscious pride," and may do so this year. If they could not trust to his judgment for the circuit court how could they for the supreme court?

The potato crop in DeKalb county will be a poor one. But New Jersey has lots of them. There is now and then a section all over the Union where they had a good crop. Let us hope we will not have to send across the sea, for any of their soggy potatoes, and then have a tariff of 20 cents added to the price.

D. Y. Husselman was over at Hicksville last week on business connected with the Stove Works. He is succeeding well in placing their excellent goods on the market. While there he enjoyed a pleasant visit with Hon. A. P. Edgerton, who is always entertaining and full of rare information. Mr. Edgerton resides at Hicksville in summer, returning to his Ft. Wayne home the rest of the year.

Our clerical friend J. N. Wilson of the boot and shoe store, can turn his hand to almost anything. Besides being a good business man, and a practical workmen, he is an able and popular minister of the gospel. These thoughts were called out by a notice we publish to-day of a marriage at which he officiated. Now, this is not a puff for him in this particular line, nor a gentle hint for every young man and woman to go and get married. We believe that young people will do as they please about these things, and we prefer to let them have their own way.

Montpelier will get the new railroad, the Wabash extension. The local officers in Auburn, make this report, and we can only say, that while it is a dissapointment to Auburn, we have the consolation of knowing we have done all we could. No means has been left untried. The result is, we lose nothing we ever had, but fail to get an addition that we sought. The other towns will not be so fortunate, as the new line, running along the north edge of the county, will build up new towns and new business centers, and so cut off part of their legitimate trade. The shops may be moved from Butler, though we hope not. But the Montpelier line gives DeKalb no benefits whatever, as far as we can see, the taxable property and new towns, all being added to Steuben county.

A large delegation of Auburn sportsmen left for Petoskey Tuesday. They went to Avilla and took the Grand Rapids train north. Among them were Clerk Al. Bishop, Ex-Clerk D. Y. Husselman, J. A. Potter, G. C. Ralston, Wm. Stimely, John Boots, Thomas Sommers, George Lanning, Geo. Grund, Al. McDowell, of Hudson, John Myers, Al. Zirwes, Tom Thomas, Lew Bowers, Dr. Sebring and wife, J. W. Dills, and M. T. Bishop, of St. Joe, Amos Fitch, of Butler township, John Leasure and perhaps others. Charley Weaver and Howard McCord went home and went to bed sick (so they say,) because they could not go. At all events it is certain the boys will have a good time. Fish will be the main object. Of course they would send home several train loads of venison, but a law of the heartless Michiganders prohibits shipping venison out to the state. So they will have to content themselves with filling the lovely streams up there full of fishhooks and bait. They will, we presume kindly donate all these to the people up there, leaving them and the entire outfit of fish in the streams so the inhabitants will remember them.

Read over our "voting precincts."

Miss McCray was in town, Sunday.

Mrs. Tillie Morse and daughter Lena, of Angola, are here visiting her sisters, Mrs. Geo. Weamer and Mrs. Frank Zimmerman.

Mrs. James Campbell started Monday for a two weeks visit with her brother and other relatives at Walkerton. Her brother has been in poor health for some time.

Flemming, at the greenhouse now has all kinds of vegetables ready for market, cauliflower, cabbage, celery, etc. Call on him and he will deliver at your homes.

Attention! If you desire a fine head of hair of a natural hue and free from dandruff, Hall's Hair Renewer is the best and safest preparation to accomplish it.

Mrs. G. H. Yesbera and Mrs. Albert Robbins went over to Garrett on their bicycles Saturday. They started about four p. m. and though they stopped to rest on the way, they came home at six o'clock.

Our old friend W. J. Wilcox contributed to the COURIER's comfort last week, a big watermelon, one of the patriarchs of the patch. It gives us pleasure to drink a friend's health from the rosy interior of a nice, ripe melon.

Mrs. W. B. McConnell, has been selected as one of the ladies to serve in the organization and control of the Women's Department of the World's fair at Chicago. Her husband "Billy" McConnell, was our prosecutor a few years ago, and is now a judge in Dakota. His wife is a daughter of Mr. Vandercook, of Angola.

If it were "on the eve of election" we might look to see the Dispatch come out with a charge of extravagance against the town government, for making a cost of about $100 for police service during the week of the fair. But this is "just before" a county and state election, which we suppose is "different." Or, perhaps the political change in the board is what makes it "different."

There was a meeting of the executive officers of the fair Monday evening. The financial condition of the society was looked up and it is found that there will be left $1,400 of the receipts of the fair to apply on our debt after paying all expenses. This is much better than was anticipated. There is about $2,500 still unpaid on stock subscription, which added to the $1,400 will pay everything we owe but about $1,000 due on the property. It is likely we will within a month or so. sell enough stock to more than cancel this debt. There are a plenty of persons able, and we believe willing, to take stock. It should be attended to at once.

C. J. Porter, the Waterloo optician will be in Auburn at the Hollister House, the first Tuesday in each month, to meet all who desire his service in fitting defective eyes with the proper glasses, and for all the work in his line. Long experience should be valuable in this case above all others. The eyes should not be trifled with. An eye once lost can never be restored and great care should be taken to preserve them. Mr. Porter stands at the head of his profession in this special department. Don't trust your eyes to inexperienced or careless men, but call on him when here and get glasses such as you need. Don't forget the dates, the first Tuesday of each month. 42

The 129th Indiana volunteers will have their reunion here, as before stated Oct. 2. There will be a business meeting in the daytime, and in the evening there will be a campfire, and public entertainment. There will be music, songs, recitations, and a splendid literary treat generally. Al. Bishop, our gentlemanly county clerk, has been at the head of the movement, this being his old regiment. He says the people of Auburn have responded with their usual liberality to his call for financial assistance, and for it, he is duly thankful. He says he has reason to think it will prove a pleasant meeting and a grand success. We hope it will, and that the old vets will be made to feel they are welcome to our little city.

P. F. Ryan, who was stabbed in the abdomen a month or so ago, is able now, to be out, and up town. He believes he is fully recovered, at least the wound is fully healed. It will be remembered that the intestines were cut and had to be sewed together, a condition of things formerly considered fatal beyond all surgery. But modern science, skillful surgeons, and the best of nursing, together with Mr. Ryan's unflinching courage and calmness when facing what was supposed to be certain death, combined with his general good health, have restored him to the world and to his friends again. Our people who have sympathized deeply with his wife and young children, will now rejoice with them that the husband and father has been spared.

T. J. Reamy & Son, of Nashville, Tenn. are now having their patent feed machines for sawmills, made at the Auburn Foundry and Machine Works. It is a new and very valuable machine, and one that will take the place of all other machines heretofore used in mills to regulate the feed. It is strong, simple and ingenious, and not liable to get out of gear. The single one that has been in use at the band sawmill for some months has increased the sawing capacity of the mill, about 3,000 feet per day. This gives an idea of its great value they have had a double one made, the first one ever put up, and it will be used in the band saw mill hereafter. The Machine Works finished this double one this week, and Tuesday it was brought up town, and Mr. Rice took a photograph of it. Several of the single machines are in use in various parts of the country, and they will now, in their perfected state, be manufactured and sold, the Machine works, having the agency for the eastern, northern and western states.

The ladies of the south section will give a dinner, at the lecture, room of the M. E. church Friday, Sept. 26, from 5 o'clock until 8. A good dinner will be served, consisting of chicken, potatoes, cabbage, cranberry sauce and all that one can wish for in a good dinner. Don't forget the date. Mite 15 cents.

South Bend Times: Orlando Kimmel, of Noble county, is the Republican nominee for congress in the Fort Wayne district. Orlando is a sly old fox, and expects to utilize his connection with the Farmer's Alliance to slip into congress. In the early part of the melancholy days of November a little bird will chirp into Orlando's ears a tale of woe that will remind him of the folly of spending precious time in wildly chasing a rainbow on the political horizon.

Hon. R. M. Lockhart of Waterloo took the Wabash train here Sunday evening for Indianapolis, to take charge of his work at the state fair this week. He has the Horticultural department. Mrs. Lillie Bryslaud, of Waterloo goes down this week to be a judge on needle work and similar classes. Mr. Lockhart and his brother William sent down four barrels of choice selected apples for the display from this county, making about 300 plates. They got twenty varieties from the old Ensley orchard, west of Summit, now owned by Mr. Hartman.

The new school books provided by law were used in the normal school here this summer, and Mr. Harrison and Mr. Coe, both agree that they are, all in all, equal to the old books. When the public schools opened last week, these books were put into all the schools, and now the work of reducing the expense on text books is largely over. If people will compare the prices they have just paid, with what they paid for a book of the same grade a year ago, and for years before that, they will see how much the new law will save them. Our books have been costing us too much, and we have known it for years. But the old school book houses that were getting the benefit of this, fought hard to retain their hold, and came near doing so. In some counties they have kept the new books out for a year, and perhaps some are still out. But in our county, the change is now about complete. The strange feature of the business is, that any part of our people would object to getting their books for a lower price. We are glad the matter is so nearly settled.

In New York City it is estimated that 27,000 men are supported by their wives. When that becomes one of the conditions of matrimony, more men will become aspirants for it.

The German papers which had begun to revile Prince Bismarck have ceased their invectives against him since he threatened to publish a list of the writers who were formerly in his pay, with full particulars respecting the money which he gave them.

The breaking out of the influenza in Iceland has caused considerable panic, as the consequences of the disease there have been serious. Of the 57,000 inhabitants in 1843, 2,000 died of the influenza, and in 1876 1,500 persons were carried off by the disease.

The inhabitants of Heligoland have a strange custom on New Year's eve. They then perambulate the streets with broken pots and pans, which they place before their friends doors, and the man who has the largest heap before his cottage is considered the most popular.

The young girl in Baltimore who put arsenic into the coffee of her neighbors, thus killing two and perhaps three of them, explains that she did it "just for fun." The aggressive quality of this Maryland brand of fun is such that this ambitious exponent of it will be sent to prison for life as a means of restraining her dangerous exuberance.

Even great metropolitan journals slip sometimes. A writer in the London Daily News alluded to "the best things" Cardinal Newman "had said about Charles Kingsley." After the sentence had journeyed over the cable and through the New York Herald's composing and proofreading rooms it came out the best things he had said about Charles King's leg.

In 1864 E. Blackshear, a Confederate soldier, was wounded by a Federal bullet, which entered his breast, passed through his body and lodged in his back. On June 28, 1890, just twenty-six years after the wound was received, the bullet worked its way out of his back near the spine. It was round, weighed exactly one ounce, and was of the variety known among Confederates as "buck and ball."

Some San Salvador troops are described as follows: "A few wore sandals, but the most of them were barefooted. They had huge straw hats with red bands on them. Most of them wore overall suits, trimmed with red braid; others were dressed in go-as-you-please fashion, with all manner of uniform. Every man in the company had a big revolver strapped around his waist. Some of them carried rifles and muskets."

The original Brazenose knocker has been restored to its rightful building. When the Oxford scholars migrated to Stamford, in 1334, because of a feud in the university, they took the knocker with them, and since then it has been on the house where they settled. The other day the house was bought by Brazenose College, and the historic knocker was taken off and home. It was molded some time in the twelfth century. It represented a lion's face with a ring through the mouth.

An amusing case of absent-mindedness happened at Chesaning, Mich., as the south-bound train pulled out. A lady in the rear car frantically jumped to her feet, clapped her hands to her head and ran for the platform, from which she would have thrown herself but for the intervention of the conductor, who seized her around the waist with one arm and pulled the bell cord with the other. It was afterward explained that the mother in the excitement to make the train had forgotten her baby and left it in the depot.

If we can believe a Nova Scotia sea captain, the sea serpent, or at least a sea serpent, is dead. The captain avers that he saw the carcass of the monster floating on the water, and he gave a minute description of him. Granting that the captain is not romancing, he neglected a great opportunity to make a great name for himself, to get much money and to do an incalculable service to science. He should have towed the dead monster into harbor, and thus he would have been the center of the marine sensation of the season.

The camera that does the work for the rogues' gallery is concealed. The prisoner hangs his head and refuses to look up when asked to do so, or shuts his eyes and distorts his face. The photographer makes a feint with the camera in sight, takes out the plate and exclaims, "Oh, pshaw! that is spoiled!" or words to that effect, and walks hurriedly out of the room. The prisoner raises his head at once and looks pleasant. He has outwitted the photographer. Then the concealed camera gets in its fine work, and the rogue is still more surprised and pleased at being told that he can go.

One of the meanest men in Washington is worth all the way from $200,000 to $500,000, and I see him adding to his pile every day in one of these red 5-cent Washington herdics, which goes past his $50,000 residence and on to the Capitol, writes a correspondent. This man invariably takes a seat near the fare box, buys a package of tickets of six for a quarter, and when any one passes him 5 cents to put into the box he puts the nickel in his pocket and puts one of these tickets which have cost 4 1-6 cents into the box. On rainy days he must make at least as much as six and seven cents a ride, and as his income is probably not over $20,000 or $30,000 a year, the poor man ought to have it.

During his lecture tour in the United States Stanley will be carried from city to city in a splendid palace car now being built for that express purpose. Flying over the country in this luxurious way is a somewat different mode of traveling from plodding wearily on foot through the dismal jungles and over the rugged steeps of Central Arica. Stanley will easily recognize the difference and undoubtedly contrast the comforts and luxuries of modern railroad travel with his painful jorneyings in the dark continent. It is to the latter, however, that he owes his word-wide fame. It is not recorded anywhere that any one while traveling in a palace car has ever extended the science of geography or opened up a new continent to the commerce and civilization of the rest of the world.

The new law regulating the work of minors in Russian factories is not so stringent as the old law was. According to the latter children below the age of twelve years were not allowed to work at all, but the new law allows children of ten and twelve years to be employed in factories. Children between the ages of twelve and fifteen years were allowed to work only eight hours daily and then only four hours at a time. The new law allows them to be employed six hours at a time and in some instances even six hours in the night, or even on Sundays and holidays. Women and girls between the ages of fifteen and seventeen years were not allowed to work between 9 o'clock in the evening and 5 o'clock in the morning; now they may be employed at nightwork. Thus the new law is more favorable for the employers and less protective for the minors and factory women.

The men who charged at Balaklava and those of a later time who held Fort Sumter for seventy hours, without food, almost without sleep, in the face of a terrible storm of shot and shell, were heroes, and the pages of history blazon their deeds, while poets and orators never tire of celebrating them. What shall we say, however, of the quieter heroism that lays down life with as much readiness and does duty with as pure a faith, and lacks the inspiring excitement of material surroundings, hoping, too, for no celebrity and no renown? Is this not worthy of attention? A small news paragraph, published recently, tells of the death of Frank E. Smith, baggageman upon a Kentucky railroad. Smith was in an accident, and was terribly scalded, but he walked a mile and a half to the nearest station to warn an approaching train, thus saving others from the fate which he had met.

Knew He Was Right.

Farmer Jenks is a man who is so desirous of being considered infallible that he will suffer great inconvenience rather than relinquish that claim. "He'd rather have his own way than eat when he's hungry," says his wife, who, after long years of contention and final yielding, has learned to know him well.

Not long ago Farmer Jenks injured one of his fingers so severely that he was obliged to leave his work and go home to have it dressed.

"I tell you what, Jane," said he to his wife, "that finger'll have to come off."

"No, 'twon't, either, father," said she, soothingly. "I've seen plenty of hurts worse 'n that."

"Jane, I tell you 'twill! Don't you s'pose that I know what to expect of my own finger?"

The dispute ran high, and as usual the husband had the last word.

Days went on, and the finger grew worse rather than better, until at last it reached such a state that the doctor was called. He had not been in the room fifteen minutes when Farmer Jenks summoned his wife.

"Jane," said he, "come here, come right here! What do you s'pose he says?"

"Well, I guess by the way you're smilin' he says it's all right," said she, also beginning to smile, in relief. "I must say I am glad! Your forefinger and on the right hand! It didn't seem to me I could be reconciled if it really had to come off——"

"But that's just it," interrupted her husband, smiling in triumph, and looking at her with sparkling eyes. "It's got to come off, and I told you so!"

Such is Fame!

There are still a few of the settlers at Florida, Monroe county, Mo., who were there when Mark Twain was a boy going to a small country school at that place. Florida is a wee backwoods settlement with nothing to recommend it but the humorist it turned out and the great catfish that are caught there in Salt River. Some of the old-timers remember the lank, good-for-nothing Sam Clemens, who used to fish day in and day out the summer through, and spend the winter telling stories at the grocery. There is one old fellow there at least, however, to whom the fame of America's greatest humorist has never come. A stranger was stopping at Florida recently and the old man was pointed out to him as one of the pioneers.

"Where was Mark Twain born?" he asked the old fellow, after chatting with him awhile.

"Mark Twain?" he queried, in astonishment, "who's he?"

"Why, the humorist," explained the gentlemen, amused at the density of the old fellow's ignorance.

"Youmerist, eh? Never heerd o' him an' I guess ef he'd ever lived nigh here I'd a knowd it."

"His name was Samuel Clemens; don't you remember him?"

The old fellow scratched his head thoughtfully, and in a moment his memory helped him out.

"Sam Clemens," he said: "Oh, yes, I remember Sam. He left here young though, an' everybody said that he was the good-fer-nothinest boy they ever seed. Sam was a long-spindle-shanked feller, an' I never seed him do a lick a work in all his days. But, ez I said, he left here young, an' I never heerd what become o' him. Penitentery mos' prob'ly."

It Was Contagious.

The marriage wasn't a month old, and the young bride and her visiting mother sat watching the clock work toward midnight. "What is that heavy, broken, uncertain footstep coming up the stairs?" said the mother-in-law, sternly.

"I guess it's George, mamma. You know he always stuttered, and here of late it seems to have got somehow into his walk."—Philadelphia Times.

HOME MARKET FALLACY

HOW IT FAILS TO PAN OUT FOR THE FARMER.

A Specimen Humbug with Which Protection Bamboozles the Farmer and Obtains Goods Under False Pretenses—The Theory Briefly Stated.

Here, let us say, is a farmer located on a bit of land a hundred miles away from the nearest city. That city is his market. There are farmers all about him; he cannot sell to them either his staple products or the occasional surplus of fruit or garden stuff which unusually good seasons may bring upon his hands. He must carry everything to the city. The cost of transportation is so much taken from his profits.

Here steps in the protectionist. There is in this region, say, a stream capable of abundant water power. "Let us put up a woolen mill here," the protectionist urges; "let us agree to pay something more than we pay now for woolen stuffs, and so make it an object for some one to come here and start a manufactory. Hundreds of hands will be employed; the railway will be put through. We will build up a town right in the midst of our farms, and have a market at our very doors. Good prices then for everything." It is done. The mill is built; the railway is laid; the town grows up. And the farmer—what of him? Strange to say, we presently find him getting poorer!

Where is the mistake? It is just here—in the agreement to "pay something more than we pay now" for manufactured goods. In the protectionist's theory that "something more" is put away in a quiet corner; in the actual practice it comes out and plays the mischief. If the farmers of this locality want a woolen mill, those in that locality want a cotton mill, and those in the next county an iron furnace, and so on. The result is that the farmers everywhere pay "something more" for everything they buy.

But this is not all. The promise for higher prices for wheat in the "Home Market" calls for scrutiny. The appeal, sifted down, comes to this: "Pension a number of corn consumers to come and buy of you. Subsidize an army of artisans to settle at the farm gate. Pay them for making goods at a loss, and out of their profits they will purchase your abundance."

This, however, is not the worst. It is but fair to admit that though the protectionist logic was always at fault and the farmer never helped by "protection," yet that, in fact, the farmer did use to have the "home market" for which he bargained—paltry as might be the whistle for which he had paid so dear. But nowadays there is no such thing as a "home market" for any considerable portion of his produce. The farmer in the Genesee Valley, New York, not merely sees the train run past him to Rochester, laden with flour rolled in Minneapolis from Dakota wheat, but uses the same flour in his own household, and his village butcher sells fresh meat from beeves killed at Kansas City. No manufacturing town dreams nowadays of looking to the locality about it for any supplies, except only the cheapest part of its "garden truck." The labor markets of the world are open to the American manufacturer, who thus has free trade in the one thing he buys most of—labor. He lives in a land where transport facilities are so developed that he need not depend upon the locality about him—and he does not—in a country whose surplus of food products is so great that their first price-fixing markets are found at Liverpool, a free-trade city; and so he gets them, too, at free-trade rates. The American farmer has sold his birthright and has lost his pottage to boot.

The home market theory may be briefly stated as follows: If you farmers will only give us manufacturers enough money to enable us to go into business, and will consent to pay prices high enough to make it possible for us to continue business at extraordinary profits, we will agree to buy our supplies—what we must have from some source—from you at low and steadily diminishing prices—if we can't get them cheaper elsewhere.

That is all there is to it.

What the American farmer most needs is a "home market" in which he can purchase his supplies as cheaply as his competitors purchase theirs; and if he cannot secure this, then he should have the poor privilege of making his purchases where he is compelled to make his sales, and be permitted to bring his goods home without being compelled to pay unreasonable taxes and fines for carrying on legitimate business.

The Next Struggle.

The new tariff bill will soon become a law, and then will come the process of finding out in the courts just what it means. It is one of the beauties of protective tariffs that they cannot be so constructed as to shut off all doubt as to their meaning, and in this way there is always a long process of litigation to find out just what the law is.

Thus the McKinley bill, which is now about to go into operation, may be so torn to pieces by the courts within a few years that McKinley himself will not be able to recognize it. Horace Greeley, the great protectionist, said once:

"The longer a tariff continues the more weak spots are found, the more holes are picked in it, until at last, through the influence of successive evasions, constructions, decisions, its very father would not discern its original features in the transformed bantling that has quietly taken its place."

An interesting case of this kind has been seen since the present administration came into power. The present tariff, which was made in 1883, divides cloths made of wool into the two classes commonly recognized in the dry-goods trade. These classes are woolens and worsteds, the latter being made of wool, but differing from woolens in the manner of manufacture. In the law of 1883 these worsteds bore a lower rate of duty than woolens.

But the manufacturers of woolens were not satisfied and went before the present Treasury authorities last year and got a decision that worsteds were woolens and that the same duties should be collected on them as on woolens, notwithstanding the fact that it stood plainly written in the law that worsteds should pay the lower duty.

On this point the importers made a fight in the United States courts, and after a long trial they won their case, and the Government had to refund all the extra duties collected in the meantime, amounting to some $6,000,000.

In this instance the attempt was made by the Treasury Department to revise the tariff laws in the interest of the manufacturers; but, as it turned out, the courts overruled the Treasury decision and forced the law to be applied as it was plainly intended.

Now will come the struggle over the McKinley bill; for it may be assumed that all persons benefited by it who see a way of securing a still greater benefit out of it are going to fight for every inch of advantage in the courts.

What Is a Drawback?

One of the most curious and interesting things in the tariff is a drawback. What is a drawback? When a manufacturer buys abroad any raw material to be used in manufacturing some article, he pays, of course, whatever the duty is on such raw material. If, however, he should sell his manufactured article abroad, the Government will return to him nearly the entire duty he had paid on his raw material.

This is highly interesting, because it places the protectionists in the position of asserting the tariff is a tax; and furthermore, it is an admission on their part that the only way in which our manufacturers can sell in the markets of the world is to give them free raw material—a doctrine which was heard from every Democratic platform in the campaign of 1888.

This drawback provision of the tariff bill affords another striking thought—it is that our protectionist law-makers are quite ready to help our manufacturers sell cheap to foreigners and dear to their American fellow citizens.

The Senate has added a new feature to the tariff bill in regard to drawbacks. It is that if the cost of the raw material is less than 10 per cent. of the price of the finished product no drawback can be collected. This comes from men who profess to encourage labor; and yet the more labor that is put into the manufacture of any article the more certain it becomes that no drawback can be collected.

Here is a case showing how it will work in the manufacture of steel wire: If the importer brings in steel blooms, which is the lowest form of steel, and has it made into wire in this country, the duty on the bloom will not reach 10 per cent. of the value of the wire. He loses his drawbacks, and in self-protection he is forced to import steel bars instead, thereby depriving the American workman of the labor in making the blooms into bars.

TARIFF LETTERS TO FARMER BROWN.

NO. 2.

The Nature of a Protective Tariff.

Dear Farmer Brown:

There is not much difficulty in giving such a definition of a protective tariff as will be accepted by the plain, honest people of the country who have no private ax to grind. Abraham Lincoln was right in holding fast to his confidence in the good sense and general fairness of those whom he was in the habit of calling "the plain people."

To such people I turn with confidence and appeal to them whether this is not a fair definition of the expression, "A Protective Tariff." A protective is one in which duties are collected on certain articles, when imported, in order that the price of these articles may be so increased that individuals in the protected country may go into the business of manufacturing like articles and make a profit which was not possible without such duties. It is of the very essence of a protective duty that it should raise prices; and a duty which does not do this is not protective. Protectionists admit this themselves, and do not hesitate to speak of protective duties and revenue duties. To speak of a protective duty that does not raise prices is the same kind of absurdity as to speak of a square wheel, of water that is not wet, or of a fire that is not hot.

I have just said that protectionists admit the claim here made, but there is such a mass of doubled and twisted contradictions in the talk of protectionists—even the most eminent ones—that I shall have to qualify my language. I should say that many protectionists admit that duties raise prices, but oftentimes you will find the same man protesting quite the contrary. Others will argue by the hour in favor of protection, with the one thought running through every sentence that protection raises prices; but they will avoid saying this in so many words, and if you ask them whether protection raises prices, they are quick to protest that it does not.

I connection with this subject I wish to call your attention to one fact which I think quite significant as showing the real opinions of the protectionists.

Have you ever observed that they have a habit of crying down cheap prices as a thing to be resisted? Do you not remember that when President Harrison was a candidate for his present high office he said in one of his speeches that a cheap coat usually covers a cheap man? Maj. McKinley, too, defends his high tariff bill by saying that "where merchandise is cheapest men are poorest;" and again, speaking for himself and his political associates, he says: "We want no return to cheap times in our own country." All this talk means, of course, that a tariff is a good thing because it makes goods dearer.

Now, I am confident that you and all your neighbors have your opinion of such talk. Neither you nor I have ever seen the day when we did not have to practice the most rigid economy in all our buying; and if at any time we bought anything of superior quality, we did so only because we thought it would be cheaper in the long run. There are many men, I know, who get what they want, cost what it may; but you and I are not of that number. If you keep down the interest on your mortgage, and if I let no board bills accumulate behind me, we must be content.

This strange position of President Harrison and Major McKinley, it may be said in passing, is directly opposed to the progress of American civilization. It is everywhere recognized that the men who are doing most to put the world forward in industrial development are the great inventors. How? By producing labor-saving machinery, by the use of which we have a more complete control over the forces of nature. What for? In order to supply the needs of humanity at the cheapest possible price. For all men, except tariff-makers and those who thrive on tariffs, acknowledge that cheapness is the great end and aim of all man's strivings in the field of industry. The thinkers and the workers everywhere are engaged in the struggle to produce commodities in new and better ways, in order that we may get what we want more easily, in order that we may have to labor less. According to the ideas of our President and of Mr. McKinley, all this struggle should be abandoned; for dearness is better than cheapness; or, in other words, toil is better than rest; and the more you, Farmer Brown, are compelled to sweat the better for you. You do not believe it, eh? Neither did Moses when he got his quails and manna in the desert without any labor at all. A long gap between Moses and Maj. McKinley!

But let us return, as the French say, to our sheep. If there is any wavering in the minds of protectionist politicians as to whether protection raises prices, there is none at least in the minds of the tariff beneficiaries. They flock to Washington in great numbers whenever a tariff bill is to be made, pay big bills for railway fares and at hotels, all in order to get before the committee to ask for duties. Then, in many cases, they hire an expensive lobby to look out for their interests while the bill is going through. Do you think they do all this, and pay out all this money, in order that the articles they manufacture may be made lower? I trow not. It is true that these men have a great deal to say about their labor—protection must be given in order that the laborer may have better wages. And these better wages, of course, are to come out of the increased tariff prices of their goods. A clear case.

Notwithstanding this fact and the words of President Harrison and Major McKinley above quoted, it is a recognized protectionist doctrine that protection lowers prices. Mr. Blaine says that the general effect of a protective tariff is to lower prices, putting himself thus at variance with the two eminent men just quoted. But I have no time here to keep on pitting eminent protectionists against each other. Much could be done in that line and curious results would be obtained.

We come back, then, to the bed-rock principle that protection can protect only by raising prices. There is absolutely no other way. When that is said, however, a further question is at once suggested: How much does it raise them?

As this letter, however, has already extended to too great length, I shall reserve that question for my next.

Meanwhile let me say that if any man who reads these letters wishes to ask a question or to make a suggestion I should be most happy to have a letter from him. I can be addressed at 271 Franklin street, Chicago. Farmer Brown and I are not a close corporation, are we? Yours truly, Richard Knox.

A Rush for Money.

An event has just happened in New York which throws a flood of light on the stale protectionist cry that it is the foreigner who pays the tariff tax. When the Senate passed the McKinley bill it added a provision that the law should go into effect on October 1, and that the imported goods brought into the country before August 1 and placed under bond in the Goverment warehouses should be subject to the McKinley duties, unless the duties are paid and the goods thus removed from bond by November 1.

Under the present law a merchant is allowed to import goods and leave them in the Government warehouse one year, by placing himself under bond to pay the legal duty when the goods are removed. The effect of this is to allow the merchant to order large shipments of goods, and then place them upon the market gradually as he may wish, distributing the payment of the duties in this way even a longer time, much to his relief.

Now, however, that the Senate has said that all goods brought into the country before Aug. 1 must pay McKinley duties if these goods are not removed from bond before November, fears of a panic have been felt in New York. Why? Because merchants have been hurrying into the country during the summer enormous quantities of foreign goods in order to escape the new McKinley duties. They did so under the belief that they would have several months in which to pay the duties and place these goods into their stores.

Under these circumstances the action of the Senate, as just described, fell like a bombshell among New York merchants. As soon as it was known that they were to have so short a time in which to pay these duties there was a hurrying and scurrying among the merchants to borrow money to pay the present duties and remove their goods rather than leave them in the warehouse to pay the higher McKinley duties. There was already a great stringency in the money market, it being extremely difficult to make loans; but the new need for money drove an unprecedented number of borrowers into Wall street, and there was great excitement. One day money was borrowed at a rate equivalent to more than 90 per cent.

These facts are stated here in order to set them over against an assertion of Maj. McKinley in a recent speech in Maine. He said that "by putting our duties on foreign products, the like of which we can produce in the United States, we make these competing foreign producers bear the burden and supply the revenue to the public treasury." In other words, that the foreigner pays the tax.

Now, if this claim be true, how would Maj. McKinley explain the fact that these New York merchants are crowding into Wall street to borrow money at enormous rates of interest in order that they themselves may have the wherewithal to pay these same duties?

Let him explain that.

Mr. Claflin, the representative of the great Republican Claflin firm, of New York, said that the merchants of that city would need about $15,000,000 to pay the duties on their bonded goods, and he thought that the withdrawal of this large sum from circulation, at a time when there is already a scarcity of money, would have a serious effect. This good Republican merchant evidently takes no stock in McKinley's foolish talk about the foreigner paying the duty.

What poppycock these protectionist "statesmen" are talking nowadays, anyway!

Scotched the Snake—Not Killed Him.

It was supposed that the recent action of the Senate with reference to the duty on binding-twine would take the sting out of the binding-twine trust, but it now appears that that opinion was too hasty.

This fact has been pointed out in the following terms by a member of the firm of James F. White & Co., linen merchants of New York:

"Another evidence of the underlying current of trickiness that has marked the entire arrangements of the schedules is to be found in the manipulation of the binder-twine clause. It is the general opinion that all binding-twine is placed on the free list, but a careful examination will disclose the fact that the word jute has been omitted, and that it is only twine manufactured from manila or sisal grass that is on the free list, and that, as a consequence of the omission, binding-twine manufactured from jute (which is more largely used than any other) is still subject to the duty on jute goods not otherwise provided for in the bill—40 per cent.—which protects the jute trust."

It is more likely, however, that binding twine made of jute will fall under section 350 of the bill, which reads in part: "Cables, cordage and twine, except binding twine, composed wholly of manila or sisal grass, one and one-half cents per pound." When you except "binding twine composed wholly of manila or sisal grass," you leave only one kind, and that is jute twine; and this, according to the provision just quoted, must pay a duty of one and one-half cents per pound, which is equal to $30 per ton of 2,000 pounds.

From these facts it appears that the farmers have not yet escaped the clutches of the binding twine trust, unless an amendment is still put into the bill making jute twine free also.

It is a noteworthy fact, all the same, that fifteen Republican Senators from the Northwest could be found to vote with the Democrats to put any kind of binding-twine on the free list for the purpose of squelching the trust. In voting thus they indorse the Democratic position that trusts are encouraged by the tariff, and that the greatest blow you can strike at a tariff trust is to put the competing product on the free list.

Let jute twine go on the free list now, and the snake is not only scotched but killed.

The trusts continue to multiply. Now it is a window-glass trust. McKinley's day is the heyday of trusts. Of course the window-glass manufacturers deny the existence of a trust; but they say that "undue competition must be done away with."

Only a trust of another color.

If protection is to give a benefit to anybody, where is the benefit to come from? Who creates it? The Government does not create anything, and neither does protection. Is it not clear that the consumer is the man who gets left.

Property to the value of $123,000,000 was consumed by fire in the United States during 1889, an increase of $12,000,000 over the preceding year.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

—AND—

Stomach AND Liver Cure.

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Aug. 20, '86.
To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
Dear Gents:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

Crawfordsville, Ind., May 19, 1886.
My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to everyone. Mrs. W. S. Ensminger.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

A LITTLE FURTHER ON.

The things we've sought for all these years,
The phantoms we have chased, the pow'rs
That hidden lie, the glit'ring gold,
The things we've sighed for shall be ours
A little further on.

The gods shall smile on us and come
To lay their trophies at our feet,
And after all our vain attempts,
The joys we've sought so long we'll meet
A little further on.

The cherished hopes of by-gone years,
The castles reared high in the air,
The long-lost friends we too shall meet.
And rest in peace from toil and care

MOMENTOUS MAGIC.

BY WM. A. CALDWELL.

Bloomingburg was all in a ferment. Charley Clymer said it was a blooming burg of blooming idiots; but then he had gone there to sell goods and was wrathy because nobody would talk business to him. It seems that a sleight-of-hand performer had struck the town and everybody was discussing his wonderful feats. As soon as Clymer appeared in a store with his sample-cases he immediately became the target for a running fire of problems in the black art: how could a man tear up your silk hat right in front of your eyes and then produce the same hat undamaged from a cask which he had just shown you was empty? how could he conjure a rabbit into a bottle? and so on. Clymer was generally interested in such things and it was confidently expected that he would throw some light on the subject, but he didn't. He only imparted his opinions of fakirs and jugglers in general in a vigorous style of English that grew steadily less and less placid as it became necessary for him to repeat it wherever he went.

Clymer left a knot of his former patrons solemnly discussing the cabinet trick, and walked down the street towards Halpert's store.

"If I can't make a sale to Halpert, I may as well leave the town. Halpert's got more sense than anybody else here anyway, and if he's got the fever, then it must be epidemic, and I'd better clear out or I'll catch it myself."

This last remark was grim humor on Clymer's part—as if he could catch anything that would divert his thoughts from a certain little note in his breast pocket which had reached him a day or two before he had left the city, and which had been instrumental in keeping him awake o'nights and worried by day ever since. He stopped now in the shade of a tree, put down his sample cases, wiped his face, took out the note to ponder it again; here is what he read:

> Dear Charley—It almost breaks my heart to write as I must. It is to tell you that our acquaintance must cease. I cannot give any explanation, but believe me it has cost me a hard struggle to write this. I can only say forget me. I can never forget you.
>
> AMY.

There was one place in the note where the words "Ed says" had been written and then erased, but Charley's jealous eyes had made them out at the first reading.

"Who in thunder's Ed, I wonder?" he muttered to himself now, and not for the first time.

Miss Amy Layton had come some three months previously to Mrs. Walton's boarding-house where Clymer stopped while in the city. His voluble landlady had spoken in high praise of her new boarder to Clymer, and gave him to understand that she had come from a very aristocratic family which had been broken up by the failure and death of the father. Clymer needed no praise of the young lady after he once met her. The neat trim figure and gentle manners played havoc with his heart at once. He had made love desperately to Amy since she had been at Mrs. Walton's, and she had received his advances kindly, so he had been correspondingly depressed since the receipt of the above note, which he found awaiting him on his return to the city from his previous trip. Mrs. Walton sympathized heartily with the young lover, who couldn't dissemble in this matter so successfully as he could in business; in fact, he made no attempt to conceal his distress.

"All I know," said his landlady, "is that she settled with me up to Saturday night, and said that she was going out of the city. Perhaps Mrs. Bolton could give you some intelligence of her; she brought Miss Layton here in the first place, you know."

Clymer went to the elegant residence of Mrs. Bolton, but that lady had gone south, and he date of her return was uncertain. He moped about the city for a day or two and finally started out on the road again with the hope of finding relief by strict attention to business. Bloomingburg was one of the first towns he stopped at, and he was disgusted to find it in the demoralized state described above. When he entered the emporium of the amiable Halpert, he detected that worthy sitting on a chair with his chin in his hands, his elbows resting on his knees, and his eyes fixed upon the floor with a strong glare.

"Got' em again, old man?" inquired Clymer, making a feeble effort to be jovial.

Halpert looked up.

"Hello, Glymer," he replied. "Vy, I dell you; I vos yust denkin' o' dot magic feller."

"That'll do! That'll do!" said Clymer, wearily, as he banged his cases down on the counter and perched himself on a stool. "I haven't heard of anything except that blamed mountebank since I got here. Can't you talk business a while, just for a change?"

"Dot's all ride," responded the placid Halpert, "but yust vait a leetle. I didn't use to dake no shtock in dricks myself, boot last nide some frients dook me ofer to dot show, unt I dell you it vas gread! Of course it was dricks; boot how does he do 'em? how does he do 'em?"

"I don't know how he does 'em, and I don't care. I am disappointed in you, Halpert; I am, for a fact. I said on the way down here, if there's anybody in the place that's got a grain of sense left, Halpert's the man; and here you are, as looney as the rest of 'em."

"Now, dere's dot gabinet," went on the stolid Halpert. "He leds you examine it unt shuts it oop, and ride avay, shlam, bang, pop, goes dem bells unt dings. Of course, I know it vas dot seester of his vat makes der ragget—boot how does she get in dot gabinet? How does she get in? Now he says to-nide he vood die a man in dot gabinet, unt shtill dem berformances vood go on, yust der same. Dere goes dot seester now; she ain't no pad-lookin' gal, is she?"

Clymer turned his eyes listlessly toward the door. The next instant he nearly paralyzed the phlegmatic Halpert by tumbling off the stool and rushing towards the door. When he reached the sidewalk, however, the object of his search had disappeared, and he came slowly back to his old perch.

"You said he would let a man be in that cabinet to-night, didn't you?"

"Yass, dot's vot he said."

"Guess I'll drop in and see it. You fellows can't talk about anything else, anyhow."

"Yust vait dill you see him once," retorted the complacent Halpert, satisfied that it was his graphic description of the show that had won Clymer over.

That night Bloomingburg's Grand Opera House was packed to the walls. The performance was a good one, unquestionably; most of the illusions were new even to Clymer, and the deftness of the young magician was really marvelous. If Clymer had been in his normal condition he would have taken a deep interest in the exhibition. Finally the shifted scenes showed the stage set for the concluding part of the programme—the cabinet act. When the professor requested the aid of some well-known gentleman in the audience, Halbert suggested the name of Clymer which was speedily caught up by others. He accordingly went forward and took his place on the stage. The professor then took the two doors of the front of the cabinet and leaned them against the wall. He then "called the gentlemen's particular attention" to the fact that there was no possible communication with the cabinet from below nor from the wall behind. For the edification of the audience he turned the cabinet round on its rollers, in order that they might see that there was no door in the back. After having returned it to its former position and replaced the doors, he put a chair, a tambourine and some bells in the cabinet.

"It will be necessary to blindfold the gentleman and tie his hands," he explained, blandly.

Clymer made no objection. Seating himself in the chair, he placed his hands in readiness for the cords, only taking care to close his fists tightly and thus swell his wrists as much as possible. A silk handkerchief was then tied over his eyes, and after a few remarks by the professor the door was slammed shut. Clymer immediately devoted himself to the task of slipping his hands out of the cords. This was no easy thing to do, and the bells and tambourine had been going for a minute or two before he finally got free and pushed the handkerchief up from his eyes. One glance at the materialized spirit before him satisfied him, and stepping to her side he put his arm around her waist and said:

"Amy, why did you leave me?"

The being in his arms gave a slight scream and dropped the bells on the stage as she jerked her hands back into the cabinet. If the audience hadn't been devoting themselves so vigorously to applause over the supposed discomfiture of Clymer, the professor might have gotten some inkling that his spirit was in trouble, but as it was he only knew that the dropping of those bells was the signal for opening the doors of the cabinet, and this he proceeded to do at once, swinging them back to their full width and stepping aside so that the view of all the auditorium might be unobstructed. The gaping spectators took one breathless look, and then broke into vociferous acclamation again. They thought they understood the situation. Clymer had found out how the trick was done, and was going to expose it. However, he did not appear to be altogether satisfied with the result. He relaxed his hold of Amy and she stepped from the cabinet and slipped out of sight among the scenes, whispering a word to the frowning professor on the way. Clymer went forward to the footlights and made his first effort at oration, amid an impressive silence:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I feel that I ought to offer a word or two of explanation. The young lady who has just left the stage is not a stranger to me. I had hoped, until recently, that she would some day consent to be my wife. I was very much surprised to find her here. I did not intend—she wasn't—wouldn't—"

The indulgent audience kindly helped the stammerer out by a brief burst of applause; as it subsided, the stentorian voice of Halpert was heard:

"Dot's all ride, Glymer, boot how did she get in dot gabinet?"

"How did she get in there?" repeated Clymer, vaguely, as if that had nothing to do with it. "I don't know how she got in there."

The audience made no attempt to conceal its disgust. The professor was all smiles once more, and with a profound bow gave the signal for dropping the curtain. Clymer at once hunted up Amy, whom he found in tears, but not disposed to be at all frigid toward him. In reply to his questions she said:

"It was all Ed's fault. His assistant lately met with an accident of so serious a nature that it finally caused his death. Ed is so jealous of his tricks and mysteries that he was afraid to employ a new assistant, and he begged me to come and help him. He said it would not be necessary for me to appear before the audience at all, but simply to hand him apparatus from the scenes and see that things were in shape so that there would be no hitch. You see there are two more of us besides Ed and me, and we are all dependent upon Ed. Mary and Ella are both at school, and, of course, the expense is considerable. Ed talked so dismally about it that I felt it would be mean of me to refuse to help him, especially as it seemed impossible for me to find anything else to do. I thought you would not care to continue our acquaintance after I turned out to be a sleight-of-hand performer."

[Interval of a few moments, during which the reader will please kindly look through the advertisements while Clymer convinces Amy of her error.]

"I suppose," continued Amy, arranging her hair, which was apparently on the point of coming down, "I suppose our old friends would be horrified to know that we are in such an occupation. They used to applaud Ed's cleverness at evening parties, when we were in more fortunate circumstances, but it's different when he makes money out of it, you know."

She was interrupted by the entrance of her brother. He had delayed coming in order to lock up the cabinet, and to place other apparatus beyond the reach of any too inquisitive supernumerary. Clymer's wonted self-possession had returned by this time, and he hardly waited for the formality of an introduction before he plunged into the subject nearest his heart.

"Professor, I am sorry to interfere with your plans, but your able assistant here has a previous engagement to which she shall be rigorously held, no matter if it blocks the wheels of the national government!"

The professor looked from the determined face of Clymer to the downcast eyes of Amy, and threw up the case.

* * * * * *

"Amy," said Clymer, on returning from his next trip, "Halpert thinks he has solved the mystery. He says there must have been a double back to the cabinet, with a door opening inside, and that you were there. How's that?"

Amy only smiled. — [Detroit Free Press.

THE PEASANT AND THE CROW.

One cold day in the Fall a Peasant who was laboring in his Field discovered a Crow who was almost dead with Hunger, and who Piteously asked for Corn.

"Ah! but I have nothing to give," replied the Peasant, "and the Crows are to blame for it. Last Spring, when I Planted my corn you Persisted in digging up the seed. Each kernel you then ate would have given you a hundred this fall, but you refused to wait. You not only Robbed me of my Crop, but cut off your own Food supply as well."

Moral—Neighbors have to borrow now and then, but don't borrow the crowbar, piano, hired girl, horse and buggy, flat-irons, front-door bell, sugar-box, tea-canister and sideboard all at once.

THE CHAP WHO MISSED IT.

A Beggar, who was making his way along a Lonely Highway in the Evening, was stopped by a Foot-Pad, who Demanded his Wealth. The Beggar soon gave him a true Understanding of how Matters stood, and the Foot-Pad cried out in his Sorrow;

"Alas! but I have been Defrauded of my Rights!"

"How so?"

"Why, the Traveler with a Fat Purse whom I expected to Pass this way must have taken Another Route, and will now be Robbed by Someone else!"

Moral—There's something funny in hearing the Coal Man call the Ice Man an Extortioner.

THE TRAMP AND THE LADY.

A Tramp having called at a house and stated the Fact of his Hunger and Distress, the good Lady prepared him a Noble Feast, and when he had Finished he Stole the Ax and Buck-saw and was making off, when she cried out at his Ingratitude.

"Ah! Madam, you do not know what you say," he replied. "I did intend to steal the Piano, but, overcome with your kindness, I have contented myself with these poor Tools."

Moral—She Apologized, of course.

THE DOG AND THE SAGE.

A Dog was Barking at the Moon, when a Sage inquired why he did so, adding that he could not Possibly affect the great Luminary one way or the other, and that it seemed a Useless Waste of Energy.

"Oh, it isn't that it makes any difference with the Moon," replied the canine, "but I want the Other Dogs in this Neighborhood to Know that I'm not Dead."

How to Count Bank Bills.

"There are two kinds of bank bills," said a man who has handled a good many of them. "There are the national bank bills and the Government notes. The former have vignettes on each end, the latter on the left-hand end only. The Treasury Department made a mistake in putting the vignette on the left end of the Government note, for this reason: Take a bundle of these bills in a bank; the bank clerk in counting such a bundle places his left hand on the left end of the bundle and counts the right end with his right thumb and finger. The vignette is the most difficult thing to counterfeit, and for that very reason it is counterfeited most. In counting such bills as I have been speaking about this vignette is not seen by the bank clerk, and he is more liable to count in a spurious note than if he saw the vignette. The expert knows a bad vignette almost at a glance. I think if the Treasury Department had thought of this the vignette would have been put on the right end of the bill."

This was told to the cashier of a Dearborn street bank. He smiled when he heard it. "In the first place," he said, "bank clerks do not count bills in the way you mention. If they do they violate orders. The instructions are that they shall handle the bills so that each one will come entirely within the range of the eye. I presume there are violations of this rule in every bank. Even so, an expert has other means of detecting a bad bill than looking at the vignette. However, I am of the opinion that the vignette would be an additional safeguard if it were on the right end of the note."—[Chicago Tribune.

The Buffalo and the Great Western Plains.

When in his westward movement the buffalo came to the semi-civilized inhabitants of the Mississippi system of valleys, he brought a great plenty of animal food to the people, who had long been in a good measure destitute of such resources, for they had no other domesticated animals save the dog. Not yet firmly fixed in the agricultural art, these tribes appear, after the coming of the buffalo, to have lapsed into the pure savagery which hunting brings. To favor the pasturage of these wild herds the Indians adopted the habit of burning the prairies. These fires spread to the forests on the east, killing the young trees which afforded the succession of wood, gradually extending the pasturage area of the wild herds until the larger portions of the Western plains eastward to central Ohio and Kentucky, probably even into the Carolinas, and southward to the Tennessee River, had been stripped of their original forests, making way for the vast throngs of these creatures which ranged the country at the time when we first knew it. With the rehabilitation of the hunter's habit, and with the nomadic conditions which this habit necessarily brings, came more frequent contests between tribes and the gradual decadence of the slight civilization which the people had acquired.—[Scribner.

Selfish People.

CHICAGO is likely soon to find a formidable rival in Nitsch, Servia. Everything is being done by the Servian government to develop the pig trade. A contract has just been signed by which a well-known English firm is bound to slaughter 100,000 pigs at Nitsch during next year, and 150,000 in 1892, and the number is to go on increasing until 1805, when 800,000 are to be killed there. Servia already swarms with swine.

Unpractical.

Amusing accounts of the simplicity and ignorance of literary men in the common things of life sometimes come to our ears.

A few years ago two well-known writers in the neighborhood of Harvard College endeavored to evince a practical turn. They lived near each other—so near that when the water in the supply pipes in the house of one was frozen, they conceived the idea of introducing the much needed fluid before the plumber arrived by conveying it from the house of the other in an ordinary rubber hose.

The weather was of the zero kind, and the same cold that froze the water in the leaden pipes within the house, froze the water in the rubber hose which lay upon the snow without. It is hardly necessary to add that a mass of icy snow and a broken hose were the only results of this novel aqueduct.

An equally good story is told of Wordsworth and Coleridge. Cottle, the publisher, drove Wordsworth from Bristol to Alfoxden in a gig, summoning Coleridge on the way. The Alfoxden pantry was empty, so they carried bread and cheese, and a bottle of wine.

A beggar stole the cheese, and while Coleridge with hungry patience was taking out the horse, the bottle of wine rolled to the ground and was broken.

Coleridge, abashed, gave the horse up to Cottle, who tried to pull off the collar. It was too much for the worthy publisher's strength, and he called Wordsworth to assist. Wordsworth retired baffled, and was relieved by the ever-handy Coleridge. It seemed more likely that they would pull off the animal's head than his collar, and they marvelled by what magic it had ever been put on.

"La, master," said a country maid, who was passing, "you don't go to work the right way," and turning round the collar she slipped it off in an instant.—Youth's Companion.

How to Boil an Egg.

"Isn't it strange," said a short, foreign-looking man the other day to some companions while lunching together at one of the restaurants, "that not one cook in fifty, nor housekeeper either, knows how to boil an egg? And yet most people think they know this simple matter. They will tell you to drop it into boiling water and let it remain three minutes, and to be sure the water is boiling.

"Here is where the mistake is made. An egg so prepared is indigestible and hardly fit for a well person, let alone one who is sick, to eat. The moment it is plunged into boiling water the white hardens and toughens. To boil an egg properly put it in a vessel, cover with cold water, place over the fire and the second the water begins to boil your egg is done. The white is as delicate as a jelly and as easily digested and nutritious, as it should be. Try it."

The information is worthy of consideration, since the speaker has occupied the place of chef at several of the largest hotels in the country.—Chicago Tribune.

A Reprieve for the Condemned.

Wretched men and women long condemned to suffer the tortures of dyspepsia, are filled with new hope after a few doses of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. This budding hope blossoms into the fruition of certainty if the Bitters is persisted in. It brings a reprieve to all dyspeptics who seek its aid. Flatulence, heartburn, sinking at the pit of the stomach between meals, the nervous tremors and insomnia of which chronic indigestion is the parent, disappear with their hateful progenitor. Most beneficent of stomachics! who can wonder that in so many instances it awakens grateful eloquence in those who, benefited by it, speak voluntarily in its behalf. It requires a graphic pen to describe the torments of dyspepsia, but in many of the testimonials received by the proprietors of the Bitters these are portrayed with vivid truthfulness. Constipation, biliousness, muscular debility, malarial fevers and rheumatism are relieved by it.

We've heard of a woman who said she'd walk five miles to get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription if she couldn't get it without. That woman had tried it. And it's a medicine which makes itself felt in toning up the system and correcting irregularities as soon as its use is begun.

Go to your drug store, pay a dollar, get a bottle and try it—try a second, a third if necessary. Before the third one's been taken you'll know that there's a remedy to help you. Then you'll keep on and a cure 'll come.

But if you shouldn't feel the help, should be disappointed in the results—you'll find a guarantee printed on the bottle-wrapper that'll get your money back for you.

How many women are there who'd rather have the money than health? And "Favorite Prescription" produces health. Wonder is that there's a woman willing to suffer when there's a guaranteed remedy in the nearest drug store.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate the Stomach, Liver and Bowels. Mild and effective.

Voting Precincts.

The commissioners, at their regular June session, 1890, consulting with the voters of the various townships, have fixed the voting precincts of the county. The new law requires that each precinct must contain as near 200 voters as possible, and in no case over 250. It has been quite a puzzle to get them all so as to be satisfactory, but we believe it is as nearly right as could be done.

BUTLER TOWNSHIP.

The commissioners say, shall constitute one precinct, with the voting place at the Center school house.

CONCORD TOWNSHIP

has three precincts, as follows.

The South Precinct is composed of sections 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36 and the south half of section 26, with the voting place at Spencerville.

The North Precinct is composed of sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21 and all that part of section 15 which lies north of the center of Washington street in the town of St. Joe and the highway which extends east from the east end of said street to the east line of said section 15, and the voting place shall be at St. Joe.

The East Precinct is composed of sections 1, 2, 3, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 22, 23, 24, 25, the north half of section 26 and all of section 15 which lies south of the center of Washington street in the town of St. Joe and the highway which extends east from the east end of said street to the east end of said section 15, and the voting place shall be at St. Joe.

NEWVILLE TOWNSHIP.

This township will be one precinct, and the voting place at the Center school house.

STAFFORD TOWNSHIP.

Will be one precinct with the voting place at the Center school house.

UNION TOWNSHIP

Is made in four precincts.

The Northeast Precinct is composed of sections 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26 27, 28, the east ½ of sections 20 and 29, all that part of section 32 that lies north of Seventh street in Auburn, and north half of public square in Auburn, and the voting place therein shall be in the sheriff's office.

The Northwest Precinct is composed of sections 19 and 30, the west ½ of sections 20 and 29, and the voting place shall be in the ward school house.

The Southwest Precinct is composed of section 31 and all that part of section 32 which lies west of the center of Main street in Auburn and the Ft. Wayne and Coldwater highway extend- from the south line of said section to its intersection with said Main street as now used. The voting place is in Auburn.

The Southeast Precinct is composed of sections 33, 34, 35, and 36 and all that part of section 32 which lies east of Main street in Auburn and the Ft. Wayne and Coldwater highway extended from the south line of said section to its intersection with said Main street as now used, except the north half of the public square, and except that portion lying north of Seventh street in said town, and the voting place will be surveyor's office

GRANT TOWNSHIP

Has three precincts, as follows:

The West Precinct is composed of sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 16, 17 and 18, and the voting place will be in Waterloo.

The Northeast Precinct is composed of all those parts of sections 1, 2 and 3 which lie north of the center line of the Lake Shore railroad, and the voting place will be in Waterloo.

The Southeast Precinct is composed of sections 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and all those parts of sections 1, 2 and 3 which lie south of the center line of the Lake Shore railroad, and the voting place is in Waterloo.

RICHLAND TOWNSHIP

Is made into two precincts, divided as follows:

The North Precinct is composed of sections 1, 2, 3, 4 5, 6, and the north half of sections 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12, and the voting place will be at Corunna.

C. C. WALTER, Auditor of DeKalb County, Sept 23, 1840

Obituary.

Died at her home in Richland township on Sunday Sept. 14, 1890, Mrs. Emily Case, aged 75 years, 8 months and 19 days.

Emily Lawrence was born in Philadelphia, Penn., Dec. 25, 1814. At the age of 19 years, moved with her parents to Melmore, Ohio, and at the age of 21, she was united in marriage to Jacob Case, of the same place. In 1835 she and her husband emigrated to Indiana, residing in Auburn for a short time, after which, they moved to their farm in Richland township, where she resided until her death. Being one of the early settlers, she endured many of the hardships and trials incident to pioneer life, and uncomplainingly adapted herself to the varied surroundings so common to the settlement of a new country. She was left a widow in the year 1850. All who knew her, found her a faithful friend in time of sickness and trouble. She was the mother of four children. One son died in infancy; another in 1866. After living a life of usefulness, she died believing and trusting God's redeeming grace, and that there is sweet rest in heaven. Two daughters, sisters, brothers and many friends survive to mourn her loss,

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

From what we can learn of the founder of Auburn by private narrative and public record, he was an enterprising, generous, public-spirited and patriotic man and took a leading part in pioneer official actions.

The first election was held in July 1837 when Peter Fair, Samuel Widney and Isaac F. Beecher were chosen county commissioners, Walborn and Thomas L. Yates, associate judges of court and John F. Coburn, clerk and recorder. The first board of commissioners met the same month in which they were elected, appointing Wesley Park, clerk and treasurer for the time. B. Bunnell was made county agent for sale of lots and John Blair county assessor. Townships were formed, roads ordered laid out and commissioners appointed to do the work. Andrew Surface, Bunnell, and Park were appointed supervisors at the Sept. term. Park's authority extended over five full townships, designated "district number 1." The first county levy was 25cts, on $100 valuation.

The commissioners at this session allowed Park $50 84 for services as commissioner, in running out the Ft. Wayne and Coldwater state road and the Goshen and Defiance state road and for services as sheriff Park's house served as hotel, church, court house and jail. The upper chambers was used for prisoners, who went up the ladder which was then taken away and they were told to stay there and they always did so.

There being pressing need of lumber, W. Park and Samuel Ogden built and run a sawmill on the creek, not far from Park's cabin. The season was healthy and people came on to prospect. Some bought lots speculatively and had a chance to hold them for a long time.

At the fall commissoners' court, grand and petit juries were elected for the first circuit court which was held in the spring of 1838 by Charles Ewing in the lower part of Park's house. Park wrote, "During the sitting of court, it had to suspend till dinner was cooked; this gave the judge time for a nap which was very desirable, as he was generally fatigued and sometimes rather boozy. He was a brother to W. and G. Ewing, fur traders."

Thomas L. Yates, one of the associate judges when called to his seat beside Ewing appeared in a coarse hunting shirt and fox skin cap and seemed much embarassed in his new position. He made a good judge, but one day says Park "he got drunk and sentenced one Joseph Bashford, to receive a whipping, and swore that as he was the court and had passed sentence he would inflict the penalty; as the judge was making toward the criminal with this avowed intention, I seized him, and giving him a whirl told him plainly that if the court persisted in inflicting the penalty threatened, the sheriff would put the court up the ladder. Upon this, the court acknowledged the authority of the sheriff, and adjourned peaceably."

Yates had settled in Concord township upon a farm, the present site of Spencerville. This he sold and then settled in Jackson township, on the Lockwood farm. Walden, who had settled early in 1836 near Orangeville, also made a good judge.

At a session in 1838, of the commissioners' court, the following appropriations were made from the three per cent fund for the roads mentioned below viz:

For the Goshen and Defiance road $800, a like sum for the Ft. Wayne and Coldwater, and $400 for the St. Joseph state road. There does not seem to have been much of Auburn as yet, more than three or four rude log houses, and how the grand and petit juries, eighteen in all were accommodated is a query. Perhaps some one of the survivors could enlighten the public by his experience. The year was marked by considerable sickness. Coburn's house down at Wolf's was quite a distance through the woods and interchange of visits between the few women folks as they found occasion in the midst of their daily labors was a pleasant relief. The women needed sociability as much if not more than the men in those days. The social amusements proceeded from matters of necessity. The raising of log cabins was generally accompanied with a quilting, or something of the sort, and these brought together the whole neighborhood. When the house was up, innocent amusements succeeded.

It is remembered that Wesley Park offered a lot as a prize to the winner of a foot race between women, a spirited contest was the consequence, and the lot was at once deeded to the victor and long held by the family.

The early necessity of roads made busy work for the commissioners, appointing viewers to determine their course which was not always plainly recorded, but the people manage to get along and left to later times to make better record.

It transpires that old records made by the first township trustees are either missing altogether or exist in a dilapidated condition, as the rights of the public in road and also the rights of landowners are affected by the same, the importance of looking up and preserving the old records, becomes obvious. The time has come when substantial record books should be obtained where they are wanting and where the trustee has not the time to spare, a competent person should be employed to transcribe the first record.

L. Ingram assessed DeKalb county in 1836 and one may imagine the long journeys from clearing to clearing before he had completed his work in so extended and sparsely settled a region, and his allowance when done was $24.00.

Many a settler found himself almost compelled to assume the role of tavern-keeper and as a means of raising a revenue, a license was assessed of twenty dollars on all who kept public houses. There seemed to have been somewhat of a prejudice against the presumably yankee pedler of clocks, as the tariff was fixed at sixty dollars on the vender. The small boy's wonder and the old folks' delight, the old fashioned caravan, later known as menagerie or a show of wax figures exhibiting fon money was charged forty dollars for each day's performance while the necessary ferryman paid five dollars for the privilege of plying his calling.

The champion butter producing cow of the world is named Euratisamas, owned in Massachusetts, and her record is 945 pounds and nine ounces of butter in one year.

A National Event.

That holding of the world's Fair in a city scarcely fifty years old will really benefit this nation as much as the discovery of the Restorative Nervine by Dr. Franklin Miles is doubtful. This is just what the American people need to cure their excessive nervousness, dyspepsia, headache, dizziness, sleeplessness neuralgia, nervous debility, dullness, confusion of mind, etc. It acts like a charm. Trial bottles and fine book on "Nervous and Heart Diseases," with unexualed testimonials, free at F. E. Davenport's. It is warranted to contain no opium, morphine or dangerous drugs. 4

The Bedford Pa., Gazette is eighty-five years old and its publisher thinks it is the oldest newspaper in the United States. It is a model among country newspapers.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's drugstore, regular size, 50c. and $1. 4

Maine's hay crop is estimated at 1,500,000 tons, worth at least $15,000,000. The ice crop brings in perhaps as much more, and the summer visitor crop over $6,000,000.

Remarkable Facts.

Heart disease is usually supposed to be incurable, but when properly treated a large proportion of cases can be cured. Thus Mrs. Elmira Hatch, of Elkhart, Ind., and Mrs. L. Baker, of Ovid, Mich., were cured after suffering 20 years. S. C. Limburger, druggist at San Jose, Ill., says that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, which caused the former, "worked wonders for his wife." Levi Logan, of Buchanan, Mich., who had heart disease for thirty years, says two bottles made him "feel like a new man,, Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure is sold and guarranteed by F. E. Davenport. Book of wonderful testimonials free. 4

Robert Ingraham, of Philadelphia, a guest of Captain Escholtz, at Gettysburg, found a gold chain on that battlefield. It was probably dropped during the battle.

Eupepsy.

This is what you ought to have, in fact, you must have it, to fully enjoy life. Thousands are searching for it daily, and mourning because they find it not. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are spent annually by our people in the hope that they may attain this boon, And yet it may be had by all. We guarantee that Electric Bitters, if used according to directions and the use persisted in, will bring you Good Digestion and oust the demon Dyspepsia, and install Eupepsy. We recomend Electric Bitters for Dyspepsia and all diseases of Liver, Stomach and Kidneys. Sold at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle by Robbins and McCord, Druggists. 4

BIRCHALL'S BRAVADO.

The Murderer May Cheat the Gallows by Suicide.

Washington special: While Birchall was being taken to the jail last midnight, after being sentenced to be hung for murder, he made his only comment on his conviction and sentence: He said: "Here's a how-do-you-do; I've had pretty tough luck all through." He retired almost immediately after reaching his cell and slept soundly. He arose at the usual hour in the morning, ate a hearty breakfast and appeared not at all depressed. Mrs. Birchall did not learn Tuesday night of her husband's fate. She was in a highly excitable condition and her physicians gave her an opiate before the verdict was reached, and she slept soundly all night. Next morning she was told of the verdict in the presence of her physician and bore up bravely. It is believed she will recover sufficiently to sail for England on the Germanic with Mrs. West-Jones. No one is allowed to see Birchall without an order from the Sheriff. The strictest watch is kept over him. Many believe he will cheat the gallows yet by committing suicide.

Anti-Lottery Law to Be Vigorously Enforced.

Judge Tyner, the Assistant Attorney General for the Postoffice Department, has about completed the instructions to postmasters in regard to the enforcement of the anti-lottery law. It has been found that the law is far more reaching in its effects than is generally supposed. In prohibiting lotteries it also prohibits all schemes for the distribution of prizes by chance and applies to the church fair as well as the Louisiana lottery. So an advertisement of a church fair which speaks of a raffle or any game of chance will be excluded from the mails. Judge Tyner has had referred to him for decision a question as to whether a newspaper published in Texas that has a guessing scheme can be admitted to the mails.

Diabolical Deed.

Two desperadoes gained admission at midnight into the residence of Mrs. Charlotte Haas, a German widow who lives near the corner of Lafayette and Leith streets, Fort Wayne, Ind., by representing to her that her son had been badly injured by the cars. After she had opened the door they demanded the money she had hid in the house, and, upon her refusal to tell its hiding place, they knocked her down and tortured her in a horrible manner. Her screams brought neighbors to the scene, and the villians left without securing any booty. Mrs. Haas will hardly recover.

Bad Gas Explosion.

An explosion of gas occurred at the Sterling Colliery, near Shamokin, Penn., owned by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal Company. Edward Durkin, John Driscoll, Philip Shull, John O'Gara, Thomas Brennan and three unknown men were very seriously burned, and ten others were severely injured by being blown about the chambers by the force of the explosion. It is thought all the men injured have been found. The mine is badly damaged and work will have to be suspended pending repairs.

The New York Sun publishes an appeal to the people of America, from the American Committee for the relief of the famine in Ireland. The personnel of the American Committee contains the following names: Chairman, General James Grant Wilson; Honorary Chairmen, Hon. Rutherford B. Hayes, Hon. Grover Cleveland; Vice Chairmen, James Redpath, George Ehret, Col. Elliott F. Shepard, James Phillips, jr.; Treasurer, the New York Sun; Secretary, Arthur Dudley Vinten.

Base Ball.

President Stern, of the Cincinnati club of the National League, gives the following terms on which the club will be sold to the Brotherhood, and if accepted the transfer will be made immediately. The price to be paid is $48,000, of which sum $30,000 is to be cash in hand and a lien of $18,000 follows on the property delivered. It is thought the offer will be accepted.

Murdered and Placed on the Track.

The remains of Wm. Nolan, an iron worker, were found on the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago tracks near Vern Station, Pa. It was at first thought that he had been struck by a train, but it has since transpired that he was robbed and murdered and his body placed on the tracks to conceal the crime. His assailants are not known.

Massacred by Natives.

London special: Information has reached here of the massacre by natives of Capt. Hedley, owner ot the cutter Isabell, of Hartlepool, together with the crew of the vessel while engaged in fishing for pearls off the coast of New Guinea. After the murder of all on board, the Papuan savages looted and scuttled the cutter.

A G. A. R. Appointment.

Gen. Wheelock G. Veazey, Commander-in-chief, has appointed Judge William Lochren as Judge Advocate General of the G. A. R. Judge Lochren is on the bench at Minneapolis, Minn., and is recognized as one of the ablest jurists in the Northwest. He is President of the commandery of the Loyal Legion.

EIGHT MEN KILLED.

Collision of Two Freight Trains on the B. & O. Railroad.

Zanesville, (O.) special: A most frightful wreck occurred on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad near Pleasant Valley, O., a short distance west of this city. Orders were given east and west-bound freights to pass at Blackhand, but Operator Keely at that place failed to deliver the order to the east-bound train. Too late he realized the terrible mistake he had made and instantly wired the operator here that there would soon be a wreck. The fellow is a mere boy and he must have then left his post, for he has not been found since, and his place is deserted. Both engines and a number of cars filled with oats, coke and merchandise were piled up in the greatest confusion, as a result of the terrific crash with which they met. Eight men are reported killed. Those not employed on the train were beating their way from Columbus and were caught between the cars. The trains met on a sharp curve and the east-bound train had just emerged from a piece of woods, so that neither had time to check their speed in the slightest. They were running at more than the average speed, and the engines darted into each other with a force and crash that was terrific. The cars to the number of twenty or more at once piled up to the height of thirty feet. Immediately they met, the survivors say an awful chorus of groans and shrieks arose from the wreck.

CARRYING SHILLALAHS.

Friends of O'Brien and Dillon Attend Their Trial and a Bloody Riot Ensues.

Dublin special: A large number of the members of the Irish Nationalist party were in attendance upon the trial of Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon at Tipperary. The court room in which the trial was held was crowded to its utmost capacity. Thousands of spectators, friends of and sympathizers with the prisoners, went to Tipperary carrying shillalahs.

Just before the hour for calling the cases, the crowd outside the Court House had grown to prodigious proportions, and the police was called upon to prevent the coming into the building of any except those especially interested in the proceedings. In carrying out these instructions the police charged upon the crowd, using their batons freely. For at least five minutes there was a regular stand-up fight between the crowd and police. Finally the crowd gave way, and the police succeeded in maintaining a clear space in front of the Court House.

During the march three cheers were given for John Morley by the large crowd, which exasperated the police, who charged on them to force the escort to move forward. John O'Connor warded off a blow from a policeman's club that was aimed at Mr. Morley. The Court House was reached without further trouble, the streets in the vicinity being crowded with sympathizers.

Mr. William O'Brien first refused to enter the building unless the general public was freely admitted, but he finally went in bitterly complaining of the brutality of the police. One of the officers in the rush struck Commoner Harrington, severely wounding him. Another struck Mr. Halifax, who caused a sensation by appearing in court, bleeding freely from a scalp wound, the blood running down over his face and neck and completely saturated the collar of his coat. One man was struck in the face by a policeman's baton and had his teeth forced down his throat. Several persons were so badly injured in the melee that they were obliged to call surgical aid.

John Morley entered the court greatly agitated, and appealed to the bench to prevent such brutal and wanton batoning. Both Mr. Morley and Mr. Dillon appealed to Col. Cadell to allow the public free ingress. This was peremptorily refused, but ultimately the doors were thrown open, and the general public allowed to enter.

REMARKABLE SUIT.

Cincinnati Boodlers Fall Out Over a Division of the Spoils.

One of the most remarkable suits ever filed in Cincinnati is one brought by Andrew T. Moonert, now of Chicago, against W. N. Forbes, of Cincinnati, to recover $2,100. The petition itself does not disclose its nature, being simply an assertion that Forbes, as agent for Moonert, received this money in December and January last, but had refused to pay it over on demand. The nature of the agency is explained by Moonert's attorney, who says that at the time mentioned Forbes was President of the Board of Councilmen of Cincinnati and Moonert was a member of the board and Chairman of the committee to which was referred an ordinance granting a valuable franchise to the Thompson-Houston Electric Light Company. The attorney says that Mr. Clark, acting as agent of the Thompson-Houston Company, deposited with Forbes a large sum of money to be used to influence the committee of which Moonert was Chairman to act favorably on the ordinance, as well as to secure the votes of the other members for it. The assertion is that Forbes refused to pay to Moonert his proper share. Thus the spectacle is presented of the court being called upon to compel violators of the law to divide equally their illegally obtained money. Of course the trial of the case will develop the evidence upon which Moonert bases his claim, but it is said that it is likely that he has been the victim of prankish friends who have persuaded him that he has been defrauded by Forbes.

SETTLERS SCALPED.

The Hair of Two Hundred Lifted by Red Men.

Denver (Col.) special: Sensational reports have been received here from Mullen, Ida., that settlers within a radius of fifty miles had organized for the purpose of wiping out of existence the Nez Perces Indians, who for months past have amused themselves by burning towns, scalping the innocent and outraging defenceless women. Several days ago over two hundred were scalped near Mullen. The band was composed of those who took part in the Nez Perces massacre of 1877, and were camped near the scene of the first outrage of that year. They had 400 ponies, many squaws and pappooses and several painted warriors. They claim that the whites have no right to that country and they requested them to leave, as this was their camping ground before they were removed to the reservation at La Piva, not far from Lewiston. The settlers in Camais Prairie, in North Idaho, where in 1877 the great depredations were committed, fearing another uprising might occur, have now organized, and the first unfavorable report that reaches them will put an end to any further depredations on the part of the Indians.

Virginia Honor.

Lexington (Va.) special: Two cadets in the Virginia Military Institute, Warren Taliaferro, of Virginia, and Frank W. McCommico, of Texas, had a fisticuff, from the effects of which Taliaferro died shortly afterwards. There was some point of honor at stake and the two young men, aged respectively 16 and 18, repaired to one of the society halls, selected their seconds and made a ring. The fight lasted about half an hour. Taliaferro went to his room with his nose bleeding, went to sleep and never awoke again. Opinion seems to be that nothing can be done to McCommico before any jury hereabouts, as the two were evenly matched as to size and the fight was fair. McCommico, however, was arrested and bailed. It is learned from a trustworthy source that McCommico was so badly injured that he has been speechless and unconscious since the fight.

Religious Row.

The radical element of the United Brethren Church at Odgen, Mich., had extensively advertised that it would conduct services at Zion Church, but upon arriving at the sanctuary they found it in possession of the Liberals, who had placed a railing on the outside and were allowing no "rads" to come within the picket lines. The Sheriff and four or five deputies, with prosecutor Morgan, were the pickets and inside the worshipers were provided with guns and bayonets. A great crowd of people who came from miles around, looked on curiously from a distance, expecting to see trouble. The Radicals, seeing the officers and guns, withdrew to the residence of Samuel Hopkins, where services were held. Both factions are about even as to numbers. The Liberal who was beaten by the Radicals a week ago at Mulberry Church, between Ogden and Riga, has sued his assailants in the Blissfield Court for civil damages.

Important Decision.

St. Louis special: Justice Miller, of the United States Circuit Court has rendered an important decision on the question of copyright for Webster's unabridged dictionary. The case was that of Homer Merriam against the Halladay Publishing Company. The complainants are owners of the copyright of 1884, and are successors of the original publishers of the dictionary, which was issued in 1828. The extreme life of a copyright is forty-two years; so, in 1889, Henry Q. Allen & Co., of New York, Loomis & Co., and Ogilive & Co., of Chicago, issued photo-lithographic copies of the 1847 edition. These reprints were sold for one-fourth the price of the latest edition. The Merriams brought suits in several States, and after exhaustive arguments Judge Miller decided in favor of the defendants.

Great Trouble Looked for Among the Indians.

Captain Trimbleton, of the Tenth United States Cavalry, commandant at Fort Sill, passed through Pittsburgh recently. He says that the greatest Indian uprising of recent times is sure to come soon. The Indians, he says, have got the idea that the Great Medicine Man is coming soon to wipe out the whites and restore them to the ownership of the country. The result is that they have entered with other fanatics upon a series of incantations and ridiculous orgies. The 5,000 Indians about Fort Sill renounced Christianity, and he is certain that in a short time somebody will pretend to be the expected Great Medicine Man, and then trouble will begin. He thinks all the United States garrisons should be doubled.

Went on Their Way Rejoicing.

A romance dating back thirty-five years culminated in a happy marriage at Chattanooga, Tenn., the parties being George W. Clotz, of Buffalo, N. Y., and Mrs. Crook, of Galena, Ill. In 1855 they became engaged and the young man went west to seek his fortune. Failing at first, he ceased to write, but succeeding at last, went east to redeem his promise and found on his return that the lady had married. Since then the matrimonial partner of each died and the survivors had not seen each other until the other day, when the gentleman, en route to Florida, and the lady to Atlanta, met in Cincinnati. Mutual explanations followed, the love of their youth was renewed and in Chattanooga they were made husband and wife and went on their way rejoicing.

Orthodox Hebrews Defend This Government.

There was the biggest kind of a row at a joint meeting of the Polish anarchists and the orthodox Hebrews of Baltimore, Md. There were fully 2,000 people at the meeting, the orthodox Hebrews being largely in the majority. An immense crowd was also gathered before the hall, attracted by the noise from within. Several of the orthodox Hebrews defended their faith, when Michael Cohen, an anarchist, who has only been in this country four months, denounced religion and the American Government in the severest terms. Then ensued a bitter fight, the cries being heard squares away. The police finally raided the hall and made many arrests.

An Indiana Murder.

Valentine Stenerwald shot John Shaffer at his (Stenerwald's) home near Center Point, Ind., from the effects of which Shaffer died. They married sisters some years ago. Shaffer would drink and abuse his wife. Having threatened her life, she took the children and went to Stenerwald's for protection. The husband followed at night, but was refused admittance. After threatenings he broke down the door, and on entering received the contents of a shot gun in the lower bowels. Shaffer lived at Harmony, and was about thirty-seven years of age. Stenerwald has given himself up to the authorities.

President Harrison to Take a Western Tour.

President Harrison and several members of his Cabinet will visit California next May, as the guests of Senator Stanford, to be present at the opening ceremonies of the Leland Stanford University. The arrangements for the journey and the entertainment of the distinguished party will be on a lavish scale. The ladies of the presidential household and the wives of the Cabinet officers have also been invited, and the trip across the continent will be something long to be remembered.

Four Hundred Soldiers Drowned by the Collapse of a Bridge.

Vienna special: Polish journals assert that during the recent manœuvres of the Russian army at Kovno, the Krasnostaw bridge collapsed, and that 400 soldiers belonging to the Pultaun Regiment, which was crossing the bridge at the time of the accident, were thrown into the water and drowned. The papers state that among those who lost their lives was Dr. Bardowsky. There has been no official confirmation of this report.

Irish National League.

Major W. J. Gleason, Chief Executive of Ohio branch of Irish National League, announces that the League throughout the country has virtually disbanded. The League was once the most powerful of Irish organizations in the country. All money collected now for the cause of Ireland must be forwarded direct to Harrington and Kenny, members of Parliament. Dr. O'Reilly, of Detroit, once treasurer, stepped out of that office when his accounts were satisfactorily examined some months ago.

Desperate Duel.

At a railroad camp near Birmingham, Ala., Bob Anthony and Simon Burket shot each other dead. Burket accused Anthony of stealing a pistol from him. The latter said he would wash out the insult with blood, and both the men drew their revolvers, at the same time three shots were fired of each, all of which took effect, and at the third shot both men fell dead.

Only His Jaw Left.

The boiler in Richard Robbins' tile mill at Deedsville, Miama County, Ind., burst, killing Charles Deed and injuring two other men and wrecking the building. Deeds was unmarried and was blown quite a distance away and his head was completely destroyed, only a piece of the jaw being found. The steam gauge registered eighty pounds.

Torpedo Works.

The American Torpedo Company's works, situated in a deep ravine two miles south of New Cumberland, W. Va., exploded, reducing the plant to kindling wood. A man named Schafft is supposed to have been the only occupant. He was blown to mince-meat and the fragments scattered over the hillside.

Birchall Will Hang.

The jury in the Birchall case, at Woodstock, Ont., after being out one hour and a half, returned a verdict of guilty. Birchall was then sentenced to hang on November 14. Birchall enticed a young Englishman, named Benwell, over to Canada to purchase land, and then murdered him for his money.

A Virginia Scandal.

Roanoke (Va.) special: J. B. Omerra has caused the arrest of J. J. Keely, for assault and threatening his life, and of Father J. W. Lynch, pastor of the St. Andrews' Catholic Church, as an accessory. The trouble arose through a scandal which Omerra had made public concerning Keely and a young lady of Father Lynch's church. The priest arranged for a meeting to which Omerra came, not knowing Keely would be there. At the meeting Keely forced a written retraction from Omerra, at the point of a revolver, telling him he must sign or die. Keely admits the assault, but denies the priest's connection with it. Keely was fined $25 and bound over to keep the peace. The case against the priest will be heard later.

Minister in Queer Business.

Milwaukee special: Rev. A. M. Deford, a Methodist minister, aged 28 years, was arrested here for attempting to pass a $2 bill which had been raised to a $10. Several mutilated bills were found upon Deford's person, and the evidence against him is very strong. The reverend bill fixer was on his way to the Methodist Conference at Whitewater. He is very popular at Hortonville, where he filled a pulpit while he pursued his studies at Lawrence University at Appleton, and the people of his church had asked the Bishop for his return. Deford has wife and four children.

Attempted to Wreck a Train.

Another cowardly attempt was made at Maximo, near Alliance, O., to wreck the limited going west. One rail had been dragged partially across the track and others were ready. A two horse-farm wagon had also been placed on the track. A freight came along unexpectedly and surprised them before they had succeeded in their purpose, knocking the wagon into kindling wood. The rail was pushed ahead of the engine and off the track. This is the fourth attempt at this place. Those implicated in the first three attempts are in the penitentiary.

Women at the Polls.

At the school election at Binghampton, N. Y., over 500 women cast their ballots, the largest vote of women ever polled. Active electioneering was indulged in by many of the ladies and several leading society women voted. The wife of one candidate drove around in her carriage all day, bringing women to the polls to vote for her husband. In some districts the majority of voters were women and in the whole city nearly as many women as men voted. The good order which the attendance of women at the polls produced was generally commented on.

Intructions on the New Lottery Laws.

Judge Tyner, the Assistant Attorney General for the Postoffice Department is engaged in preparing instructions to postmasters in regard to the enforcement of the new anti-lottery law. A number of questions have arisen in regard to the construction of the law especially as to the right to mail back numbers of newspapers containing lottery advertisements, printed prior to the passage of the law, also whether a Canadian newspaper containing lottery advertisements printed can be delivered in this country through the mails.

Value of a Wife.

John Siebrecht, of Baltimore, Md., wants $5,000 damages from Wm. H. Evans, a wealthy marble importer, for alienating his wife's affections and inducing her to get a divorce so that he might marry her. The case presents many interesting features. The familiar character of "mutual friend" is not wanted in the dramatis personæ. The case was begun in the Superior Court. The parties in the suit are prominent in social circles.

The Louisiana Lottery.

The Canadian Government has learned that the Louisiana Lottery Company are about establishing an agency in Canada as a medium for circulating lottery information throughout the United States. It is learned at the Department of Justice that the statue already provides that it is a misdemeanor to advertise a lottery. The penalties, however, are only $25 for each offense, which it is understood, will be increased next session.

McAuliffe Terribly Licked.

In the prize fight between McAuliffe and Slavin, which took place in the Ormonde Club room, London, the latter won in the second round, knocking out his American antagonist so quickly and completely that McAuliffe was unable to come to time. In Slavin's hands he proved but a mere infant, and was handled as a child plays with a toy.

A Hoosier Embezzler Caught.

W. H. Schreiber, bookkeeper of the First National Bank of Columbus, Ind., who, on November 28, 1888, stole about three hundred thousand dollars in cash and securities from the vaults of the bank and fled to Canada, visited Detroit recently and was arrested by a detective who has been on his track for two years.

Slew His Brother.

Alfred Palmer was fatally shot by his brother, William, at East Saginaw, Mich. The two brothers have had frequent quarrels, and they attacked each other with revolvers with the result as above stated. William was arrested.

Minor State Items.

—Gas has been struck near Monrovia at a depth of 140 feet.

—Frank Bowers shot John Gisse in the hip in a quarrel at Mudsock.

—Noah Reddish was burned to death in a boarding-house at Lafayette.

—A grand reunion of the Eighty-seventh Indiana Volunteers was held at Peru.

—The annual reunion of the Eighty-sixth Regiment occurs at Covington, Oct. 8 and 9.

—Miss Emma Roswell, of Jeffersonville, aged 45, took the wrong medicine with fatal effect.

—A new natural-gas company, with a capital stock of $100,000, has been formed at Shelbyville.

—The Muncie Homestead Company has contracted for fifty laborer's cottages, at a total cost of $25,000.

—Josiah Cobbs, aged 60, a prominent farmer near Seymour, fell from a tree and was fatally injured.

—The seventh annual reunion of the Thirty-sixth Indiana Volunteers will be held at Knightstown, Oct. 8 and 9.

—A small son of Homer Winters, of Goshen, picked a dynamite cartridge to pieces, and both hands were shattered.

—Jerry Moore, an 8-year-old boy at English, had his foot almost torn off by the counter of a hardware store falling upon it.

—Frank Andrews and John Lewis, arrested on suspicion at Goshen, prove to be expert thieves wanted in Michigan for burglary.

—Charles Howe has been sent to the penitentiary for two years from Montgomery County for stealing a few articles of jewelry.

—James Maskell, of Shelburn, was killed by being run over by the north-bound train on the E. & T. H., being literally cut to pieces.

—The damage suit of Burrows vs. the P., C. & St. L. Railway Company, for $25,000, was decided at Logansport in favor of the plaintiff.

—Henry Selter, of Adams Township, Allen County, died at the age of 91. He was a well-known farmer, having settled there forty years ago.

—Wm. Wallace, a painter, of Brazil, fell from a scaffold near Stanton, breaking his right arm and suffering injuries which will probably prove fatal.

—At a charivari party near Burnettsville an old shotgun burst in the hands of Orla Miller, shattering his left arm and carrying away a piece of his nose.

—Willie Crawford, a small boy at Muncie, was accidentally shot in the breast by a rifle in the hands of his cousin, Edward Crawford, while they were engaged in shooting birds. His recovery is doubtful.

—James Carney, who was recently jailed at LaPorte for theft, proves to be a deserter from the regular army. Although the evidence was clear that he had stolen to a sufficient extent to send him to the penitentiary Judge Noyes decided that it would be best to turn him over to the officers of the regular army to be dealt with by them.

—A strange and fatal disease has attacked the family of George Davidson, a resident of Mentor, Dubois County. Last week a little daughter of Mr. Davidson was attacked with the disease and died at 8 p. m. On the same evening a boy, aged 9 years, was attacked with the disease and died the following morning. Three other children of the family are hopelessly ill with the disease.

—The whereabouts of Joseph Lombard, agent at Fort Wayne of the Provident Savings and Life Insurance Company, is a matter of grave concern to his family and friends. Mr. Lombard left on the 10th of August to attend the G. A. R. encampment at Boston, and no news has been received from him since his departure. He is a man of exemplary habits, and his prolonged absence is causing serious apprehensions as to his well-being.

—Diphtheria has made its appearance in Shoals, and is causing great alarm. The public schools have been closed. There are a number of very serious cases, but no deaths reported as yet.

—Alfred Wilton, aged 25, was crushed to death by a fall of slate in the Harrison Mine, near Clay City, Clay County. He was bank boss in the mine, of which his father was superintendent. The latter, who resides at Terre Haute, received the news at the depot, and fell fainting.

—James Kelley, a farmer of Berne, in comfortable circumstances, has been arrested for impersonating a soldier of the same name in order to obtain a pension.

—Abner Kyle, ex-Commissioner of Bartholomew County, who resides on his farm alone, near Taylorsville, leading the life of a hermit, was attacked by a vicious sow. The flesh upon his left leg and arm was fearfully mangled. He draged himself into his residence, where he was found by a friend next morning in a dying condition. He died in a few hours.

—At Dundee, a little village a few miles north of Anderson, Frank Bowers shot his brother-in-law, Frank Etchinson, in the hip with a 44-caliber revolver. They quarreled frequently. Bowers is still at large.

—Clark Odum, who left the house of John Kenyon, near Anderson, in a buggy, reappeared a couple of hours later on foot, with his upper lip torn off, his teeth gone and his jaw crushed in, and unable to give an account of himself. The horse and buggy have not been found.

—Fred Stierwaldt, living four miles southwest of Brazil, fatally shot his brother-in-law, John Shaffer. Shaffer and his wife had quarreled, and she had fled to Stierwaldt's for protection. He pursued and was shot in the abdomen while attempting to force his entrance. Stierwaldt has been arrested.

—William Shanks, a freight conductor on the southern division of the Monon, was seriously injured at Jackson Creek, near Bloomington. The train broke in two and the rear part of the train collided with the front part. Shanks, who was sitting on top of one of the cars, was thrown to the ground and his left leg fractured.

—Thomas Vansycle, about 40 years of age, was found on the C., H. & I. track, near Lyons Station, just east of Connersville, with his head entirely severed from his body, and his body otherwise mutilated. He was in Connersville the day before, and is said to have been under the influence of liquor. It is supposed he started to walk home and was overtaken by one of the evening trains. He leaves a wife and family.

—The financial success of the Northern Indiana Fair, has revived the plan, discussed for many years, of having a mile tract and suitable buildings for a great fair in Fort Wayne. At a special meeting of the Business Men's Exchange the project was discussed and took practical form. It was decided to form a fair and exposition association with a sufficient capital to place it on a sound financial basis.

—At Darwin, a small station on the Big Four road, two old ladies, Mrs. Melvina Smith and her sister, Mrs. Sallie Lewis, were about to cross the railway track when their horse took fright at an approaching train. The buggy was thrown down an embankment and both ladies severely injured. Mrs. Lewis was unconscious for some time, and is in a critical condition. Her companion was able to be removed to her home.

—Noah Burnett, at one time a well-to-do young man of Bartholomew County, went to Columbus recently and drank about the saloons. Near midnight he started to go to his brother's residence, just north of the Jeffersonville, Madison and Indianapolis track. When near the bridge over Flatrock, he was struck by an engine and instantly killed. His body was found early next morning and turned over to his friends, after being viewed by the Coroner.

—South Bend is at present in peril on account of a break in an old flume which furnished water for running the large water-wheels which drive the three big water-supply pumps. By the breakage the pumps are without power and useless. The water supply is now furnished by one steam pump capable of keeping the 225-foot standpipe nearly full, unless a fire of large proportions occurs. Should the steam pump break or give out in any way the city would be left without fire protection.

—There was another jail delivery at Paoli, by which John Tate, Albert Archer and Lafayette Mattox made good their escape. The prisoners made keys of an old shovel, pried off a steel plate, unlocked the door and walked out. Ovid White, who is confined there, awaiting a trial for the murder of Johnson, in Washington County, in 1883, had a good opportunity to make his escape, but refused to do so. He gave the alarm within a minute after the delivery. Archer is a younger member of the famous Archer gang.

—John Fugit, a lad employed at the Standard newspaper office, Greensburg, fell against the machinery of the engine used there and suffered a fractured lower jaw, besides receiving several other severe bruises and scratches which may result fatally. This completes the second couplet of misfortunes in the newspaper offices of that city. About three years ago the Review office was partially burned out, a few months later the Standard had a similar accident. About two months ago Ed. Lines lost an arm in the Review machinery, and now Fugit is seriously injured in the Standard press-room.

—The People's party met at Indianapolis and nominated the following ticket: Leroy Templeton, of Benton County, Secretary of State; James M. Johnson, of Daviess County, Auditor of State; Isaiah N. Miller, of Grant County, Treasurer of State; William Patterson, of Indianapolis, for Attorney General; John S. Bender, of Plymouth, for Supreme Judge; Benjamin F. Street, of Gibson County, for Clerk of the Supreme Court; William Whitney, of Delaware County, for Superintendent of Public Instruction; Edward S. Pope, of Indianapolis, for State Geologist, and John W. Shockly, of Henry County, for Chief of Bureau of Statistics.

—The entire apple brandy output of Southern Indiana, 10,000 gallons, has been cornered by Fred. Wunderlic, of New Albany, and the price has advanced 75 cents per gallon.

—While Misses Emma and Hattie Sparks were out driving at Connersville the horse switched one line out of their hands and Miss Hattie reached over the dash to get it, when the horse became frightened and she fell under the wheels, breaking one leg twice and the other once.

—A Cleveland, Ohio, syndicate has concluded the purchase of the horse-railroad system at Evansville for $240,000. Extensive improvements are contemplated at an early day.

—While playing about the stove the clothes of Earl Low, the 3-year-old son of Samuel Lowe, of Fort Wayne, took fire, inflicting fatal injuries. The child's mother extinguished the flames with a shawl, but too late to save its life.

FRED DEBELLEVILLE, at present in Belgium, has been engaged by Charles Frohman for his leading man.

A STORY OF THRILLING INTEREST

In a short time one of the most captivating serials ever published, entitled

THE GREAT SEABURY CASE;

—OR,—

Beautiful Leonore.

BY ALEXANDER ROBERTSON, M. D.,

will appear in that well-known story paper, THE CHICAGO LEDGER. This romance, from the pen of one of the most prolific writers of modern fiction, will create a furor. It is majestic in its plot, its incidents are grand, its minor details are treated with a rare and intense vigor that will at once establish its brilliant character.

In this charming story of life, love and intrigue the heroine is brave and beautiful, and her adventures and misfortunes will enthrall every reader, and awaken a sympathetic interest, while the marvelous network of plot and counterplot on which the serial is based is drawn to its magnificent conclusion.

Many such stories have been attempted, but few deal with their theme with a more dramatic pen, with higher realistic fervor, or stronger colors of description and contrast. The keenest insight into human nature is given, and there is not one dull line from the opening chapters to the closing scene in this eloquent narrative of woman's love, man's devotion, and the terrible plots of mercenary schemers.

THE LEDGER predicts a grand reception for this masterpiece of fiction, and an interest in the fortunes of Beautiful Leonore that will endear this rare heroine to every heart. The story of loyal love is sweetly told, and the fine skill in treatment, the originality of conception, the absorbing power of action delineated in every scene war ant us in announcing as the story of the year, and one the memory of which will long remain with those fortunate enough to peruse its entrancing chapters.

THE GREAT SEABURY CASE

will be published only in THE CHICAGO LEDGER. Remember that, while it is the chief attraction of the week, it is only one of the many that have led the publishers to claim for this popular paper the title of the only story paper in America. Other serials, sketches, poems and departments combine to make its magnificently illustrated eight pages the choicest ever offered in this country in its line.

Subscribe now. Begin THE LEDGER with a leading story, which is to be followed by others equally entrancing. The cheapest, the best, the only story paper in America of its class.

THE CHICAGO LEDGER will be sent to any address, postpaid, for one year for $1.50.

A sample copy containing the opening chapters of this interesting story will be sent FREE to all persons who send us their name and address upon a postal card. THE CHICAGO LEDGER, Chicago, Ill.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. It PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. Send 2c stamp for copy of "THE HORSE TRAINER," published by us.

DARLING.

[The author of the following beautiful poem is unknown. It is one of the sweetest gems ever published in the English language.—G. F. A.]

A little maid with sweet blue eyes
Looked upward with a shy surprise
Because I asked her name;
Awhile she bent her golden head,
While o'er her face soft blushes spread
Like some swift rosy flame;
Then looking up, she softly said,
"My name is Mamma's Darling."

"Tell me your mother's name, my dear,"
And stooping low I paused to hear—
The little maid seemed musing;
"Why, mamma's name's like mine, you know,
But just because we love her so,
We call her Mamma Darling."

"Tell me your papa's name," I cried;
The little maiden's eyes grew wide;
"My papa? Don't you know?
Why, ever since the baby died
Mamma and I have always tried
To cheer him from his sorrowing;
And my mamma and I love best
To call him Papa Darling."

"What did you call the baby, dear?"
The answer came quite low but clear:
"The baby—oh, I wonder what
They call him now in heaven;
But we had only one name here,
And that was Baby Darling."

Swift years flew by, and once again
That little maid so tender
Stood by my side, but she had grown
Like lilies, tall and slender;
This time 'twas I that called her name,
And swift the blushes grew like flame
At rosy mist of morning;
I clasped her in my arms and kissed
My tender-hearted Darling.

DOROTHEA INGRAM.

A Story of Early Colonial Days.

BY CHARLES C. HAHN.

CHAPTER I.

A COLONIAL SETTLEMENT.

ALL night long the woods had re-echoed the sweet trill of the New England nightingale. Toward day-break the vesper and the hair bird had taken up the song, and set their leafy homes ringing with their voices.

The morning broke cool and exhilarating. All around the settlement circled the deep forest, so dense and luxuriant that the sun never penetrated its deepest glades, nor entirely drove away the night from beneath its innermost trees, which interlaced branches to bar the intruder out. So thick was the forest that no grass, save here and there a solitary blade or cluster concealed the rich black loam, the productive farms of future generations. But the dainty blue violet and other wood flowers bloomed in their season, in scant profusion. Now, however, only the latest of summer's colors brightened the earth or perfumed the leafy arches with their fragrance. Instead, the ground was beginning to be covered with an irregular mosaic of dead and dying autumn leaves. The trees, too, were displaying the same diversity of color. As one looked down into the depths of the forest he could trace every shade of green and brown, with here and there a scarlet fringe. Here is all oak with leaves still green as spring, and farther on a distant cousin who is coming out in colors such as artists never hope to imitate with paint and brush; while standing side by side with this gay young gallant is a more unfortunate brother doomed to pass into his winter's sleep in dusky, ugly brown. The long feather-limbed elms and branching maples that have not yet been touched by frost, protected, perhaps, by other trees, proclaim their respective family traits, and wave aloft their family colors of a lighter tint of green than the hard-wooded oak; while those which have felt the first touches of winter's pioneersman are gracefully turning themselves into the more subdued of autumn colors, more delicate, if less gorgeous, than the colors of the oak. Sometimes the poison ivy twines in and out among the branches of some friendly tree and mingles its bright red leaves with the green of its supporter. When the tree is brown, as perchance it may be, the brilliant colors peeping out from beneath or behind the more sober suit, reminds one of a gayly plumaged bird flirting its feathers within its cage or of a captive peering out from behind his prison bars.

In Sagnauck also signs of autumn were visible, and the thrifty pioneers were following nature in their preparation for the long winter months. The gardens were being robbed of their spoils, and immense mounds marked the places where the crops of potatoes and turnips and apples had been covered with thick layers of straw and earth, to protect them from the severe New England cold.

Yellow ears of corn showed themselves through the lower chinks of the log granaries which before another month would be filled to the very brim. Beside the kitchen doors lay golden heaps of mammoth pumpkins and long-necked squashes, which were being constantly diminished by the busy housewife and her daughters, who cut and hung them in long festoons from the kitchen rafters. Embryo woodpiles, which before another month would be heaped high as the house and again dwindle down to their present size by spring, marked each home. Shelter for cattle was being made more secure, and the pens were filled with hogs, which had nothing to do all day long but munch the yellow ears of corn and grow fat for Christmas killing.

Upon the inlets which had been cut from the settlement into the woods to let the waves of human work and life farther out, were rows of corn shocks, not unlike in appearance the Indian wigwams which a century before may have graced their very site. These little indentations of the forest, like so many arms reaching out from the town to reclaim the land and wrest it from the woody giants which held it for miles around, had been the result of five years of honest toil, of felling of trees and grubbing of roots, until now so much of the rich black earth had been reclaimed and was yielding an abundant harvest. This harvest the sturdy boys of the colony were attacking as though it were an Indian village to be ransacked, and, having laid the wigwams low, proceeded leisurely to separate them into piles of yellow ears and great heaps of fodder—the one rich winter food for the cattle; the former to be hauled to the mill by the creek and ground into meal for family ash-cakes, bread, and puddings.

This mill, which was owned by the colony, was a picturesque building, had been brought from the mother country in pieces and set up here by Sagnauck Creek, which wound around the east and south of town. The pilgrims had done their best to make it prosaic, but by some unwritten law a mill is always picturesque, build it prim and straight as we will. The very rudeness in structure of Sagnauck mill added to its beauty. Anything else than unplaned planks or riven boards for the roof would have been out of place among the trees which grew up to its very walls, and the leaves which beat a tattoo upon the roof with every wind that blew. A dam had been thrown across the creek just below the curve to the westward; banking up a deep pool, around which the willows grew, sweeping their long limbs over the surface and under which the boys passed hours with hook and line. The water held back by the dam of logs, rushed down tumultuously through the sluice-gates, turned the great wheel which set the machine in motion, escaped and went on its way though the woods, a little angry with dam and wheel, but rather merry withal over its regained freedom.

All night long the woods had re-echoed the trill of the nightingale, and all day long the sound of the woodman's ax made sweet music for the wives at Sagnauck.

Down deeper in the forest and farthest from the settlement—so far, in fact, that the sound of his ax could but faintly be heard at the edge of the wood—the man who had blazed the way and led the colonists to their new home was preparing his winter fuel on this autumn morning. But no woman's heart would have quickened its beat for a moment with thoughts of the chopper, had one heard the ring of his ax, or known it was his. For Mark Hillary was the black sheep of Sagnauck, and up to date had succeeded in acquiring for himself a reputation for roughness and, if not for crime, the near approach to it, which caused his respectable neighbors to look upon him as little better than a heathen, if not worse. The minister said "worse," and in truth his conduct, and open ridicule of those institutions which our Puritan forefathers held most dear, gave ample reason for his low repute among them. With a strong will-power, aided by great physical strength, he had all his life spurned control and resented anything which savored of compulsion or restriction upon his rights or freedom of thought and action. Thus he had come at once in contact with church and state.

Early in life Mark Hillary had crossed the ocean and lent his strength in building up the New England, hoping in her to find the freedom he had not secured in old England, so when he encountered the rigid laws of the Puritan government, which prescribed not only what he must believe and do, but what he must believe and think, his nature rebelled, and, being called to account once or twice for some careless remark concerning the Puritan faith, he abjured religion and took the position of open antagonism to the church. Then, being badgered by both church and state, both of which had been founded to allow freedom of belief, he became cynical and took care to spare no one, not even the Rev Henry Granville, if opportunity afforded a sharp repartee.

And yet a close observer must have been able to detect some good in the man. If he abjured his fellows, he at least found friends among the lower animals, and he was thoroughly at home in the forest. His "place was in the front," he was wont to say, and, in time, he grew accustomed to add, "as far from the white man as possible." So, after a year in the settlement, he had built him a cabin in the woods, half a mile west, and rarely entered the village except on Sunday and lecture days.

No doubt this seclusion had much to do with the low repute he fell into, for the man who despises the smallness of his companions is rarely loved by those he esteems so poorly, especially if he takes no pains to conceal his opinion. But out there by himself he communed with nature in his rough way, was happy, and would have been a tolerably decent man had he been left alone. He knew every bird around his cabin, and watched over their nests as though they were his own property.

"My village," he sometimes said to himself, "what more need have I of friends?"

He took genuine pleasure also in sitting at evening in his cabin door and watching the tall trees, straight and stiff in the calm summer, or bowing before the storm which now and then passed overhead. Once he was heard to speak to them as if they had been endowed with life, which speech, being carried to the minister, caused no little concern in the society, and was carefully filed away to be brought out at some later day, when chance should be given to force this heathen into conversion, or when his offenses had accumulated sufficiently to give pretext for driving him away.

On this same morning at nine o'clock the minister left his sermon unfinished upon his desk, and, with a very severe look upon his long, slim face, walked with quick, nervous step down the one street of Sagnauck.

The Rev. Henry Granville was a tall and well-built man, but his emaciated body, sunken, sallow cheeks, and the nervous twitch of his muscles as he rested, stood or walked, showed that his once strong constitution had been broken either by too lengthy sittings by the study lamp or by some secret trouble, which, commencing with the mind, had gradually spread through his body until the whole man had become its prey. The tall frame was now little more than a skeleton and he habitually bowed his head—not in self-depreciation, but through weakness and nervousness. The reverend gentleman would have found it a difficult task to have hidden from justice had he ever committed a crime. He was at all times and in all places Henry Granville, and could no more have changed his characteristics or concealed his peculiarities than the typical leopard could change his vari-colored skin. The minister was always recognized as far as he could be seen. His long black coat, which no one ever saw him without, unless it might be his wife, and rumor said that he even slept in it; the nervous twitching of his body, raising his shoulders and lowering his head; his long strides in walking—all these were familiar to each person, great or small, in the settlement, and never yet had he been able to appear at one end of the street but that Dame Prouty, who lived at the opposite extreme and was near-sighted, had not recognized him, if she chanced to look his way.

On this particular morning the minister was even more nervous than usual, and a deep cloud, portending severe displeasure from some cause or other, darkened his brow. And as he passed quickly down the street he scarcely raised his eyes from the ground to reply to the respectful salutations tendered him by those members of his flock whom he met. But, hurrying on, he paused not for an instant until he entered the gate of the great house of the village, and, after a sharp rap with the iron knocker, was admitted into the office of the pioneer 'Squire.

CHAPTER II.

THE TRIAL.

Pausing this morning in his work, Mark Hillary saw John Atlee, the colonial constable, approaching. Then leaning upon his ax-handle, he waited until the constable had stopped and bade him good-morning, when, without paying any attention to the situation, he demanded:

"What do you want, Atlee? You haven't come out here just for a friendly talk, I know, so just spit out what you have and go."

The officer's face changed color under this rough greeting. For Mark Hillary had been particularly hard upon several of Atlee's weak points, and a most bitter enmity had sprung up between them. But he quickly regained the usual malignant look which always marked his face when near Hillary, and, in the manner which his soul thought would be most aggravating to the rough iconoclast, replied:

"I'm sorry to come ou'cheer on such an errand, being as me and you used to be such cronies; but an 'umble officer o' the law must do his dooty, if it is unpleasant. I've got here in my pocket a writ for you, Mark Hillary, which bids you come before the magistrate and plead guilty or not guilty to a charge of blasphemy, so I guess you'd better lounge along with me."

"The church and the state keep up this nagging pretty well," was Hillary's rejoinder. "Wonder which one of my remarks touched the parson's flank this time." And he burst into a loud laugh that made the little constable turn pale, as, perhaps, Hillary meant it to do.

Throwing on his loose blouse, which had been hanging upon the limb of a tree, Mark, with a brief "Come along," started for the village. This was not the figure the little man had been expecting to cut. He had been proud of his commission and had thought with elation of appearing upon the street of Sagnauck with his old enemy following in submissive captivity. His peace of mind was not increased by the cutting witticisms which Hillary fired at him continually, and which were all the more galling because the poor fellow felt his inferiority in not being able to understand them all.

Arriving at the Squire's house Hillary entered with no more ceremony than he would have entered the poorest cabin in the village, and with a hearty salutation to the Magistrate said:

"The church must love me well to send for me in the midst of woodchopping. Seems as if I am about the most popular man in Sagnauck, at least you send for me oftener than any other. I'm ready—fire away. The meeting's open." With a glance at the minister, who squirmed in his chair, and half rose intending to rebuke such lightness, but whom the Squire motioned to remain seated, Mark sat down.

The charge was read, in which it was stated with all due form, that Mark Hillary, of Sagnauck, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, had on several occasions offended the sacred laws of Sagnauck, his Majesty the King, broken the peace of Sagnauck, and done lasting injury to God's church by denying the power of God, denouncing His holy word, and indulging in his vicious propensity for sneering, and by ridiculing the holy men of old whose lives were given us for patterns of life.

"Mark Hillary," began the Squire, after the charge had been read, "you are here charged by the Rev. Henry Granville, first, with having stated openly that the ten commandments were not to be obeyed. What have you to say to the charge?"

"I never said exactly that," replied Hillary. "But what I did say was that where we are commanded to make no image of anything in heaven or on earth or under the earth, that it is not binding, because, if binding, you, Squire, must take down those pictures from your walls; and I also said that where we are told to observe the Sabbath day is not binding, or, if it is, we are all breaking God's law, for no one observes that day. We all keep Sunday, not Saturday."

"Blasphemy!" ejaculated the Rev. Henry Granville.

"Again, you are charged with speaking lightly of the Holy Bible, the sacred book of God, and have not only ridiculed the holy men therein mentioned, but have denied that we are to be governed by those books known as the Old and New Testaments."

"Certainly, Squire. Was David such a saintly man that we should follow his example? Didn't he steal a man's farm and kill another to get his wife, when he already had a hundred or more? How many wives does Rev. Henry Granville think a man ought to have? And, as to that old book, I confess I care little for the first part of it, for it is only a history of the Jews, and I'm no Jew. Some parts of the New Testament are all right and some are not. Paul runs down matrimony, and, while running it down, says he thinks he has the spirit of God. If he thought so, I don't. And, as for sending that slave back to the man who claimed to own him—— I know you all believe in one man owning another, but I don't; and I don't believe that what Paul said then will hold good a hundred years from now. It may to-day, but that does not make it right."

"You hear him!" again interrupted the minister. "His own words bear witness against him."

"Again," continued the Squire, "you are charged with denying that the inspired words of our Lord, the New Testament, are to be the rule of our lives."

"No, I never, for I read them every day. What I did say was, that you worshiped the book instead of God. And I deny that God wrote it. Christ founded His Church and left His apostles to run it." (Groans from the minister.) "They wrote to different churches according to the churches' needs. Some of them are good for us, some are not."

"Lastly," said the squire, "I have here what purports to be a poem, in your hand. Is it yours?"

"Yes; I see no reason for denying it," quoth Hillary, after looking at the manuscript.

In measured tones the minister then read the following:

GOD IS DEAD.

The God of ages, God of might and power,
The mystic, dread I AM, who through the past
Ruled all the universe, lay still in death.
The glorious symphony of earth and sky
Had ceased, and death-like silence reigned in heaven.
In state the Monarch lay before the Throne;
His pall a shining cloud of light, so bright,
So terrible that none dare turn his eyes
Upon the bier; and none dare lift the pall
And gaze on that great One, whom men had thought
Could never die.
The deepest silence. Then
Came slowly, lowly, sadly forth the deep
Majestic funeral march. The heavenly choir
Was mute. The air itself of heaven broke forth
And throbbed with low, sad dirges for its King.
Softly it came, mysterious chanting, such
As men or angels never heard before.
He died. Through space confusion ruled. Around
Our earth the long pent storm of ages burst
Its barriers and swept across its face.
Stout trees were bent. The very mountains bowed
Before the storm. Loud peals of thunder rolled
From pole to pole. The vivid lightning flashed,
The sea was in a fury lashed, and waves,
High as the heaven, broke upon the shore.
The dead, who in their graves had slept arose,
And in white garments, weird and wild, came forth
From every land and deepest ocean depth,
And walked upon the earth. The souls of those Long dead, whose bodies were corrupt, blew here
And there before the storm with shrieks and moans—
Unearthly mists from heaven and hell—and cried:
"O. God is dead!" in plaintive minor notes,
The sad refrain which mingled with the chant,
Of white-robed, wandering dead, who walked the earth
And cried "that God, who was the king of souls,
Was now no more."
All nature bowed before
The storm of ages, and all nations bowed
Before the storm which rent the soul—the storm
Through all the eons feared, and which now it
Had burst, through all eternity should roll.
For God was dead. No power was there to stay
The tempest, nor the wave of dark despair.
E'en Satan, in the lowest depths of hell,
That tempest feared, and bowed before the doom
That then approached him, for eternity,
Even in hell, was now tenfold a curse.
The power which hell's existence caused was gone,
But in its place there sprang more direful powers,
Which could not be controlled, and which could not Control.
Then suns whirled into flaming suns;
Stars into stars; and earth and suns and stars
Were one in wildest chaos. Frightened men
And flitting souls, archangels, devils, saints
Fled here and there, and sought in vain for rest.
The soul was pierced—divided—and its shrieks
Were heard above the roar of storm and flood.
And heav'n was now no more, for heav'n is God
—And God was dead.
Loud cried a voice from near
The Throne! Swift passed a bier on wheels of fire!
A flash of light shone through all space, and God
Was borne to his last resting-place!
And over all the sea and darkness rolled,
Surrounding, guarding, holding down the mass
Which now flew on and on through space.

Having read the blasphemous verses, the minister sat down as if the case were ended. No questions were put to the accused, or he might have explained this last charge as easily as he had the former ones. The Squire and the minister consulted together for a few moments, and then, apparently more to please the minister than from a sense of justice, the former pronounced sentence according to the rigid laws of the Puritans. Hillary was fined the sum of £5 10s.

"I won't pay it!" he exclaimed, and in default was taken into custody by the constable.

CHAPTER III.

THE MINISTER'S DAUGHTER.

I have said little as yet with regard to the Rev. Henry Granville; in truth, have only mentioned him and his emaciated frame. The minister was a young man, not yet forty years old, and had come to the settlement full of health with the other colonists five years before. His family, when he removed to Sagnauck to become the pastor of the Puritan flock, consisted of a wife and one child—a girl. He had come to the new land in the first flush of youthful ambition — ambitious to do stern work for his stern God, and had at once thrown himself into the arena, ready to combat Popery and witchcraft. Popery he had studied in the old country until he knew it by heart. He could discourse fluently against apostolic succession and the supremacy of St. Peter; he had the subject of indulgences down to a fine point, and could show up the infamy of Peter—yclept, the Pope—in great style; he was also well versed in the ritual, and could show the most prejudiced—for extempore prayer—that the devil lurked in the prayer-book. As for bishops, priests, and deacons, he leveled them all at one fell blow; for did not bishop and presbyter mean the same in the New Testament, and was not a deacon a man set apart to serve tables and look after the widows? And when it came to candles and incense, he had only but to ask where either was commanded by Christ, and his opponent was silenced, or so he thought. It is true that when he brought forward the latter argument some of the weak or ungodly ones asked where in the Bible he found sanction for infant baptism, and for women coming to communion; but he passed them by as scoffers.

But when he came to Sagnauck he found another attractive subject for investigation. The mystery of Popery, and candles, and incense had lost its charms because he there met with no believers in the chair of St. Peter. Consequently he had turned his study to the next most inviting subject.

Puritan he was to the core. Mediæval and mystical he was through and through. If he had not one mystical subject to study, he must secure another.

So from Romanism he glided into witchcraft, and each was alike mystical and unknown to him.

And I do not blame him. In fact, if any careless words of mine, so far, have led the reader to believe that I am unfriendly to the Rev. Henry Granville, I wish he would disabuse himself of the idea at once. He is not my ideal of a man or of a minister, but he is my warped ideal of a Puritan student. I wish I had lived when he did. I should have believed in witches and fairies with him.

So, having found no more use for his philippics against poor St. Peter, long since dead, and his successor, the Pope, he turned the channel of his thoughts to the next mystical subject which was worrying the minds of men around him. He read with deep interest the weird stories of Cotton Mather and believed them all; and, in time, so thoroughly did he become imbued with them, that in every stream he saw a nymph, in every tree a demon, and in every old woman the possibilities of a witch. He knew all the infallible signs by which one of these devil's own children could be detected, and, it was reported, had even been present on the occasion of the burning of one of them at Salem, all of which gave his word upon the subject much credence in the settlement.

But, it was not until he had come to Sagnauck that he had any personal experience with these fearful emissaries of the evil one. Soon after he had settled in his new home, Mark Hillary had called upon him and the same day his daughter had gone into convulsions. After that first visit, Hillary, whose rough speech made no favorable impression upon the minister, seldom entered the parsonage. At first the minister thought little of the pioneersman in connection with the sudden nervous attack of his daughter, but as time passed, he learned to look upon the former as a man who had sold himself to the evil one in exchange for that most infernal passion, power over his fellow-men. The minister saw that his child was of that peculiar temperament which made her sensitive to the influences of the unseen world.

At first her experiences with regard to Hillary had been general, but strange. She seldom mentioned his name or betrayed any fear of the man, but whenever he passed her upon the one village street, or in the woods around the settlement, she unconsciously shuddered.

Once, gossip said, when Hillary unexpectedly came upon her and the minister as they were walking hand in hand along the bank of Sagnauck Creek, she uttered a piercing shriek and fell down upon the grass, foaming at the mouth.

At another time they came upon him when he was gazing at the stout trees bowing before the wind, and was muttering to himself as was his custom at such times. Achsah convulsively seized her father's hand and bade him hurry away.

"For do you not see," she said, "he is making the trees bow to him." And the father believed that her sensitive nature had enabled her to detect an evil power which he could not.

Art Explanations.

"That," says a Chicago art connoisseur, "is Juno. She was named after the month of June, and was once worshipped by the heathen of a warm climate. That's why you see her with no clothes to speak of. "And that," continued he, "is Venus. She was a goddess named after a city in the old country. She was a very good-looking woman, though her husband was a blacksmith."

"That Apollo there is a cast of a young Bavarian who belonged to the Blue Island avenue Turngemeinde, and there is also a beer garden out there named after him. He was very popular with the Dutch girls in Chicago. He now lives in Milwaukee.

"The word 'restored' which you see marked on many pieces came about in this way: The enemies of the Romans would sometimes rush in and carry off large quantities of their works of art, but the brave Romans recaptured nearly all of them, and such as they so retook were always marked 'restored.'

"This group called 'the wrestlers,' was taken down at Battery D. The fellow on top is Barney Nolan and the other fellow is a man from Oshkosh who thought he could down Nolan, and that piece over there," pointing to a cast of the "Dying Gladiator," "shows the Oshkosh man after Barney Nolan had got through with him." Who says Chicago is not an art center and that its citizens cannot discuss art topics?—Ex.

Good-By.

"The shadow of death lurks in every parting." When we say good-by to the father, the wife, the child, the flutter of the wings of the black angel are faintly heard, and his shadowy, sepulchral chuckle and ominous whisperings send a chill through the heart. There is always a last meeting and a last parting, and we know not but that those of to-day may be the last. The words at the head of this article are an abbreviation of the expression, "God be with you," which was once the parting wish uttered by friends.

There is a reaper whose name is Death,
And, with his sickle keen,
He reaps the bearded grain at a breath,
And the flowers that grow between.

CONSOLIDATION in railways, as we have often said, is the order of the day. Already half the mileage — doing five-eighths of the railway business of the country—is controlled by a dozen companies, managing from 5,000 to 9,000 miles each. This consolidation will continue, and by the close of the century half a dozen corporations will control two-thirds of the railway mileage of the land.

THURSDAY.......OCTOBER 2, 1890.

FIRST POLITICAL GUN!

The Opening Meeting of the Campaign will be in Auburn, Saturday, Oct. 4, beginning at 1 o'clock.

GOV. ISAAC P. GRAY

Will address the people, on the leading questions of the day. He is, to-day, the most popular man in Indiana, and knows every detail of how the republicans have managed to pile up the state debt.

Come and hear him. No democrat can afford to stay away. It will open every republican's eyes, if they will only come and hear him. He will be ably assisted by Hon. W. H. McNagry, of Columbia City, and Judge McClellan will address the people.

Come with all your neighbors, from every corner of the county. Let it be the big meeting of the campaign.

SOME Germans in Indianapolis formed a prohibition club.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. suffered great damage by a water spout last week.

RAINY day on Thursday of last week spoiled that much of the state fair. It was good weather here.

COLON, better known as Aspinwall, on the Isthmus of Panama, was nearly destroyed by fire last week.

GAS outbreak at Shelbyville, this state, still causing uneasiness by breaking out, though with less force.

THE McKinley bill will change the average rate of tariff from 47 to 60 per cent. How do our farmer friends like it?

VESSEL upset last week on Lake Winnipeg, and one man, only survivor picked up after drifting ten days without food.

GOVERNOR of Nevada is dead. The lieutenant-governor died a year ago, and now they don't know who is to be their chief magistrate.

HEAVY landslides in the mountains in Switzerland last week. Several lives were lost and railways injured. Caused by heavy rains. Turned to heavy snows.

MEXICO celebrated her independence day Sept. 11. Some men in the vast crowd, fired at President Diaz, but failed to hit. Forty have been arrested.

THE enumerators who "padded" or swelled the census of St. Paul say they were ordered to do it by those in authority over them. They will be punished.

ENGLAND is greatly pleased with the McKinley tariff bill. She says it will destroy a great part of the foreign trade of the United States, which England will then get.

M. H. DEYOUNG, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, says he would like to be senator. But as it costs on an average $300,000 to get that place in California he thinks he'll not try.

THE republican state committee is again raising money for "blocks-of-five" purposes. And in Washington they are again making assessments on all clerks in spite of the law against it.

THE INDIANAPOLIS SENTINEL is roasting Judge Woods about his "party-colored" decisions. Woods is getting into a tight box, since he felt compelled to write a long letter explaining his course.

COUNT DE PARIS has come over here on a visit. He was here as a volunteer aid to Gen. McClellan several years during the war, wanted to learn the business. He is the one who would be king of France if the monarchy should be restored.

WOODRUFF, the head of the Mormon church sends out a letter from Salt Lake, saying that all have agreed to abandon polygamy. But it will pay to wait awhile, for the old man may be lying after all. We know of people about here, that would tell a similar lie, if cornered.

NEVADA has a population of 41,327 about one and a half times that of DeKalb county, and half that of Allen, and not much more than the city of Fort Wayne. Yet it has two United States senators, same as the great state of New York, and has one member of the House. The population is decreasing.

THE tariff "per McKinley" will tax binding twine after all, three quarters of a cent a pound, and all low grade sugars come in free so the refiners can get it cheap. All above No. 16, is taxed at six-tenths of a cent a pound. California gets a sop, by being allowed to change their wines into whisky full of free alcohol.

DUDLEY, the blocks-of-five man, was charged with advising illegal acts in an election, and was set free by a republican judge, and has been shielded ever since. But the same judge had sent Sim Coy to prison on the same charge—advising illegal acts in elections. Carnahan, a republican also, advised an illegal act, in a letter he wrote, but the same judge let him go.

REPUBLICAN papers have as yet given no reason for their cry of "state debt," except it will give them a chance to levy higher taxes. That is their style. That is why they like the McKinley bill. It raises the rate of tax on nearly everything it touches. And now they come before the people, saying, "Give us your votes, for we have raised your taxes."

"REPUBLICAN Congresses come high," says Mr. Bynum. The 47th Congress appropriated 121 millions more than its democratic predecessor, and 210 millions more the next congress, which was democratic. The present congress has appropriated 52 millions more than the democratic congress at the same session two years ago. The appropriations and deficiency for this year will exceed the revenue by above 80 millions. And yet they talk about the state debt!

LET the people remember that the republicans tried to make the state debt bigger than it is. In the legislature of 1885 they supported the demand of the state house builders for $265,000 more than the contract called for. The democratic members opposed this, and fought it inch by inch, and finally beat the republicans at this very game to loot the state treasury. The contractors failed to get the extra money, and went on and built the state house, just as they ought to. We challenge republican papers to tackle this. But for democratic members in the legislature, the republican members would have increased the state debt by this great sum, $265,000. Do our own people want to put the legislature or the state government into the hands of such economists?

JUDGE WOODS, the partisan who did so much to save Dudley from the just punishment due his crimes, is out in a letter trying to defend himself. It is a flimsy affair and leaves him weaker than before. The main facts still stand untouched, that he refused to recall the grand jury as he had done when Sim. Coy, a democrat was tried; that he refused to recognize the then U. S. district attorney, for the mere quibble that he had not been confirmed by the U. S. Senate, though he was in all other matters proceeding with the duties of his office; that he decided and instructed the grand jury at first that a man who wrote such a letter as Dudley's was liable to be punished, and then a few days later, when he feared the jury would indict Dudley, he sent them different instructions, saying such a letter was not an offense. All these points Judge Woods leaves untouched.

WE fear the head of the editor of the Butler Record is "bone clear through." He either can't underderstand, or else he won't. He now says the "COURIER attributes low prices of farm products to Harrison's administration." By no means. We have been poking fun at the various republican papers that tried before the last election to scare the farmers into voting for Harrison so as to "secure better" prices. Then when Harrison was elected, and prices went down, we called the attention of these papers to their deceptive talk, and ridiculed their arguments. And what we did say in earnest, was, that the tendency, or effect of legislation under Cleveland, was if it could have been had, to give us better prices for our products, for that tendency was to open to us the markets of the world, and thus secure for us a wider market and consequently brisker demand for what we raise. The tendency of legislation under Harrison, that is, any republican legislation on this subject, is to narrow the market in which farmers must sell, create a prejudice against us abroad, and so stop the demand for our products and lessen prices. To these truths we still adhere. They are facts that cannot be denied. The COURIER does "try to induce men to vote the democratic ticket" because reason and experience both teach that is the wisest course. The farmers never prospered as they did under the wise administration of the great democratic party.

The Coming Fair.

The next fair will be at Waterloo and the managers are making great efforts to have everything in complete shape so as to be satisfactory to all who patronize them. Let all get their exhibits ready and have their entries made a few days before the fair, say on Thursday, Friday and Saturday before. The secretary will be in his office with plenty of help and will wait on you. The time to get ready, is now.

At Hymen's Altar.

The marriage Tuesday, of Miss Mary E. Gengler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Gengler, of Garrett, to Mr. John T. Clark, of the same place, was a notable society event of that brisk little city. The ceremony took place as previously announced at 9 a. m., in the Catholic church, the services being conducted by Father Young. The beautiful edifice was filled to its utmost, not only by the families and their friends, but by many of the leading society people of the place. The services were solemn and very impressive, and though quite long, were listened to most attentively by the vast audience. The singing also, was excellent, there being many voices in the choir. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the guests repaired to the Gengler residence, where a reception was held lasting till noon, when all sat down to a bounteous dinner which did great credit to the hospitality of Mr. Gengler and the skill and good taste of Mrs. Gengler herself, both acquitting themselves gracefully. Another season of social enjoyment followed, and then came leave takings and parting good wishes for the young couple, who that day linked together their fortunes for the future. They received many beautiful and costly presents, the gifts of the friends of both bride and groom. Everything was appropriate and in the best of taste. Among the guests from abroad were the aged mother of Mr. Gengler, and a sister-in-law, both residents of Ohio. The editor of the COURIER and his wife, enjoyed the hospitalities and social pleasures of the occasion, and its memory will not soon be forgotten. We unite in wishing the bride and groom all possible happiness.

How to Vote.

See our local ticket in the form and the order required by the new law. Each of the other tickets will be on the same sheet or ballot, and in the same form. To vote a straight democratic ticket stamp the square at the left of the words "Democratic Ticket." Do the same way by the state ticket. Fold each ticket so that the initals of the poll clerk will be in sight, and the names of all candidates are inside and out of sight, then hand the ticket to the inspector, and the stamp to the poll clerk. If anyone votes a split ticket, he need not stamp the head of the ticket, but must stamp each name he wishes to vote for, all the way through. Thus it will be seen that it is much easier to vote a straight democratic ticket.

Kimmel Will Not Run.

Orlando Kimmel has refused to accept the nomination for Congress from this district on the republican ticket. He evidently feels that it is a hopeless race, especially taking into consideration Judge McClellan's increasing popularity. Kimmel is a close business man, and evidently fails to see anything to be gained from making a race that will cost so much in time and money. His head is level.

THE Butler Record still claims it is better to have poor crops, because "fifteen bushels of wheat per acre, at $1 is better than twenty bushels at 75 cents." That might happen. But as a matter of fact (and it is "fact" that the Record seems unable to understand,) we often have poor crops and poor prices. We sometimes also, have good crops and good prices. And again the great point is, that when we have a poor crop, it is not "$1 a bushel for 15 bushel per acre" for a poor crop does not yield 15 bushels per acre as a general thing, for that would be a very fair crop. It often goes down to five bushels, and sometimes, the poor farmer gets no wheat, as was the case with many this year. Indeed with all poor crops, a part of the farmers get no crop all. What good then, will a high price do them? They have to buy and have little to buy with. Then, if by accident, the price goes high, the trade is against them. If low, the small crop produces but little for those who are so lucky as to have a little to sell. Suppose, as the Record suggests that "farmers organize to limit the acreage of crops and in this way keep the produce down to the amount consumed. In this way there would be no surplus to meet the competition of cheap labor products of foreign markets, and protection would prevent foreign products from coming into competition with our products in our own markets and farm products would always bring paying prices." This is the condition of the farmers, the Record would rejoice to see. We have given this lengthy quotation to show farmers how ridiculous an editor may make himself. It amounts to this, that if a farmer would stop raising anything to sell, he would have big prices. But if he has nothing to sell, how would prices effect him? The man don't know a little about farming, or about business who will talk so. No wonder then he don't know anything about politics.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

Mrs. Osborn, of Corunna, was in town last Monday.

Mr. Casebeer, of Auburn, was on our streets a few days since.

Mrs. Hess, of Pleasant Lake, visited in Waterloo last Sunday.

Last week, Thursday, Mr. Reppe, of Leesburg, was in our city.

J. J. Carpenter, of Pleasant Lake, was in Waterloo last week, Thursday.

Theodore Bohler took a carload of poultry to New York for Beck & Scoville.

Last week Mr. McHiller, of Eden, O. spent a few days with friends in Waterloo.

Dr. Fanning, of Butler, was in our town for a few hours on Wednesday of last week.

Mrs. Davis is improving, but still needs watchers, or at least did a few nights since.

Mr. Troup, of Lagrange, returned home Monday after spending several days in Waterloo.

Mr. J. G. Miller, of Angola, was in town Monday, on his way to Kendallville to attend the fair.

John Carpenter, of Defiance, visited his nephew, Dr. T. J. Carpenter, of this place a short time last week.

Archibald Sinclair has been improving his residence by putting in new window sash with one large glass in each.

At the state fair at Indianapolis, last week, Mrs. Lillie Brysland was appointed on the committee on fancy work.

Lœwenstein & Co. have arranged to conduct their store for the Patrons of Industry, of this vicinity hereafter.

The Lake Shore company is grading a road or drive way on the south side of the railroad track, between Wayne and Center streets.

Mrs. Wm. Rohm, who formerly resided in Waterloo, died last Saturday, at her home in the country and was buried Tuesday morning at ten o'clock.

Mrs. G. T. Carpenter, who has for some days been visiting her son, Dr. Carpenter, and family, of Waterloo, returned to her home at Defiance last Saturday.

Oct. 6 the Waterloo fair commences. If the weather is favorable it will no doubt be a big success. No pains or expense has been spared to make it so and our fairs have an good reputation abroad.

W. A. Patterson and wife are rejoicing over the advent of a son, born last week, Wednesday. With so many aunties and a grandpa in the house the young man stands a chance of having more than his share of petting.

The show here last Thursday, judging from the fine street procession was well worth seeing. Many who would have attended, were no doubt kept away by the price of tickets. In these times people count their dimes as they did not a few years ago.

Mrs. W. Leib, a former resident of this place, has been visiting Mrs. Mary Morell and other friends in town, and also in the country, for the last two weeks. The family moved from here to Lansing, Mich., which is still their home. Mrs. L. will remain until after the Waterloo fair.

Last week, Wednesday night, Wilson Shull was caught breaking into J. A. Denison's store. He was arrested the next day, but was released on bail. This was a great surprise to our citizens generally. If innocent, it is to be hoped he may prove himself so. His wife and relatives are well known here and have the sympathy of every one in their time of trial.

SEDAN.

Mrs. Shroeder is visiting in Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. McIntyre, of Auburn, were in town Sunday.

Mrs. Jane Delong has a sister from California visiting her.

Dill Steckley has gone to Ft. Wayne to work at the carpenter trade.

Mrs. W. H. Crane, who has been sick for sometime is getting better.

Miss Libbie Crane, of Wauseon, Ohio, is visiting relatives at this place.

C. M. Reynolds and family, of Kendallville, visited friends in town Sunday.

Wm. Urie and his mother, of Burr Oak, Mich., are visiting at this place.

Mrs. Eber Graham and children, of Ohio, are here visiting her grandparents.

Brooks Hine is teaching school at Clark's school house in Smithfield township.

Mrs. Hine gave a party in honor of Mertie and Libbie Guthrie last Saturday evening.

Sam Rohm and Oscar Nye have gone to Ohio where they expect to work the coming winter.

Daniel Blucher is taking in the fair at Kendallville. He reports a big fair at Goshen last week.

Henry Steckley will move his family to Corunna next week, where he has been working in a sawmill.

Mr. and Mrs. Simon Guthrie spent Sunday with Mrs. P. K. Guthrie, who will go to Michigan this week.

Constipation,

IF not remedied in season, is liable to become habitual and chronic. Drastic purgatives, by weakening the bowels, confirm, rather than cure, the evil. Ayer's Pills, being mild, effective, and strengthening in their action, are generally recommended by the faculty as the best of aperients.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills. I deem it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Bowman, 26 East Main st., Carlisle, Pa.

"I have been taking Ayer's Pills and using them in my family since 1857, and cheerfully recommend them to all in need of a safe but effectual cathartic."—John M. Boggs, Louisville, Ky.

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which at last became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon the bowels recovered their natural and regular action, so that now I am in excellent health."—S. L. Loughbridge, Bryan, Texas.

"Having used Ayer's Pills, with good results, I fully indorse them for the purposes for which they are recommended."—T. Conners, M. D., Centre Bridge, Pa.

"WELL BRED SOON WED."

Girls who use SAPOLIO are QUICKLY MARRIED.

SAPOLIO is one of the best known city luxuries and each time a cake is used an hour is saved. On floors, tables and painted work it acts like a charm. For scouring pots, pans and metals it has no equal. If your store-keeper does not keep it you should insist upon his doing so, as it always gives satisfaction and its immense sale all over the United States makes it an almost necessary article to any well supplied store. Everything shines after its use, and even the children delight in using it in their attempts to help around the house.

U. S. Supervisors.

Republicans in several counties have already sent petitions to Judge Gresham asking to have U. S. supervisors of elections appointed. Democrats will not ask for them till they find republicans have done so as we wish to avoid the expense, and know we can have just as honest elections without them. At $5 a day it would cost about $400 for DeKalb county alone. Let us manage our own business. Indiana's own state laws, if obeyed are the best in the world to protect the voter and secure fair elecitons.

Never Give Up.

Many causes of so-called consumption have been cured by Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup. Never give up, as long as there is life there should be hope, take this medicine; use it persistently, and you will notice a change for the better, as it is peculiarly adapted to this class of diseases. Do not fail to try this remedy in time. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

REED'S latest dodge to secure a quorum, has been locking the doors of the House to prevent democrats from leaving. The trouble is that democrats have not been recognized by the speaker, and therefore not allowed to debate on questions. So they refused to vote. By refusing to vote, there would not appear names enough on a roll call to make a quorum. This plan has been allowed since the government was organized. But now, Speaker Reed breaks the rule by counting all in the room whether they vote or not. To prevent this, democrats have stayed out of the room, or gone out. But the republicans have men enough to put through any law they please, if their men would only attend. And the democrats say they will force them to attend, or else prevent such distasteful measures as the federal election, or "force" bill, and the seating of republicans who were not elected.

Stylish furniture costs no more than that which is not stylish. You will always find a finish and a style about furniture bought of the Foster Furniture Co., at Ft. Wayne, not found in goods purchased elsewhere.

All who have business with D. Z. Hoffman, and all who have real estate to sell, or parties wanting abstracts, deeds or mortgages made, call at my office over Farmers Bank, first door at the right, on the second floor. D. Z. Hoffman.

Charles Gulick lost a good horse Monday of last week. While at work it ran against a limb or snag, tearing a hole in its intestines and causing death in a short time. Mr. Gulick is a hardworking young man and it is a serious loss to him.

BUCKLEN'S ARNICA SALVE.—The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Robbins & McCord. tf

Orlando Kimmel will not be apt to run much ahead of his ticket about Ligonier. It turns out that he was the man who went to Washington to keep Harrison from appointing Schlotterback to the Ligonier postoffice. There was an overwhelming sentiment in favor of Schlotterback among the people, and at an election held by the patrons of the office, a big majority had voted for him. The people thought the matter was settled. But just at this time Kimmel who resides a few miles out in the country, packed up his grip and went to Washington. An interview with Benny settled the matter, and although Harrison knew that a majority of the people wanted Schlotterback, he gave the place to Kimmel's friend, J. H. Hoffman. The Ligonier republicans were mad of course, and we have no doubt, they will remember Kimmel in November.

The Rip Van Winkle Company gave a good entertainment Friday evening. The leading actors were especially strong, and the two little children were very fine actors, calling out no end of applause. Then their music was fine. When the band played on the streets about a hundred children of various ages followed them off, going down Jackson street, reminding one of the children who followed off the "Pied Piper of Hamelin." They had a fair house.

The Dispatch last week with its usual narrow minded bigotry attacks Judge McClellan in regard to his proposed income tax bill, and its provisions for paying pensions therefrom. It says "that bill is calculated to make pensions odious." How is that? Please explain why that would make pensions odious any more than the numerous other bills that have been enacted to raise money for this purpose. We venture to say the Dispatch quoted this thing from some other paper, and cannot explain it. On looking over the Dispatch's article again its cheating unfairness becomes more apparent. The quotation it pretends to give from the democratic resolutions at Lagrange is full of omissions and mutilations. It leaves out especially the words we capitalize. The resolution reads that this income tax would "compel the wealth of the country(which now by republican legislation is almost entirely free from the burdens of taxation) to pay a proper share of the necessary revenue to Meet The Demands Of The Government and the payment of pensions to soldiers." All bills to raise revenue are the same in this respect. We suggest that such mutilation is small business.

See our notice to contractors, for furnishing the county with ballot boxes. It will interest carpenters and others skilled in wood work.

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

The Nashville Students, a famous jubilee troupe of colored singers will be at the Presbyterian church on Saturday evening of this week. Everybody come and enjoy the musical treat of the season.

Fred Shaffer went to Hillsdale last week to secure the services of an upholsterer and succeeded. The man will move his family here and this will give Mr. Shaffer a regular business in upholstering, in addition to his already extensive establishment.

Judge McClellan will be home this week, arriving at the Junction on the evening train to-day, Thursday, at 5:16 so a dispatch from him to chairman Ab. Kelley, states. He will be here to assist at the rally in Auburn Saturday evening. He will speak in place of Ballou who cannot come.

At the contest for the Demorest Medal at St. Joe last week, the first prize was awarded to a Miss Warner, and the second to a daughter of Chris Curie. The recitations are highly spoken of. The judges were J. W. Baxter, J. M. Widney and Mrs. S. S. Shutt, and they had quite a task to decide which should have the highest credit.

Maple sugar gets a bounty of two cents on each pound under the new tariff bill Now let every one who has a sugar camp keep account of all he makes. His neighbors will all have to help pay him that extra two cents. We also help pay the two cents bounty on all sugar raised down South or anywhere in this country. How do you all like it?

In our write up of the fair exhibits we still find we missed several. Among these, was the exhibit of Ed. Weeks of this place. who showed up the popular Champion binders and mowers. He made a good showing and attracted a good deal of attention. Among so many things we had noted down at random it is no wonder that some are overlooked in writing up.

Frank Blattner has been for some weeks at Tacoma, Wash., and we believe he is thinking of settling there. At least he will remain there this winter. Mrs. Blattner starts next Wednesday to join him. It will be a long journey, but she has crossed the mountains before, and will experience no difficulty. We wish her a safe trip and both a pleasant winter in their new location.

Ligonier Banner: Commenting upon the nomination of Dr. Norman Teal, of Kendallville, for joint representative, Billy Beane says in the Goshen Democrat: "'Doc' was once an old Benton boy, and he read with us out of the same old spelling book with Uncle Henry Beane as teacher. He will represent the people of his district with honor and credit if elected. He is a born gentleman."

The Dispatch copies from the Madison Courier a diagram to show that no democrat on the state ticket has been a soldier. There is only one county between this and Elkhart county, where Capt. Michell's home is in the city of Goshen. Yet the Dispatch does not seem to know he was a soldier. There may be others on the ticket for aught we know, who have served as long as some of the republicans on the ticket.

The annual meeting of the Indiana Baptist State Convention will meet at Muncie, October 6. There will be, or is usually, a very large attendance of ministers and delegates at these sessions. They continue five days, during which the church, educational, publication, and home and foreign mission interests all come in for a thorough practical discussion. It is always a season of spiritual profit to all who attend.

Our friend Jacob Bishop of Butler township was here last week. He says he has had excellent crops in general this summer. His wheat and potatoes were fair and corn excellent. He will husk between 600 and 700 bushels of corn in the ear, and of the best quality. Samples of it he had at the fair. Some of our people who have two hands, could take lessons of Mr. Bishop. He has but little help on his farm. He has now put out thirteen acres of wheat, that is looking well.

The Dispatch and Record seem greatly worried for fear Hon. Freeman Kelley is getting dangerous. Both papers try to prejudice the P. I. and Alliance folks againt him by finding fault with the speech he made at the reunion north of Butler. In this they will fail for Mr. Chalmers, head of the order, who made the main speech there that day, rose after Mr. Kelley had concluded, and indorsed every word he said. Chalmers said Mr. Kelley's criticisms were right and proper, and that the matters he, Mr. Kelley, had spoken of, would be made right according to Mr. Kelly's suggestions, at the first opportunity.

Waterloo fair week after next.

The Mammoth shoe store are the best and prices lowest.

Hugh Culbertson is getting things ready to move into their new home.

Lovers of good singing, go and hear the Nashville Jubilee singers Saturday evening.

Women troubled with headache, will find Simmons Liver Regulator relieves and cures.

Why do you endure the agony of Dyspepsia? Simmons Liver Regulator will always cure you.

We hope to see all the democrats of the county at speech of Gov. Gray in Auburn Saturday.

Sunday morning and Monday morning, we had frosts, so that vegetation was nipped a considerable. Truly the autumn is near.

The nickel social of the M. E., church, will be entertained by Mrs. Dr. Casebeer next Friday afternoon. All are cordially invited.

Services at the Presbyterian church next Sunday, both morning and evening, Rev. Dr. Button, of Chicago, will preach. All come and hear him.

Trentman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

Many young children become positively repulsive with sore eyes, sore ears, and scald head. Such afflictions may be speedily removed by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young and old alike experience the wonderful benefits of this medicine.

Queen Victoria has a remarkably fine head of hair, for a lady of her age; but her son, the Prince of Wales, is quite bald. Had he used Ayer's Hair Vigor earlier in life, his head might, to-day, have been as well covered as that of his royal mother. It's not too late yet.

General Booth has taken steps to stop smoking in the Salvation Army. He has issued an edict announcing that no member who smokes shall receive a promotion, and that sergeants, bandsmen, sergeant majors, secretaries and treasurers must resign office or give up smoking.

MILES' NERVE & LIVER PILLS. Act on a new principle—regulating the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new discovery. Dr. Miles' Pills speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles, constipation. Unequaled for men, women, and children. Smallest, mildest, surest! 30 doses, 25 cts. Samples free at F. E. Davenport's.

Rev. F. P. Arthur pastor of the Christian church, or Disciples of Christ, at Angola, Ind. will preach next Sunday morning and evening, at the new Lutheran church, Rev. D F. Kain being absent. All are invited to attend these services, both morning and evening, especially those who are or have been members of the church of Christ elsewhere.

In the Indianapolis Sentinel of Sept. 25, there was a call for a stock-holders' meeting at St. Louis, of the Wabash R. R. Nov. 25, to vote 3½ millions to aid in the construction of their extension from Montpelier, Ohio, to Hammond, Ind. It will be seen from this that the matter is not yet fully settled, although it looks as if Montpelier will be the starting point when the road is built.

All the Auburn fishermen got home Monday, loaded down with fish and bronzed with the fierce rays of the North Michigan sun. John Leasure brought home some big fish—surely fish, caught with his own hands. And we understand the whole party had very good luck. In fact Jim Potter got tired of hauling out big fish quite early, and came home Saturday. All say they had a nice time in the famous Petoskey region.

The C. L. S. C. meets for regular work on Saturday Oct. 4, at 2:30 p. m.. with Mrs. Baldwin. The officers elected for the year are Mrs. Henry, president; Mrs. Moss, vice president; Mrs. Sheets, secretary; Mis Watson, critic. Program for the day: Outline History of England, conducted by Mrs. Moody; Our English, Miss Ramsey; The Intellectual Development of the English. Mrs. Dills: The English Constitution, Mrs. Raut.

We presume county officers in some cases get too much salary and people have a right to ask that it be changed. But the salary of all county officers put together, is but a drop compared with what the tariff takes from the people each year. Then why not kick over the tariff? Why do people make the first kick against the little evil, and feel satisfied with the one so much greater?

Among the Auburn citizens who attended the Angola fair last week, were Annie Eckhart, Della Shugers, Geo. Weamer and wife, Mrs. Wm. McIntyre, W. L. Meese, J. J. VanAuken, W. H. Dills, Mrs. J. A. Barns and daughter Nellie, Mrs. Frank Hogue, Clyde Nedry, Sylvia May, Mrs. Sophie Baird, Mrs. C. C. Shaffer, Wm Lahnum and wife, Doc. McDowell, John and Frank Lahnum, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Steves, and others whose names we failed to get.

The young ladies of the M. E. church will give a "conundrum supper" in the lecture room of the church next Friday evening. Proceeds for the new church. The following bill of fare will be served from 5 to 8 o'clock. Foul meat, staff of life, white weeds, all things to all men, Greece, kuobe, little pump pies, sweetness, most delightful age of childhood, fruit of the vine, what "arithmetic" people are, Boston overthrow, scream with cute's, what mankind has been doing ever since Eve ate the apple, what a boy calls his sweetheart, ivory manipulation. Mite 15 cents.

Gov. Gray in Auburn Oct. 4.

Many of our people are up to the Kendallville fair.

Reba Houser is visiting her grandmother at Kendallville.

See the advertisement of the new millinery store. They are doing a good business.

My own family medicine—Simmons Liver Regulator.—Rev. Jas. M. Rollins, Fairfield, Va.

Miss Hellriegle who has been visiting Miss Mary Young, returned to her home in New York, Monday.

Rev. H. M. Lamport's mother and sister are here visiting him at present. They reside near South Bend.

Purdy & Son are putting down a new well at the M. E. Parsonage. It will be driven down to "second vein."

J. A. Sprankle of Pleasant Lake, chipped in to help the COURIER's minister of finance Monday. Thanks.

Dr. Sebring and wife have returned from their visit, and the Doctor will now be at home again for his patients.

The Mammoth boot and shoe store have just received another big lot of fall goods. Their trade is booming.

Miss Lena Crew and Mrs. E. Sheets spent Sunday at Butler visiting Mrs. S's. people. They report a good time.

The Mammoth shoe store will please you in the way of fine foot wear. You had better call and them before you buy.

Mrs. Levi Jackson made us a present last week of fine specimens of her premium tomatoes. We shall try to raise a supply next year.

Commissioners Platter, Hoffelder and Patterson, were all busy a part of this week putting up the precinct notices in their several districts.

A. B. Richard and wife are visiting an uncle, Mr. Darrow, near Kendallville. Mr. Darrow is the democratic candidate for treasurer of Noble county.

Parents send your boys and girls to Prof. Nottingham's penmanship class. His work has been tried and found to be practical in every detail. A large class is being organized.

Waterloo fair begins next week with a splendid prospect for success, and a big display in every department. Let every body take a day from their care and labor and help to make the fair a success.

BABIES: We note the following arrivals into Auburn families. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Borst, a boy; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Aber, a girl; Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Madden, a girl; all democrats. The party is prospering—getting accessions every day.

A. J. Ralston came near having a serious accident Tuesday. While driving along the street where they were putting on more wires for the electric lights, his horse got tangled in a wire that was down on the ground, and the wagon was upset, and Mr. Ralston considerably bruised.

Soldiers of the old 129th will be here to-day. Let our people give them a hearty welcome. Business meeting in the day, and a general, public, social and literary gathering at the Opera House in the evening.

October is a growing month this year. The dry summer had brought crops to about a standstill. But the rains for the past four weeks, have set most everything to growing. Summer flowers are blooming, cucumbers and string beans are not only at their choicest, but are full of new blossoms. But the frost cannot wait much longer.

Albion Democrat: Prof. O. W. Nottingham's school of penmanship closed on Tuesday. His success here has been very great, his class numbering 50, and the improvement of the scholars wonderful. Those who were comparatively good penmen before have improved fifty per cent. The younger and poorer ones, more than 100 per cent. The professor is evidently a practical and successful teacher, as well as a splendid writer.

The millinery firm of Snyder & Funk, have come to the front with a display "ad" for their establishment. There is an abundance of competition in that line, therefore it is highly essential that the goods calculated to meet this great competition must be of the highest grade and of the best quality. In pursuance of this fact, we believe it will be to the mutual advantage of those wishing to purchase goods of that kind, to call at this new place of business before purchasing elsewhere.

C. J. Porter, the Waterloo optician will be in Auburn at the Hollister House, the first Tuesday in each month, to meet all who desire his service in fitting defective eyes with the proper glasses, and for all the work in his line. Long experience should be valuable in this case above all others. The eyes should not be trifled with. An eye once lost can never be restored and great care should be taken to preserve them. Mr. Porter stands at the head of his profession in this special department. Don't trust your eyes to inexperienced or careless men, but call on him when here and get glasses such as you need. Don't forget the dates, the first Tuesday of each month. 42

The new election law makes a marked change in regard to the opening of polls and continuance of the election. In all cases where provision to the contrary is not made, the polls are to open at 8 o'clock in the morning and continue open until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. After that time the polls may be closed at any time when all the electors have voted, or fifteen minutes have passed without a vote. But until 6 o'clock p. m. the polls in no case can be closed except by the unanimous consent of the election board. In all cities and incorporated towns having a population of 1,000, or more, the polls must be opened at 6 o'clock in the morning and close at 6 o'clock in the afternoon.—Kendallville Standard.

The big M. E. church is slowly gaining in hight.

Everybody will go to the Waterloo fair next week.

Mrs. Cass has been quite sick, but is now is improving.

Willard Fee and wife, of Waterloo, were in town Saturday afternoon visiting friends.

Court begins again next Monday. All get your cases ready, so as not to delay business.

The Angola K. of P's. will dedicate their new hall, Oct. 14. We acknowledge an invitation to attend.

Both of Sherm. Hollister's houses in Gas Addition are occupied. They are among the best houses over there.

Miss Dora Finch, who has been visiting Miss Bertha Shaffer and other friends will go to Goshen this week.

Miss May Slaybaugh returned to her home at Findlay, Ohio, to-day, after a pleasant visit with her young friends.

Mrs. W. J. Bowman has been here a few days, the guest W. B. Brown. She will move their household goods to Washington City, their present home.

Isaac Johnson and his son Simp. Johnson are putting up a good house in Gas Addition. We beleive it will be made double, so both can occupy it.

McMillan the butcher on South Main street sells at lowest prices, and for cash only. This enables him to sell at a lower price per pound, than any one else.

T. J. Baxter has moved to Cedar Creek, where he will teach this year. He is a teacher of more than average ability, and the people there are fortunate.

Teachers should remember the meeting of the county teachers' association in Auburn a week from Saturday, Oct. 11. A full program is printed and will be carried out.

Cook Ford and wife will move here next week and occupy their new home north of the M. E. parsonage. Mr. Culbertson moves to his new residence on North Main street,

Cal. Day moved to St. Joe this week. The St. Josephites will find Mr. Day a first-class citizen and we hope they will make him and his wife welcome with their usual heartiness.

Rev. J. K. Kost, of Findlay, Ohio, was here this week. He served as a soldier all through the war, was then educated for the ministry, and has voted the democrat ticket all his life, of course.

The new feeding machine we noticed last week, began work at the band saw mill Tuesday. It is a big improvement, so the mill men say, although the single one they had before, was a great gain. The Auburn Foundry will make these machines.

Hon. Claude Mathews, our candidate for secretary of state, was to speak in the county next week. But as the Waterloo fair is in progress then, it was decided he should not speak. He will be on the fair grounds, however, on Thursday, and will be glad to meet all his friends.

Hon. R. M. Lockhart, who has charge of this, the Sixteenth agricultural district for this work, informs us that a farmers' institute will be held here the first week in December. The best lecturers in the state will be selected, and we shall have an interesting two-days' session. All our people are requested to be present, and come prepared to take part in the exercises, if possible. The meetings will likely be held in the Opera House. Similar meetings will be held the same week at Angola and Kendallville. The last legislature made special provisions for these meetings.

The Dispatch was silly enough to object to seeing Mr. Coffinberry wear a diamond pin and a gold watch. Both were gifts from the great army of men who work under him, and show the high esteem in which he is held. But who cares, anyhow, what a man's taste in dress or other proper ways may be. One will prefer a horse, or a suit of clothes, another, a piece of land or a house. Any of them are better than to spend the money in saloons, or other vices. It will pay the republicans to give their organ a diamond pin to use a little more good taste and judgment.

DeKalb at the State Fair.

Citizens of this county got many prizes at Indianapolis, mostly, or all, on fruit. Joel Hartman got second premium on twenty varieties of apples, Daniel Thomas got second on six varieties; A. P. Benjamin got second on plate of Maiden Blush; John Clark, Waterloo, got second on Northern Spy; Rachel Harms, Smithfield, got second on Belmonte; D. Lochamier got second on Twenty-Ounce; L. A. Henning also got a premium on apples, and DeKalb county, got the big prize as usual, of $25 for best display of fruit for the state.

One at Night.

One dose of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup taken in the evening before retiring will give you a good night's rest. It will cure your cough quicker than any other, and it is pleasant to take. If you have never tried this remedy, ask your druggist for Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup the next time you buy. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

Get Your Premiums.

All persons entitled to premiums at the DeKalb county fair are notified that their money is ready. The approved list is in the hand of F. J. Yesbera, treasurer. Call on him at his store in Auburn. CAL. HUSSELMAN. Sec.

A GOOD horse-meat dinner can now be had for 5 cents. Americans will find no fault with the price.

"JUSTIFIABLE burglary" was the verdict brought in by a justice of the peace in Sumner County, Kan., in a case in which the defendants were two boys who broke into an icehouse on the warmest day of the recent hot spell.

THE ways of the auctioneer in different parts of the world vary greatly. In England and America the seller bears the expense of the sale, but in France the purchaser bears the cost, 5 per cent. being added to his purchase. In Holland it is still worse, the buyer being required to pay 10 per cent. additional for the expenses of the sale.

AN Eskimo girl has an indolent time of it. There is no housework to do. There are no household utensils of any kind; no brooms with which to sweep; even no water for washing. The blubber of the whale, the flesh of the polar bear, and fish—their only article of food—are eaten frozen and raw. Only the very sick or old, or infants, ever taste heated meat. As for washing, an Eskimo does not understand the term.

"ENGLISH as she is writ" receives a curious illustration in the circular of a German manufacturer, which is headed: "1,000 Mk. reward to any one who will procure me the proves of a falsification to be legally persecuted." The opening proceeds in the same style: "The surprising results produced by my new Gold-sizes encourage me asking you to make a trial no doubt that you will at once derive from it the great advantages they present."

A SWARM of bees created a block on a Pennsylvania railroad in a curious manner the other day. A freight train had stopped at a country station to take water, and the engineer and fireman were in the depot waiting room, when a swarm of hundreds of bees settled on the tender and defied the engineer to get into his cabin and start the train. No one would attempt to do this. The bees after delaying the train an hour were finally driven off with a hose.

A GLASGOW policeman was asked the other day what his views were on the subject of police pensions. He replied that Burns, when he was an exciseman, exactly expressed them in his famous toast: "Here's to the last verse of the last chapter of the last Book of Kings." No more would he say, and the querist, on going home, turned to his Bible and read: "And his allowance was a continual allowance given him of the king; a daily rate for every day, all the days of his life."

FRENCH aeronauts are to cross Europe in a balloon, starting from Nancy and landing somewhere in Russia and Norway. Should they be able to complete reliable charts of the aerial currents and settle the question of utilizing them for travel, France may scare Europe with a fleet of air ships that can drop dynamite upon William's palace in Berlin and toss bombs over into England in a way to make them think that the ghost of the First Napoleon has returned to complete his campaign cut short at Waterloo.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY tells of his rejected manuscripts, which, one after another, he flung into a top drawer above his head. When the tide of his fortunes turned and the same editors asked for manuscripts who had formerly declined them, he took a sweet revenge. He gave those editors no new manuscript, but with a long forked stick poked old ones from out the lofty drawer and sent them just as they were to publication. Had he tossed them into the fire instead of that drawer he would have destroyed matter worth hundreds of pounds to him.

NO MATTER how much advertising pays it certainly costs. A single page in an issue of the Century, taken for advertising purposes, costs $500; in Harper's, $400 down to $100. A yearly advertisement of one column in the New York Herald costs $3,304 for the lowest and $130,000 for the highest priced columns. These figures will doubtless be of interest to men who invest $2 or $3 per month, and flatter themselves with the idea that they are extensive and liberal advertisers, and that because of their investment they ought to control the columns and dictate the course of the publication.

THE main street of Payson, A. T., the other day was filled with a crowd of more than two hundred wedding guests, all mounted. Then rode up, also on broncos, Thomas Beach and Magge Meadow, Charles Cole and Julia Hall. The justice of the peace tied each pair with the nuptial knot, and then the couples, after receiving the congratulations of their friends, started off to secure the wedding present that Charles Meadow, brother to Maggie, had offered. It was as many head of his cattle as the bridal pair could find and brand before sundown. The brides, armed with branding irons, and the grooms with lassos, started out on their hunt, and each pair succeeded in securing eighteen head.

THE stories of the cruelties with which prisoners in the Colorado State Penitentiary are tortured are almost beyond belief. The Spanish inquisition never carried the art of human torture to any such ingenious and diabolical extremes. One of the favorite methods of punishing a convict pursued at this institution is to confine his head under a faucet, from which the water falls drop by drop upon his forehead. Though simple and apparently harmless, this is really one of the most excruciating punishments that can be inflicted. The victim, who remains in this position for hours at a time, is driven almost to distraction, and in most cases he never recovers from the shock. Reform of a very radical character is necessary in the Colorado prison.

THE town of Sweden, Me., got excited recently, according to the Oxford Democrat, over reports of various persons who declared they had seen a wild woman in the east part of the town. One said he saw her trying to milk a cow, a second that she was in another pasture picking berries, a third that she was walking through some bushes near the road, and when she saw that she was observed beat a hasty retreat. Some said she was dressed in light clothes; others that her clothes were dark and she had on a white apron. A searching party was made up and armed with handcuffs, etc., but the excitement quietly subsided when, after following the trail some distance, it suddenly ended at a red and white cow, peacefully chewing her cud and wondering what all the commotion was about.

SOME wonderful work has lately been done in the removal of diseased parts of the human body by electrolysis. Dr. Abrath, who has paid special attention to this branch of surgery, states that he has removed tumors and cancers with ease by electricity where no surgical interference with the knife was possible, cases which have baffled all medical and surgical treatment, including liniments or injections. Grown-up people who had been under hospital treatment and dismissed as incurable, have thus escaped the horrors of suffocation or other miserable death. These he had photographed in their perfectly cured state after electric treatment. He not only finds that the electric current will kill the cancer cell beyond where the knife can go, but that hemorrhage and shock are more or less prevented with the use of electrolysis, and scepticæmia, or pyæmia, which so often follows removal with the knife, is nearly always avoided.

DR. FINDLEY, of Havana, in an article in Science some time ago expressed the conviction that mosquitoes are the principal means of the dissemniation of yellow fever, that yellow fever never appears in regions unvisited by mosquitoes, and that in other regions it comes and goes with them. In the summer of 1885 mosquitoes were scarce in Havana, and yellow fever cases were rare. With the autumn came unusually large swarms, and the yellow fever came at the same time. Another writer in Science says: "In 1839, during a yellow fever epidemic in Augusta, Ga., no cases originated at Somerville, a neighboring suburb among the sand hills. There were no mosquitoes at Somerville, which was approached by a circuitous route from Augusta. Some years after a straight broad road was built through the swamps directly to the sand hills; cisterns were also built; and mosquitoes appeared and became an intolerable pest. During the yellow fever epidemic of 1854 a number of cases originated at the sand hills abounding with mosquitoes."

IN order to prove that an electric death must necessarily be instantaneous, consider two simple facts. The speed of the electric current, approximately, is about one hundred and eighty-seven thousand miles per second; or, in other words, start a current at any given point and (under the most favorable circumstances) while the clock ticks once, the current will have made seven and one-half complete circuits of the earth. Think of it! On the other hand it is now generally conceded that sensation, muscular sensation, travels only about two hundred feet per second. Suppose then that the death-dealing current were applied at the tips of the fingers. While the muscular sensation responsive to the shock traveled two feet, the electric current would have moved at the rate of nearly two thousand miles. In other words, there would be no return of the muscular sensation, for the death-dealing current would so many hundred times outstrip the swiftness of the muscular sensation that the latter would never be recorded. To die an electric death is to be hurled into eternity even swifter than the twinkling of an eye.

A Good Reporter.

A good reporter, then, must, first, be a man of quick intelligence, great perseverance, good manners, courtesy and tact. In the second place, he must be able to write good English, and to do it anywhere, at any time and at a high speed. Then he must have a good local knowledge of the city in which he works. He must be able to "look up" a subject quickly and at a moment's notice. A good general reporter should know something about everything, but that being out of the question, should come as near to it as possible, says a writer in the Epoch. He may be sent, without any preliminary preparation, to interview an Irish member of Parliament, an astronomer just returned from an eclipse expedition, a ward politician, a doctor of divinity or a pawnbroker. He may be called upon to report a Methodist conference or a political convention, or to trace a murderer whom the police are slow about finding. It is true that newspaper work is now so specialized that men are detailed to many departments permanently. There is the "horse" reporter, a base-ball reporter, a boating reporter, a reporter for local politics (generally called the "city hall reporter"), a reporter for general politics, to interview visiting statesmen and the like, a weather reporter, and so on; but nevertheless a good general reporter needs to be well enough acquainted with these and other departments of human knowledge to get an interview or work up a "story" in any of them. Last, and by no means least, the reporter must read newspapers and know what is going on. In his own department, if he has one, he should be a walking cyclopædia with a daily automatic supplement.

Believed Part of It.

Will—A peculiar thing happened to me the other night.

Bill—What was it?

Will—I was asleep and the stopping of my clock woke me up.

Bill—The stopping of your clock?

Will—Yes. Don't you believe it?

Bill—Oh, yes; I believe the clock stopped.

NOT to love the good is a proof that you are bad.

THE NEW ELECTION LAW

INSTRUCTIONS IN DETAIL AS TO VOTING BY A NEW SYSTEM.

The Report of a Committee Selected by the State Chairmen of the Two Great Parties—How Voting Must Be Done.

The committee, consisting of three lawyers of each of the two leading political parties appointed to take cognizance of points brought forward by the new election law, have completed their work and reported the result of their labors to the Chairmen of the Republican and Democratic State committees. The gentlemen engaged in this work were James B. Black, Addison C. Harris and Roscoe O. Hawkins on behalf of the Republicans, and Judge William E. Niblack, James McCabe and Jacob P. Dunn, jr., for the Democrats. The first section of the report applies to the order in which the ticket shall be printed, that of State being as follows: Secretary of State, Auditor of State, Treasurer of State, Judge of the Supreme Court—Fifth district, Attorney General, Clerk of the Supreme Court, Superintendent of Public Instruction, Chief of Bureau of Statistics, State Geologist. On the local tickets, the names of the candidates the committee advise should be in the following order, as far as applicable to the particular county; Representative in Congress, Judge of Circuit Court, Prosecuting Attorney, Judges of Superior Court, Judge of Criminal Court, Senator, joint Senator, Representative, joint Representative, Clerk of Circuit Court, County Auditor, County Treasurer, Recorder, Sheriff, Coroner, County Surveyor, County Commissioner. The report then continues:

CHUTE.

In constructing the chute, and in enforcing the provision that no person shall remain within fifty feet of the challenge window, regard should be had to the purpose of the statute. Passage along the highway should not be unduly obstructed. Persons passing or being within fifty feet for manifestly necessary and lawful purposes should not be hindered or molested.

We recommend the following instructions to voters, required by Section 35 to be printed on the cards which are to be posted at the polls, as sufficient to meet the requirements of the law:

INSTRUCTIONS TO VOTERS.

First—You must get your ballots of the polling clerk in the election-room.

Second—If you want to vote a straight ticket, stamp the square to the left of the name of the party for whose candidates you wish to vote. If you do not wish to vote a straight ticket, then do not stamp the square to the left of the name of your party, but stamp the square to the left of the name of each candidate for whom you desire to vote on whatever list of candidates it may be.

Third—Do not mutilate your ballot, or mark it either by scratching a name off or writing one on, or in any other way except by the stamping on the square or squares as before mentioned. Otherwise the ballot will not be counted.

Fourth—After stamping your ballots, and before leaving the booth, fold them separately, so that the face of them cannot be seen, and so that the initial letters of the names of the polling clerks on the back thereof can be seen. Then hand your ballots to the inspector, the stamp to the polling clerk, and leave the room.

Fifth—If you are physically unable to stamp your ballot, or cannot read English, so inform the polling clerks, and tell them how you wish to vote, and they will stamp your ballots for you. But the voter and clerks should not permit any other person to hear or see how the ballot is stamped.

Sixth—If you should accidentally, or by mistake, deface, mutilate or spoil your ballot, return it to the poll clerks and get a new ballot.

Sec. 43. Whoever shall knowingly or willfully make a false affidavit, under any of the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of perjury.

Sec. 50. Any person who shall remove or attempt to remove a ballot or stamp from the election-room, or having in his possession outside the election-room any ballot or stamp, either genuine or counterfeit, during the election, shall be guilty of felony, and on conviction shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than two nor more than five years, and be disfranchised for any determinate period not less than ten years.

Sec. 55. If any person not herein authorized so to do shall enter or attempt to enter the election-room, or enter or attempt to enter within the railing leading from the challenge window to the entrance of the election-room without first having been passed by the challengers, or having been sworn in as hereinbefore provided, or shall remain within fifty feet of the polling place, contrary to the provisions hereinbefore made, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof be fined not more than $500.

Sec. 56. If any person shall induce, or attempt to induce, any elector to write, paste, or otherwise place on his ballot the name of any person or any sign or device of any kind as a distinguishing mark by which to indicate to any other person how such elector has voted, or shall enter into or attempt to form any agreement or conspiracy with any other person to induce or attempt to induce electors, or any elector, to so place any distinguishing name or mark upon his ballot, whether or not said act be committed or attempted to be committed, such person so offending shall be guilty of felony, and, on conviction, be imprisoned not more than five nor less than two years in the State's prison.

Sec. 59. Any person who shall, during the election, remove or destroy any of the supplies or other conveniences placed in the booths as aforesaid, or delivered to the voter for the purpose of enabling the voter to prepare his ballot, or shall, during an election, remove, tear down, or deface the cards printed for the instruction of the voters, or shall, during an election, destroy or remove any booth, railing or other convenience provided for such election, or shall induce or attempt to induce any person to commit any of such acts, whether or not any of such acts are committed or attempted to be committed, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than one year and be disfranchised for any determinate period not less than ten years.

Sec. 60. No officer of election shall disclose to any person the name of any candidate for whom any elector has voted. No officer of election shall do any electioneering on election day. No person whatever shall do any electioneering on election day within any polling place, or within fifty feet of any polling place. No person shall apply for or receive any ballot in any polling place other than that in which he is entitled to vote. No person shall show his ballot after it is marked to any person in such a way as to reveal the contents thereof, or the name of any candidate, or candidates for whom he has marked his vote; nor shall any person examine a ballot which an elector has prepared for voting or solicit the elector to show the same. No person except the inspector of election, or judge who may be temporarily acting for him, shall receive from any voter a ballot prepared by him for voting. No voter shall receive a ballot from any person other than one of the poll clerks; nor shall any person other than a poll clerk deliver a ballot to an inspector to be voted. No voter shall deliver any ballot to an inspector to be voted, except the one he receives from the poll clerk. No voter shall place any mark upon his ballot or suffer or permit any other person to do so, by which it may be afterward identified as the one voted by him. Whoever shall violate any provision of this section shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, on conviction, shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than one year, and by fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and be disfranchised for any determinate period not less than ten years.

SAMPLE BALLOTS.

The sample State and local ballots, provided for by Section 35 of the statute, acts of 1889, page 174, three of which are to be posted by the inspector in and about each polling place, should be printed in large type, each on a sheet of paper about 25x38 inches in size. The sample State ballot will be prepared by the State Election Commissioners, and inclosed in the package of State ballots for each precinct. They will be printed on yellow paper, and will have printed thereon the words: "Sample Ballots. Genuine State ballot is on red paper."

The sample local ballot should be prepared by the County Board of Election Commissioners and inclosed in the package of local ballots for each precinct of the county. The sample local ballot should be printed on green paper, and should have printed thereon the words: "Sample ballots. Genuine local ballot is on white paper."

If deemed desirable by committees of political parties or by candidates for the purpose of the instruction of voters ballots conforming to the above description of sample ballots may be printed of any size, on yellow and green paper respectively, and posted up or circulated by such committee or candidates at any time during the political canvass.

BALLOTS.

As there are two ballots and two ballot-boxes, inspectors should be extremely careful to put the red ticket in the red box and the white ticket in the white box.

The initials of the poll clerks on the back of each ballot should be scrutinized before the ballot is deposited in the box, as a safeguard against possible forgery of ballots. In case a voter offers a ballot that is not folded so as to show the initials of the poll clerk it should be returned to him, with instructions to go into the booth and refold it so that they will be shown. If a voter offers a ballot so folded that the name of any candidate voted for is disclosed it cannot be placed in the box, and he cannot thereafter be allowed to vote. This ballot should be surrendered and destroyed, and a minute of the occurrence, with the statement of the destruction of the ballot, should be entered upon the poll-list, opposite the name of the person.

CHALLENGERS AND POLL-BOOK HOLDERS.

Section 41 of the Act of March 6, 1889, provided "One challenger and one poll-book holder appointed and designated by each party organization shall be entitled to stand at the side of the chute near the challenge window." The County Chairman should provide a written appointment for such persons, which should be recognized by the Election Board, unless revoked and a substitute appointed over the same signature.

The judges of the Marion Superior Court have constructed Section 2 of the Political Purity Act of March 9, 1889, (Chapter 130, Acts 1889,) to prohibit the payment of challengers, poll-book holders, drivers, or any other party-workers on election day. We acquiesce in their construction of that act.

ELECTION SHERIFFS.

Election sheriffs will preserve order at the polls, make arrests on the demand of a member of the Election Board, or on affidavits.

They should conduct blind voters or others needing physical assistance through the chute and to and from the voting-room.

They should attend from the opening of the polls to the conclusion of the count.

COUNTING OUT.

When the polls are closed the Election Board must first count the ballots remaining and unvoted, and the clerks must record the number of unvoted ballots on the tally-sheets. Thereupon these unvoted tickets must be totally consumed by fire. The board must then count the State ballots before counting the local ballots, by laying each ballot upon the table in the order in which it is taken from the ballot-box, and the inspector and the judge of election differing in politics from the inspector, shall view the ballots as the names of the persons voted for are read therefrom. If a ballot is not stamped on one of the squares at the left of the titles of the tickets it will be counted for the names with stamps on the squares to the left of them, and no others. If two or more names of opposing candidates for the same office are stamped neither can be counted.

If the title of a ticket is stamped and no names are stamped, the ballot will be counted for all the names on the ticket whose title is stamped. If two or more titles are stamped, the ballot must be treated as if neither title were stamped.

If the title of one ticket is stamped and also names on other tickets, the ballot must be counted for the names so stamped and also for all the names under the title stamped, except the opponents of names stamped. This is subject to the following exception: In case there are two or more candidates for the same office on the same ticket, as in case of candidates for the Legislature, judges of the Superior Court, justices of the peace, etc., in some counties, if the title of one ticket and the names of one or more, but less than all, of such candidates on another ticket are stamped, such ballots cannot be counted for any of the candidates for such offices, for the reason that the intention of the voter is not apparent. If a voter desires to vote a mixed ticket, as to such offices, he must stamp the name of each candidate for whom he desires to vote, whether he stamps the title of a ticket or not. To avoid possibility of mistake, in such cases, election officers should advise voters, if they vote a mixed ticket, to stamp the name of each person voted for.

If any ticket is found not indorsed with the initials of the poll clerk, or if any ticket bears any distinguishing mark or mutilation, it shall not be counted; so if any ticket properly indorsed and not mutilated, is so made up that it is impossible to determine from the ballot the elector's choice of candidates, such ballots shall not be counted as to the candidate or candidates affected thereby, but should be counted as to the candidates not thereby affected. In making the count, if any member of the board shall protest or object to the decision of a majority thereof, as to counting or not counting the ticket, such ballots must be preserved by the inspector, and the poll clerks must record on the tally-sheets a memorandum stating how the tickets were stamped and counted, describing them for identification.

On completing the count of the State ballots and recording the tallies, the board must then totally consume by fire the undisputed ballots, and the inspector must preserve, as hereafter stated, the disputed ballots.

The board will then proceed to count the local ballots in the same manner.

The count ended, the board must fill up the election return papers, showing the total vote cast for each candidate, and immediately make a memorandum of the total vote cast for each candidate, and deliver a copy thereof to each member of such board.

RETURNS.

The count being completed, the board must place in a paper bag or envelope, to be furnished for that purpose, all affidavits made and taken during the election, which bag or envelope must be securely sealed by the board. Each member of the board must indorse his name on the back of such bag or envelope, which must be directed to the clerk of the county, to whom the inspector must deliver such bag or envelope within three days.

All protested and disputed ballots preserved from destruction must be put in another bag furnished for that purpose, together with the seals of the ballot packages in the same condition as they were when the packages were opened at the beginning of the election. The inspector must seal this bag with wax, and indorse thereon the number of ballots therein and with the name of the township and the number of the precinct. And each inspector shall deliver the same at the earliest possible period to the clerk of the county.

In a third bag must be placed one of the lists of voters kept by the poll clerks and one of the tally-papers, which bag must be tightly closed and sealed with wax by the inspector in the presence of the judges; and the inspector must deliver the same to the county clerk on or before the Thursday next succeeding the day of election, and make the affidavit required by Section 4713 of the Revised Statutes of 1881.

The Children's Prayer.

An incident, which was quite amusing, but also a rather pretty illustration of faith in prayer as evinced by two little folks, 4 and 9 years old, occurred in Washington recently and is thus described by the Star of that city. In explanation it should be stated that the names used were those of valued friends, with the exception of Tommy Russell's family. This interest was the result of the witnessing by the children of Tommy Russell's performance of "Little Lord Fauntleroy." The mother of the children, entering a room where they had been very quietly playing for some time, was addressed by the little girl, aged 9, in this way:

"Mamma, we have been asking God to save us and you and papa, Uncle Charlie, Mrs. H—, Tommy Russell, his sisters and brothers, if he has any, Mr. and Mrs. Russell—"

Here the boy, aged 4, interrupted: "Oh, Ethel we forgot to ask for Willie and Kathleen and Miss Kate and Miss Nan and Mr. H—."

"Well," said Ethel, "you ask Him." So down on his knees went the little fellow, reverently bowed his head, and, after moving his lips quietly for a minute or two, rose. "Did you ask Him?" questioned his sister. "Yes," replied Clifford, his little face as earnest and serious as possible. "Then," continued Ethel, "we would want a train of steam cars and a conductor, so we could go all over the world; because we thought if God would let us live we would like to stay on earth and see how nice and quiet it is while every one else is having a good time in Heaven."

A Tennessee Romance.

Wilmouth Williams took an unusual procedure to procure a husband. The object of her affections was one Henry Williams, who languished in the workhouse because he was unable to procure $25 necessary to liquidate the amount of his fine. Henry was cold in the love that Wilmouth lavished upon him, for he was smitten by another's charms.

Wilmouth had one advantage over her rival that enabled her to carry her point. She possessed money, while the object of Henry's attentions was devoid of monetary attractions. Wilmouth visited the workhouse and offered to furnish the amount of her lover's fine on the consideration that he would relinquish her rival and lead her to the altar. To this Henry consented, and affixed his signature to a contract to marry her as soon as she got him out of prison.—Memphis Avalanche.

THE NATIONAL SOLONS.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Our National Law-Makers and What They Are Doing for the Good of the Country—Various Measures Proposed, Discussed, and Acted Upon.

IN the Senate, on the 23d, Mr. Hale introduced a joint resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, for the erection, in the District of Columbia, of a memorial building which shall be a suitable monument to the memory of U. S. Grant, which is to contain a military and naval museum, etc., and in the inner court of which may be placed to rest the mortal remains of distinguished Americans. (The title indorsed on the joint resolution reads: "In the vault of which shall be placed the mortal remains of Ulysses S. Grant.") In the House a quorum was finally secured, enough Republicans being present to take up the contested-election case of Langston vs. Venable and seat Langston, the Republican contestant from Virginia. T. E. Miller (Rep.), of South Carolina, was also declared elected to the seat now filled by Elliott (Dem.). By its action in seating Mr. Langston, the House ended what was probably the most protracted and bitterly contested election case it has ever decided. During the closing days of the last Congress the Democrats made a strenuous effort to unseat Felton and put in Sullivan as a Representative from California; but they were defeated by the refusal of the majority of the Republicans to vote upon the proposition.

THE conference report on the House joint resolution to increase the number of the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers and to fill vacancies in such board was presented in the Senate on the 24th, explained by Mr. Hawley, and agreed to. It provides for a board of eleven members, and names the following managers: Edmund N. Morrill of Kansas (for the unexpired term of John A. Martin, deceased), Alfred L. Pearson of Pennsylvania (for the unexpired term of J. F. Hartranft, deceased), Wm. B. Franklin of Connecticut, John C. Black of Illinois, Thomas W. Hyde of Maine (in place of Augustus B. Farnham, named in the bill), and George W. Steele of Indiana. The House instructed the Public Printer to exclude from the Record Mr. Kennedy's speech attacking Senator Quay. The House then went into committee of the whole, Mr. Allen (Mich.) in the chair, on the Senate amendments to the deficiency bill. The French spoliation claims amendment was non-concurred in. The committee then arose and a conference was ordered.

IN the Senate, on the 25th, the House bill to provide for the establishment of a port of delivery at Peoria, Ill., was reported by Mr. Cullom from the Committee on Commerce and passed. Mr. Plumb reported a Senate joint resolution authorizing the extension for one year of the time of payment for land on pre-emption or homestead claims whenever, by reason of failure of crops, the settler is unable to make payment within the time prescribed by law, and it was passed. In the House, after some routine business had been disposed of, Mr. Enloe (Tenn.) introduced a resolution reciting that it is alleged that the Postmaster of the House, J. I. Wheat, whose duty it is to let contracts for the carrying of the mails, let a contract to one Samuel Culbertson for $5,000 a year on the condition that Culbertson should pay to him (Wheat) $150 a month out of the money received from the Government for his services, and that Wheat did receive that sum for five months, and directing the Committee on Accounts to investigate these charges. Mr. Caswell (Wis.) said that his information was that this practice on the part of the Postmaster had obtained during several Congresses. The Postmaster had become satisfied that this money was not a proper and legitimate perquisite. He had therefore covered every dollar into the Treasury.

ON motion of Mr. Blair the House bill to amend "An act to prohibit the importation and migration of foreigners and aliens under contract or agreement to perform labor in the United States, its Territories, and the District of Columbia," was taken from the calendar of the Senate on the 26th. Mr. Plumb moved to amend the fifth section, which provides that the act shall not apply to professional actors, artists, etc., by inserting before the word "artists" the words "musical or other." The amendment was agreed to. Mr. Carlisle moved to substitute for the words "regularly ordained ministers of the gospel" the words "regularly ordained or constituted ministers of religion," and said that without that amendment the bill would exclude Jewish rabbis. The amendment was, after some discussion, agreed to. Mr. Candler (Mass.), from the World's Fair Committee, reported to the House a resolution providing that a sub-committee of five members of that committee shall be appointed by the Chairman to inquire into the progress of the details for the holding of the proposed exhibition, to examine into the amount of space allotted to the various displays, and all other matters which the sub-committee may deem advisable, and to report to the House at the beginning of the next session. Adopted.

THE present session of Congress has been one of the longest and, in many respects, one of the most interesting for many years. Although the first session of the Fiftieth Congress lasted until Oct. 20, the present session, by reason of its longer daily sessions, has far exceeded it in working time and the amount of legislative work actually accomplished. In figures the business of the session is expressed as follows: Bills and joint resolutions introduced in the House, 12,402; in the Senate, 4,750; total, 16,972, against 15,598 in the first session of the last Congress, which in this matter far excelled all previous records. Reports made in the House, 3,215; in the Senate, 1,817 (no account being taken in the Senate of other than written reports). Bills passed: By the House—1,292, of which the Senate has passed 849. By the Senate—1,100, of which 486 have been sent to the President, making a total number of about 1,335 acts or laws, against 1,790 for the whole of the last Congress. Of these acts 606 House and 275 Senate bills were for pensions to individuals. In the completed work of the session, aside from the revision of the tariff and internal-revenue laws by the McKinley-Aldrich tariff bill, the following measures which have become laws may be named as the most important: The bill providing for the monthly purchase of 4,500,000 ounces of silver; the customs administrative bill; the dependent and disability pension bill; the anti-trust bill; the anti-lottery bill; the provision for a World's Fair in Chicago in 1893 to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America; the admission of Wyoming and Idaho to Statehood; the meat-inspection bill; the land-grant forfeiture bill; the original-package bill; the bill recommended by the International Maritime Conference to prevent collision at sea; and the provisions (in the naval appropriation bill) to add to the new navy three line-of-battle ships, one protected schooner, one torpedo cruiser, and one torpedo boat. To complete the list of results accomplished during the present session there must be mentioned the radical changes in the rules of the House and the action upon election contests. There were eighteen contested-election cases before the House and seven of the Republican contestants have been seated.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN
NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach and Liver Cure
The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.
It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of Failing Health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.
To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.
J. A. HARDER,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.
My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every one.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.
My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.
The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors."

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

TO LYNCH A COMBINE.

THREATENING LYNCH-LAW ON THE BINDING-TWINE TRUST.

Operations of the Trust's Agents in the Philippine Islands—Their Attempt to Force the Holders of Hemp to Sell at a Loss Causes Great Irritation and Calls Out a Threat to Apply Lynch-Law.

"Lynch a trust?" That would be a vast undertaking; but if it could succeed it would at least prove more effective than the Republican effort to break down trusts by talk and threats to take off duties that protect them. A trust after having been lynched would probably never rise from the grave to besiege the Republican Congress for higher duties and get them again.

The Republican talk about squelching trusts means nothing, absolutely nothing, so long as they continue to feed them on high protective duties. The liquor trust gets more protection than ever, and so does the linseed oil trust. The newly formed window-glass trust has been getting an average of 105 per cent. protection, and the McKinley bill, as it passed the Republican House of Representatives in May, actually made the protection still higher. To deal out protection with one hand and pass worthless laws against trusts with the other is as absurd as that other scheme of the Republicans, to pass McKinley bills for the purpose of shutting out foreign trade, and then to vote money out of the Treasury to pay people to build ships and sail them upon the seas.

The most practical way to deal with trusts in America is to remove the duties from the article or material of which they create a monopoly.

Senator John Sherman and Hon. J. C. Burrows, one of the makers of the McKinley bill, have both suggested that this is the thing to do, only they forget all about this remedy when it becomes necessary to vote on the subject in Congress. Burrows helped to make the McKinley bill, the most infamous measure in the interest of trusts that the country has ever seen, and there is no evidence that he raised his little finger to put into the bill a paragraph expressing the principle he has publicly championed, that protection should be withdrawn in all cases where it has given occasion to the formation of a trust.

Senator Sherman has advocated the same view; yet when those fifteen Republicans voted with the Democrats to put binding-twine on the free list he did not join them. Senator Sherman has a convenient way to meet such cases. He simply denies that there is any such trust in question, and then he goes right on voting high duties right and left.

While this is the best way to deal with trusts here, another way has been suggested on the Philippine Islands—to apply lynch-law. This law cannot be applied to the case in our land; but the agents of the twine trust have been threatened with it in the country where manila hemp is grown.

The Philippine Islands are a Spanish dependency lying to the southeast of China. Their principal product is manila hemp, which takes its name from Manila, the chief city on the islands. This manila hemp is sent to the United States in large quantities, our imports being in 1889 nearly six and one-half million dollars' worth.

This trade takes to those islands the representatives of our binding-twine trust for the purpose of buying up the hemp crop. Senator Davis told, in his attack on the trust in the Senate, how "the entire business, including the sources from which that commodity was supplied, was governed by a combination of all (or substantially all) the manufacturers of binding twine. In the Philippine Islands they limited and controlled the price of one-half the raw material, and in Yucatan they controlled the other half."

It was in carrying out this plan of controlling the price that the trust's agents in Manila were threatened with lynch-law. Mr. A. R. Webb, the United States Consul at Manila, sends several reports to the State Department at Washington about the contest last winter and spring between the buyers for the trust and the native dealers in hemp. The dealers, Mr. Webb says, had bought the crop at prices ranging from $8.57 to $10 per hundred pounds. The American and English syndicates refused to pay the native dealers a price sufficient to cover the cost of their stocks, and the Consul thought that many of the dealers would undoubtedly be ruined.

The trust had vessels chartered, and they were lying in the harbor ready to take away the hemp; but still the trust refused to buy. Two of those vessels had cost the trust over $30,000, simply for lying in the harbor and waiting till it had forced the dealers to sell at lower prices. A report in this way got into circulation on the islands that the syndicates had "untold millions at their command," and that they would buy no hemp till the price went down to $5 per hundred pounds.

This state of things produced great irritation among the people, and called forth a chivalrous sentiment of sympathy with the dealers as the weaker party to the fight. The Consul sends two articles from the principal paper of Manila, which show how intense was the irritation which these greedy monopolies had caused in that distant land.

Lynch-law is hinted at by the Manila paper as the remedy for the evils described. "To the force of attack," it says, "the force of resistance opposes itself, and never was it more our duty than now to remind the Americans of their famous lynch-law." A trust has never felt the halter draw with good opinion of lynch-law. While the Manila way of dealing with trusts is not to be recommended to our wheat-growers it has at least one striking merit: it would be efficacious to the last degree. The valiant talk of Senator Sherman and Representative Burrows lacks that merit entirely. You can't kill a trust by calling it names. The binding-twine trust will be hurt badly by free twine; it can grin and endure Senator Davis' denunciation of it as "that all-comprehending, unsatisfied and extortionate monopoly."

What the Supreme Court Thinks of Protection.

The "principle of protection" was some years ago passed upon by the United States Supreme Court. The decision was rendered by Justice Miller, who was appointed by Lincoln. It is as follows:

"To lay with one hand the power of the Government on the property of the citizen, and with the other to bestow it upon favored individuals to aid private enterprises and build up private fortunes, is none the less a robbery because it is done under the forms of law and is called a taxation. This is not legislation. It is a decree under legislative forms. Nor is it taxation. A 'tax,' says Webster's Dictionary, 'is a rate or sum of money assessed on the person or property of a citizen by the Government for the use of the nation or State.' Taxes are burdens or charges imposed by the legislature upon persons of property to raise money for public purposes.

"We have established, we think, beyond cavil, that there can be no lawful tax which is not laid for a public purpose.

"If it be said that a benefit results to the local public of a town by establishing manufactures, the same may be said of any other business or pursuit which employs capital or labor. The merchant, the mechanic, the innkeeper, the banker, the builder, the steamboat owner, are equally promoters of the public good, and equally deserving the aid of the citizens by forced contributions. No line can be drawn in favor of the manufacturer which would not open the coffers of the public treasury to the importunities of two-thirds of the business men of the city or town."

TARIFF LETTERS TO FARMER BROWN.

NO. 3.

How Far the Tariff Increases Prices.

DEAR FARMER BROWN—I think it was sufficiently shown in my last letter that the tariff raises prices. Since writing that letter my attention has been called to an article in the New York Dry Goods Economist on the rise in retail prices which has recently taken place in anticipation of the passage of the McKinley bill.

Before entering upon the question how much the tariff adds to prices, I will ask you to read the following extract from the article just referred to:

"Retailers within a few days have marked up goods from 5 to 10 per cent. To give a few examples: Surah and faille Francaise have advanced from 60, 75, 85 and 95 cents to 65, 80, 89 cents and $1. The $1.25 and $1.50 qualities are $1.35 and $1.60, or poorer quality is marked up to the former prices of the better sorts. Cashmere and serge at $1 were 90 cents a month ago. Striped cheviots of 50 to 90 cents are to-day 54 cents to $1. Ladies' cloth selling for $1.35 was $1.25 last week, yet the order for this was placed four months ago. Linen goods, such as sheeting, pillow casing, towels, table covers and napkins, have advanced in the last month from five to ten per cent. Towels that are now $3 a dozen were $2.75 last month, yet these are standard goods that are often ordered a year ahead of delivery, and certainly are not influenced by the prices of to-day. Buttons and dress trimmings are about ten per cent. higher, especially crochet and pearl buttons. Hosiery has advanced in the same ratios. Fifty cents are now asked for 47 cent stockings and 75 cents for the 69 cent quality."

If prices take such a rise in the mere anticipation of the McKinley bill, what will they do when the bill becomes a law? How delighted will be the soul of Wm. McKinley, Jr., with his curious notions about the desirableness of high prices!

And now for the subject of this letter, to determine how far the tariff raises prices.

I said in my last letter that Republicans themselves speak of protective duties and revenue duties, by which is meant duties which afford protection to some native industry, and duties which afford no such protection, whether because such industry does not exist at all, or because it not only exists but produces more than the home market can consume.

You will see, therefore, that we shall have to make a division of articles into classes. Before we can determine how much the tariff raises prices let us make these classes as follows:

First, commodities which we produce ourselves in such abundance that we must sell the surplus abroad.

Second, commodities which we produce in sufficient quantities to fill, or nearly fill, the home markets, and which we can sell in foreign markets at a profit.

Third, commodities which we either do not produce at all or produce in quantities insufficient for home demands.

Commodities which fall under the first class cannot be made higher in price to the consumer by the imposition of a duty. Under this class fall the great staple products of our farms—our corn, wheat (including flour), cotton, and meat and dairy products. How do duties on these things help anybody? We have so much of them that we are compelled to sell them abroad to an enormous extent. In the year ending June 30, 1890, our exports of agricultural products were considerably more than three-fourths of all our exports. Our exported breadstuffs alone were in excess of all our exports of manufactures, the figures being $151,000,000 for manufactures and $154,000,000 for breadstuffs. Cotton exported reached $250,000,000, nearly $100,000,000 more than manufactures, while provisions of all kinds, including live hogs and cattle, showed a total of $168,000,00. Now, in cases where these enormous quantities of commodities are being exported, it is clear that a tariff on the insignificant quantity of similar commodities coming into the country can have no effect whatever in raising the prices of our own products. Stand on the wharves of Liverpool, as I have done, and see the ships discharging vast heaps of our corn and wheat, and how contemptible does Major McKinley become in his attempt to beguile American farmers into the support of protection with increased duties on corn and wheat! Never has a public man acted with greater insincerity and with a more palpable intention to deceive. He did not put a duty on cotton—there are no votes to be made for him in the South by such cheap and transparent jugglery—and for all his duties on wheat and corn and on nearly every article classed as provisions, you need not give the snap of your finger. You could carry in a quart cup all the extra product of your entire county by reason of McKinley's higher duties.

The same view is taken by the more candid Republicans themselves. Senator Allison, who voted for McKinley's duties on corn and wheat in the Senate the other day, said, in 1879, that the duties on corn and wheat afford no protection to the great grain-producing regions of the country, and that, "therefore the farmer has no protection at all." And yet the Senator goes through with the solemn farce of voting higher duties on wheat, corn, and similar farm products! Verily, it is a "fraud on the farmer!"

The second class of commodities are those in which the domestic manufacturers or producers are able to fill, or nearly fill, the home market and may export to some extent at a profit. In this class the duty is only partly added to the domestic article; and under some conditions, as for instance a temporary rise in prices on the other side, it may be that no part of the duty is added. This latter condition occurred six months ago in the case of steel rails. The price in England, under conditions of trade partly temporary, rose to a point precisely equal to the price with us. The protectionists were quick to point out this case as a proof that the duty on the foreign article is not added to the price of the competing domestic article. "See," they said, "you 'free-traders' are always saying that the whole duty is added to the price of articles made in our country; here are steel rails selling in London for $35 a ton, and the price in the United States is the same, but according to your 'free trade' notions the duty of $17 a ton ought to have made the price of rails $52 a ton in the United States. Don't you see that your talk that the tariff is a tax is all humbug?"

No; it is not humbug. In this case the equality of prices was merely temporary, as our own rail makers pointed out to Congress in their efforts to have the present exorbitant duty retained. "The duty," they said, "must be adjusted to meet the lowest English price," which was some $16 a ton; showing that as soon as a fall of prices should take place on the other side they would begin to add a part of the duty again, and this has since happened.

A very large number of commodities fall in this second class; and, it is always here that the protectionists make their fight. Here they find cases to prove their oft-repeated assertion that the tariff is not a tax. I have shown that in the first class it is never a tax; all I claim for the second class is that there the tariff is partly a tax, still, though, a tax.

In the third class of commodities, which are either not made here at all or are made in quantities not sufficient for the home demand, the tariff is a tax to the amount of the duty collected.

As, however, my letter has extended beyond its usual length, I shall reserve my remarks upon this class for my next letter. Yours truly, RICHARD KNOX.

Reciprocity at Home.

Chauncey M. Depew advises the New York farmers to take as their motto the three R's—Reciprocity, Retaliation and Revenue.

The farmers are already for revenue only the trouble is that the tariff makes fearful inroads into their revenue. In order to get revenue they must first get reciprocity at home, a reciprocity which places an equal burden of taxation on every man; and when the farmers get that kind of reciprocity they can very well afford to let retaliation take care of itself—they will, in fact, have all the retaliation they need.

Depew is not half so shrewd as people credit him with being. If the farmers should take his advice and demand retaliation, what would become of the system of protection which Depew upholds, and which places burdens upon the farmers for other people's benefit? Ought not Depew to have told these New York farmers, rather, that the mottoes for them to follow are long suffering toward their Egyptian taskmasters, and the patience which endureth all things from trusts and the tariffs which create trusts? He should have taught them to give to him that takes from them—if the coat is taken, to give the cloak also—and to resist not the tariff evil that is daily making them poorer and poorer.

Farmers can very well afford to abstain from retaliation; because they are being robbed, they do not need to retaliate upon their oppressors and rob them of what they have already gained. One thing they can do and ought to do: they should say with emphasis that this thing must stop; that the day has come of equal rights to all and special favors to none. Reciprocity must begin at home, giving back to every man the inborn right which has so long been denied—the right to use his labor and the products of his labor according to his own will, without having to make enforced contributions to others.

Reciprocity in trade is trading on equal conditions, and it is precisely this which the farmers of this country are not now allowed to do. The laws of the country make such reciprocity impossible, for the farmers are compelled to sell at a price fixed in the free-trade markets of the world, markets in which the so-called "pauper nations" figure as chief competitors; and they are compelled to buy in an artificially dear market, a market made dear simply and solely and confessedly by protection.

Reciprocity at home! Let that be the watchword for farmers. If they demand it they can have it, for the demands of the farmers of this land are bound to be heeded; and when they get that kind of reciprocity they will get revenue, too, and retaliation can go by the board. It is time equal rights should prevail in this so-called land of the free.

It Hurts the Farmer, Too.

"We don't buy any steel rails!"

These words were shouted to a tariff speaker by a farmer in New York State not long ago. The idea of this farmer was that, as he did not buy any steel rails, the duty on them was a matter of no possible concern to him.

But was he right? By no means. Rails are an important element in the cost of railroad construction. At present it costs from $160,000 to $175,000 to buy steel rails for 100 miles of road. That sum of money must be made back by the railroad company. Make it back on whom? Why, on the people who use the road—on the farmers who ship their grain away and on the merchant who brings in supplies for the farmer.

In this way the whole community is interested in the price of steel rails; and the steel rail trust, in which the fifty-five-million-power millionaire Carnegie figures, is not merely a combination to grind the railroad companies, it grinds the farmer and the merchant who use the roads, just as well.

Mr. David A. Wells, the most competent statistician of this country, estimates that the extra cost of steel rails to the country for ten years, by reason of the tariff, was $140,000,000. Does anyone suppose that sum was a loss to the roads? It could not have been so. Railroads exist to make money, and they made back in freight and passenger traffic every penny of that $140,000,000. The people footed the bill in the long run.

The New York farmer who said "we don't buy our steel rails" helps to foot the bills of the railroad company for rails. Every time he ships away his wheat or buys a piece of machinery, he contributes a small amount to the railroad company to pay for its rails. That farmer himself will not buy a reaper unless he thinks that he can make his money back on it; the railroad acts on precisely the same principle. The farmer, then, has an interest in the expenses of many other people besides his own. The big profits that are made by others, when traced back to their source, will usually be found to come mainly out of the farmer.

It is worth any farmer's time to investigate how far the tariff on other people's business finally comes back upon him.

The Tariff on Binding Twine.

The action of the Senate in putting binding twine on the free list caused a veritable panic in the cording industry. The Bay State manufacturers were especially indignant, and from all sides a chorus of protest went up, which, it is understood, has already convinced Congress that the step is a very hazardous one to make. At the same time the pressure from the West is almost irresistible. Binding twine is comparatively a new article, dating back only to 1880, but now about 50,000 tons per annum is used in binding the crops of the country.—Dry Goods Economist.

An English Trust.

Some companies formed a salt trust in England two years ago to keep up prices and grow rich.

Result: First year, ten per cent.; second year, six per cent. Why such a decline? The trust had to spend so much money in controlling salt works on the continent of Europe that the profits were eaten up and the trust fell sick.

Present condition of the patient very precarious, pulse wavering and uncertain, signs of early dissolution.

It needs a tariff pill!

THE radical defect of all tariff legislation of the present day is that the interests of 64,000,000 Americans in their capacity as consumers are almost never considered, while less than 1,000,000, who are engaged in protected industries, monopolize the care and affection of our law-makers. This can never be otherwise till the consumer calls for a fair and square deal all around.

Getting Way Back on a Practical Joke.

Next to a dog that amuses himself by barking all night a rooster that persists in exercising its voice, is nature's own nuisance, especially when the rooster lives in town. A banker who used to live next door to Dr. Jim White, in Richmond, Va., owned two little bantam roosters that he had taught to crow for a grain of corn. He would take a double-handful of corn into his back porch, lift his hand and the chickens would crow. Then he would give a grain of corn to each of them. This would be continued until all the corn was exhausted and the roosters were hoarse. This sort of thing annoyed Dr. White. He didn't mind the quality of the noise, but he objected to the quantity. One day a medical student dropped into the office about the time the serenade began.

"I'd give five dollars to shut off that infernal noise," said the doctor.

"You can do it for less than that," said the student. "Why don't you entice them into your back yard some time when old Rufe is down town, catch them and cut their vocal chords?"

"By Jove! That's the thing. Come around to-morrow at eleven o'clock and assist me in the operation."

The next day at the appointed hour the student was in the office on time, so were the roosters.

Within two minutes one vocal chord of each chicken was cut and then the birds were tossed over the fence to their home. At noon the owner came out on his porch for his daily amusement. White and the student watched him through a crack in the fence. He lifted his hand and the little squallers reared back and went through the motions, but did not utter a sound. The banker lifted his hand again with the same result. He went out into the yard and walked around his pets, but he couldn't see anything wrong. Then he called his wife and the two made a critical examination. He made them go through their pantomime for an hour and got disgusted. He tried it every day for a week and then killed the roosters and ate them. When he found out six months afterward what White had done he bought two large donkey-voiced parrots, trained them to say "—— Dr. White" and "White is an ass" and hung their cage in his back porch.

White moved in a week.

Extra Liability to Malarial Infection.

Persons whose blood is thin, digestion weak and liver sluggish, are extra-liable to the attacks of malarial disease. The most trifling exposure may, under such conditions, infect a system which, if healthy, would resist the miasmatic taint. The only way to secure immunity from malaria in localities where it is prevalent, is to tone and regulate the system by improving weakened digestion, enriching the blood, and giving a wholesome impetus to biliary secretion. These results are accomplished by nothing so effectively as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which long experience has proved to be the most reliable safeguard against fever and ague and kindred disorders, as well as the best remedy for them. The Bitters are, moreover, an excellent invigorant of the organs of urination, and an active depurent, eliminating from the blood those acid impurities which originate rheumatic ailments.

Brave Men Faltered.

It was a Green Mountain barge. Says the Bar Harbor Record: It was crowded to its utmost capacity with men, women and children, with more than the usual complement of the former. When about half way up Mt. Desert St., the driver turned about on his elevated seat, put his head through the window and sung out in stentorian tones. "Can you squeeze one more woman in there?"

It was a trying situation to the passengers of both sexes. The ladies blushed and shrank as much farther away from their male cavaliers as the limited space of the barge would permit, in order to give the lie to the implication conveyed in the question. The men seemed less inclined to deny the refutation, while one young man who had more courage than the rest answered in the laconic words of Col. Miller, "I'll try, sir."

Meanness and Greenness.

Last week our neighbors of the Auburn Dispatch and of the Auburn Times were very slyly taken in and duped. One bit at the bait because of greenness and the other because it thought there was a good chance to hit a democratic board and its democratic attorney.

At the town meeting Sept. 15, the board allowed W. H. Dills $3.00 for services as notary public for swearing in a lot of special marshals during fair week and on other prior occasions. The Dispatch said that "Mr. Dills' contract with the town board requires all of his services needed, except in cases of litigation when he would be paid as any other attorney is paid. The board should have promptly rejected his claim of $3.00."

The Times said "Dills' salary is $75 and is supposed to attend to all the city's business for that amount, yet he, (Dills) brings in a bill for the $3," and it thinks Dills will get his pay for everything he does and get the salary of $75 too. It strikes at the marshal for certifying the bill.

Here is a copy of Mr. Dills' contract, or rather his proposal to the board which was accepted by it:

"I will act as the attorney and legal adviser of your board and the town officers for one year, upon the following terms to wit: $60 payable, $20 now, $20 at six months and $20 at the end of the year." The above to include all advice and the writing of ordinances and contracts. All other services I perform for the town or any officer to be paid for upon account presented at what you may deem the services reasonably worth. It will be readily seen that each paper failed to state the truth, and any one will see that by the contract Mr. D. can be allowed for any service he may do the town, other than giving advice and writing contracts and ordinances; besides the services allowed for, and which those papers are so terribly worried over, was in no sense legal advice, but were services as a notary public. We suppose these papers would claim that if Mr. D. was not a notary public, and these special policemen, had been sworn in by any one, then Mr D would have to foot the bill, or have the amount deducted from his salary.

The truth is some republican liars went to the Times' boys and told the story, and they knowing no better thought they could make a big sensation out of it. The Dispatch man knew better and thought it was the Lord's work to lie about any and all democrats. The The Dispatch man has been attending the trustee's meeting for over a year, and lying about what is done every chance he could get. He was present when the contract with Mr Dills was entered into, heard it read and explained. Heard it read again when the records were approved, heard Mr. D. state to the board when his bill was filed that it was not included in the salary. He was present when it was allowed, saw one or more of the Republican members present, who did not raise any objection to the bill, yet he comes out and says that Dills, contract requires all of his services except litigation. If Mr. Dills was proprietor of a newpaper, we suppose the Dispatch and Times would claim that he should do the printing for the town, because of his $60 salary as town attorney. But for men, as these editors all claim to be, knowing a man so well known as Mr. D. is, taking into consideration his age, standing in the community and at the bar, to charge him with improperly demanding a fee that he was not entitled to, such a little sum, such an insignificant little steal, and that the board, two of whom are republicans should be a party to such a paltry crime, all goes to show that there was more malice in the charge, than an honest purpose to serve the public.

If these editors, republican and democratic, the town officers republican and democratic, would do by the town as well as Mr. Dills has done and is doing, our finances would be in better shape. Heretofore when the town was far smaller the salary of town attorney was $100. But last spring when Mr. Dills had no opposition, but in fact importuned by democrats and republicans to take the office, he voluntarily offered to perform the service for $60. Now we think it in order not only for the Dispatch man to advocate it, but also for all the town officers to knock off 40 per cent of their charges and follow Mr. Dills' good example. Let the trustees reduce their $80 a year to $48, the town marshal from $40 to $24 and all others in like proportion and then there will be plenty of time to lie and be the tools of liars in their hate of an honorable attorney.

Gullible Victims.

If we should desire to find a victim we could easily deceive, we would select a republican editor. They are surely of all men, most gullible. Not long since we gave a copy of the price list of a number of articles made in this country and sold both in this country and abroad. We gave a correct copy of their price list, which showed they sold much cheaper abroad than here at home. This statement has never been denied by the manufacturers named. But now comes the Dispatch, and quotes from a solitary manufacturer of cane mills, etc., in the south, who says: "Cane mills which we sell here for $24, cost, delivered in the City of Mexico, $72," etc. Notice, "delivered in the City of Mexico." And from this statement the Dispatch appears to believe that the articles cost "75 per cent more in Mexico after allowing for discount on Mexican money, etc." But the price here, is wholesale, and the price in Mexico is retail, after adding freight, storage, commission, and the importer's profit. So the apparent big difference in price, here and in Mexico is fully accounted for. It does not discredit the statement, that some manufacturers sell cheaper to foreign dealers, than at home, for this very man named says he sells to those abroad at same prices. And in either case, it is proof that "protection" is a swindle. If we can make goods to send abroad and sell, even if we sell at same price to home and to foreign dealers, it shows we can compete with the "cheap foreign labor," and therefore do not need "protection." We are able to beat the world on any line of manufacturing, that can be carried on here at all.

Securing "A Pleasant Expression."

It is an easy thing to laugh when there is something to laugh at. But when nothing funny has happened, laughing to order is a very different matter. The other day a certain German gentleman urged an amateur to photograph his two children when they were laughing. On a certain afternoon the amateur came with his camera, but on hunting up the children it was discovered that while the little girl was quite willing to smile, the boy was in a very bad humor. In fact the boy had just been punished by his father, and when he was asked to laugh never felt less humorous in his life. But the camera was there and the father was set upon having the performance proceed. He repeatedly urged the boy, whose mouth did not get beyond a slight twitching at the corners. Then, becoming exasperated, the father shook his finger and exclaimed, "You laugh now, or I vip you again!" And under this awful persuasion the boy made a heroic effort.—From "Through a Detective Camera" by Alexander Black, in St. Nicholas for October.

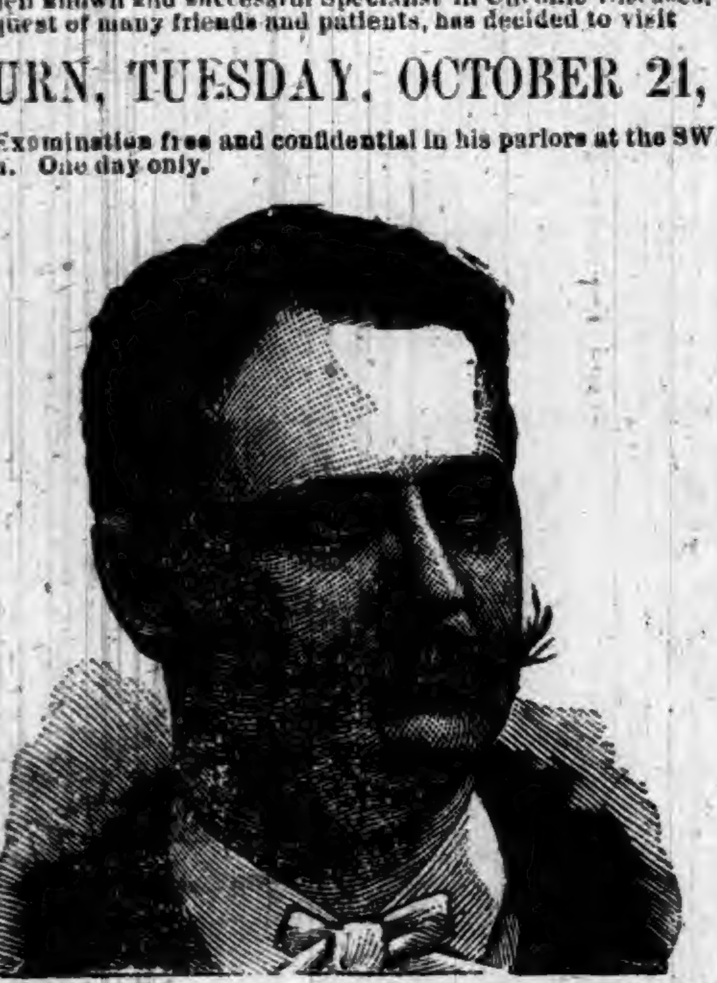
Consultation and Examination free and confidential in his parlors at the SWINEFORD HOUSE from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. One day only.

CHRONIC DISEASES, —AND— DISEASES of the EYE and EAR A SPECIALTY.



FREE. Consultation and Examination

DR. D. O. FRUTH,

—OF THE—

PROVIDENT MEDICAL DISPENSARY,

NEW YORK CITY,

Ably assisted by a full corps of competent physicians and surgeons, treats with unparalleled success all Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood diseases of every nature upon the latest scientific principles. He particularly invites all whose cases have been neglected, badly treated or pronounced incurable. Patients who are doing well under the care of their own physicians need not call on us, as our province is to treat those who cannot find relief otherwise. No money required of responsible parties to commence treatment.

Common Sense as Applied to Medicine. It is well known by all intelligent observers that it is impossible for any person, no matter how highly endowed by nature or acquirements, to become thoroughly conversant with all the divisions of the science of medicine. Nearly all who have obtained distinction in medicine have made some special department their life work, being fitted therefor by natural adaption or selection, special education and experience. The doctor having devoted several years to the special study of chronic diseases in hospitals and general practice, and having the most recent and improved instruments for finding out diseased conditions in the organs of the body, he proposes to devote the whole of his time to the practice of these specialties.

He adopts the following plan, which is peculiar to the large hospitals, and is not and never has been the practice of country doctors, viz: He carefully notes the symptoms of the patient, ascertains the condition of the internal organs, examines the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat by the most recent and approved instruments and methods, all of which he carefully records in his register for future reference. In this way he ascertains the true nature of the disease and its cause. Knowing the disease, he knows the changes it produces in the tissues, and, knowing the changes, he checks them with specific remedies, and places his patient on the high road to recovery. When sick people consult him he readily tells them whether he can cure or help them, or if they are beyond hope.

The examinations are in accordance with anatomical and physical science, as he will convince the most skeptical. By an examination he will convince anyone of the nature and extent of disease, amount of danger to life, and chance of a perfect cure. Believing that science is truth and "truth is mighty and will prevail" when known, and knowing that disease can be cured with positive certainty, he invites the afflicted to call and receive advice free and be cured of their diseases.

There is no subject that requires so much study and experience as the treatment and cure of chronic diseases. The astonishing success and remarkable cures performed by him is due to a thorough knowledge of the structure and functions of the human system, and the cure of diseases by natural remedies. Let those given up by others call for examination. He has successfully treated the following diseases since his arrival in this State: Eye and Ear diseases, Chronic Diarrhoea, Chronic Inflammation of the Womb, Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, Painful or Irregular Menstruation, Fever Sores and Ulcers, Incontinence of Urine, Tape Worms, Crooked Limbs and Enlarged Joints, Spinal Curvatures, Club Foot, Hip Joint Disease, White Swelling, Discharging Abscesses, Sterility or Barrenness, Nervousness and General Debility, Impotency, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Leucorrhea or Whites, Blotches, Pimples, Skin Diseases, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Dropsy, Cancer, Epileptic Fits, Erysipelas, Gravel, Goitre, Gleet, Gonorrhoea, Hydrocele, Heart Disease, Headache, Piles, Hysteria, Syphilis, St Vitus Dance, Chronic Dysentery, Enlarged Tonsils, Fistula in Ano, Hernia or Rupture, Ovarian Tumors, Paralysis, Prolapsus Uteri, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Scrofula, Consumption, Chronic Cough, Female Weakness, Spermatorrhoea, Rheumatism, etc. All surgical operations performed.

Curing of Piles guaranteed. Will give $1,000 for any case of failure. No money required of responsible parties.

Young Men who through ignorance or the careless exuberance of youthful spirits, have been unfortunate and find themselves in danger of losing their health and embittering their after lives may call with full confidence.

DR. FRUTH—Has attained the most wonderful success in the treatment of the cases to which he devotes his special attention. After years of experience he has discovered the most infallible method of curing weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, loss of memory, trembling and timidity, diseases of the nose, throat and lungs, affections of the liver, stomach and bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary habits of youth and secret practices, blighting the most radiant hopes and rendering marriage impossible.

Epilepsy, or Fits, positively cured by a new and never-failing method.

Private Diseases.—Blood Poison, Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. No risks incurred. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Medicine sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

Middle Aged Men, who find their vigor and vitality weakened by the traces of old complaints and their bodies racked with pain at a time when they should spend their declining years in peace and comfort, should consult Dr. Fruth at once and find the sympathy and relief you positively require. His cures are thorough and permanent.

Diseases of Women.—We shall continue as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration and skill the diseases peculiar to women. Our operations for Fistula, Ruptured Cervix Uteri, Ruptured Perineum, and for Stricture of the Cervical Canal, a condition resulting in sterility, have been alike gratifying both to ourselves and our patients.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Remarkable Cures perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible personal consultation preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. List of questions free. Western Address, DR. FRUTH,

TOLEDO, OHIO.

REFERENCES.—We, the undersigned, do cheerfully and conscientiously recommend Dr. Fruth as a gentleman of rare professional ability, ripe in judgment, humane to a fault, considerate in price and enthusiastic in relief of his fellow men, and we therefore urge the afflicted to avail themselves of his superior skill:—Granville M. AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

It is said that one Comstock opened the first store in Auburn, but there is no record of the fact.

Thomas J. Freeman, who occupied a frame at Park's corners and kept tavern, desiring to sell goods came before the commissioners for a license on March 5, 1838, whereupon it was "ordered that the tax assessed to Thomas J. Freeman for a license to vend foreign merchandise, foreign and domestic groceries for the current year be eighty-five cents, it appearing that the amount of his capital employed therein is $170." Freeman is said to have brought his supplies of goods and groceries from Ft. Wayne on horseback in a pair of saddlebags. The Indian not less than the settler loved whisky and Freeman like most tavern-keepers of that time realized his principal profit from his sales of this commodity. Liquor was much used by the pioneers, it was the preventive of chills, the solace of the woodman and at log cleaning or cabin raising, it was the stimulus that impelled to the excited competition for honor due physical strength. Records of fines show many a charge of assault and battery doubtless due to the "good whisky of our fathers' times."

In newly settled counties generally there was an appeal to combat to settle difference and fines were the result until they became troublesome. The court then became the arena to which contentions and quarrels were carried and finally arbitrated. If one could not afford the fine or imprisonment which would be incurred by taking personal satisfaction, he brought a suit and no matter how small the amount claimed, or how trifling the matter, if he could throw his adversary into the costs, he was as elated as if he had made him cry, "enough, take him off." It is this spirit that inspires many a vexatious and costly lawsuit these days.

It has been stated that Mr. Park had agreed to donate one-third of the lots in the old plat and as there were over three hundred of them, the county became owner of one hundred. The county agent Byron Bunnel, was authorized to sell ten of these lots that would best suit purchasers and on the best terms he could secure. He was also authorized to contract for the building of a jail at Auburn if he could sell enough of the county lots to pay for the work. The following is the plan proposed.

"Said jail to consist of one ground room, sixteen feet square inside of the walls. The upper soil where the jail stands shall be removed and three sticks of timber one foot square and twenty long shall be bedded ten inches into the ground, twenty feet apart from the outside of the two extremes, upon which a floor shall be laid of timber a foot thick and eight to sixteen inches wide making a floor twenty feet square upon which said jail shall be built of double walls on each side two feet thick. The inside wall shall be eight feet high between floors." The jail was to have a shingle roof and be lighted with one four-light window of 8x10 glass. It was to be secured by iron grates of inch square bars running at right angles, three inches apart.

On Nov. 5, 1838, Daniel Strong and Isaac T. Aldrich, newly chosen commissioners, together with Peter Fair a member of the old board met at the house of Wesley Park to transact county business, Anthony Mock and Riley Jacobs were each allowed $1.00 for a day's service as bailiff of the grand jury at the previous April term of court. Coburn supplied what books were required for official use and the early records of the county are written upon books, some of which had been in previous use in keeping personal accounts. When all the circumstances are taken into consideration, the first county officials appear to have done a vast amount of important business at little cost to the settlers and of great value to posterity, and to have done it well.

As the commissioners met session after session and settlers moved into various parts of the county, the few officials having their headquarters at Auburn, were employed in reducing township areas and districts, until the congressional became the boundary of the civil townships.

The settlers regarded neither times nor seasons in their journeys, but came in as best they could whether in winter, wading its snows, or in summer, following Miller's trace, skirting the swamps, and temporarily accepting the hospitality of settlers, until an entry could be made when they went on putting up their cabin and moved into it, doorless, without windows and perhaps chinked, but not daubed.

Indigestion

IS not only a distressing complaint, of itself, but, by causing the blood to become depraved and the system enfeebled, is the parent of innumerable maladies. That Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best cure for Indigestion, even when complicated with Liver Complaint, is proved by the following testimony from Mrs. Joseph Lake, of Brockway Centre, Mich.:—

"Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony, was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an improvement in my condition. My appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life."

How to Succeed.

This is the great problem of life which few satisfactorily solve. Some fail because of poor health, others want of luck, but the majority from deficient grit—want of nerve. They are nervous, irresolute, changeable, easily get the blues and "take the spirits down to keep the spirits up," thus wasting money, time, opportunity and nerve force. There is nothing like the Restorative Nervine, discovered by the great specialist, Dr. Miles, to cure all nervous diseases, as headache, the blues, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, fits, and hysteria. Trial bottles and fine book of testimonials free at F. E. Davenport. 5

A Wonder Worker.

Mr. Frank Huffman, a young man of Burlington, Ohio, states that he had been under the care of two prominent physicians, and used their treatment until he was not able to get around. They pronounced his case to be consumption and incurable. He was persuaded to try Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds and at that time was not able to walk across the street without resting. He found before he had used half of a dollar bottle, that he was much better; he continued to use it and is to-day enjoying good health. If you have any throat, lung or chest trouble try it. We guarantee satisfaction. Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's

The English fruit crop is a failure as well as ours. There is no native apples to be obtained that are worth the eating and plums are very scarce.

A Fatal Mistake.

Physicians make no more fatal mistake than when they inform patients that nervous heart troubles come from the stomach, and are of little consequence. Dr. Franklin Miles, the noted Indiana specialist, has proven the contrary, in his new book on "Heart Disease," which may be had free at F. E. Davenport's, who guarantees and recommends Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, which has the largest sale of any heart remedy in the world. It cures nervous and organic heart disease, short breath, fluttering, pain or tenderness in the side, arm or shoulders, irregular pulse, fainting, smothering, dropsy, etc. His restorative nervine cures headache, fits, etc. 5

HORRIBLE BLOW UP IN A POWDER MILL.

Guatemalans at It Again—Noted Outlaw Captured—A Collision at Sea—Terrible St. Louis Explosion—Minor News.

FIGHTING AGAIN.

Renewal of Hostilities Between Guatemala and Salvador.

Advices received at the city of Guatemala say the Guatemalans and Salvadorians are fighting again on the frontier. It states war has again been precipitated, owing to the inability of the Guatemalan government to exchange prisoners with Salvador. The first named government shot every Salvadorian soldier captured in the late war. No particulars as to the locality where the fight had taken place are received beyond the fact that it has occurred on the borders of the two countries. Great efforts to keep the news of the conflict quiet are being made by Guatemala. Barrillas has not been satisfied with the peace treaty brought about by the diplomatic corps, and it has been a generally accepted opinion that a new war would break out at the close of the coffee gathering season, but no one was prepared for so early an opening of hostilities. Guatemalan finances are at present in a very bad condition, but it is understood that a part of the cotton loan will soon be delivered. She also lacks general ammunition and troops. In every way Salvador is in a better way to sustain war than her larger enemy. Ezeta has the full confidence of the masses and the officers of her army are superior to those of Guatemala. It is stated that Salvador has plenty of money and can get almost any amount she wants. Some of the articles of the peace treaty have been considered by Salvador as not favorable to her dignity, and the Salvadorians are prepared to fight again, and more earnestly than ever.

POWDER MILL EXPLOSION.

An Entire Village Destroyed and Twelve Persons Killed.

Wilmington (Del.) special: Several startling explosions in quick succession announced to Wilmington a disaster at the Dupont Powder Works on the Brandywine. The whole section works, known as the "Upper Yard," is a complete wreck. One of the magazines went off first and the rolling drying mills near by set off by concussion, followed in rapid succession. There were at least seven distinct successive explosions. Every dwelling in the neighborhood is reported wrecked or unroofed and more or less damaged. A messenger has just brought in a dispatch which shows that twelve were killed and twenty injured. Rockland is a complete wreck and none of its houses are left standing. Rockland is a village on the Brandywine, fully a mile above the scene of the explosion. Its population is about 200.

$50,000 in Registered Mail Matter Stolen.

Two pouches filled with registered mail matter were stolen from one of the postoffice wagons at Louisville, Ky. The pouches were in the wagon when it left the postoffice, but were missing when it reached the depot. They were subsequently found in a vacant lot, ripped open and their contents gone. The mail was a very large one and doubtless very valuable, as it contained registered matter from all over the South. It was destined for Cincinnati and the East. There is no clew to the thieves. The doors of the wagon were locked when it left the office and were opened when it reached the depot. The value of the registered packages in the pouches stolen amount to $50,000, of which the banks are the principal losers.

Terrible Explosion.

A small fire at St. Louis resulted in a terrible explosion by which ten persons were badly hurt, two of whom will die. A fire started from gasoline occurred in the rear of Ross' grocery, on Twelfth and Carr street. While the firemen were fighting the fire the flames communicated with a twenty-four gallon tank of coal oil which exploded, blowing the entire east wall of the two-story building into the street. Six firemen were hurt, three of them seriously. John Brady, a spectator, had both legs broken and his back hurt and will die. Rosa Pulaski had her head split open and cannot recover. Jennie Herrick, also a spectator, was badly crushed, and is in a serious condition. Two unknown men received slight injuries.

An American Schooner Fired Upon.

San Francisco special: The steamer Alexander, from Siberia, brought further news concerning the firing upon the crew of the schooner C. G. White, off Copper Island. The officers of the Alexander say that when the schooner appeared off Copper Island she sent six boats toward the beach. They were warned away, but no attention was paid to the warning, and as they persisted in trying to land they were fired upon by the guards with blank and then with ball cartridges.

Rube Burrows.

Telegrams received at Birmingham, Ala., announce the capture of Rube Burrows, the notorious train robber, near Myrtle, Monroe County, Alabama. He was captured by a farmer named John McDuffee, who succeeded in leading him into a trap, and the great outlaw was secured without a struggle. He is now in jail at Linden, Alabama. The rewards offered by Government, States, railroad and express companies for the capture of Burrows aggregate $7,500.

Long and Bitter Fight.

The trouble between the Dayton, Tenn., Coal and Iron Company and its miners is yet unadjusted, and indications point to a long and hard fight. There are 1,200 men out.

Twelve Drowned.

A special cable from London says: The British steamer Ouse collided with and sank a bark off Fleshing. The crew of the bark, numbering twelve men, were drowned.

A Murderer Lynched.

At Durango, Colo., Frank Rossie, while intoxicated, shot and killed an aged man named Edward Glasier. Rossie was afterwards lynched.

PRIESTS STILL PRESIDE.

What Governor Thomas Says About the Mormons.

The Mormon question has been discussed at some length by the Governor of Utah. He asserts that the Mormon people are governed by the priests, and that in every political and business act the church is put first, the country afterward. The population of the Territory is estimated to be 220,932, an increase of 55 per cent. during the past ten years. Large numbers of Mormons are recruited by immigration from Great Britain and Scandinavian countries. The report says that the average number of foreign-born persons brought to the Territory by the Mormons have been during the past nine years about eighteen hundred annually, and that this average has probably been maintained during the past year. The Governor says that political and official Mormonism deals in evasions and meaningless words, or words of doubtful meaning, hypocritical pretenses and false assertions. Its attitude toward polygamy is delusive in the last degree. It knows that there has been no change on the subject, but it seeks to convey the impression that there has been.

BANDITS IN OHIO.

Two Masked Men Bind and Gag an Express Messenger and Rifle the Safe in the Car of $1,000.

As train No. 2 on the Cincinnati, Sandusky and Cleveland road was pulling out of Urbana the other morning at 3 o'clock two masked men broke in the Adams Express Company's car, and presenting revolvers at the head of A. L. Scudder, the Express Messenger, demanded the keys. Scudder surrendered and was then bound hand and foot and gagged. The robbers then rifled Scudder's pockets, securing $75, and his watch, and with the keys rifled the safe of its contents, about $1,000. The train had reached West Liberty, a small town, by this time, and the robbers left the car and took a position on the platform. Scudder succeeded in calling the attention of the local agent and was liberated and the alarm given, but the robbers covered the trainmen with their guns and ordered the train to proceed, which it did, and just as they reached Bellefontaine the robbers left the train and disappeared in the darkness with the booty. Scudder saw them jump and fired upon them. They returned the fire with a volley from both revolvers, however, doing no damage. A reward has been offered for their capture. Scudder, the messenger, is an old employe, and no blame is attached to him. His doors were locked, and the first intimation he had was the cool end of a pistol held at his head, with the blood-curdling "Throw up your hands!" The rifling of the safe was but short work, and by the time the robbers were through Scudder had regained his voice and began to hollow. One of the masked men placed his revolver at his head and pulled the trigger, but the gun snapped without exploding the cartridge. The other robber then interfered and saved the messenger's life by standing between him and his pal, saying, "We do not need to kill him."

Superintendent Bimble, of the Adams Express Company, in a circular described the men as follows: Five feet 11 inches in height, weighing in the neighborhood of 180 pounds each, wearing plain black overcoats, one with a cap, the other with a hat.

A FARMER AND A SPORT,

Who Held Up a Train in Missouri, Under Arrest.

Lexington (Mo.) special: The Otterville train robbers were captured at Elmira, near here, and are now in jail in this city. Detective Thomas Fulong has been quietly working on the case since August 10, when a Missouri Pacific train was held up by masked men in Robbers' Cut, Otterville. Two weeks ago he located the bold bandits. Keeping his own counsel, and at the same time holding the men under strict surveillance, he finally completed a web of evidence that warranted their arrest. In company with the deputies he proceeded to the house of Horatio S. Hines, a farmer, near Elmira, and arrested him and his pal, Frank Hoffman, a country sport and all-round tough. Hines attempted to show fight, and when he saw who the visitors were he grabbed a Winchester rifle from the wall, but was disarmed before he could use it. The men were brought to this place. It was at first said that five men were engaged in the robbery, but it now seems that Hines and Hoffman unaided held up the train. While one covered the engineer with his revolver the other forced Express Agent Avery to surrender to him two packages supposably containing money, but subsequent development showed that these amateur bandits had made a water haul, as the packages contained nothing but $100 worth of jewelry and railroad vouchers.

NO KNIGHTS OF LABOR

On the New York Central—They Must Give Up Their Organization or Leave the Company.

The New York Central officials have decided that no more Knights of Labor shall be employed on the road, and Vice President Webb has issued a circular directing the heads of the various departments to make their decision known. The circular is addressed to the general manager, general superintendent, chief engineer, and superintendent of motive power and rolling stock, and says:

"The recent strike and the acts of lawlessness committed in connection therewith, the published correspondence between the leaders of the organization that ordered it, and the fact that many men now seeking re-employment state that they quit work from fear of personal violence and did not dare to offer to resume work for the same reason, compel the management of the company to announce that it objects to its employes being members of the organization known as "Knights of Labor."

"The management assert that membership in this particular organization is inconsistent with faithful and efficient service to the company, and liable at any time to prevent it from properly discharging its duties to the public. You will at once take such action as will bring this circular to the attention of the employes in your respective departments."

HE WILL CONFESS.

Murderer Birchall Will Make a Clean Breast of His Crime.

Woodstock special: Since his conviction, Birchall has been constantly talking about the murder of Benwell, and it is probable that before the date set for his execution arrives, he will have made a clean breast of the crime. He has already made a number of important admissions regarding the case. He acknowledges that he was an accessory, and confesses that he took Benwell to Eastwood and beyond in the direction of the swamp, where the body of the young Englishman was discovered, but denies that it was his hand that slew Benwell. He does not say much about his negotiations with the victim and his father, though he freely admits he went in to swindle both them and Pelly. Mrs. Birchall had an interview with her husband the other day for the first time since he was condemned to death. The interview was a brief and affecting one, Birchall exhibiting considerable emotion.

Extra Session of the Ohio Legislature Called.

Governor Campbell has called the Ohio Legislature to convene in extra session Tuesday, October 14. The only extra session before the present called one convened on June 8, 1835, by proclamation of Governor Robert Lucas to consider the question relating to the southern boundary line and extension of our constitutional boundaries as described in law enacted at General Session.

Gold Fever Expected.

Authentic reports have been received at Ardmore, Indian Territory, of the finding of immense veins of gold and silver in the Arbuckle Mountains in the Chickasaw nation, forty-five miles north of that city. Army officers and others who have gone through that region have long said that gold was in the Arbuckle Mountains. A small sized California gold fever is expected.

To Visit the United States.

The Convention of the Irish National Party convened in Dublin. When the opening preliminaries had been completed the convention proceeded to select the gentlemen who are to compose the deputation which is to proceed to the United States to represent the Irish political position and solicit aid for the peasantry who are threatened with famine as a consequence of the potato blight. The delegation as agreed upon is constituted as follows: John Dillon, Wm. O'Brien, Thomas Power O'Connor, M. P., for Scotland, (Liverpool); Timothy D. Sullivan, M. P., for Cologne Green, (Dublin City); Wm. Abraham, M. P., for western division of Limerick, and Thos. P. Gill, M. H., for the southern division of Louth.

A Divorce in High Life.

Mrs. R. W. Rathbone, jr., of Chicago, has decided to apply for a divorce on the grounds that her husband has been unfaithful to her. Mrs. Rathbone is the daughter of A. B. Pullman, a brother of the palace car king. Mr. Rathborne is the son of a leading flour merchant, and the two families are conspicuous in the best society Chicago can boast. Mr. Rathbone intends fighting counter charges, accusing his wife of over-partiality toward Dr. Chesholm, a New York physician, who has been in Chicago for some time past. The latter vehemently denies the charges and characterizes them as base lies. The couple have been married thirteen years.

Penny Postage.

It is well understood that the Postmaster General is strongly in favor of the establishment of a postal saving bank, and it is believed his next annual report will advocate the adoption of the plan which may seem to him the most practicable to carry out at the present time. When Mr. Wanamaker addresses himself again to Congress he will no doubt give it the benefit of his investigations into the practicability of a reduction of the present letter postage to one cent. He will find a strong point in his favor in the comparison with the reduction of postage made in 1883 from three to two cents, which eventually resulted in an increase instead of a reduction of postage.

Struck by a Locomotive.

A distressing accident occurred on the Missouri Pacific tracks at Ewing Avenue, St. Louis. While Mrs. C. Gabriel, living at No. 2,646 Chouteau Avenue, and her little 5-year-old daughter were crossing the railroad track, they were struck by a locomotive drawing a construction train. When they saw the train approaching the mother and child attempted to get out of the way, but the child slipped and fell directly in front of the engine. The mother sprang to save the little girl, but was struck and hurled twenty feet away and rendered unconscious. The child's body was terribly mutilated and dismembered.

Dreadful Destitution.

Denver special: Alonzo Moore, a prominent Linden, Col., merchant, arrived here, and in an interview says: "It is estimated that there are at least one hundred families who are in a destitute condition and who will suffer for the necessaries of life unless aid is procured. These settlers reside in what is known as the "Rain Belt" of Eastern Arrapatoe County. Owing to the scarcity of rain during the past season the crops have been a total failure. Most of these destitute families have recently come into the county and relied upon this year's crops for a start."

He Was a Brute.

Alexander Frazer, a noted colored preacher, was in Police Court at Little Rock, Ark., charged with drunkenness. The testimony gave a sensational color to the case, it being shown that Frazier's wife had recently died in childbirth and that he had sold the body of the infant. The purchasers, who are presumably medical students, went to Frazier's house and dissected the body of the woman, leaving pieces of the remains scattered all over the room. Warrants have been issued for all the parties implicated.

Boycott Bob Ingersoll.

The private secretary of Robert G. Ingersoll has had considerable difficulty at Philadelphia in securing a suitable hall for the Colonel's lecture on "Art and Morality." The officers of the Academy of Music declined to rent the academy to any person "who advocates infidelity and atheism." An attempt to secure the Union League Club annex was also unsuccessful. Finally Horticultural Hall was secured, and the lecture, which is designed to be a testimonial benefit to Walt Whitman, is arranged for Oct. 31.

Covington, (Ky.) Election.

The election in Covington, Ky., was conducted by ballot somewhat similar to the Australian system. Hitherto the method of voting has been viva voce. The result was the election of Mayor J. T. Thomas (Republican) by a majority of 146. The Republicans also elected the city weigher, three of the five Aldermen, five of the ten Councilmen and five of the ten members of the School Board. The Democrats elected the Assessor. This is the first Republican mayor in twenty-five years.

A $90,000 Conflagration at Des Moines

Fire was discovered in the Health Oatmeal Mill, located near the railroad center of Des Moines, Iowa. It was well under headway before an alarm was sent in. The loss on the mill and machinery will be $50,000; on the storage buildings, $10,000; on the stocks, $30,000. The total insurance on both buildings and stocks is about $60,000, distributed among a number of companies. The origin of the fire is unknown. An incendiary is strongly suspected.

A Female Highwaymen.

Otto Nelheim, a well developed German, while walking along Fourteenth street, near Penn avenue, Washington, was seized by a colored girl, who pulled him into an alley, kicked him in the stomach and knocked him down and then seized his watch and what money he had in his pockets and ran away. She was subsequently arrested and turned out to be Eliza Frey, who was just released from the penitentiary, where she served a term for arson.

Fire at Mansfield, Ohio.

The Mansfield Carriage and Wagon Company's works were totally destroyed by fire. The works were closed for repairs, and the cause of the fire is unknown. Loss estimated at $30,000; insurance, $10,000. The works were almost totally destroyed by fire four years ago, when operated by the firm of Scherdit & Miller.

Lawmakers Nearly Lynched.

Hot times have been experienced in the Oklahoma Legislature over the capital question. Representative Perry grabbed the unsigned bill and started to run. Some one cried "Hang him!" The cry became general. The spectators joined the members, an attack was made on Speaker Daniels and a general row resulted.

Don't Like It.

The newspapers of Mexico call on the Government to appeal to the Postal Union against the action of the United States Government in forbidding the transportation of Mexican newspapers bearing Mexican postage with lottery advertisements.

Five Men Killed by the Explosion of a Boiler.

At Chewalla, McNairy County, Tenn., five men were instantly killed by the explosion of a steam boiler belonging to Mr. Guerly, who had recently bought the mill. Guerly's body was torn into shreds. William Johnson had his head torn from his body and it was thrown fifty yards from the mill; Walter Pitman and his brother and a son of Guerly's were killed. A negro was badly injured and it is thought he will die. There was another person injured but not seriously.

Worth $100,000 and Put in Ohio Penitentiary for Burglary.

Probably the wealthiest convict in the Ohio prison, excepting E. L. Harper, is Arthur Picard, a Portage County man, who donned the stripes recently for one year for burglary. He is a young man and the black sheep of a respectable and wealthy family. Just before he was taken from the jail at Ravenna to go to the penitentiary he received notice of the death of a relative, by whose will he received $100,000.

The World's Fair.

Chicago special: The Committee of the Local World's Fair Directory sent to Washington to confer with Secretary Proctor in reference to the use of the Lake front have returned. They bring with them a letter from the Secretary addressed to Secretary Butterworth in which it gives formal consent by the War Department, to the piling of the lake basin.

Idaho Election.

Incomplete returns from seven out of eighteen counties in Idaho give Sweet, Republican, for Congress, 1,500 majority. The same counties in 1888 gave Dubois, Republican, delegate, 980 majority. The entire State is Republican by 2,500 to 3,000 majority. Late returns show that the Legislature will probably stand 33 Republicans to 19 Democrats.

Three Ladies Killed.

While Mrs. Dostaler, wife of Dr. Dostaler, was driving across the Canadian Pacific tracks at Maskinonge, Que., in a carriage containing herself, Mrs. Piche, Miss Heroux and two children, aged about 5 years, the carriage was struck by a freight train and all three ladies were instantly killed. The two children escaped without injury.

Wrecked in Wyoming.

The east-bound Union Pacific passenger train No. 2 ran off the track at an open switch at Rock station, Wyo. The engine and six cars went into the ditch. Engineer Watson and Fireman Carr were scalded by escaping steam. Several passengers received slight injuries. Fireman Carr's injuries are fatal.

Will Contest the Will.

The will of the late John Crerar, of Chicago, which disposed of an estate of over three million dollars, much of it being bequeathed to charitable and religious institutions, is to be contested. The contest is made by relatives of the deceased on his father's side, none of whom are named in the will.

Run Down a Robber.

Among the party who started from Lo Alamas, Cal., after the daring express robber was John Conway, a San Francisco agent. The pursuers separated and Conway, after twenty-four hours riding overtook the robber and captured him. The robber confessed and said his name was Harry West.

Cheever's Crime.

D. G. Cheever, sixty years of age, was arrested at Ganesville, Wis., on a charge of embezzling $5,000. Cheever is a prominent member of the Baptist Church, in Clinton, and served for three years as executor for an estate. He invested the funds in Dakota lands, and the land fell in value.

Famishing Farmers.

A committee is in Denver from Eastern Colorado to secure aid for the destitute in that region. It is estimated that nearly two hundred families around Linden and Harrisburg are destitute, the crops having been a total failure. The County Commissioners will subscribe $1,000.

Watching the Corners.

Assistant Secretary Spaulding has informed a correspondent that the importation by mail of gold or silver substances, pieces of money, jewelry or any articles whatever liable to customs duty, except printed matter, is prohibited by law.

At the "Old Roman's" Banquet.

Ex-President Cleveland has accepted the invitation to be present at the Thurman banquet, to be given November 13, under the auspices of the Thurman Club, in Columbus. Judge Thurman will be 77 years old on that day.

A Negro Murderer Lynched.

Ernest Humphreys, the negro who shot and killed Dick Miller, another negro at Princeton, Ky., was taken from jail at that place by a mob and hanged. Miller was the second man that Humphreys had killed.

Mobbed for Murder.

Ernest Humphreys, the negro who shot and killed Dicy Miller, another negro, at Princeton, Ky., was taken from jail at that place by a mob and hanged.

—Mrs. Henry McCann, of Muncie, smashed with bowlders the windows of the saloon of John Weisse because he had sold her husband liquor contrary to her orders.

—Burglars worked Union City. They bored through a panel in the rear door of Kerr's hardware store and reached through and unlocked the door. They carried off about fifty Wade & Butcher and Wirth razors, a lot of Woostenholm pocket cutlery and a lot of Roger's silver-ware.

—The second mad-dog scare in the past month occurred at Peru recently. A dog of the Spitz breed badly bit the hands of the two children of Jacob Edwards, aged two and four years. The dog was a household pet. The celebrated mad-stone of Mrs. Roe was immediately procured, and adhered firmly to the wounds for a considerable length of time, finally dropping off. This was repeated next morning with similar results, only in a lesser degree, and the poison is believed to have been successfully extracted. The dog was immediately killed.

—Oscar Watson, Carl Dowden and Grant Phinney, the juvenile highwaymen of Muncie have been bound over to court.

—The last work of the Morgan County Grand Jury was to return twenty indictments for the violation of the liquor laws.

—The barn of Luther Wild, at Marion, was burned with the grain and agricultural implements therein. Loss, $2,000; insurance, $400.

Curnyan fired again, inflicting a wound in Sickles' breast and gave him another in the back as they clinched. Sickles got hold of the weapon in the struggle and clubbed his assailant almost to death with it. All three are dangerously injured.

—Five hundred men working on the natural gas pipe line from Howard County, Indiana, to Chicago, have been called off, and work suspended. It is said that the Indiana Natural Gas Company which was to pipe gas to the State line for the trust, will abandon the idea of supplying the fluid to consumers in Chicago, and dispose of it to towns along the line. The immediate cause of the suspension of operations was the hostile attitude of Chicago authorities toward the gas trust.

—The prisoners in the county jail at Marion, set fire to their mattresses. The night watch discovered smoke issuing from the windows and gave the alarm. The fire was extinguished after several prisoners had been nearly suffocated. The supposition is that the fire was started in the expectation that the doors would be opened and a delivery effected. Ed. Robeson and Newton Leach, who started the blaze, will be prosecuted for arson as soon as their present terms have expired.

—A boiler explosion in a tile mill at Deedsville, a small town north of Peru, killed Charles Deeds, a young man, his head being blown into fragments, besides seriously injuring George Abbott and Elijah Shoemaker, other employes. The building was completely wrecked, and fragments of the boiler were found three squares away. Deeds was sitting near the boiler at the time of the explosion. The other two men and Richard Robbins, engineer and owner, was some distance away. Robbins was unhurt. The cause is not known, as only a few minutes prior to the accident the gauges showed ample water. The explosion was heard for miles.

—Frank L. Sefrit, city editor of the Washington Gazette, criticized the brutality of Marshal Cavanaugh. The latter then attacked Sefrit and beat him in a frightful manner.

—David C. Reede was found dead in his room at the residence of his mother, in Liberty. A coroner's inquest found that the deceased came to his death by sulphate of morphine, self-administered, with suicidal intent. It is alleged the cause of the suicide was disappointment in love.

—A novel lawsuit was disposed of in the Circuit Court at Crawfordsville. J. D. Hoss, of Indianapolis, sued Mrs. Lydia Hesley on a note. The defense set up a counter-claim for fuel and light used when Hoss was coming to the house of Mrs. Hesley to see a girl.

—Richard Roberts, an old veteran, dropped dead in the M. E. Church at Cicero, while attending Sunday-school. It is supposed that heart trouble caused his death. Deceased was a prominent member of the G. A. R. and was buried by the Post. He leaves a wife and one grown daughter.

Human Frailty.

We are frail creatures physically—the most robust among us. The unhealthy man or woman is in great measure incapable of benefit to society. If, for instance, biliousness, a trouble of frequence and often obstinately resistant of ordinary medication, obstructs the harmonious action of the liver and the bowels, the sufferer is sure to be dyspeptic. The three disordered conditions are sure to be confirmed by neglect. Under the erroneous impression that there is no hope for him, an impression in all likelihood confirmed by the use of objectionable remedies, the sufferer is apt to become neglectful, nay, even reckless, and that the sooner he is removed from the sphere of human endeavor the better for all parties concerned. What a series of mistakes! His liver is responsible. It is an incorporate part of himself. How discipline it? By the aid of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a certain medium for the re-establishment of united, regular action in the stomach, liver and bowels. It also cures and prevents malarial, rheumatic and kidney troubles.

Bustle in a Store.

Mrs. Hayseed (on her first visit to town)—One would think that big store I was just in would do considerable business, but I suppose most of the crowd jest looks around and goes out again. My! Wasn't there a commotion when I bought something and paid for it.

Hostess—A commotion?

Mrs. Hayseed—Mercy! yes. Jest es quick as that clerk-girl got my money, she began yelling "cash" like mad—and half a dozen little errand boys came rushin' up to see it.—New York Weekly.

The Asperities of Debate.

The Speaker (to the gentleman from Indiana, who has just called the gentleman from Illinois an ass)—Does the gentleman from Indiana withdraw the epithet?

The Gentleman from Indiana—I withdraw the language, Mr. Speaker, but maintain that the gentleman from Illinois is not in order.

The Gentleman from Illinois—How am I out of order?

The Gentleman from Indiana—Probably a veterinary surgeon could tell you."—Life.

Sufficient Reason.

"I hear your engagement with Miss Boodle is off. How did it happen?"

"In strict confidence, Smith, she got mad because I stole a kiss."

"I don't see why that should provoke her, when you were engaged."

"Well, you see, I stole the kiss from another girl."—Brooklyn Life.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. It PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. Send 2c stamp for copy of "THE HORSE TRAINER," published by us.

YE SAD AND SORROWFUL.

BY LOUIS N. CRILL, JR.

Go bury your gloom and your sorrow
Away from the world and our sight,
And strive 'neath the sun of to-morrow
To gather the beacons of light.
Go mingle your tears with the waters,
And drift them away with the tide;
Be one of proud Joy's lovely daughters
That laugh at vain Grief's lonely chide.

The load is so heavy you carry,
'Tis all that misfortune can bear;
Throw off the dull weights and be merry—
Away with your trouble and care.
Go sink in the depths of creation
Your grieving, your heartaches and pain;
Endeavor in life's busy station
For happiness, glory, and gain.

Come out from gloom cells of the tearful,
And bask in the sunshine of joy;
Come breathe the pure air of the cheerful,
And strive in Contentment's employ.
Come gaze at the flow'rets now blooming
Along the bright pathway like gold;
Come sip the sweet nectar perfuming
The earth with its sweetness untold.

Ye sad and ye sorrowful stricken,
Misfortune's lone victim's of grief,
The throb of your heart seems to quicken—
Come share the sweet balm of relief.
Come dwell with the happy who measure
The worth of this life by its mirth;
Come drink from the fountain of pleasure
That thrills with its comfort all earth.

DOROTHEA INGRAM.

A Story of Early Colonial Days.

BY CHARLES C. HAHN.

CHAPTER III.—(Continued.)

From this day on the minister had no doubt of Hillary's league with the evil one, and, just as he meant to be, for he was a man of honest conviction, or prejudice, he would have had his enemy brought up for trial, had not his value in the settlement been so great that his neighbors counseled patience. But the silent influence of the minister had its effect and after a short sojourn in the village, Hillary, as we have seen, had built a cabin in the woods and removed there with his daughter.

On the very day of the trial, the minister had another manifestation of the strange power which was being exercised over his daughter, then about ten years old. During the day the air had become sultry, surely portending a thunder storm The leaves upon the fruit trees scarcely seemed to move. Towards noon a dark cloud had drifted over them from the south, but it passed away and was seen to break up in the north. This advance guard of the storm, however, was followed in less than half an hour by an army of smaller clouds, which came slowly upwards, and at length after much blowing about in the upper air, joined together and began to settle down over Sagnauck. A deep rumbling was heard among them, and then, as if the thunder had broken the water barriers, a few large drops of rain fell pattering upon the forest leaves and on the cabin roofs. A gust of wind followed, partially relieving the pioneers of the sultriness and then the refreshing water began to fall in a steady shower. Flashes of light appeared in the sky, and the crash and boom of the disturbed elements were heard. That sharp rattling, so terrible because of the indefiniteness of the lightning's course, followed rapidly, and to an imaginative mind it seemed as though heaven had opened up for a magnificent battle with the tall giants of the forest. A dash here, a streak of light, a crash, a dull rumble above, and the tall oak which had held its head aloft for half a century was rent in twain, never in its pride to look down upon its smaller brothers again. The wind forces, too, were roused, and rushed through the forest, tearing away great limbs, scattering the colored autumn leaves and bowing great trees before them.

After half an hour the force of the storm was broken, the sharp crash of the thunderbolt was heard no more, the wind went down and rain fell copiously in a steady yet gentle shower, which lasted until nearly evening. But after that the sky for an hour or more was lighted now and then with those zigzag streaks of lightning which frequently follow a storm.

A thunder storm is always a grand sight, but to the simple Puritans it meant much more than it does to their descendants now. To their simple minds the fury of the elements was a display of the power of God, and they listened reverently to His voice as if they were indeed at the foot of a second Sinai.

But in the case of the Rev. Henry Granville, the storm brought him out in the weakest part of his character. There was something so terribly positive in the descent of a thunderbolt that he cowered and cringed before it. The roar of the wind through the forest seemed so regardless of his weakness, that he trembled yet more when he heard it; and the lightning flash and the falling rain were so far beyond his power to stay them, that, humbled and weak, his only recourse was to gather his family about him—and pray.

An hour after the trial he was seated in his chair at home, his thin lips moving in prayer, his eyes turned fearfully, yet with a fascination of fear that he could not resist, toward the window, and his form cringing and shrinking back at every crash.

Achsah was the only one who was not terrified at the storm. She had refused to go to her father, and had lain down upon a rude couch where she could watch the play of the lightning. When her father tried to sink deeper into his armchair at some vivid flash of light, she laughed and clapped her hands.

"Was not that a good stroke?" she would say to the minister. "Some tall tree in the forest was shattered then, I doubt not." And her father imagined that her smile had an air of fiendish gayety.

As the storm increased, she became even more gay, and the poor father saw unmistakable signs that the gayety was the effect of some nervous or mental excitement which he could neither comprehend nor allay. But suddenly he heard a cry of pain, and, turning to his child, saw her lying back upon the couch, with pale face in which fear and bodily suffering were both plainly marked.

"What is it, Achsah?" the minister asked.

"Some one is sticking me with thorns."

The child was hastily undressed, and upon her body were found several places where the blood was starting through the skin. Nausea followed, and then the girl fell back upon her pillow, exhausted.

"Oh, I see him, papa, I see him," she said, after a time.

"See who, Achsah?"

The girl did not answer, but soon cried out again:

"He has hurt my arm."

The now thoroughly frightened man uncovered her arms, and, sure enough, upon one of them were to be discerned the marks left by the grip of a strong hand.

"Papa, I thought you said he was safe in jail?"

"So he is, my child."

"Then how could he hurt me so?"

CHAPTER IV.

ON TO THE FREE SEA.

They are calling me, calling me, calling me,
The waters so deep and swift,
That I long to plunge into their embrace
And out on their bosom drift!

I stand by the rolling ocean
And watch the billows beat,
Or stand by the rushing river
Swift flowing at my feet;

And out of the sea come voices,
And the river murmurs low,
To draw me into their bosom
Down to the depths below.

You may beat upon the rocks
With a calm, majestic sweep,
You may roll upon the shore
With your billows calm and deep;

But whether calm or frantic,
I hear you calling low,
In voice unheard by others,
In words none others know;
And you bid me come unto you,
To calm rest far down below.

Whene'er you roll in in splendor;
With long, majestic sweep,
Whene'er you dash with fury
And up the high cliff leap,
I know you want me, want me,
And I long to be at rest,
Beneath your storms, far down below,
In lasting calm to rest.

And I hope that death will come to me
On the river or on the sea,
That the voice that is calling me ever
Shall make my weary soul free.

They are calling me, calling me, calling me,
The waters so deep and swift,
That I long to plunge into their current
And out on their bosom drift.

Immediately after the trial, as Mark persisted in refusal to pay the fine assessed against him, he was taken in charge by Constable Atlee and led away to an unused log house in the outskirts of the village, where he was securely bound and left alone, his guards taking good care that the one door was well bolted from the outside.

This was in the afternoon, toward sunset, and as the cabin was growing dark, supper was brought him by his jailer. Then the long night set in.

Notwithstanding the vexations of the day, Mark slept well, but toward daybreak he became restless and was troubled with dreams. He seemed to be back in old England again, and his dear wife's hand was upon his head. His life there he lived over, half waking, half dreaming. The causes which resulted in his emigration to the new world passed in review before him, and then he took up his life in Sagnauck. Each event stood out with startling distinctness. The persecution of the church, the death of his loved wife, the struggle for existence, all came back as he lay bound upon that cabin floor.

After a time his dream changed, or perhaps he fell asleep. This time he was in old England again as before, and for some reason had been cast into prison. While lying upon his narrow cot, he could hear the footsteps of his jailer drawing nearer and nearer until they stopped before his cell door. The bolts were drawn aside, and, instead of his jailer, Achsah Granville appeared.

He started and half awoke. Surely he heard an unusual rustle about the cabin door. He raised himself upon one elbow and listened, but all was still, and, falling back, he dozed again. He dreamed that he was lying in the cabin sleeping, and that Achsah, the minister's daughter, came and entered the door. Every point in that dream passed with slowness and distinctness. He seemed first to see her coming up the path from the village, then pause before the door of the cabin, lift her hands and tug at the bolt until it was withdrawn, then— ah, that was a dream!—enter, draw a knife from her girdle and cut the cords which bound him.

The strangeness of the dream caused him to start and half raise up. The door was open. His bonds were cut, and he was free.

For a moment he stood in the cabin collecting his thoughts. Then, with firm step and unhesitating manner, he took a direct course for the river, which wound half-way round the village.

It was a mile away, and the woods were dark, but he reached it in half an hour. He knew the country and the river well, and in a few moments came to a rugged old elm tree, to the roots of which a canoe was tied. He cut the bark which bound it to the root, gave it a push out into the middle of the stream, and began floating downward toward the free sea.

In all this there was not a moment of hesitation.

The darkness of night began to fade from the sky, and a faint tinge of gray spread over the earth. The sun was drawing nearer, and the forest was waking up to new life. Down deep among the trees on either side he could see long stretches of blackness like the straight branches of a pine tree, reaching out from the river. He floated on, and by and by these dark avenues between the trees grew lighter, and the forest ghostly. The stillness of the early dawn was oppressive. In the dense darkness a sound could be heard now and then, but as day began to approach there was scarcely a rustle among the limbs.

And through this the river wound, flowing slowly but deeply to the sea, and in the midst the fugitive floated.

At times the bank was low, and sloped down to the water's edge, and again it arose above the water level, and left its crumbling sides to wear away and fall with a thud and splash into the water below. And sometimes the washed roots of a giant tree stood out bare and reached down into the stream, a resting-place for fish, which the boys of Sagnauck would have been glad to find. And then, again, the banks drew closer together, the stream became deeper, the limbs of the water elms overlapped, and the boat's course was through a leafy roadway of fallen autumn leaves. A turn in the river and the current rushed more rapidly, the leaves were hurled and crowded back to the shores, a clear, swift current swept onward, and the canoe, with its solitary boatman, with it.

Birds were sounding a note here and there from the depths of the forest. Gray dawn was passing away and the skies were growing lighter. The early risers of the birds had called to their companions, and the woods on each side resounded with the matin song of New England's unbound singers.

The gray dawn passed away; the skies grew lighter; the cool autumn night became milder; overhead the sky was clear; eastward, through the woods, vistas of light were opening; and shadows were sloping westward. The morning had come, and the fugitive was drifting onward through borders of leaves, 'neath woodland arches, with song of birds in the new day, onward to the great free sea.

The sea, the sea, the open sea,
The blue, the fresh, the ever free.

A terrible monster is it, nevertheless, to all who bow not to its majesty, yet free is it, and free it crowns each one who comes to it. With merciless calmness it rolls its long billows up upon the shore, bearing its seaweed and fragments of wrecks, and with relentless fury it dashes the ship to pieces, beats with rage upon the rocky coasts and tells man "What's mine is mine, and I will keep!" And yet, whether long green billows roll or mad whitecaps fly, the sea is free and does as it wills, and receives all who cast their lot with it as free also.

And the fugitive floated onward to the free sea.

The dawn had come and gone, the sun had arisen and was beginning his stately march across the heavens, and with his rays obliterating the sparkling stars of night which the nightingale sang to, and which, mayhap, though far away, were brighter and more glorious suns than he.

Gray light and dawn and sunrise passed away. The river had just made a sharp turn to the left, and after struggling with the bank on the right, had regained its freedom also, and was flowing swiftly onward. A long stretch of water, but the curve had brought it circling southward below Sagnauck. It was flowing onward to the free sea, but what of the fugitive upon its bosom?

Atlee, the constable, waking early from his slumber, and desiring to gloat upon his captive enemy, had long ere dawn or the gray light stumbled his way to the cabin at the edge of the forest.

Severed cords and an open door was all that he found.

Eager to track his prey, the alarm was at once given, and scouts were sent out—one this way, one that. Atlee himself, with a companion, cut directly south to the river, and laid in wait.

A boat appears in the middle of the stream. The constable calls to the solitary boatman to halt. The only reply is a quick motion of the occupant of the boat, and the fugitive is in the water. A moment more and he rises. A rifle shot and he sinks again. The boat drifts on, and the swift waters flow swiftly to the sea.

CHAPTER V.

THE YOUNG WITCH.

When Atlee and his men returned to the settlement but little adverse comment was made upon his action. Hillary had broken his bonds, defied the law, and, when ordered to surrender, attempted to escape. Still, his action would have been denounced had not the settlement become honeycombed with the half-expressed belief that Hillary was indeed in league with the devil.

Dorothea Hillary, his daughter, was at this time nearly twelve years old. For several days after her father's tragic disappearance she remained in the cabin in the woods, but soon the more human sentiment came to the surface, and the leaders of the village consulted as to her future. The cabin and farm which her father had built and claimed was settled upon her, so that in years to come she would be comfortably well off, as far as worldly possessions go. But in the meantime it would not do for the young girl to be neglected.

After much debate, the question of her future home was settled by Athiel Lennox offering to receive her into his home and care for her, in return for what work she might be able to do about the house. He was the village doctor.

Dorothea's new home proved to be a pleasant one. The girl was bright and sweet-tempered, and soon became a favorite not only with the family into which she had been received but by the villagers generally. Her very loneliness appealed to their honest hearts. In time she was warmly welcomed by every one she met, and her figure became a common one by the firesides of all, with the exception of the minister's.

When Hillary's death was announced to Mr. Granville he was inexpressibly pained. He felt that an unprepared soul had been sent to its Maker, and feared lest some act of his might have stood in the way of its being prepared.

This feeling of regret also prompted him to offer any aid in his power to the little waif left among them. He would even have taken her into his own home had not another been provided for her.

The first Sunday after Dorothea had gone to live with Dr. Lennox the minister invited her home with him; for, while Sunday visiting was discountenanced in Sagnauck, he rightly considered this invitation more of a work of mercy than a worldly pleasure.

After the cold dinner, which was always served on Sunday to dispense with any unnecessary labor, the family were gathered in the minister's study. Dorothea, with a child's bashfulness, had seated herself by the window and answered the minister and his wife in monosyllables. Even had she felt free to talk it is likely that she would have done the same, for the remarks which her father had frequently made about the minister caused her to look with doubt upon his friendly advances. As was his custom on Sunday, Mr. Granville was catechising his family.

"Who is Satan?" he asked his younger daughter, Ashubah.

Dorothea turned her great brown eyes toward the minister and startled him by asking:

"Did you ever see him?"

He was about to reply hastily in the negative, when Achsah spoke up:

"I have, papa. I saw him to-day."

"My child, my child, what are you saying? You could not see the evil one."

"But I have, papa."

"What did he look like?" asked Dorothea, turning to the girl.

Achsah looked at her questioner with a shrewd gleam in her eyes, and replied:

"Like your father."

The next instant Dorothea had picked up a book lying upon the desk near her and flung it at the creature. Achsah smiled and said:

"That cannot hurt me as much as some other things you might do," and the incident was passed over without any more words. But that evening Achsah was taken with one of those nervous attacks to which she was subject, and the minister remembered her words.

Was the daughter, like the father, in league with the evil one? The question gave him a subject for long meditation.

Dorothea was not invited to repeat her visit.

Some months after this occurrence an incident happened which deepened Mr. Granville's meditations on witchcraft. When Dorothea was removed to the doctor's home, a small chest, filled with books and papers, had been found in Hillary's cabin.

The doctor had glanced hastily at the latter, and, finding that they referred to Hillary's family connections in England, laid them carefully away. These, with a locket which Dorothea always wore suspended around her neck, were the only links binding the little waif to her friends, if she had any. The minister heard of this locket, and with the best of motives wished to see it. But this Dorothea refused to allow, and in his distorted imagination the poor man wove a story of cabalistic relics and infernal charms. For what else, he reasoned, could it be so sedulously guarded by one so young?

At length, one day, he exercised his authority as minister of the parish, and commanded Dorothea to deliver up the charm. She refused to obey, but he forcibly drew the locket from her bosom and opened it.

A fair face, the counterpart of Dorothea's, only more mature, met his gaze, and beneath the glass of the other side of the case was a lock of brown hair.

He dropped it involuntarily, and Dorothea ran away. But now, in his mind, there was no doubt. His deep study of witchcraft had familiarized him with all forms of amulets and charms.

Dorothea wore the badge of the devil.

From this time on, Dorothea bore a double character. To those around her, and with whom she associated, she was a pure, high-minded, lovable girl. But the minister's convictions of necessity had their weight with his parishioners, and while he made no charge against her the report that she was a witch was soon circulated. The simple-minded pioneers treated her as if she were one of their own flesh and blood, yet they could not help watching her with fear. She might not be what she seemed, and they were on the alert to detect anything which might savor of the evil one.

That it was a hard life and a difficult path for one so young to tread is clear. The least outbreak of temper, the smallest act which might appear queer, even her deeds of kindness, were looked upon with suspicion. Yet none could quite believe her evil, so open was her disposition, and she continued to live in the settlement befriended by all. But there was that suspicion hovering over her!

One evening the minister was returning rather late from a visit to a small village several miles away, and was repeating in Hebrew the 123d psalm, which was supposed to contain certain cabalistic words to protect one from evil spirits when traveling a lonely road after nightfall. He had just finished it and was about to begin again with the first verse, when he heard light footsteps near, and, looking into the forest, saw Dorothea approaching. It was an ominous meeting for the girl.

The poor minister could not, if he had wished, disconnect her presence with the evil spirits he was exorcising. Had he not repeated the cabalistic words, he believed the girl would not have joined him, but would have left the powers of the air to exercise their influence upon him. But they being barred from injuring, she, their mistress, came. They walked along toward the lights which were gleaming through the woods from the village.

"Where have you been at this hour, Dorothea?" the minister asked; for, although inwardly trembling, he did not fear an attack, and was disposed to treat the girl with the manner becoming her pastor. He was a good man, as I have said, and even while he believed Dorothea to be bound to the devil, would do anything to release her from her bondage.

"I have been down the creek to Mr. Johnson's, whose wife is ill. It is late, but she needs Dr. Lennox' services, and there was no one else who would go after him."

"Child, child, what do you want of that poor woman's soul?"

Dorothea started.

"I do not understand you."

But the minister did not reply. Just then they came to a little stream which, flowing southward, joined Sagnauk creek a few rods below the village. With the simple words, "I am thirsty." Dorothea knelt down by the running brook to drink. So quickly was it done that she had touched the running water with her lips, when the minister cried out:

"Stop, child of evil! Would you drink in the evil spirits which float upon uncovered water this night? Or are you indeed proof against all such dangers?"

"Sir, I do not know what you mean," answered Dorothea, as she ceased drinking and arose to her feet.

"Do not know what I mean! Child, perhaps you would also advise me to drink of that stream?"

"And why not, reverend sir, if you are thirsty?"

"Why not? Because this is Tuesday night, and while one may drink from uncovered water six nights in the week, he may not do so on Tuesday evening unless he wishes to receive into him those evil sprites called musikans, which sport upon the waters this eve and are fain to enter man's body, hoping that they may reach his head or his heart."

"Reverend sir," said Dorothea. "You are very learned, but I am ignorant and know not of this. I thank you that you warned me. No more will I drink of water on this Tuesday eve, unless it has been closely covered."

The two then proceeded on their way to the village. But in the minister's mind two things had been made certain: that Dorothea was abroad in the woods that night to marshal the powers of the air against him, and that, foiled in her plans by the cabalistic psalm, she had knelt by the running brook to commune with those sprites which superstition told him invaded all uncovered water on Tuesday night.*

He Lost a Sale.

An icebox on which was a sign "For Sail" stood in front of a Brooklyn grocery store the other day, and when a woman stopped to examine it, a man, with his hands and overalls showing grime came out and said:

"Madam, dot vhas der beegest bargain in dis whole county. I paid $18 for dot icebox, und now I sells him for —for—vhell, I make der price so sheap dot it pays you to shplit him oop for firewood."

"Been in use a long time, I see," she observed as she looked inside.

"Madame, I gif you fife tousand dallar if I doan' buy him only last year."

"What's the principle on which it works?"

"Der best principle in all dis worldt, madame. It vhas by der oopright, horizontal, rotary principle, und nobody can beat it. My son he runs dis grocery for me while I runs my boiler und engine shop. Dot makes me know all about iceboxes."

"A boiler isn't an icebox," she remarked as she looked into it again.

"Shust so, madam, but der principles vhas der same. Dis vas a tenflue icebox, mit a return draught. She vhas seex-inch stroke, patent cut-off, tested oop to 180 pounds, und vhas feexed oop with a low-water indicator und all der latest inventions. If that icebox explodes on you I give you one million dollar, und any shild can run him."

"Explode! Mercy on me, but I don't want anything around to blow me up! It must be some new-fangled arrangement."

"Madam, I gif you my word he vhas as safe ash a trunk oop in der garret. He consumes his own smoke, vhas provided mit a check-draught of der latest style, und——"

"I don't want it!" she said with a decided snap in her voice, and hurried away as if she feared an explosion.

At that moment a young man came out and asked:

"Fadder, doan' you make a sale?"

"No."

"Vhas you tell her?"

"I say to her dot it vhas by her oopright, horizontal, rotary principle, mit return flues, seex-inch stroke, patent——"

"Fadder, you go avhay and leaf me to sell him. You vhas too scientific. So mooch talk makes peoples afraid. I shust tell 'em dot it vhas for sale by a family who vhas going to Europe for der summer, or to wind oop an estate, und before to-morrow he vhas sold. You vhas all right on engines und boilers, but you vhas way off on iceboxes. All der principle about him vhas to sell him for $10 cash."—New York Sun.

THE original of Longfellow's Village Blacksmith is Henry F. Moore, and he still lives in Medford, Mass.

HARRISON will make a trip to Kansas this week. He went through this state Tuesday, and will return Oct. 14.

THE race problem is agitated in Indiana. The school board of Crawfordsville has ordered separate schools for colored children.

THE famous Dupont powder works, near Wilmington, Del., blew up Tuesday afternoon, Several lives lost, and buildings destroyed.

BANCROFT, the greatest of American historians celebrated his 90th birthday last Friday. He was born Oct. 3, 1800, and is still in good health.

THE latest scheme of Boss Quay is said to be to colonize Indiana, Connecticut and West Virginia with negro voters, so those states may be held for the republican party.

EX-PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is to be at Ottumwa, Ill., Oct. 10, Friday of this week. Harrison is to be there the 9th, or to-day. These distinguished visitors, it is expected, will help draw a big crowd to see the great coal palace now on exhibition there.

McKINLEY's tariff steal went into effect Monday, Oct. 6, and merchants are marking higher prices on the goods affected by it. In all the big towns, the clerks are busy marking up the goods People who support the republican party ought to have all this increase to pay.

GOV. GRAY and Mr. McNagny gave the people a good talk obout the burdens of a needless taxation, and put before them the unanswerable question: Why do you vote taxes on yourselves that do you no earthly good, and make those already rich, that much richer? No one can give a good reason for it.

THE DISPATCH is getting careless in regard to its statements, or purposely misrepresents. In its last issue it claims that democrats are in favor of a single tax, and that on land alone. This is a square and very plain falsehood. Neither the democrats of Indiana, nor of any other state favor any such stuff. The only places we know of where it is favored, is among the half-way socialists in great cities, and in the first Indiana congressional district where the republican candidate is making his canvass in favor of this single tax. In this case, democrats might have a chance to charge their opponents with favoring this wild theory, if they chose to. But the Dispatch probably put out this statement for use "just before election."

McClellan at Home.

Congressman McClellan reached home last Thursday evening, accompanied by Mrs. McClellan. A number of our leading democrats including several ladies were waiting at the train to meet and welcome them home. The DeKalb County Band was also present, and when the Judge and his wife stepped from the train, they received a hearty greeting which was no doubt very gratifying to them after their long absence. The line of carriages proceeded up town, and on passing the Wabash station the Auburn Foundry Band joined them and all proceeded to the residence of the Judge, where they were no doubt glad to find a rest after the long journey. The Judge was called out to the steps in front, and made a short speech expressing his gratification at the welcome he had received and his pleasure at being once more at home, and among his old friends and neighbors. The company then dispersed to their homes. The session has been next to the longest on record, and the first Monday in December will soon come again, to call them back to Washington and him to his duties there. He will go back to his labors with a greatly increased majority at his back, and the plaudits of his constituency for a long season of hard work well done.

Governor Gray in Auburn.

In spite of the unfavorable weather last Saturday, a good attendance of the people from all over the county greeted Governor Gray at the meeting here. He reached here over the Lake Shore from Ft. Wayne at noon and was met and escorted to town by W. H. Dills, as president of the Gray Club, together with Chairman Ab. Kelly and many other citizens. The opera house was packed full of gentlemen and ladies, who were anxious to hear one of the ablest and best of Indiana's "favorite sons." They were well paid for their attendance, for he proceeded to make one of those masterly, unanswerable, yet gentlemanly and polished speeches for which he has become famous. He was followed by Hon. W. F. McNagny, of Columbia City, in a powerful and most interesting speech. It is always a difficult thing to follow a noted man like Governor Gray. But Mr. McNagny did it with a grace and ease not readily surpassed. We have cause as democrats and as citizens of the state, to feel proud of both speakers, and wish that every democrat and every republican in the county could have been present to hear them.

No Change of Front.

The Dispatch is informed that the commissioners have not "changed front" on the bridge question. Of course it knows they have not, but it would like to catch the Foundry votes "just on the eve of an election." But the Foundry people know more about the matter than the Dispatch gives them credit, and in fact, are not the kind of men to be influenced in any such way. The facts are, the commissioners are fully committed to the plan of building iron bridges only. But as the means now available for this purpose have been exhausted and it was an absolute necessity to have these two bridges in Concord township put up this fall, they made them of wood. If the people could have got along till next year, iron would have been used. But the bridges are not large ones. The two together, as now being put up, will cost about $600. If made of iron, they would cost about $2,000. Then the Dispatch has some rambling talk about bridges being cheaper etc. This is true not only of iron bridges but of wooden ones, also, though in the longer bridges, iron will be the kind, hereafter. Why try to deceive the people by saying the Ninth street bridge is longer than the old one, for the editor has seen it all the while it was building, and knows it is exactly the same length But this is a small matter, except as it shows a disposition to keep speaking offensively of Patterson and Hoffelder. We call attention to the honorable treatment the COURIER has given to Mr. Platter. Does anyone believe these three men are incompetent or dishonest? If one is, all are, for all are working in substantially the same channel. We believe they are all honest. If the Dispatch wished to show which party could manage the county to best advantage, then why not state that two years ago, with the board republican by two to one, the county increased its debt by $10,700, and that last year, with a democratic board, there was no increase, but that about $400 was paid off, making a difference of about $11,100 in favor of the democrats in one year. And that is about the way other republican county officers have panned out. Moral: Vote for democrats to manage your affairs.

Suicide at Waterloo.

Last Thursday morning it was discovered that a Mrs. Stevens, who had been stopping at Locke's hotel for a few days, was dead in her room. Dr. Wood, of Garrett, was sent for, and from all that could be learned, and the circumstances as far as known, and from a letter she had written to her mother in Danville, Ill., he decided it was a case of suicide. She seems to have had much trouble, and went to the unseen world, rather than live to suffer on. Saturday her remains were sent to Danville, where her father is very low with consumption.

Her brother came for her. It appears that she came here to find her husband, Mr. Stevens, who is an engineer on the construction train, and who has been passing himself off for a single man for some time, and going a good deal in society, where he was well received. It appears he now denies that he was married to the unfortunate woman, and refused to see her, and it is supposed that under the weight of these troubles, she took her life. She was already in poor health. The hotel people had noticed she did not appear at breakfast, and going to her room found her lying across the bed, having apparently been dead some hours. She was well dressed and appeared to be a person of the highest respectability. She had evidently taken poison.

The Gray Club.

The Gray Club of Auburn held a meeting Friday evening pursuant to call of its officers, and at 7:30 met in their old quarters in Ensley Hall. They were called to order by the president Mr. Moody, who made a short speech, calling attention to the permanent character of the organization, its purposes, etc, ending by the announcement, that as his term of office had expired, it would now be in order to elect new officers for the coming two years. W. H. Dills was nominated for president and unanimously elected. Supt. Merica and L. B. Fretz were named for secretary. Mr. Merica in a brief speech declined, saying he preferred to see a young man occupy this place. Mr. Fretz was then unanimously elected secretary of the Club. The Club then proceeded to select committees to serve at the Gray meeting on Saturday. When all needed measures had been taken the club adjourned. Though but short notice had been given, about thirty were present.

October Garden Sass.

Who, even the "oldest inhabitant," has known such a wonderful supply of late garden vegetables? Here we are in the second week of October, with abundance of green corn, string beans and cucumbers for table use. Since the late rains following the long dry season everything has taken on new life. Many of the things named, did not bear any fruit till the dry weather was over. The beans, for example did not blossom till recently, but now, such a wonderful growth of fine, crisp pods, is seldom seen. The late flowers, such as asters and nasturtiums, were never finer. But these, and the sweet peas, did not show more than a very fine scattering flowers, till the rain brought them out. And now that the frost has spared many gardens, everything looks like spring. Even radishes are booming. And the weeds,—well they are all right, too. But it does seem strange to find our tables loaded with the things we usually have in the spring and early summer. But they are welcome, even now, and our people are enjoying them.

Held Up.

Valentine Seitz, an old soldier, was held up by pickpockets as he got off the Air Line train at Waterloo last Wednesday, on his way home from the Kendallville fair. There was quite a crowd, and he felt the thief grab his pocketbook which contained $40 and some notes. A struggle took place, and Mr. S. would have landed his man, but a pal helped the thief to tear away The pocketbook dropped in the struggle, and was picked up and returned to Mr. Seitz. He thinks the same chap was sent to jail at Albion Friday, for robbing a lady at the same fair.

JOHN H. ZERR.

Memory of Mary Edna Shutt.

Mary Edna Shutt, daughter of A. J. and Lenora Shutt, was born July 27, 1890, died Sept. 25, 1890, aged 2 months and 1 day. Another home made sad and lonely. The funeral services were held at Hopewell church, Sept. 27, at 11 a. m. Rev. A. E. Gaff, of Hicksville, officiating, after which the remains were interred at the Spencerville cemetery.

There's a pair of little hands,
Laid to rest for evermore;
There's two pearly, dimpled cheeks,
Whose rich blossoning is o'er;
Death hath sealed two little eyes;
That will no more smile or weep;
Tiny windows of the soul;
Little Edna's gone to sleep.

There's another bud removed;
Ere it felt the blight of sin;
Through the door the angel made
Darling Edna has passed in.
Far beyond the azure skies,
Where the tiny star eyes peep,
From all earth's sad doubts and fears,
Little Edna's gone to sleep.

She will wake in the fairer lands,
Where the angel voices sing,
There the flow'rets shall expand,
She hath reached the golden shore.
Through the river, cold and deep,
Angels bore her safely there,
Little Edna's gone to sleep.

Waterloo Fair.

The fair begins with bright prospects. By Saturday an unusual number of entries had been made in nearly all classes. In horses, it was soon overcrowded and many stables had to be provided over in town. On Tuesday afternoon, ye editor visited the grounds and found everything ready to run. The floral hall under the supervision of Mrs. B. F. Kennedy and Mrs. Will Francis, was rapidly filling up with fine work on lovely fabrics. Fred Willis and George Kennedy were assisting them. There was not much machinery at that hour, though men were putting a Zimmerman wind engine, and others were fixing up harvest machines. G. D. Dennison had the Agricultural hall in fine shape, a tempting display of fruits on one side end of canned goods on the other. The latter was in charge of his granddaughter. And such a display of farm vegetables has not been seen elsewhere this year. Such monster pumpkins and squashes, are not often seen. Some that Joseph Crays raised had grown on vines 84 feet long. Shaffer & Berg had some of their fine wagons. Eckhart Carriage Co., had a good display of their buggies, the same that we have before described and of course they are good ones. A fine display was made by A. Watson, the veteran mechanic of Butler. His work is all hand made and made at home. He had a wagon, road cart, an open buggy and a covered carriage, all very fine. In the hall he displayed fine iron work and horse shoes, made by Will Hallam an Auburn boy who now works for him. Shaffer & Berg have also, iron work and horse shoes, making in all a good display in this line. In this hall, are the two floral displays of Dickinson of Waterloo and Flemming of Auburn, both good. Waterloo schools have a valuable exhibit of school work. Speer & Co. have a lovely exhibit of glassware and crockery. Mutzfelt Bros. of Butler, have the finest show of harness and similar goods ever seen in an ordinary fair, all made more attractive by a beautiful horse in papier mache. They deserve great credit. Davis & Husselman have fine organs and pianos. Wilson, the boot and shoe man, shows a fine line of these, and of his creamery goods. In stock Showalter & Ianson of Butler, have fine Clydesdales and two ponies from Shetland, which they brought over on their recent trip. They are curiosities. J. G. Robbins of Decatur county, has a fine lot of short horns, some of which are sold to parties at Pleasant Lake. Mr. Roscoe of Noble county, has fine Aberdeen cattle. Moore & Son have exhibits of hogs, short horns and horses. Banks & Cleaser of Laporte county have a lot of fine imported horses, and there are hundreds of fine chickens and other poultry.

He Puts 'Em Right.

MR EDITOR:

Allow me a short space to again correct statements in the Dispatch in regard to myself. It did not absolutely lie, but it wants its readers to believe a lie, in other words the Dispatch lies by inference. It says my bill of three dollars was for swearing in policemen during fair and old settlers' day, and that none were sworen in old settlers' day. The bill was for swearing in those two days and on the 4th of July—giving the number—except for old settlers' day the number was blank. And I could have charged $1.50 more even for the men sworn in for fair week. The Dispatch even incorrectly copies my proposal to the board. While it makes but little difference it shows a disregard as to facts and that which it publishes. The Dispatch copies as follows: "The other services I perform further than advising officers to be paid, etc" It should read: "All other services I perform for the town or any officer to be paid, etc."

Again it says after speaking of allowances to Mr. Moody and myself last year, (See trustee's journal pages 114 and 122, Subject Annexation of Suburbs, and pages 110 and 112, Subject Wagoner Ditch.) "For his work on the ditch Mr. Dills filed a bill for and will get $100." As stated and published, and as it is understood by all, is a downright lie. I never filed a bill for services in the Wagoner ditch, with or against the board—never will; never have received a cent from it for such services, and never will. The editor wants the lie to be believed. He don't tell the truth about it, and does not want his readers to know the truth. But it is only on a par with what it said about the democratic party proposing to have the lands and lots taxed to pay all expenses of the county and state government, while the factories, shops and stores pay no taxes, and also with what it said about Judge McClellan's income tax bill, that it was to make pensions odious.

Auburn has been made acquainted with a new feature in the line of incandescent lights. Quite a number of our citizens have adopted their use in the home. Thus the "little illuminators" are rapidly coming into general favor. Not only is the electric light very valuable in the store and workshop, but it comes in for a fair compliment in the parlor, drawing room and kitchen. If some of the forefathers who lived in the sixteenth century could gaze upon the discoveries and improvements of the ninteenth century, they would certainly be astonished. At least they would be amused at the "flicker" made by the electric dymano.

Taxpaying time ends Nov. 3.

Mrs. A. O. Espy, of Duvall's Bluff, Ark., has been here a few days visiting relatives.

Ladies be sure and see the pretty hats and bonnets on Tuesday and Wednesday next at Harter's.

The late appointed minister of this circuit, Rev. H. G. Stringfellow, expects to deliver his first discourse at the Church of God, Sunday evening, Oct. 12. A cordial invitation is extended to all, to attend.

A. J. Baxter, of Butler, and David Carruth, of Auburn, are the two election commissioners who, under the new law, will assist County Clerk Al. Bishop in conducting things connected with the coming election.

The Press lays much of the criminal record to whisky and is probably correct. But the Press should not complain while its vice-president of the United States permits a bar to be run in his building and with his knowledge.

We see by the Canton, Ohio News—Democrat, that Frank Elson, son of Dr. Richard Elson, has gone to Philadelphia to attend Dental College there. Frank was always a steady boy, and now as a young man, we are glad to see he is bound to go to the top of his profession.

Edward Freygang, the newly arrived harness maker is now established in the room in the new Sheets block south of the jail, and ready to wait on his patrons. He comes recommended as a first-class workman, and our people should give him a call when needing anything in that line.

In observing the different kinds of business that is being done in this city, our eyes come in contact with the grocery and provision establishment of H. J. Mossey, successor to John Kruger. He is doing a good business, and customers get the benefit of the best the market affords in his line.

Those rude boys—some too large to be called boys—who stand around the church doors during service and create disturbance, are notified that they will figure before the grand jury, if they do not stop it. They should go into church and behave, or go home. Their parents are usually in church, and no doubt suppose these interesting young chaps are at home.

B. F. Stahl, the south side barber, is fully awake to the demands of modern times. He has brought into use three of the beautiful incandescents, which illuminate his shop with a brilliancy excelled only by the golden light of the sun. This is done by two, while he has one neatly arranged over the front door, intended to guide customers to his place of business. Get your eye on the light and you cannot miss the "shaving Stahl."

L. Spangler, of Auburn Junction, has improved his property on South Main street, by building an addition to the house which formerly occupied the lot. It has been treated to a neat coat of paint, and presents quite a citified appearance. Auburn has been in the background long enough, and is beginning to pull out of the old rut into the smooth, solid road that leads to good taste and prosperity.

Taxpaying time has come, and we must all come up to the captian's office and settle. And while about it, we feel it would be a good chance for all who are behind on the Courier to put in a dollar and a half on the "Old Reliable" that comes to them each week. We know our subscribers can save themselves a little extra trouble by doing this and do us a good turn at the same time. We are glad to see that they are generally doing this.

Prof. Nottingham has succeeded in organizing a very large class in penmanship now numbering over seventy. In glancing our the roll we see the names of some of our leading business men, clerks and bookkeepers are in this class. "Penmanship schools" and "night schools" generally speaking have not been a success on account of discipline. They were patronized by parties who went to have some place to go and to have a "good time." Prof. Nottingham's school which was conducted here last January, was a success in improvement as well as systematic good management. The school discipline is, you can learn to be a good business penman if you attend his school. A man or woman is never too old to improve in penmanship, or at least not to old to have a term now and then help to keep them in practice.

Among the enterprises which have been brought to our notice lately, is the present appearance of Woodlawn cemetery. Though it has been spoken of quite frequently by the newspapers here, yet with all that has been said concerning this cemetery, there is still room for saying just as much more about it as has been said. A view of it at this time will convince anyone that Mr. Shaffer has gone into this thing with a view to public benifit. And while its completion is requiring many months of steady, systematic work and a vast expenditure of money, it will accommodate a long felt want of the people, and realize a good income on the investment. A position on the south circle gives an excellent view of the whole cemetery and surrounding country. He has two men working there, and it will perhaps require years of good care to get it to the highest grade of perfection, but we venture to say that it will be a credit to any town.

Jubilee singers at the Opera House Saturday evening.

Gray Club meets to-morrow evening. Good speeches. All come.

Dr. Nedry, who has been quite sick, is able to be on the streets again.

All the popular minstrel songs, and new ones at the Opera House Saturday evening.

Goodman's Tennesse Jubilee singers will be at the Opera House Saturday evening of this week. Don't forget it.

Among those at the reunion last week, was Dr. James Squires of Churubusco. He is evidently prospering in his business.

Judge McBride has been here this week, attending court. He still has a good deal to do here, though his home is in Elkhart.

One floor holds all our stock—which is guaranteed to have better bargains than can be found in town. Call on Wilson the shoeman. 40-41

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Brown were at Spencerville Tuesday to attend the fifteenth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Butler, prominent citizens of that place.

Chairman Ab. Kelley has called a meeting of democrats for Saturday, of this week, at 10, a. m., in Auburn. All who have the good of the party at heart are invited.

J. H. Hornberger a half mile west of Summit, has a big sale of personal property on Saturday, Oct. 18. There is stock, household and farm implements, carpenters outfit and many other things.

The Press in mentioning the democratic speeches, adds "The republicans will quietly take in the votes just the same." Query. Does the Press know as much where the boodle comes from, as it did in 1888?

Trentman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

Remember the Tall Sycamore of the Wabash, Senator D. W. Voorhees will be at Butler Oct, 15. He speaks at 1 p. m. There will also be an evening meeting, which will be adressed by Judge McClellan and Hon. W. H. McNagny. Let everybody come.

The famous cornet band of ladies, known all over the country, as the "Fenton Band" will play this week for the Waterloo fair. The members of the band all ride on bicycles, and form a novel procession while marching and playing.

Joseph Goodwin, who has been so active in the lumber and wood trade here, at Waterloo and at Garrett has moved to Pleasant Lake, where he is building a mill. He is always at work and has been successful to a gratfying degree. He has left a fine stock of stove wood here, in charge of Bent Shilling.

The C. L. S. C. will meet on next Saturday at the home of Miss Alda Barclay. Program, Outline History of England, Mrs. Moody; Our English, Miss Ramsey; An Early Briton, Mrs. Schaab; Studies in Astronomy, Mrs. Clifton; select reading by Mrs. Baldwin; Music by Miss Barclay.

Mr. Penfield is lying at his home, seriously sick. He had been quite sick for a week or more, and then got better, and was one day up at the office. It is probable this was too great an exertion. At all events, he took worse and has been a very sick man ever since. At present, we believe he is a little better and will probably recover.

Miles' Nerve & Liver Pills. Act on a new principle—regulating the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new discovery. Dr. Miles' Pills speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles, constipation. Unequaled for men, women, and children. Smallest, mildest, surest! 30 doses, 25 cts. Samples free at F. E. Davenport's.

Augustus Thomas returned from Lacota, Mich., last Wednesday and will again become a citizen of old DeKalb, which he says is good enough for him. Glad to see the boys back. He reports however, that the others up there are doing well, which we are also pleased to hear. If DeKalb people, will move away, we want to have them prosper.

Mr. and Mrs. McCann of Ligonier, drove over here Sunday. Mrs. M. is a sister to Mrs. Dr. Buchtel and will remain here a while on a visit. Mrs. Buchtel's mother, Mrs. Dowell, of the same place, and Mrs. Buchtel's cousin, Miss Nora Swan, who resides at Hicksville have been visiting the Doctor's family. Mr. Ed. Cook of the firm of Kerr Brothers & Cook of the Hicksville Handle Works, was also a guest of the Doctor's as well as Dr, W. E. Newton of Ligonier and Miss Luella Walling of Kendallville. All are old friends.

The Dispatch very properly quotes an article published in the Courier in the campaign of 1886. But it forgets to call attention to the character of the men its party offered to the voters at that time, and in fact gulled them into electing them. It would have been better for the county, and for the republicans, even, if the people had taken the Courier's advice. They know it, now. But as to the ticket this fall, the democrats are offering them a different quality of men, a very different sort. Now, we offer them as a candidate the highest officer on this entire division of the B. & O., and the one most respected and trusted. That is the kind of railroad men that are utterly above comparison with those the republicans ran in 1886, and to whom our article at that time alluded.

Voorhees at Butler, Oct. 15.

Dr. Fruth at the Swineford House Oct. 21.

See G. H. Yesbera when in need of clothes.

Hugh Culbertson moved to his new residence this week.

W. E. Rush and wife visited at Concord Saturday and Sunday.

Ernest Sheets' sister from Ft. Wayne, came this week to make them a visit.

The best and cheapest place in Auburn to buy neck wear is at G. H. Yesbera's.

Mrs. Hosack, a daughter of F. Picker, now residing at Busco, visited here over Sunday.

Spangle, the jeweler, has located permanently in the Salyer room north of the court house.

Fin Gibson, we are told, will occupy the bakery again at an early day, Mr. Weyer moving to Chicago.

Don't be mislead but go where you know you can be suited. G. H. Yesbera has the goods and always tries to please.

Capt. Scott, father of T. P. Scott, was here at the reunion last week. He resides over in Ohio.

Miss Lamboley, who has been trimming in the wholesale house at Ft. Wayne is helping Miss Freeman St. Joe this season.

Clara Freeman St. Joe, has as fine a lot of trimmed goods as has ever been displayed in St. Joe. Call and examine her goods before you buy.

Parties are here negotiating for the new Nicky & Gandy room when finished. They have a large store of millinery and fancy goods at North Manchester, but prefer to locate in Auburn.

The ladies of the south section will give a social in the lecture room of the M. E. church Wednesdry eve, Oct. 15, with chicken, cabbage, potatoes, cake, sauce, etc., as their bill of fare. Mite 15 cents.

Goodman's Original Tennesse Minstrels will be at the Opera House Saturday evening, Oct. 11, They have no superiors, and all lovers of fine singing will be glad to hear them. Tickets at Robbins & McCord's.

Judge Powers is not only a lover of justice, but of fine fruit also. He had a display at the Angola fair, and our good wife wishes to thank him for some very fragrant and tempting quinces, an article not very common down this way.

Rev. Dr. Britton, of Chicago preached two very able and eloquent sermons at the Presbyterian church Sunday. It was indeed a treat to all who attended. He returned on Monday to his home in Chicago going by the way of Waterloo, so as to make a stop at Goshen.

Lockwood & Clark had the Garrett band march and play for them when they started for Waterloo yesterday to show at the fair. They had a fine procession of beautiful horses. The band had a four horse team decorated with red, white and blue, with Joe Pfeffrl to drive.

The L. L. C. will meet with Mrs. Barns this week. Subject, The Thirty Years War, Mrs. Tillie McCord, leader. Debate, Resolved, that there is too much aristocracy in our churches, Miss McTighe, Mrs. Rose, Mrs. Barns and Mrs. Lewis. Quotations from the bible, by the class.

The latest instructions on the new election law are found in the Courier of Oct. 2, last week's issue. We omitted to call attention to it at the time. It is especially valuable because it was prepared by a committee of lawyers selected by the committees of both parties, and is therefore reliable. Read it if the paper is still to be had, and keep it for reference.

"Editor Smith of the Pierceton Record" is getting a good deal of sensational advertising from all the papers in this section of the state. He is represented as having fallen through strong drink into the Kosciusko county poor house. Whatever his habits or associations may be, it is still a fact that he has been some weeks in Auburn working at typesetting and is still here. Sensational articles should be scrutinized carefully.

The Gray Club will meet at Ensley's Hall to-morrow, Friday evening, at 7:30. There will be an address by W. F. Brickman, Esq., of this place, which will be interesting and instructive. Let there be a full turnout. It is also arranged to have a speeker on Tuesday evening of next week. Oct 14 Tuesday will be the regular evening for meeting. hereafter, for each week till election. Mr. Dills, the president of the club has secured the hall till then.

S. B. Mottinger, now of Jennings, Mich., has been back a few days visiting the old neighbors about Summit. He is looking well and says he and his are prospering in their new home. He is now working as a skilled saw filer in one of the great band sawmills up there. He reports a big day's work with one band saw, which cut over 84,000 of lumber in one day of ten hours. It seems like a big story but Mr. Mottinger is a man whose word cannot be questioned.

C. J. Porter, the Waterloo optician will be in Auburn at the Hollister House, the first Tuesday in each month, to meet all who desire his service in fitting defective eyes with the proper glasses, and for all the work in his line. Long experience should be valuable in this case above all others. The eyes should not be trifled with. An eye once lost can never be restored and great care should be taken to preserve them. Mr. Porter stands at the head of his profession in this special department. Don't trust your eyes to inexperienced or careless men, but call on him when here and get glasses such as you need. Don't forget the dates, the first Tuesday of each month. 42

Little Bessie Wallace had a nice birthday party, inviting about a dozen little friends, Tuesday evening. They had a nice supper, and a splendid time showing themselves to be regular little ladies. Mrs Wallace showed excellent taste in managing the affair and made herself popular with all the little misses.

The 129th Reunion.

We do not believe a more pleasant and in every way successful regimental reunion has been held in Auburn, than that of the 129th last Thursday. An unusual number attended, and all were well cared for. Auburn, with her usual liberality, had responded nobly to the call for entertainment, and the regiment and its guests, numbering several hundred in all, sat down, at noon and at evening to an abundant and tempting meal. The ladies of the Relief Corps and their friends in town deserve great credit for the success of this part of the reunion. At the evening meeting Col. Zollinger presided. Speeches were made by Col. Briant of the Old 88th and by J. N. Wilson of this place. Several young ladies recited appropriate pieces and there were a number of songs by the Arion Quartet. People never tire of hearing them sing. Mr. Widney, Mr. Fisher, Mr. Quince and Mr. Arnold have few equals in this line. The Little German band played a few pieces, and were heartily cheered. Altogether the reunion was a grand success.

Blocks-of-Ten Now.

We have it from a reliable source that Michener, the chairman of the republican state committee is reviving the blocks-of-five methods of Dudley. A well known citizen of Waterloo, a republican by the way, and an honest man, has received one of Michener's circulars. It tells him that a man like him can do a great deal of good to the grand old party of moral ideas, in the way of managing blocks-of-ten voters, etc. He, Michener, has documents which he wishes to send out to trusted men, who can arrange voters into blocks of ten men each with a captain to take charge of them. The gentleman being a law-abiding citizen, and knowing that the road to the state prison is dangerously near all election corrupters, since the new law went into effect, and not wishing in any case to do dirty work, handed the paper over to some other man. It is about time these dirty games began. But it would be well for these ardent republicans to remember the Arford case, and think how easy is the road to Michigan City.

Bitten by a Rattler.

Judge McBride's second son, Bertie, had a rather exciting and dangerous adventure last week. He was out hunting, and in attempting to catch a rare species of bird, he put his hand on a rattlesnake and was bitten. As it did not hurt so very much, he stopped long enough to shoot the snake. Then he cut out the wound, partly, and sucked the poison. Then he cut a piece from the snake and held on the wound, having read that this was the best plan. It appeared to draw out the poison. Then he poured powder on the wound and fired it, to burn or cauterize it. All these plans helped to get out the poison, and he went home all right, a little sick, but not seriously. He keeps the snake in alcohol, but he will likely remember the adventure, anyhow.

One at Night.

One dose of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup taken in the evening before retiring will give you a good night's rest. It will cure your cough quicker than any other, and it is pleasant to take. If you have never tried this remedy, ask your druggist for Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup the next time you buy. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

Poultry.

10.000 pounds of poultry wanted at once at the Palace meat market. I am now prepared to buy all kinds of poultry for which I will pay the highest market price during the season.

SEVEN out of every eight loaves of bread eaten in London are made from foreign wheat.

IN Finland, the people use a curious stone for a barometer. When foul weather is approaching, it turns black, or blackish gray; in fine weather, or when clear weather is coming, it turns almost white. This stone is quite common in Northern Finland, and is called "Ilmakiur."

A LARGE vein of pure white sand, suitable for making glass, has been found near Pittsburg, Pa. The discovery will save the glass manufacturers of that city thousands of dollars annually, as they have hitherto been obliged to send across the Alleghany Mountains for their sand.

THE present Harpers are grandsons of the original printers, but they retain their adherence to the craft. They are still printers, and each one of the family that intends entering the firm must first learn the trade. He starts as an apprentice, and is not admitted to the firm until he has mastered the craft.

A PROMINENT Denver man was married last week with great eclat, but he is already unhappy. He is unhappy because an Associated Press dispatch which announced that he had married a handsome Colorado woman was mixed in transmission, and he now his the reputation of having married a handsome colored woman.

IT is proposed to put the newspaper reporters of Brussels, Belgium, in uniform, and a semi-military costume, with a handsome frogged tunic, is suggested as the proper thing. The desirability of the uniform was first made apparent at the Stanley reception, when they were hustled about like ordinary mortals because their identity was not known.

A MAN who has acquired a great fame in other walks of life can generally make money by "literary work," but the poor fellow who drives away at literature is lucky if he acquires fame enough to make him a drawing card for the lecture stage. It is not usually what a man writes that is well paid for; it is the signature that is valuable or worthless, as the case may be.

BY far the most expensive coffee brought to this country comes from Blue Mountain, Jamaica. The whole product of the region is small and only a few thousand bags reach New York. It is usually bought by Delmonico at a very high figure. At the same time the Delmonico coffee does not contribute to the restaurant's reputation. Quite as good coffee is served at half a dozen less famous places.

THERE are in St. Petersburg 738 benevolent institutions, upon which the city spends yearly 7,600,000 roubles. The maintenance of hospitals and infirmaries costs 2,500,000; poor houses, 1,150,000; asylums for children, 2,224,200; schools, 1,137,000; kitchens for the poor, 47,000; workhouses, 12,000, and lodging-houses, 7,000 roubles. The sinking funds of all these institutions, besides their respective possessions in real estate, are estimated at 60,500,000 roubles.

"WHEREVER you find petroleum you won't find mosquitoes," said an oil country man. "The infernal insects can't stand the smell of the grease, and wherever oil wells are plenty there is no call for mosquito bars. Over and over again I've seen mosquitoes leave a new oil field as soon as a well flows. Whether petroleum applied to the face and hands will drive off mosquitoes I don't know. But one of the few compensations of the driller is that he's seldom troubled by mosquitoes."

THE memory of Grant has just acquired a notable monument in Boston. There is a battery of eight-inch guns on Somerville Heights, used in the civil war. They now mark the spot where Israel Putman threw up earthworks immediately after or on the night of the battle of Bunker Hill, and which Washington held and used until the enemy was driven from Boston harbor. This battery, in working order, has been named by General Veazey, the commander in-chief of the Grand Army, "The Grant Memorial Battery."

THE Japanese books begin where ours end, the word finis coming where we put the title page; the foot-notes are printed at the top of the page, and the reader puts in his marker at the bottom. In Japan men make themselves merry with wine before dinner, not after the sweets precede the roast. A Japanese mounts his horse on the right side instead of the left. The mane of the animal hangs on the left side instead of the right; the horse stands in the stable with his head where his tail ought to be. Boats are hauled upon the beaches stern first. The Japanese saw and plane toward them instead of away from them. Keys turn in instead of out. The best rooms of a Japanese house are always at the back, and architects, when building, begin with the roof.

BANK of England notes are made from new white linen cuttings—never from anything that has been worn. So carefully is the paper prepared that even the number of dips into the pulp made by each workman is registered on a dial by machinery, and the sheets are counted and booked to each person through whose hands they pass. They are made at Laverstoke, on the River Whit, in Hampshire, by a family named Portal, descending from a French Huguenot refugee, and have been made by the same family for more than one hundred and fifty years. About 1860 a large quantity of the paper was stolen by one of the employes, which caused the bank a great deal of trouble, as the printing is a comparative easy matter, the great difficulty with forgers being to get the paper. They are printed within the bank building, there being an elaborate arrangement for making them so that each note of the same denomination shall differ in some particular from the others.

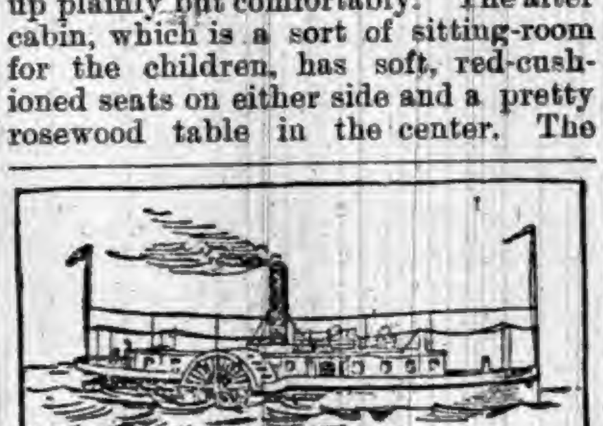
A SURGEON on a Cunard liner has been nothing the peculiarities in cigar lighting practiced by men of different nationalities. He declares that there is no better place in the world to note these little oddities than in the smoking-room of an ocean steamer, adding: "Now, take a Frenchman. If a party are sitting down for a smoke, he will scratch a match, wait till the brimstone has exhausted itself, and with a smile and gracious bow, will pass it to his nearest neighbor before lighting his own weed. The German, after lighting his own cigar, will then offer the match to his friend. But the oddest character of all is the Englishman. His weed ready for use, he will strike his match, light his cigar, and without a thought of the others, will deliberately drop the lucifer into the nearest receptacle."

SNAILS are largely consumed by consumptives in England who can afford them. Of course they are imported. The best come from the vineyards of France, and for this reason they are considered especially fine. They are certainly a luxury, for a tin of snails cost 4s. 6d. Frogs' hind legs are eaten in larger quantities than is generally supposed. You can't tell them from a bit of chicken; and no doubt a good many people who are not carful about consulting the menu at swell dinners eat them as such. Another novelty for epicures is crayfish tails. They are little things like shrimps, and are used for flavoring all sorts of dishes, soups, sauces and vegetables. Boned larks in aspic jelly sound well. The young bachelors who lounge through life in chambers off Picadilly go in for these potted things. They are handy.

IN THE LAP OF LUXURY.

A Steel Steamboat for Millionaire Vanderbilt's Children.

A STEAMBOAT has been built by Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt for his children. The boat is made with an iron frame and steel plating. It is sixty-five feet long and draws two feet of water. The boat is to be owned, and controlled exclusively by the children of the millionaire, assisted by a picked crew of four. The little craft is a side-wheeler. The engines eat up two tons of coal a day and will propel the boat about eight miles an hour. It is fitted up plainly but comfortably. The after cabin, which is a sort of sitting-room for the children, has soft, red-cushioned seats on either side and a pretty rosewood table in the center. The forward cabin is much the same as the other as regards seats and windows, but the table here is longer than the other one and is to be utilized for a dining-table. The boat is painted white, and the trimmings both on deck and below are of hard woods, principally mahogany. The metal fittings are of highly polished brass. Forward of the dining cabin is a little room dignified with the name of forecastle. Folding doors shut this off entirely when it is desirable. This little nook is intended for such of the crew as are not on duty and wish to get indoors.



THE VANDERBILT CHILDREN'S BOAT.

Wooden-Legged Animals.

About thirty years ago a humane Vermonter, by the name of Tewksbury, took pity on a small dog of uncertain breed, one of whose fore-legs had been crushed by the wheel of a wagon. Being something of a surgeon, Mr. Tewksbury carefully amputated the crushed leg, and, when the wound was healed, provided the dog with a light wooden leg.

In the course of time the dog, which was a very intelliget animal, became aware that he could rest his weight upon his wooden leg, and use it for all ordinary purposes, and that, while it was not as good as either of the other three, it was better than no leg.

In walking or trotting, Mr. Tewksbury's dog always used his wooden leg. If, however, he had occasion to do any leaping or fast running, or to show in any way especial nimbleness, with which the stiffness of his artificial limb would have interfered, he held up the wooden leg gracefully, and, leaped or ran on the other three.

The dog lived to a good old age, respected and admired by all who knew him. His grateful affection for mankind in general, and for Mr. Tewsbury in particular, was the most marked feature of his character.

As his fame never spread abroad, it is quite certain that his case did not suggest the similar kindness toward a cat on the part of a gentleman named McGrath, of Woodford, Kentucky, an account of which is given in a Louisville paper,

In the case of Mr. McGrath's cat, however, the providing of a wooden leg was not to repair an accident, but to supply a natural deficiency. The cat, it is said, was born with only three legs. Instead of drowning it forthwith, as some men would have done, Mr. McGrath carefully nourished the three-legged kitten, and when it was weaned, he made and skilfully applied a light but durable wooden leg where the fourth leg was missing.

Little by little the wooden limb adjusted itself to the cat's parts, and the cat in its turn became accustomed to the leg. The Kentucky newspaper which acquaints the world with this curious feat of surgery asserts that the animal uses its artificial leg with the same ease and dexterity with which it uses the other three. It is also asserted—and this is the most remarkable part of the story, almost too remarkable to be believed—that when this cat catches a mouse, it does not tear it with its claws and teeth, as other cats do, but strikes it a sharp blow with its wooden leg, killing its prey on the spot.

LIKE KILKENNY CATS.

TRUSTS AND COMBINATIONS DEVOUR EACH OTHER.

The Oilcloth Men Want to Renew Their "Agreement"—Ground Down by Other Trusts They Turn Upon the Consumer—Trusts as the Outcome of Protection.

Protected manufacturers make common cause with each other, and stand shoulder to shoulder before the Ways and Means Committee at Washington, fighting for their common welfare. This is not the case in their business relations, in their daily course of trade. In the business world one trust feeds upon another, just as the big fishes in the sea feed upon the small fish.

An example of this is seen in the Linseed Oil Trust and the combination of oil-cloth manufacturers. During the hearings before the McKinley committee last winter, Mr. G. W. Blabon, of Philadelphia, a representative of the oil-cloth and linoleum manufacturers, made this statement: "Linseed oil has advanced largely within the last eighteen months, and white lead also. That is the result of combinations and trusts." Also: "We got along very nicely, however, and made a fair return in profits until this late advance in the prices of oil and white lead."

Here Mr. McMillin, of Tennessee, asked; "Was that advance caused by trusts?" to which Mr. Blabon answered, "Yes; trusts that have come to stay."

This looked very bad; it looked as if the linseed oil trust and the white lead trust were preying upon a number of firms which were struggling each separately with its hard conditions. It now turns out that this was not the case at all. Those who were being preyed upon were also in a combination to prey upon their consumers.

Not long ago a prominent Philadelphia paper printed the following piece of news: "Since the agreement among the oil-cloth manufacturers for the regulation of trade and prices came to an end some time ago, it is said that there has been very active fighting for business on all hands, with heavy cutting of rates. To stop this practice prominent manufacturers have recently been considering numerous expedients, and it has been suggested that an oil-cloth clearing-house be formed. The idea is that this body should be controlled by a board of directors, appointed by the manufacturers, who would receive and concentrate information on the state of trade, and fix prices with the consent of a majority of manufacturers." This paper went on to state that prominent manufacturers, among whom was this same G. W. Blabon, were "anxious to adopt some plan of harmony." Their old agreement for the "regulation of trade and prices," which was in force at the very time when Blabon was before the committee, had evidently proved more profitable to them than the cutting of rates; and hence the determination to have some more "harmony."

Mr. Blabon's tale before the McKinley committee was calculated to excite pity. Between the upper and the nether millstones of two grinding monopolies like the Linseed Oil Trust and the White Lead Trust he had a claim upon the sympathies of all those who take the side of the weak and oppressed against the strong ones who would ride rough-shod over them. But now that it is seen that Mr. Blabon himself was adopting the same trust methods to get higher prices out of the consumers, who can waste sympathy on him?

But it is not alone in trusts that this system of greed reigns in trade. Trusts protect themselves; and in order to do this the individual members of a trust are loyal to one another, to some extent at least, and they stick together so far as pressure can be brought to bear to enforce their regulations. We have seen how trusts treat each other, and if we are to believe the protectionist papers, the same system of general hoggishness prevails as between individuals in trade.

On this subject the New York Journal of Commerce says: "In this country, above all others, the greed that is envious of another's success will insist upon sharing in the spoils." And from this fact it draws the conclusion that American manufacturers have suffered more from home than from foreign competition. The difference between American and foreign manufacturers is thus stated: "In some foreign lands a man may discover a good thing, out of which he is reaping a very large profit, and if he is quiet and unobtrusive may keep the business to himself for a long time, until he has acquired an ample fortune. But in this country the people are like the greedy birds, and if one picks up more than can be swallowed at once the rest of the flock seek to force a division of the mouthful."

Commenting upon this the New York Dry Goods Economist, another protectionist paper, says; "We have more than once commented upon this same melancholy fact. Where ideas are not protected by patents and sometimes where they are, outside rivals invade a neighbor's territory without compunction, and the result very often is a cut-throat competition which is fatal to both. If a man develops a bright idea he should have the benefit of it. There should be a courtesy in the trade that supplemented statutory limitations."

All will conceive the point made here, that manufacturers have a right to their inventions and improvements. A habit of infringing on the rights of others is, however, only a natural outgrowth of our protective tariff system. Our manufacturers have been thoroughly schooled in the protectionist notion that they have a right to prey upon people in other forms of industry. What wonder, then, that they turn around and prey upon each other? What wonder, too, that this system of preying upon each other should go on until they call a halt and "pool their issues?" In other words, they form a trust, agreeing to prey upon each other no more, but to unite in a common scheme for preying upon the consumer alone.

Is not this the natural outcome of protection? The Government gives some men the right to sell to others at an artificially increased price. This increased price becomes like swill in the trough—the hungry pigs crowd around it and the biggest and strongest fight the weakest ones away, then fight among themselves till peace becomes a necessity again in order to satisfy their hunger.

That sharp rivalry of trade which we call competition is necessary; competition is the life of trade. Protection, however, tends directly to defeat competition. True, it may stimulate competition for a time; but the false notion that it engenders, that the protected individuals have a moral right to the home market with exemption from competition, and have a moral right thus to charge the community increased prices for their products, leads in the end to the defeat of the very ends that the protectionists claim to have in view. Protection ends logically in trusts, for self interest is the law which rules in trade and must rule. The function of government is simply to keep this self-interest within the bounds of justice—that is, to prevent one man from pushing the pursuit of his self-interest to the point where the next man's just and lawful interest is infringed upon. But if the Government itself takes a hand for the very opposite purpose of giving some men the right to do just that thing, it is the most natural thing in the world that such men should combine and stifle competition when competition has rendered their power to trespass upon the rights of others less effective and profitable than it was before.

That trusts are thus the natural outcome of protection has been seen and acknowledged by the President of the sugar trust, who said last winter:

"The great cry of one of the great parties is for protection—that is, they cry for it loudly during campaigns. But when we proceed to give ourselves some protection a howl is raised. They demand protection for the industries. When an industry protects itself it is said that it is illegal."

Hence it comes to pass that protection has made our country a land of trusts as no other land is, and the great activity during the past several months is a striking commentary on McKinley's famous saying: "We want no return to cheap times in our own country." McKinley is beating the bush in behalf of the trusts, and they are simply getting ready to bay their game.

SAYS WE ARE FOOLS.

CONFESSION OF OUR STEEL-RAIL BARON.

"Triumphant Democracy" in Scotland—What He Thinks of Americans—An Interesting Tariff Lesson.

Mr. Andrew Carnegie, our protected millionaire steel rail baron, has been talking to the Scotch and telling them what public-spirited and energetic people we Americans are. On Sept. 8 he spoke at Dundee, Scotland, and said among other things: "In the republic there is a feeling that every man lives, first for the state, and second for himself, and if he doesn't feel so his fellow citizens have no objection to lead him to the right path. A man who would stand up and attempt to obstruct a great public improvement—oh! he would not be tolerated. Public sentiment would condemn him. The way of the would-be extortioner is hard in America."

Let us try that by one example. We have a duty of $17 a ton on steel rails. It has been recently ascertained through official sources that the total cost of a ton of steel rails in this country is $26.24. During the first half of this year the average selling price was somewhat above $34 a ton—let us say a profit of $8 a ton. Now, it was stated in a high protectionist organ in July that Mr. Andrew Carnegie and his several firms had made during the first six months of the year about 325,000 tons of steel rails. The profits are thus seen to have been $2,600,000.

That sum is not at present so much due to the high duty as it would have been some years ago, for prices in England ranged in the first half of this year from $10 to $16 higher than two years ago, owing to temporary conditions now passing away; prices in the United States being higher also than two years ago.

But the $2,600,000 profits of Carnegie and his associates for six months in 1890 were only partially a tariff profit. It is true that the great gains which have made him a fifty-five millionaire were due in large part to the high duty on steel rails. Anybody who looks at the prices in Great Britain and the United States for the past ten or twenty years can see that as plain as day. A table of these prices has been prepared by the protectionists themselves. This table shows a difference of $33.08 a ton in 1880 in favor of the English; in 1885, a difference of $4.39; in 1887, however, this difference had again risen to $18.38 a ton.

The precise difference in the cost of steel rails by reason of the tariff has been accurately and carefully estimated by David A. Wells, the foremost statistician of America. He estimates that the additional cost to this country of steel during the ten years from 1878 to 1888 in consequence of the tariff was $140,000,000. If it had not been for the tariff precisely the same would have been saved to our railroads, and thereby to some extent saved to the people in cheaper freight and passenger rates. If railroads had been permitted to buy their rails at the normal price, and to save thereby $140,000,000, would not this have been "a great public improvement?"

"A man who would stand up and attempt to obstruct a great public improvement." Why, that is Carnegie himself! And yet he is "tolerated;" public sentiment does not condemn him; and the way of the tariff extortioner is not hard.

What Carnegie thinks of us, in view of our high tariff folly, has recently come to light. Not long ago he dined with a small party of Englishmen in London; and in this small and select circle he is reported to have said that "the Americans are great fools to maintain a war tariff in order to make a few smart men like him millionaires."

About the same time one of his party organs printed a singular piece of news. This was the Chicago Tribune, which has grown so restive and unmanageable under what it terms "McKinleyism. It says: "Andrew Carnegie, one of the king bees of the Republican party, who is a strong believer in protection, because he is one of the favored few who derive benefit therefrom, has locked out his employes at Beaver Falls, Pa., because they wanted increased wages."

Reaping the Tariff Fruit.

The Eastern and Western coal agents have held meetings in New York for the purpose of increasing the price of coal and decreasing the production during October. Last year the output for October was 3,712,000 tons; but the combine think that, in order to sustain the higher prices, they must now limit the production of coal. Accordingly they "fixed" the output for October at 3,500,000 tons. The combine consents to put that quantity upon the market, which is less by 212,000 tons than the quantity mined in the same month last year.

The combine also lays its governing hand upon the prices. These are advanced to figures ranging from 10 to 40 cents a ton. If we estimate the advance at only 20 cents a ton the combine will thus make a net increase of $700,000 on the production for the single month of October. It is more likely to be $1,000,000.

Here then is the same old story of combinations to extort larger gains from the people by limiting production and raising prices. It is a Republican doctrine—a dotrine on paper—that where protection sustains a combination the duties should be lowered or withdrawn.

Hon. Julius C. Burrows, of Michigan, stated that doctrine in his speech on the McKinley bill last May. He said:

"When an industry in the United States has been built up under the fostering care of the Government, and then the beneficiaries thereof, feeling the effect of domestic competition, combine to prevent the resultant benefit to the people, I would say to all such, if you will not permit free and unrestrained competition at home, you shall encounter the competition of the world."

But, alas, on the same page, Mr. Burrows defends protection on the very ground that "cheaper productions" are not to be sought for. He said: "Into this race for cheapness, the Republican party does not propose to enter;" which is but a re-echo of McKinley's famous saying, "We want no return to cheap times in our own country."

The United States Senate refused to make a slight reduction in the duty on coal upon the pretended ground that the mining industry could not bear it. The Senators seem to assume that the coal men are too weak to stand alone. But they are strong enough to combine and lift $700,000 out of the pockets of the people in a single month, thus realizing the beautiful ideal of Maj. McKinley, that dear prices are to be preferred to cheap ones.

How long, anyway, are the people going to allow this tomfoolery to go on? How long are they going to be ground down by trusts, and then vote for the party that legislates for trusts?

ATTENTION, FARMERS.

The Narrowing of the Farmers' Foreign Markets.

The London correspondent of the New York Times has sent to that paper a piece of information of the utmost importance to our farmers. He says:

"For one thing, it has already made it certain that Europe will take no interest in the Chicago exhibition and will practically be unrepresented there. Even more important is the impulse it has given here to consolidate capital in an energetic effort to immediately push railways throughout the Indian and Russian wheat belts and thus render the European market independent of American grain supplies."

"It." What is "it?" Why, the McKinley bill.

It is not necessary for European governments to pass retaliatory laws in order to show us how "McKinleyism" operates toward restricting the foreign markets of our farmers. The natural play of the laws of trade will of itself teach us that lesson. Many of those laws are as plain as A B C. Here is one that governs the farmer in all his buying and selling: The farmer who sells his grain or live stock in Smithville is not likely to go to Jonesville to get his clothing and family supplies, and if he goes there at all, it will only be because Jonesville offers him these articles at lower prices.

The same law rules in inter national trade. If we refuse to buy what the English offer us in the line of manufactured products, the only thing left for England to do is to find another market in which to sell. Very good. She finds that market and her ships go there laden with what we have refused. What then? Are those ships going to sail empty to us in order to take away our farm products and manufactures? By no means, unless we offer an extra inducement for them to do so.

What inducement? There can be only one—lower prices.

It is as clear as day that only by underbidding the "pauper labor of the world" can our farmers hold their foreign market, provided McKinleyism is to hold sway

This is by no means an idle dream. It is a well-known fact that our farmers under the existing tariff laws are losing their foreign markets. Mr. Blaine himself has performed a valuable service to the country in pointing out how the market for agricultural products is growing narrower.

The official figures of the Treasury Department are conclusive proof of the fact. On page 55 of the Report on Commerce and Navigation for 1889 is a table which ought to be seen and studied by every farmer. This table gives the relative quantity of wheat and flour bought by England from each country for a series of years. Comparing 1880 and 1878 we get very striking results. The total consumption of England in 1880 and 1888 was supplied principally by Russia, British India, and the United States in the following proportions:

	1880. Per ct.	1888. Per ct.
Russia	4.33	29.22
British India	4.72	11.01
United States	65.42	36.69

These figures show what is going on now. It is certain that the McKinley bill will make them still more unfavorable to us.

Wages Already Affected.

The plea made for the McKinley high-tariff bill is that it is necessary to help labor. The wages of labor must be made higher, although thirty years of protection have failed to yield satisfactory results in the direction of increasing wages. So we now have the McKinley bill for the benefit of labor.

The first effect of the bill has already been reported. In the city of Buffalo, N. Y., there is a manufacturer who uses a certain fabric in the manufacture of his goods. This fabric is bought in New York from a commission merchant who imports it from England. The Buffalo manufacturer got this cloth heretofore at 68 cents a yard. This cost was made up as follows: English manufacturer's price, 30 cents per yard; duty (equivalent to 110 per cent.), 33 cents; profits and expenses for handling, 5 cents.

This was a high duty, but not high enough to satisfy Maj. McKinley; hence he makes the duty in his "domestic bill" 140 per cent., to protect American labor.

Now note the swift result. The New York commission merchant informed the Buffalo manufacturer that he would have to add nine cents a yard to the price of the fabric in order to cover the increased duty, expecting and fearing that he would thereby lose a customer. But the Buffalo manufacturer promptly accepted the situation. The New York merchant expressed surprise that the manufacturer could so soon accommodate himself to the enlarged expense. In reply to this the Buffalo man writes as follows to the merchant:

"You were somewhat surprised that we could afford to pay the additional nine cents a yard for cloth, but I prepared our work people for it, and to-day, by making a cut equal to ten per cent. on their wages all around, I have covered the amount and turned them all into good, sound Democrats. That, I take it, is as good as a Yankee could do."

That is where the McKinley bill draws its first blood from labor.

Black List of Tariff Trusts.

An excellent little book on the tariff question, by N. H. Chamberlain, has recently been published by DeWolfe, Fiske & Co., of Boston. It is written in the form of a story, in which a manufacturer, who has been ruined by the tariff, argues with his protectionist workmen and others against our existing revenue laws: It deals in hard facts rather than in theories.

The author prints the following interesting table of tariff trusts:

NAME OF TRUST.	Protected by duties, averaging, per cent.	Adjusted to guarantee a bonus in each $100 of product amounting to	Their whole expense for labor in $100 worth of product being

THE recent squabble around the door of the conference committee's room at Washington recalls Henry George's famous remark, that the making of a tariff bill is like throwing a banana into a cage of monkeys.

THE evening of life brings with it its own lamps.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN
NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach AND Liver Cure
The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.
It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.
To the Great South American Medicine Co.:
DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.
J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach".

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.
My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every one.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., June 22, 1887.
My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.
The Great South American Nervine Tonic
Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors."

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

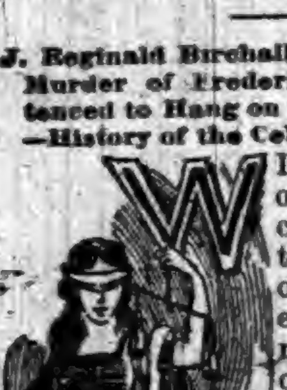
TO DIE ON THE GALLOWS

CONVICTED ON PURELY CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

J. Reginald Birchall Found Guilty of the Murder of Frederick C. Benwell—Sentenced to Hang on the 14th of November—History of the Celebrated Case.

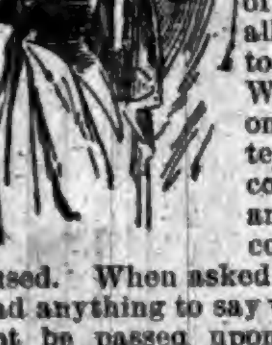


WITHIN the memory of man no Canadian criminal case has attracted the attention or created the interest that has been manifested in the trial of J. Reginald Birchall, which was brought to a conclusion at Woodstock, Ontario, on the 29th of September. The trial consumed ten days and resulted in the conviction of the accused. When asked by the Judge if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon him, Birchall replied simply: "I am not guilty of murder." He was thereupon sentenced to be hanged on Friday, Nov. 14.

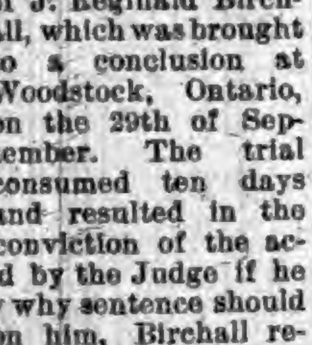
HISTORY OF THE CASE.

[WOODSTOCK (ONT.) CORRESPONDENCE.]

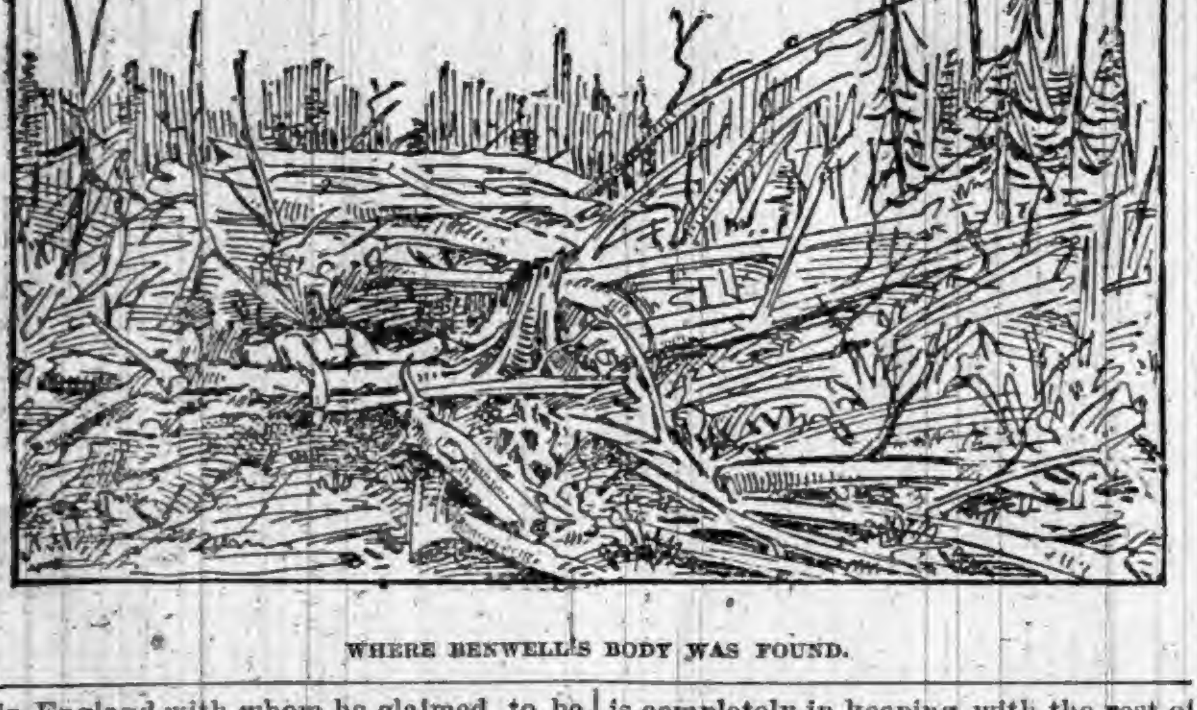
Birchall was tried on an indictment charging him with the murder of Frederick C. Benwell, whose dead body was found in a wild and unfrequented swamp in Oxford County, Ont., in February last. The evidence upon which the jury found the murderer guilty, was purely circumstantial.



BIRCHALL, THE MURDERER.



MRS. BIRCHALL.



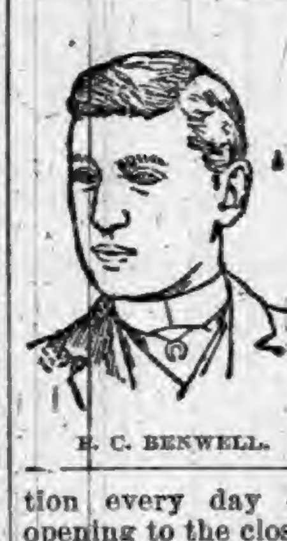
WHERE BENWELL'S BODY WAS FOUND.

There are many conflicting and fragmentary accounts of Birchall's identity, but those who ought to know best say that he is the son of an English Church clergyman who lived in the north of England, and now deceased. Birchall was a student at Oxford, and was known as a harum-scarum fellow, a good-natured spendthrift with pleasure as his principal ambition in life. He is now about 27 years old. He got married a few years ago, and about the same time financial troubles culminated and he was forced to leave England. He came to Canada early in the summer of 1882 to become a farmer, but, finding the work harder and the pay smaller than he had been led to expect, he staid in Woodstock. Birchall talked a great deal about aristocrats in England with whom he claimed to be acquainted or connected. He signed himself Birchall or Burchell, but spoke of himself as the possessor or heir-apparent to the title of Lord Somerset. Many people in Oxford County knew him only as Somerset. He had an inordinate passion for sports. A horse and a gun were the twin objects of his first affection. As a sportsman he sought game far and near and became more intimately acquainted with the country than many a person who has spent a lifetime in it. He spent money freely. There did not seem to be anything vicious about him, but he was simply bent on having a good time. His wife seemed to second him in what he did and was known everywhere as "Lady Somerset." These two disappeared in the fall as quickly as they had come, leaving certain unpaid bills. When a man was arrested in February for the murder of the stranger whose body was found in the swamp near Princeton the people were made aware for the first time that Lord Somerset, or Birchall, had returned.

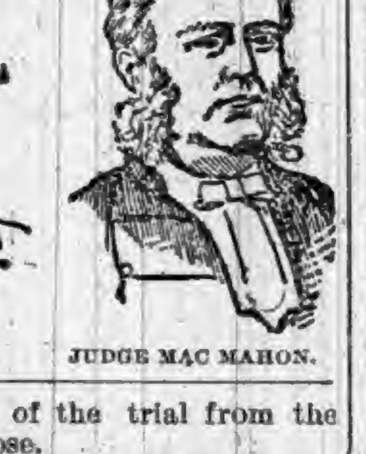
There had been great difficulty in identifying the body, for the pockets had been emptied of all but one or two unimportant articles, and the name had been cut out of all the marked clothing. But a cigar-case was found having the name of "F. C. Benwell" on it. When this announcement was made in the papers, Birchall came on from Niagara Falls to Princeton and identified the body as that of a fellow-passenger of his on the steamship Britannic, which had landed in New York but a couple of weeks before. It appeared from Birchall's own statement that Benwell had been in his company but a few days before the body was found, so he was arrested on suspicion, and his wife, also, was taken into custody on a charge of aiding and abetting in the murder. There had been a good deal of excitement about the discovery of the body in the swamp, but when it was known that "Lord Somerset" had been arrested for the murder, and that the case, if proven, would be shown to be one of almost unheard of atrocity, the whole country was wild with curiosity and indignation. There was only one person who remained cool, collected and smiling, and that was Birchall. He manifested no bravado, but he simply kept quiet, said nothing except to his lawyer, and seemed to be rather amused at the course events had taken. But against Birchall there were scraps of evidence which, while not making a complete case, were all consistent one with the other and together were certainly very strong. The principal witness was a young Englishman named Douglas R. Pelly, who had come out on the Britannic with Mr. and Mrs. Birchall and Benwell. Pelly and Benwell had made arrangements in England to take an interest in a horse ranch or farm which Birchall claimed he owned in Canada. According to Pelly, Birchall had represented this farm to be a mile and a half from Niagara Falls, the stables lighted with electricity, and the place generally in first-class shape. Benwell's father, a retired British Colonel, was to pay £500 for an interest in this farm as soon as his son should write from Canada that he was satisfied with his bargain. Young Pelly also had paid Birchall a large sum on condition that he was to have employment on the farm, with a small share in the profits. Pelly explained how the party had gone through from New York to Buffalo, thence to Niagara Falls, and how on Monday, Feb. 17, Benwell and Birchall had taken the Grand Trunk Southern Division train to go to the alleged stock farm. That night Birchall returned alone, explaining that Benwell had gone on further, probably intending to call at London, Ont., upon a Mr. Helmuth, a lawyer who had been one of their fellow-passengers on the Britannic. Pelly told with blanched face how Birchall subsequently took him about Niagara Falls, while his (Pelly's) suspicions of his companion grew stronger. In private conversation the young fellow declared that he believed Birchall meant to tip him into the river just below the falls, or otherwise to make away with him, and it was quite evident that he believed he had had an exceedingly narrow escape.

Everything pointed to Birchall as the guilty man. Had the victim been shot in a quarrel or by a tramp, as was at one time suggested, the marks on the clothing would not have been cut out. That was evidently the work of a man who believed that if he could prevent the corpse from proclaiming its own identity it would fill a nameless grave and inquiry would soon die out. Birchall and Pelly were the only men who could have known that the man was an entire stranger in the country. Birchall was the last person seen with Benwell, that is sure. He left Niagara Falls with him, and credible witnesses swore to having seen the man whom they knew as Birchall or Somerset in company with a young Englishman whose description answered to that of the victim. They were seen to get off at Eastwood Station and go across the fields in a direction which would take them to the swamp. Birchall was subsequently seen to return alone. He spoke to a Miss Smith at Eastwood Station on his return and stated to her that he was going East, but would be back in a few days. He did not buy a return ticket, but a single ticket, however. He stated when he went to identify the body that he had never seen Benwell in the clothes in which the corpse was dressed. All the testimony went to prove that on the train Birchall's companion wore the very clothes in which the corpse was found.

The swamp is on the edge of one of those strange ponds, of which there are several in this country, which have no visible inlet or outlet and which seem to extend under the swampy land by which their surface is surrounded. Birchall, as a sportsman, knew the place well. When he hunted in this swamp there was access to the lake, but during his absence in England a fire had burned out the spongy, peaty, surface of the ground, causing the small cedars, of which the swamp is composed, to fall or lean so that access to the lake was prevented. The position of the body when found was such as to indicate that when shot the man was looking over the trunks of two trees which had fallen, completely barring the way to the lake. The theory that Birchall intended to throw his victim into the lake, where the undercurrent would tend to draw him beneath the boggy surface or shore of the lake, is completely in keeping with the rest of the story.



F. C. BENWELL.



JUDGE MAC MAHON.

The court was presided over by Judge McMahon, one of the best men on the Canadian bench. On the side of the crown the lead was taken by B. B. Osler, Queen's Counsel, the leader of the criminal bar, and he was opposed chiefly by George T. Blackstock, Queen's Counsel, a rising man, young and eloquent. The court-room was crowded to suffocation every day of the trial from the opening to the close.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Our National Law-Makers and What They Are Doing for the Good of the Country—Various Measures Proposed, Discussed, and Acted Upon.

THE conference report on the tariff bill was adopted by the Senate on the 31st of September, by a vote of 33 to 27, three Republicans, Paddock of Nebraska, Plumb of Kansas and Pettigrew of South Dakota voting with the Democrats in the negative. In the House, on motion of Mr. Russell of Connecticut, a joint resolution was passed for printing 54,000 copies of the annual report of the Commissioner of Labor. On motion of Mr. Bingham of Pennsylvania, the joint resolution was passed appropriating $10,000 to enable the Postmaster General to test at small towns and villages the system of free delivery. On motion of Mr. Morrow of California the bill was passed relinquishing to the city and county of San Francisco the United States title to certain lands near the Presidio Military Reservation. The Speaker laid before the House the bill to define and regulate the jurisdiction of United States courts, and it was referred to the Judiciary Committee. The Senate bill was passed establishing a customs collection district in the States of North and South Dakota.

BOTH houses of Congress adjourned sine die Oct. 1, after transacting urgent business and sending a joint committee to ascertain that the President had no other business to present. The Vice President laid before the Senate three veto messages from the President, two on bills referring to the Court of Claims (the claims of Charles P. Chouteau and of the Portland Company of Portland, Me.), and the third on the bill to prohibit book-making and pool-selling in the District of Columbia for the purpose of gambling. The President's objection to the latter bill is that it does not prohibit book-making and pool-selling, but, on the contrary, permits it in the case of the Washington Jockey Club and of other clubs owning race tracks. If that form of gambling was to be prohibited (as the President thinks it should be) the prohibition should apply to all persons and all places. The three messages were laid on the table. In his prayer the Chaplain of the House referred to the approaching end of the session and invoked the divine blessing upon the members during the vacation. Mr. McKinley (Ohio), chairman of the committee appointed to wait upon the President, announced that the President had no further communication to make, and the House then took a recess. During the recess nearly all the members left the hall to make preparations for their departure from the city, and when the Speaker reconvened the House that official looked down upon a vast array of empty seats. He merely said that, according to the concurrent resolution, he declared the first session of the Fifty-first Congress adjourned without day.

There were three passengers in the Deadwood stage; a long-legged cowboy, a bespectacled and highly refined old maid from Boston and a man who had nothing to do but listen, says the Pioneer Press.

"Yer needn't tell me anything about Injuns," continued the cowboy, replying to a remark of the old maid's. "I've lived with 'em an' seen 'em. They're treacherous, filthy critters. I've had their bullets an' their arrers into me, an' I tell you there ain't no good Injun but a dead Injun."

"Have you ever read Helen Hunt's 'Romola?'" mildly asked the old maid.

"Helen hunted what?" replied the cowboy, with a heavy accent on the what.

"'Romola,' 'Romola,' a book written by dear Helen Hunt. Have you ever read it?"

"No, I never read Roman, an' if it's anything about Injuns I don't want to read it. I know how you eastern people feel erbout Injuns. That's because you don't know anything erbout 'em."

After this there was silence for some time. Finally the Boston lady discovered a hillside covered with yellow flowers. She gazed at them admiringly for a moment, then turning to the centaur, said:

"You are acquainted, I suppose, sir, with the flora and fauna of this region?"

"With the who?"

"The flora and fauna."

The cowboy turned to the window, and, with a sudden and emphatic motion of his head and lips, sent a yellow jet of tobacco juice nearly to the straggling fence at the side of the road. He then deliberately crossed his long legs, pulled his slouch hat low down over his eyes, and sank back into the corner of the car. Although the Boston dame addressed him several times afterward, he did not speak another word all the way into Deadwood.

"Dirt defies the king."—If the old proverb be true, SAPOLIO is greater than royalty itself: Try it in your next house-cleaning: Grocers keep it.

DO YOU LIVE IN GREASE?

As a true patriot and citizen you should naturalize yourself by using the best inventions of the day for removing such a charge. To live in Grease is utterly unnecessary when SAPOLIO is sold in all the stores, and abolishes grease and dirt.

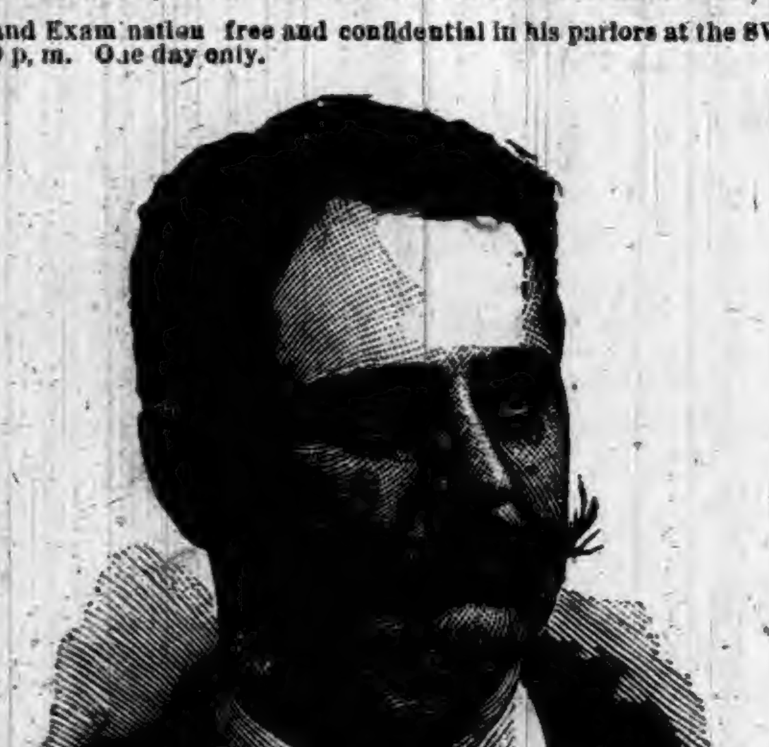
Consultation and Examination free and confidential in his parlors at the SWINEFORD HOUSE from 1 p. m. to 9 p. m. One day only.

CHRONIC DISEASES,
—AND—
DISEASES of the EYE and EAR,
A SPECIALTY.



FREE.

Consultation and Examination

DR. D. O. FRUTH,

—OF THE—

PROVIDENT MEDICAL DISPENSARY,

NEW YORK CITY,

Ably assisted by a full corps of competent physicians and surgeons, treats with unparalleled success all Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood diseases of every nature upon the latest scientific principles. He particularly invites all whose cases have been neglected, badly treated or pronounced incurable. Patients who are doing well under the care of their own physicians need not call on us, as our province is to treat those who cannot find relief otherwise. No money required of responsible parties to commence treatment.

Common Sense as Applied to Medicine. It is well known by all intelligent observers that it is impossible for any person, no matter how highly endowed by nature or acquirements, to become thoroughly conversant with all the divisions of the science of medicine. Nearly all who have obtained distinction in medicine have made some special department their life work, being fitted therefor by natural adaption or selection, special education and experience. The doctor having devoted several years to the special study of chronic diseases in hospitals and general practice, and having the most recent and improved instruments for finding out diseased conditions in the organs of the body, he proposes to devote the whole of his time to the practice of these specialties.

He adopts the following plan, which is peculiar to the large hospitals, and is not and never has been the practice of country doctors, viz.: He carefully notes the symptoms of the patient, ascertains the condition of the internal organs, examines the Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat by the most recent and approved instruments and methods, all of which he carefully records in his register for future reference. In this way he ascertains the true nature of the disease and its cause. Knowing the disease, he knows the changes it produces in the tissues, and, knowing the changes, he checks them with specific remedies, and places his patient on the high road to recovery. When sick people consult him he readily tells them whether he can cure or help them, or if they are beyond hope.

The examinations are in accordance with anatomical and physical science, as he will convince the most skeptical. By an examination he will convince anyone of the nature and extent of disease, amount of danger to life, and chance of a perfect cure. Believing that science is truth and "truth is mighty and will prevail" when known, and knowing that disease can be cured with positive certainty, he invites the afflicted to call and receive advice free and be cured of their diseases.

There is no subject that requires so much study and experience as the treatment and cure of chronic diseases. The astonishing success and remarkable cures performed by him is due to a thorough knowledge of the structure and functions of the human system, and the cure of diseases by natural remedies. [illegible] given up by others call for examination. He has successfully treated the following diseases since his arrival in this State: Eye and Ear diseases, Chronic Diarrhœa, Chronic Inflammation of the Womb, Chronic Inflammation of the Bladder, Painful or Irregular Menstruation, Fever Sores and Ulcers, Incontinence of Urine, Tape Worms, Crooked Limbs and Enlarged Joints, Spinal Curvatures, Club Foot, Hip Joint Disease, White Swelling, Discharging Abscesses, Sterility or Barrenness, Nervousness and General Debility, Impotency, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Leucorrhea or Whites, Blotches, Pimples, Skin Diseases, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Dropsy, Cancer, Epileptic Fits, Erysipelas, Gravel, Goitre, Gleet, Gonorrhoea, Hydrocele, Heart Disease, Headache, Piles, Hysteria, Syphillis, St. Vitus Dance, Chronic Dysentery, Enlarged Tonsils, Fistula in Ano, Hernia or Rupture, Ovarian Tumors, Paralysis, Prolapsus Uteri, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Scrofula, Consumption, Chronic Cough, Female Weakness, Spermatorrhoea, Rheumatism, etc. All surgical operations performed.

Curing of Piles guaranteed. Will give $1,000 for any case of failure. No money required of responsible parties.

Young Men who through ignorance or the careless exuberance of youthful spirits, have been unfortunate and find themselves in danger of losing their health and embittering their after lives may call with full confidence.

DR. FRUTH—Has attained the most wonderful success in the treatment of the cases to which he devotes his special attention. After years of experience he has discovered the most infallible method of curing weakness in the back and limbs, involuntary discharges, impotency, general debility, nervousness, languor, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart, loss of memory, trembling and timidity, diseases of the nose, throat and lungs, affections of the liver, stomach and bowels—those terrible disorders arising from the solitary habits of youth and secret practices, blighting the most radiant hopes and rendering marriage impossible.

Epilepsy, or Fits, positively cured by a new and never-failing method.

Private Diseases.—Blood Poison, Syphillis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Hydrocele, Varicocele, Loss of Sexual Power and all diseases of the genito-urinary organs speedily and permanently cured. No risks incurred. Consultation free and strictly confidential. Medicine sent free from observation to all parts of the United States.

Middle Aged Men, who find their vigor and vitality weakened by the traces of old complaints and their bodies racked with pain at a time when they should spend their declining years in peace and comfort, should consult Dr. Fruth at once and find the sympathy and relief you positively require. His cures are thorough and permanent.

Diseases of Women.—We shall continue as heretofore, to treat with our best consideration and skill the diseases peculiar to women. Our operations for Fistula, Ruptured Cervix Uteri, Ruptured Perineum, and for Stricture of the Cervical Canal, a condition resulting in Sterility, have been alike gratifying both to ourselves and our patients.

Free Examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring an ounce of their urine, which will receive a careful chemical and microscopical examination.

Remarkable Cures perfected in old cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures. Parties treated by mail and express, but where possible personal consultation preferred. Curable cases guaranteed. List of questions free. Western Address, DR. FRUTH,
Toledo, Ohio.

REFERENCES—We, the undersigned, do cheerfully and conscientiously recommend Dr. Fruth as a gentleman of rare professional ability, ripe in judgment, humane to a fault, considerate in price and enthusiastic in behalf of his fellow men, and we therefore urge the afflicted to avail themselves of his superior skill:—Granville M. Weeks, M. D., LL. D., President Provident Dispensary, N. Y.; T. Meredith Maxwell, A. M., M. D., N. Y.; Orrin Pomeroy, M. D., N. Y.; V. M. Davis, M. D., N. Y.; W. E. White, M. D., Toronto, Canada; S. AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of Its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

The history of the county in 1838, if written by surviving pioneers would consist of journeys to mill or city for provisions, sufferings of the sick, left often alone in their cabins, hunting adventures among the deer and work in the clearings.

The remembrance by the settlers, of relatives, killed or captured by Indians, the terrible torture inflicted on Crawford and others, inspired a dread of the red men and although the record or memories give no count of no cabin burnt, inmate murdered and scalped, yet the sight of Indians was sufficient to create anxiety and fear. The Indians still dwelt in the woods, shifting their camps from point to point and bartering cranberries and venison for the settler's flour when he had any.

These were nights of terror when husbands absent and the dismal howling of wolves were heard from the edge of the clearings, and there was fear lest at any moment Indian or wild beast might invade the sometimes doorless cabin, easily done by pushing aside the hanging blanket. And husbands returning late at night through the woods along the trace, held a ready grasp upon the rifle not knowing but that he might be attacked. A settler came in and built a cabin fourteen feet square, others followed and were offered the hospitalities of the dwelling. In this little log cabin fourteen persons lived several months. For some reason, every one took sick and the settlers swung beds to the wall, one above another to accommodate all the sick.

The stock of reading was limited to very few books and they were well read. The monotony of the town was broken and enlivened by the howling wolves which seemed to moan their inability to to drive the settlers from their long and undisputed domain.

John Miller, a well known and highly respected settler relates: "One cold March evening, after chopping hard all day, I took a bushel of potatoes and seventeen or eighteen pounds of pork, in a sack upon my shoulder, and started about dusk for home. The distance I had to travel along a blind trial through brush in darkness was about six miles. In undertaking to cross Buck creek on a small timber log placed for the purpose, I fell off in the water which was high. Cold, wet and tired I pursued my journey with heavy load, and was weary enough when I set down my load in my cabin." Although enduring great privations, much happiness fell to the kind of life they were living. One of them said: "When I look back upon the first few years of our residence here, I am led to exclaim, 'Oh, happy days of primitive simplicity!' What little aristocratic feeling anyone might have brought with him was soon quelled, for we soon found ourselves equally dependent on one another, and we enjoyed our winter evenings around our blazing hearth in our log huts full as well, aye, much better than has fallen to our lots since the distinctions and animosities consequent upon the acquisition of wealth have crept in among us."

1839.

The year 1839 is remembered by the surviving pioneers of DeKalb county as very sickly. There were not a few who were entirely laid up with bilious fever, leaving the ablest of the family to do what work they could.

The entire country was covered by heavy forest growth. Some of the finest timber in America has been cut from the woods of DeKalb, its oak, cherry and black walnut if preserved till now would enrich its owners, but the one object of the settler was to get a patch of land cleared to put in wheat or corn and all trees were cut and logged for burning to gain this end, and black walnut easy to split was used for fencing in the clearings.

As the hot sun rays fell upon open spaces, malaria from moisture and decaying vegetation, became powerful, slowly diffused itself through the air and carried ague in its course. Dormant in damp ground for long years, it became active as the ground was stirred and settlers were enervated by its pernicious influences, till they were unable to provide themselves with food or medical treatment.

Malaria was worse morning and evening for the air when heated rose bearing miasma with it, and toward evening as the surface cooled, the malaria sank again to the earth. No medicine could remove the disease while the malaria existed. It has now disappeared, but only the pioneer knows the loss of available labor from this cause.

Few were the families at this period but knew times of suffering for want of food and attendance. Wild meat could usually be procured without much trouble, deer, turkey, pheasant and other game; but to live on this alone however palatable would tend to enfeeble any but Indians, and hunters long accustomed to its use.

The following touching incident of privation and distress is related of a young man who with his family settled in the thick woods distant from any other settlement. "During the summer he cleared a small patch, built him a cabin and in the fall became sick and died. Soon after, a hunter on his way home passing by the clearing saw everything still about the cabin, mistrusted all was not right and knocked at the door to inquire. A feeble voice bade him enter. Opening the door he was startled by the appearance of a woman sitting by a fire, pale, emaciated and holding a poor sickly babe. He immediately inquired their health. She burst into tears and was unable to answer. The hunter stood for a moment aghast at the scene. The woman recovering from her gush of sorrow at length raised her head and pointed toward the bed saying, 'there is my little Edward, I expect he is dying, and there is my babe, so sick I cannot lay it down, I am so feeble I can scarcely remain in my chair and my poor husband lies buried beside the cabin.' And then, as if frantic by the fearful recital, she spoke in a tone of the deepest anguish, 'Oh, that I was back to my own home where I could fall into the arms of my mother!' Tears of sympathy rolled down the weather-beaten cheeks of the iron-framed hunter, as he, promising to return, rapidly walked away to bring assistance."

With a sparse population confined principally to the southern and eastern parts of the county, there were few of the men, but in addition to their own work, had to go to the aid of new comers to help raise their log houses or to serve in some official capacity under orders of court or commissioners.

A kitten in Hood River, Oregon, caught a lizard, but will never catch another. The reptile, in attempting to escape, ran down its enemy's throat, where it lodged, with fatal result to the cat.

The New Discovery.

You have heard your friends and neighbors talking about it. You may yourself be one of the many who know from personal experience just how good a thing it is. If you have ever tried it, you are one of its staunch friends, because the wonderful thing about it is, that when once given a trial, Dr. King's New Discovery ever after holds a place in the house. If you have never used it and should be afflicted with a cough, cold or any Throat, Lung or Chest trouble, secure a bottle at once and give it a fair trial. It is guaranteed every time, or money refunded. Trial Bottles Free at Robbins & McCord's Drugstore. 6

It is estimated that if the tobacco used in France during a single year were twisted into a cord two inches in thickness it would be long enough to encircle the earth thirty times, following the line of the equator.

Sudden Deaths.

Heart disease is by far the most frequent cause of sudden death, which in three out of four cases is unsuspected. The symptoms are not generally understood. These are: a habit of lying on the right side, short breath, pain or distress in side, back or shoulder, irregular pulse, asthma, weak and hungry spells, wind in stomach, swelling of ankles or dropsy, oppression, dry cough and smothering. Dr. Miles' illustrated book on heart disease, free at F. E. Davenport's who sells and guarantees Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, and his Restorative Nervine, which cures nervousness, headache, sleeplessness, effects of drinking, etc. It contains no opiates. 6

Butterflies are to be the next victims of fashion. Fans are decorated with the beautiful wings of these insects, caught in hundreds for the purpose, the body, antennæ and legs being sketched in afterward by an artist.

Startling Facts.

The American people are rapidly becoming a race of nervous wrecks, and the following suggests the best remedy: Alphonso Hempfling, of Butler, Pa., swears that when his son was speechless from St. Vitus dance Dr. Miles' great Restorative Nervine cured him. Mrs. J. R. Miller, of Valparaiso, and J. D. Taylor, of Logansport, Ind., each gained 20 pounds from taking it. Mrs. H. A. Gardner, of Vistula, Ind., was cured of 40 to 50 convulsions a day, and much headache, dizziness, backache and nervous prostration by one bottle. Trial bottles, and fine book of marvelous cures, free at F. E. Davenport's who recommends and guarantees this unequaled remedy. 6

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

The fair was a success, and everybody is happy.

Mr. Burkhart, of Defiance, O., was in town, Tuesday.

W. F. Kessler, of Auburn, was in town last Wednesday.

Last Friday W. Seiler and wife, of Elkhart, attended the fair.

Guy Tippin, of Defiance, Ohio, spent one day in town last week.

Mr. Chapman, of Goshen, stopped in town Saturday on his way home.

Judge McBride and son Charley were in Waterloo several days of last week.

Rev. Mr. Ackman and family, of Ligonier, spent last week in town visiting friends.

Rev. Crouse, late pastor of the U. B. church, was in town last Thursday with his family.

Mrs. J. J. Fitzgerald, who has been visiting relatives and friends in Ohio, has returned home.

The Methodist ladies, who furnished lunch and warm meals during the fair, cleared about $96.

The Misses Lula and Minnie Conkle, of Defiance, Ohio, spent part of last week in our town.

Mr. Pierce, of Ft. Wayne, attended our fair, and no doubt pleased since he was winner in two races.

Mr. Beidler and wife, of Ft. Wayne, were visitors in Waterloo, Friday. They also attended the fair.

Last week G. M. Southworth and son Warren were in town the guest of Dr. Carpenter and family.

I. T. Carpenter and family, of Pleasant Lake, were in town last week, and of course took in the fair.

Charley Speer is home for a short vacation. He spent the summer cooking on a steamer on the lakes.

Last Thursday morning two freight trains on the L. S. & M. S. railroad collided, east of Waterloo.

Waterman & Jackman have rented S. P. Klotz' store building and will move their furniture store into it.

Monday evening Mrs. Rhetts returned home, accompanied by her husband, Rev. Mr. Rhetts, who met her at Ft. Wayne.

Last week Wednesday and Thursday Messrs Clutter and Parcell, of Ft. Wayne, were in Waterloo visiting the fair.

Last Thursday Claude Mathews, of Clinton, who is the democratic nominee for Secretary of State, was at the Locke Hotel.

Rev. C. M. Eberly is having an injunction suit with the seceders, at Montpelier, Ohio, for the full possession of his church there.

Mrs. Franks has visitors from Kansas, who were much pleased with the display at the fair, and inquired if it was not unusually fine this year.

Oct. 13th, the weather was warm, so much so that fire was uncomfortable, and the insects were buzzing in the air. But the 14th was not so pleasant.

Mrs. Metevier, of Bluffton, came to town Saturday and remained here during the fair. She is looking well, and reports her son as having regained his health.

Some of the fine paintings and beautiful work that graced the floral hall was done by Auburn ladies. No doubt they carried away their share of red and blue ribbons.

The Tennessee Singers gave a concert on Thursday and Friday evenings of last week in the Opera House. They state that the college for colored students, at Nashville, is free from debt.

Mrs. Story, formerly Miss Lizzie Clark, now a resident of Nebraska, has been here a few days, the guest of Mrs. Juliett Dickinson and other friends. Her sister Mrs. Elza Shaffer, is expected here, when they will also visit friends in Auburn.

Rev. W. H. Clay, presiding elder for the seceders, had an injunction served on him, by the sheriff of Henry county, Ohio, while holding a quarterly conference in a U. B. church and had to remove his meeting to a school house some distance from the church.

Last Thursday night a man in the east end of town, was knocked down and robbed of his money and watch. Another man near the station, on another night, was approached from behind by a man, who held his arms down to his side, while he took both watch and purse.

The fair was a decided success. The weather was propitious to begin with. The entries of all kinds were very large. Sixty fine horses, and fine stock of all kinds. The halls were all full, indeed Floral hall is quite too small to exhibit to the best advantage, the wealth of beautiful and valuable painting, and artistic work so lavishly brought from far and near. Although fruit has been largely cut off this year, yet the display of fruits, in variety, was very fine, as well as vegetables. Visitors from Goshen and Michigan, who have been in the habit of attending fairs, speak of this, as being the best fair they ever visited.

President Harrison at Home—A Pennsylvania Explosion—Release of the Cronin Liar—Over the Ohio Falls.

HOME AGAIN.

The President Returns from His Western Trip.

The President has returned to Washington. His private car, the Hazlemore, was a part of the fast express of the Pennsylvania Road. The President was accompanied on his return by Secretary Tracy, Marshal Ransdell, Private Secretary Halford, Mr. Tibbott, the stenographer of the Executive Mansion, Mr. Bishop, of the C. & O. Railway, and Mr. Bain, the correspondent of the United Press. The President remarked that his trip had been a very pleasant one. He has come through the ordeal of constant speaking, dining and handshaking, and through the 3,000 miles of railroad travel in good physical condition.

Cronin's "Woodruff."

Frank P. Woodruff, alias "Black," has been released from the Chicago prison, having served out his six months' time for horse stealing. He was rearrested by Kansas authorities and taken to that State to answer a like offence. Woodruff is the famous or rather infamous "confessor" whose record of prevarication and falsehood in connection with the Cronin case has earned for him a most unsavory reputation.

A Turkish Revolt.

Dispatches received from Constantinople say that a party of Armenians and Druses attacked the barracks at Silensia, Syria, and blew up a portion of the buildings. Forty Turkish soldiers were killed. The Armenians then invaded the government building, killed the Governor and robbed the Treasury of its contents. From there they proceeded to the prison, which they carried by storm, liberating all the prisoners.

Went Over the Falls and Lived.

John Hoy had a wonderful escape at Jeffersonville, Ind., While hauling stone near the Ohio Falls, his team ran away and plunged into the roaring rapids. Hoy gave himself up for lost, but the horses swam the torrent and successfully returned to shore with part of the wagon and Hoy clinging to it. No one ever before passed the falls and lived.

Three Killed.

A terrible explosion occurred at the entrance of the new Ivanhoe Buck tunnell, near Leadville, Colo. One of the workmen while entering the tunnel with a box of giant powder, accidentally struck one of the sticks against the wall and exploded it, killing William Hines, John Hemphill and J. Pinacle instantly and injuring ten others.

Fell Asleep.

Jonathan Risley, a farmer, aged 84, fell asleep while sitting near a stove at his home in Pleasantville, N. J., and was awakened by his coat catching fire. He rushed into the yard, where his cries brought a neighbor, who smothered the flames. He died two hours later in terrible agony. He leaves a wife and several adult children.

Murderer Birchall.

Murderer Birchall has started to keep a diary and each morning he counts the remaining days he has to spend in the jail. He continues cheerful and is more talkative, and while there appears to be no reason for it, he has not given up hope. He thinks there is a chance for his life yet and will not be convinced to the contrary.

Virginia Counties Flooded.

Deluging rains have fallen in the South. All counties north of Little Kanawha in West Virginia are flooded, causing much damage. The Kanawha River is swollen for thirty-eight miles and large quantities of timber, grain, and logs, and many houses are afloat. Several farmers have lost their entire crops.

Oklahoma City's Hopes Blasted.

The famous council bill which provides for the moving of the temporary seat of government from Guthrie to Oklahoma City, I. T., was vetoed by Gov. Steele. His grounds for vetoing the bill were that the adjoining Indian lands now being negotiated for when annexed should have a voice in the matter.

Sunk in a Bog.

Flora Malloy, the 2-year-old daughter of John Malloy, of Hazleton, Pa., who has been missing, was found in a swamp two miles from her home. She was sunk almost out of sight in the bog and life was about gone. She was taken to the nearest house and restoratives administered but soon died.

Disaster to a Bark.

The bark Metmerby from Quebec to Liverpool, with a million feet of lumber, encountered a gale. She lost her deck load, lower sails and wheel, and was generally demoralized.

Morrill Re-Elected Senator.

Justins S. Morrill has been re-elected to the Senate at Montpelier, Vt. Both houses met in joint session and formally announced the election of Senator Morrill.

A Chinaman Wants to Be Naturalized.

Charlie Key, a Chinaman, made an application for naturalization papers at Chicago. This is the first case on record in that city.

Gas Explosion.

A terrific explosion of gas occurred at the Susquehanna Mine at Nanticoke, Pa. Frederick Yess and Daniel Powell were seriously injured, and Matthew Hiscox and a Pole will die from injuries. The fire which followed the explosion was extinguished after a hard fight.

A Jail Panic.

Fire caused a panic in the Elkhart County, Ind., jail. One of the prisoners purposely set fire to a lot of bedding in his room and the smoke soon filled the whole building. One prisoner was nearly suffocated before rescued.

DEATH'S MARK.

Associate Justice Miller, of the Supreme Court, Breathes His Last.

Associate Justice Miller, of the United States Supreme Court, died at his residence in Washington, after a short illness.

Samuel Freeman Miller was born in Richmond, Ky., April 15, 1816. His father emigrated from Reading in 1812 to Richmond, Ky., where the future Justice of the Supreme Court was born. His mother was the daughter of parents who had removed to Kentucky from North Carolina before her birth. His early years were spent upon a farm, but the drudgery of agriculture was a source of discontent to him and employment in the drug store gave him an opportunity for reading medicine. He graduated in the medical department of Transylvania University when 22 years of age and entered upon the practice of medicine. He had been married and in the meantime had begun the study of law, and was admitted to the bar in 1847. In 1862, President Lincoln appointed Miller Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, and he was at the time of his death the sole remaining appointee of Lincoln on the bench, except Justice Field.

HORRIBLE HOLOCAUST.

Four Persons Perish in the Flames at Chicago.

Screaming with pain and fright Mrs. Minnie Robinson jumped through a window on the fourth floor of the Putnam House at Chicago, and struck with sickening force on the pavement in the street below. Fire had broken out in the place, and the flames shooting through the door of her room awakened her from a sound sleep. Crazed by fright and unheeding the cries of her husband she sprang to her death. When she was picked up she was still breathing, but there was no hopes for her life. She was crushed and torn and lived but a few minutes. But this did not tell the full tale of the horror. As soon as the firemen got into the building they brought out the dead body of Edward Payton, the old colored janitor. And later, when the blaze was about extinguished, another and still more fearful sight met the eyes of the searchers. In a bed in a room on the third floor was the body of a man who was literally roasted. He had probably been suffocated without being awakened and his death had been painless. His body had been burned and he presented a frightful sight when laid out in the morgue. Going a flight further up the firemen stumbled over another dead body. This man had made a fight for his life, but lost it in the midst of the flames. The fire started in the hallway on the fourth floor and was caused by the explosion of a kerosene lamp. In a moment the hall carpet was ablaze and the flames darting to the ceiling and the dried woodwork, soon encircled the passage and crept through the doors leading into the rooms on that floor. The names of the victims are as follows: Mrs. Minnie Robinson, H. K. Sams, Tom Dowler, Edward Payton. Several other guests escaped with slight bruises and burns. The damage to the building will not reach over $10,000.

TERRIBLE GAS EXPLOSION.

Ten Dead, of Whom Five Were Reduced to Cinders and Ashes.

A cablegram from Paris says: A terrible explosion took place at Bourges. A sound as of a tremendous cannonade was heard, followed by a column of white smoke in the direction of the pyrotechnic school. At first it was thought that some scientific experiment was in progress, but the evil tidings soon spread and crowds hurried to the spot. Military measures were at once taken to maintain order, the church bells were set a-ringing and none were allowed inside the precincts of the school but the relations and friends of those inside. The scene was agonizing, as stretcher after stretcher passed by the distracting bystanders bearing the dead. The people tried to lift up the sheets that covered the bodies, only to be met by the sight of shapeless remnants of flesh on several arms and legs. Gen. Keruhe, the commander of the Eighth Army Corps, implored the excited crowd to be calm, and his presence had a good effect. Inquiry showed ten dead, five of whom were identified, the rest were reduced to ashes. Fifty human feet were found one hundred metres (108 yards) away. The explosion was caused by the imprudence of a workman who pounded some liquid melani into an imperfectly prepared shell, which exploded and caused others to do likewise.

A BOILER EXPLOSION

Was the Cause Which Led to the Loss of the Turkish Frigate, Ertongroul.

San Francisco (Cal.) special: The steamship Belgiac has arrived from Hong Kong, fifteen days from Yoklahoma. Concerning the loss of the Turkish frigate, Ertongroul, Japanese papers place the cause of the disaster to the explosion of boilers during the gale. The men and officers were mostly below in berths and those not immediately killed rushed up to find what remained of the boat which was foundered. Captain Alibeye was seen on the bridge for a moment with a lamp in his hand and was heard to cry "Save yourselves!" then he disappeared and was seen no more. The navigating officer also perished. The chief engineer was almost the first to die. He went from the cabin to the engine room just before the explosion and was literally torn to atoms. The sea was soon full of debris, in which men fought and struggled for their life. Osman Pasha, Admiral, was swimming toward the shore when he was struck on the head by a spar and sank. Out of a total of six hundred souls, only six officers and fifty-seven of the crew reached land. Many of these were so badly injured that they are not expected to recover.

STRICKEN SUDDENLY.

Gen. Belknap, Ex-Secretary of War, Found Dead in His Bed.

Gen. Wm. W. Belknap was found dead in bed at his room on New York Avenue in Washington. The room in which he was found joined his office rooms and was only occupied by the General during his wife's absence from the city. Gen. Belknap was, when last seen alive, on his way to his rooms, apparently in good health.

Gen. William Worth Belknap was born in Newburg, N. Y., on September 28, 1829. He graduated at Princeton College in 1848, and in 1851 he moved to Keokuk, Iowa, where he practiced law. Gen. Belknap served during the war beginning as Major and at the close was General. In October, 1869, he was appointed Secretary of War. This office he retained during Gen. Grant's second administration. The Coroner's jury showed that the General suffered from fatty degeneration of the heart and that the immediate cause of his death was inflammation of the heart.

The Shanty Boat Mystery

There are indications that the Lawrenceburg shanty-boat mystery is approaching a solution. John W. Keys and his wife, Eva, and young Bert Rusk were arrested at their homes in Cincinnati on information given Prosecutor Corcoran by Rev. J. T. Coffman, pastor of the Fourth Christian Church. They are held as fugitives from Justice, indictments having been found against them in Boone County for the murder of Wm. Fee, whose body was found in the Ohio River at Hamilton, Ky., August 29. Mr. Coffman had long known the Keys and Fee families and had taken a great interest in the case for that reason. After his arrest Rusk said that he could give all the information required, but dared not for fear of personal injury.

A Merchant Shot Dead.

Tilly M. Lewis, a prominent citizen and merchant, was assassinated while standing in the yard of his residence at Clinton, Miss. The report of a gun was heard and his dead body was found with a load of buckshot in it. No further particulars could be obtained than this mere statement, and the fact that Clinton had telephoned for bloodhounds to put on the track of the perpetrator of the deed. Lewis was a well-known and popular citizen, not unknown in politics, and his death will make a sensation. He was 48 years old and a man of family.

Will Burn the Will.

A sensation was created in business and social circles in St. Paul, Minn., by the announcement that Mrs. Edward Langevin had refused to offer the will of her late husband for probate, although Mr. Langevin died three weeks ago. He left an estate valued at $4,000,000, divided pretty equally between his five children, with the exception of Geo. W. Langevin, his only son, whom he left nothing on account of his waywardness. It is stated that Mrs. Langevin, with the consent of all the children, will burn the will and allow young G. Langevin to come in for his full share of the estate under the common law.

A Bomb Shell.

A bomb shell was thrown in the ranks of labor circles at Lynn, Mass., in the shape of an injunction issued by Judge Mason, of the Superior Court, against the members of the Cutter's Union, who are managing the present strike, and ordering all further intimidation of workmen at Rumsey Bros.' shoe factory to cease. The respondents are enjoined from stopping any one from approaching the factory for work, by intimidation or persuasion, or doing anything tending to injure Rumsey Bros.' business.

A Masked Robber Shoots a Train Dispatcher.

Robert Middleton, train dispatcher for the Big Four at Indianapolis, the other morning saw a man looking through the window with his face covered by a handkerchief. At the same instant the stranger fired through the window, the ball penetrating Middleton's leg. Middleton fell to the floor and the robber, supposing him dead, entered and robbed him of his watch and money and then escaped.

Treated with Tar.

An unknown man was found tarred and feathered in the streets of Brooklyn. The man was partially undressed, his shirt being torn off, so that the body from the waist to the shoulders was exposed. The portion of the body exposed to view was covered with a thick layer of tar, which had been liberally sprinkled with feathers. The odor of chloroform was detected and it was learned that the man had been under the influence of that drug.

A Doctor Shot Dead.

Dr. Lloyd, for several years attached to the King County, New York, Insane Asylum, was shot and instantly killed by James Dougherty, an inmate of the institution, on the grounds of the asylum. Dougherty escaped from the asylum about two weeks ago, and was not seen again until the other day. When he entered the grounds he quickly drew a pistol, and deliberately shot the physician through the head.

She Wouldn't Ride with Him.

Near Clarence, Iowa, a young man named Matthias drove to the house of Johnston Stears, a farmer, and invited the latter's daughter to take a drive. She refused and her father ordered Matthias from the premises. Matthias then drew a revolver and fired, first at Stears and then at a brother of the girl, missing them both. Then he shot himself through the breast inflicting fatal injuries.

Sold Her Husband Whisky.

Mrs. Plummer, the wife of a prominent physician of Muscotah, Kan., created a sensation by filling Dr. J. E. Martin, a druggist, full of shot for selling her husband whisky. She was afterward stoned and otherwise punished by Martin's clerk. She was arrested but her husband went her bail. Martin tried to shoot in self-defense, but was too excited to use his weapon. The extent of his injuries is not known.

Diseased Cattle.

The discovery of tuberculosis in two herds of cattle, and the likelihood of a spread of the disease, has caused almost a panic near Manchester, N. H. Milkmen are losing their customers by scores and the sales of beef are perceptibly decreased. In view of the fact that the disease can be communicated to man, much uneasiness exists from inmates of the industrial school having used the diseased milk.

Hall's Heroism.

Daniel C. Hall, a teamster of Dayton Ohio, in the attempt to mount the platform of a train, missed his footing and fell with his legs under the wheels. In an endeavor to get his legs out of their perilous position and while holding to the platform, his left foot caught between the main rail and that of a switch, and the leg was torn from the socket at the knee.

Extra Session of Congress.

A Washington special says it is stated on what should be good authority that the President will call an extra session of Congress on November 11 to consider and pass the Federal Election Bill. The same authority says that the President told Senator Aldrich just before the former left the city that he wanted the bill passed before the second session began.

Stricken with Paralysis.

Justice Miller, of the United States Supreme Court, was stricken with paralysis while walking on the street in Washington, D. C., and has since been in a critical condition. Associate Justice Samuel F. Miller is the oldest judge in continuous service upon the bench of the United States Supreme Court, and was appointed by President Abraham Lincoln in 1862 from Iowa.

A Woman Embezzler.

Mrs. Mary Rice, Cashier of the Prudential Insurance Company of Jersey City, was arrested charged with embezzlement. The company has been missing small amounts of money and finally put detectives to work on the case. The woman was detected by the old trick of marking money, which was found in her possession.

Suicide at the Capital.

The body of a man was found hanging to the high fence surrounding the White House grounds in Washington by a passerby. The police were immediately notified and a patrol wagon hurried to the scene and removed the body. It was that of a middle-aged man, plainly dressed. Death had been caused by strangulation.

Indians in a Prosperous Condition.

Indian Agent Kelsey, of the Shawnee Reservation, Wisconsin, has forwarded his first official report. He says the Indians are in good condition and are tilling soil. Last winter, he says, the Indians banked 25,691,565 feet of logs, which netted them $218,378. Their eight schools are crowded.

Came Back to Life.

Stephen Lewis came back to life at Sylvania, Ga. He died apparently and his son came to attend his funeral. He detected a quiver in his father's eye-lid, and asking him if he wanted a drink of water, the corpse nodded his head. Physicians were called in and soon restored him to consciousness.

Two Men Killed.

While workmen were engaged in removing debris from a building which had been gutted by fire in Chicago, the walls gave way and two men met instant death and two others, one a boy of 14 years, were seriously injured.

Train Robbers.

The Missouri, Kansas and Texas passenger train was robbed by four masked men near Shell City, Mo., at the Osage River water tank. As the train was slowing up to take water, the engine was mounted from each side by the masked robbers, who compelled the engineer to dismount and knock at the express door for admittance. The messenger threw out the money packages. It was not a heavy money train.

Refuses to Grant the Demands.

The Erie Railroad has given out in a brochure address to all its employes its reply to the demand of its engineers, conductors and firemen and trainmen made some time ago. These demands numbered eighty-three and related to a schedule of pay and regulations to govern the employes of the road. They come from the federated body of employes of the system. The demands are refused.

Studying Reciprocity.

The State Department is collecting preliminary information before pressing seriously into negotiations for reciprocity with the South American countries and with Spain. The Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department has been for some time preparing tables showing the relative exports and imports of southern countries from the United States and Great Britain, and from the continent.

Brainerd's Big Blaze.

A disastrous fire occurred in Brainerd, Neb. The fire started in the Commercial Hotel, and owing to the lack of water supply, spread with rapidity to adjacent buildings, the firemen being powerless to check its progress. Fifteen business houses and St. Francis' Catholic Church and parsonage were in ashes within an hour. The loss will exceed $100,000, with an insurance of less than $20,000.

Serious Shaken Up.

A special from Winnipeg (Man.) says: The west-bound express on the Canadian Pacific was wrecked at Popular Point, forty miles from Winnipeg, while going at the speed of thirty miles an hour, the engine having run into a herd of cattle. Three colonist cars and one first-class coach were derailed and smashed. The train was filled with passengers, who escaped with a severe shaking.

He Was Already Married.

A few months ago John Brandenburg, a well-to-do mechanic, won the affections of Miss Ida Schwatzler, at Erie, Pa., and their wedding day was fixed. Brandenburg assisted in the preparations for the wedding, but, when the hour arrived he did not materialize. After months of waiting the missing bridegroom was found with his wife and seven children in the vicinity of Lancaster.

Shot His Little Brother.

While a young son of James Niblack, a prominent business man of Decatur, Ind., was playing with a self-acting Smith & Wesson revolver, the weapon accidentally discharged, the ball passing entirely through the head of his 3-year-old brother with fatal results as he lay asleep upon his couch.

Disastrous Storm in Iowa.

A severe wind and hail storm passed through the southern part of the county, near Fort Dodge, Iowa. Buildings were unroofed, windows broken, and crops, fences, and trees leveled to the ground. The whole town of Lehigh was flooded, the water reaching to the first floors of many dwellings.

Murdered in His Home.

At his home near Worthen, Washington County, Ga., J. Thomas Tanton, a prominent and influential citizen, was assassinated as he was reading the paper. His wife heard the crack of a rifle, then a crash of glass and saw her husband fall dead. It is not known who committed the deed.

Rube Burrows' Will.

J. E. Grem, an attorney at Brenton, Ala., states that he has written Rube Burrows' will. It leaves all of his property, which is in three States, Alabama, Louisana, and Mississippi, to his son and daughter. The estimate put upon the property is $20,000.

Kentucky Race War.

Race war broke out near Middlesborough, Ky., and but for the timely interference of the police and the troops located there, it might have proven a disastrous conflict. As it is, however, three men have lost their lives, one white and two black.

Oklahoma's Capitol.

President Gardenshire, of the Territory Council, signed the bill locating the capitol at Oklahoma City, and it was taken to the Governor. So far, the Governor has refused to commit himself, but it is believed that he will sign the bill.

Boy Train Robbers.

Two boys, Ira and Lawrence Rucker, aged respectively 12 and 14 years, have been arrested at Seymour, Ind., for robbing the Evansville and Richmond mail-car two weeks ago. Some of the stolen property was found in their possession.

Roasted to Death.

Patrick Gorman, foreman of the Ohio Iron and Steel Company at Cleveland, Ohio, was roasted to death while asleep in a large iron room, by the gas being turned on by some unknown person.

KILLED BY A LUNATIC.

JAMES D. DOUGHERTY BECOMES A MURDERER.

Mary Anderson's Insane Lover Shoots to Death Dr. Lloyd, of the Flatbush Asylum—He Had Planned to Kill Several Other People—His Arrest.

[New York dispatch.]

Dr. George W. Lloyd, the Assistant Superintendent of the Flatbush Insane Asylum, was killed by James D. Dougherty, Mary Anderson's crazy lover, who had been generally regarded as a harmless crank. Dougherty escaped from the asylum about two months ago by means of a false key. Since then he has been frequently seen on Broadway in this city, and occasionally at Flatbush. He appeared there with a big revolver on Sept. 23, and by threatening the life of Superintendent Fleming got his clothing which he had left behind when he escaped. He was seen trudging through the miry grounds of the asylum late this afternoon. He walked up the wide stone steps of the main entrance to the asylum, placed his blackthorn stick and his cloak in the hallway, and appeared suddenly upon the vision of four startled men in the office on the right of the corridor. They were Dr. Lloyd, Dr. Thomas J. McGreal, the druggist of the institution, young Dr. Edwin W. Ashford, of Washington, who is superintending the taking of the Federal mortality census in Brooklyn, and Drug Clerk Schneider.

The spectacled crank stood, bareheaded, in the doorway of the office, with a big, brand-new, glistening revolver in each hand. His eyes were gleaming with the light peculiar to a dangerous lunatic, and the young physicians instantly recognized that they were in extreme peril. Their first thought was to pacify the madman by soothing words, and then overpower and disarm him. He stood in the doorway for a moment glaring at the frightened men, and then said, in a savage tone: "Where is Dr. Fleming?"

Dr. Lloyd nervously fingered the paper before him and answered: "Dr. Fleming has just put on his coat and hat and gone out."

Dougherty remarked gruffly, still glaring at the young physician, "I don't believe it."

Then he walked to the door of the pharmacy, which adjoins the office on the north, and backed in, covering the four men with his revolvers. "He is not in there, anyhow," he said. Dr. McGreal, white as plaster, stood directly in range of the weapons, with his back to the lunatic. It was only a few seconds that Dougherty was behind him, but he says it seemed like half an hour. Dougherty moved toward Dr. Lloyd, who was still sitting at his desk in the middle of the room. The Doctor said, in a conciliatory tone, looking calmly into the muzzles of the two self-cockers: "Dougherty, you ought to be ashamed of yourself to want to hurt Dr. Fleming; he has always been a good friend of yours."

The lunatic said nothing. He coolly walked up to the Doctor's chair, placed the muzzle of the large revolver (which is nearly a foot long) almost against the Doctor's left side and fired. The bullet pierced the young physician's heart and went clear through his body. He threw up his hands, arose convulsively from his chair, and exclaimed, "Oh, Dougherty!" While he was toppling, with his life already gone, the assassin sent another bullet through the Doctor's neck.

Dr. McGreal ran through the corridor into the street and shouted "Police!" There are no police within half a mile of the asylum, but the druggist didn't think of that in his excitement. As Dougherty passed Dr. Ashford in the hall the young Washingtonian noticed that he was remarkably cool. He still held the revolvers in his hands, and as he went out of the door he warned Dr. Ashford to keep back. But Dr. Ashford is a man of nerve, and, although unarmed, he determined to follow Dougherty and have him arrested. For nearly three-quarters of a mile he kept less than a block behind the murderer on a deserted road.

Every now and then Dougherty would stop, point his weapons at his plucky pursuer, and warn him back. But he kept right on when Dougherty resumed his flight, sticking his pistols in his hip pockets. Dougherty stopped a moment at the Kings County Hospital, near the asylum, and inquired for Dr. Arnold, whom he also intended to shoot.

Dougherty was finally arrested after crossing the Brooklyn bridge. The policeman who captured him took him around to the Oak Street Station and turned him over to Acting Captain Gahan, to whom he unfolded his plan of wholesale murder. He intends to kill ten or a dozen people, beginning with Dr. Fleming. Dr. Hoyt, the Secretary of the State Charities Board, was also to be a victim. He snuffed out the promising life young Dr. Lloyd because Dr. Fleming wasn't around.

He is said never to have been violent except on the occasion of Mary Anderson's return from Europe, and then he raved about the hallway at night until Night Clerk Waddell had to call in two policemen to quiet him. He would stand for an hour at a time in the hotel dining-room surveying a portrait of Mary Anderson.

From a letter written to Louis Spader, a guest at the hotel, it seems that Dougherty contemplated suicide after his campaign of murder. He said it was not worth while to ship his body to his home at Olean, Cattaraugus County, N. Y.

Dougherty gained wide notoriety by his mad infatuation for Mary Anderson. He followed her to Europe and disturbed her here and in other cities while she was acting by his attentions. He met her once when she returned from abroad, and was arrested for the effusiveness of his devotion.

THE NEW CHURCH CHOIR.

BY FLORENCE JOSEPHINE BOYCE.

Yes, sister Lu, I must confess
  That on this Sabbath day
A cloud has rolled across my breast
  That ne'er 'll be cleared away.

Fer arter five an' twenty year
  That I've that choir blest,
An' raised my voice in helpful cheer
  An' strove ter du my best;

An' arter all my darter's done,
  The orgin for ter play,
They've brought in youngsters, one by one,
  And crowded us away.

An', what is wuss, the chorister,
  Tergether with his wife,
Are stickin' ter the yellin' gang
  An' holdin' up ther strife.

An' thar's my darter Mary's beau,
  Whose bass has often rung
Through that ar' church, as saft and low
  As bass wus ever sung.

But now they've got ernuther one,
  In all ther change erbout,
Who yells until ye'd realy think
  He'd yell his palate eout.

An' Georgia Brown, the orginist,
  I couldn't help but sneeze
Ter see ther way she got up thar
  An' thumped upon ther keys.

An' ther sopranoes yelled a piece,
  In which ther tenors jined,
An' them two parts jest squeeked an' squalled
  Ernough ter set one blind.

An' of ther altos, sister Lu,
  I will not speak one word,
Fer they du as the others du,
  An' that is too absurd.

But once for all, I wish ter say,
  Before the hours grow late,
An' my pure soul has passed away
  Beyond the golden gate:

When I am taken ter that church,
  Ter ne'er come back agin,
I do not want that new church choir
  Ter squeal the final hymn.

DOROTHEA INGRAM.

A Story of Early Colonial Days.

BY CHARLES C. HAHN.

CHAPTER VI.

A PURITAN MAIDEN.

SHE hardly knew
She was a woman, so
Sweetly she grew,

was the experience of Dorothea Hillary. The most delicately tinted flowers are found in colder climes, and the violet of the forest is sweeter than the rich golden-rod of August sun and fertile prairie lands. So Dorothea grew in the forests of the new world, not very warm, not with flaming colors, or a luxuriance of passion, but in her face and in her soul were the tints of heaven. Her eyes were a clear brown, innocent and trusting, and on her lips hovered a perpetual summer calm. Right as to heart and brain, she won her way among the stern Puritans with an extreme gentleness, and yet early she learned to endure and to obey. Even while a girl, one could see that she would be a queen in marriage and a most perfect wife. Unconsciously, in her eyes were depths clear and full of love for her parents and for her lover. And yet she had ever one black shadow at her feet—the memory of her father and the suspicion that she herself was following in his footsteps. And as the years passed, the shadow not only lay at her feet, but rose and floated over her. In these days she sometimes murmured to herself a passage from an old book which she had found in her father's chest:

"Mother Mary, hear me and give me grace to bear my heavy load."

She meant it as a cry to her own mother, and did not know that the words were a prayer to the mother of God.

Nevertheless, perhaps the Blessed Virgin heard her.

Traces of her early life with her father were never effaced. In fact there were tinges in her character which were ever appearing like the recurring colors of the evening twilight, and Dr. Lennox never strove to blot them out. When mingling with the pioneers or their staid, young-old children, she could be as dignified and prosaic as they. But when they were gone and she was alone, or with her adopted father, all the influences and lessons of her early life appeared. She looked upon the trees of the forest and the flowers growing at their feet, at the running brook and the stars and the clouds overhead as the real things of the world, and hence nearer and dearer to her than men.

So ofttimes she was content to sit for hours beneath some tall oak tree, which, thick-leaved, sighed over her little head with an ancient melody as old as trees or the hills or nature. At such times there appeared in her soul those characteristics which were like golden tints in the sky, coming at the close of the day, as the bustle and worry of the world were dying away and the peace of the evening twilight reigned.

A glorious child, dreaming alone
In silken folds, on yielding down,
With the hum of swarming bees,
Into dreamful slumbers lull'd.

Some warm summer days she would wander knee deep through the meadow grass, along the little brook which circled half around the town. No bird would sing on these days, nor would any cloud pass across the sky, and the day would increase from heat to heat. Those were dreamy days, which a poet or a painter would love, and at such times all of Dorothea's early lessons in nature would come back to her. She would bend over a little struggling flower, hidden by the tall grass, and speak to it as if it were a friend. Even the coarse weeds, in which none else, unless it may have been the Doctor, could see aught but ugliness and Adam's curse, appealed to her. The broad meadow was a great bed, and she drew the tops of the grass tenderly between her fingers and dreamed—oh! who knows of what a child dreams at such a time? On days when there were clouds in the sky and a breeze was blowing the shadow of the former fell upon and floated over the bending grass and she imagined the field to be a miniature sea.

And to sit there, half hidden by the grass, and look out at the tall treetops which surrounded the village, and out into the sky beyond and overhead. Ah! what a quiet happiness that brought, and what fancies, quiet and dreamful, filled the child's mind. There was a lonesomeness in it, too, that was not altogether unpleasant. For somewhere beyond those woods she believed her father lived, and the same sky was over them both.

There was a little poem, or rather the fragment of a poem, which her father had once taught her, and although she did not at first probably understand it, the rhythm was pleasing and she often repeated it to herself:

The shadows on the Western slopes,
  The sky tints at the set of sun,
May thrill us all alike with joy,
  But he who paints them will be one
Among a thousand, if he catch
  And mirror back the beauties shown
In glowing sky and shadowing hills,
  And His, the master hand alone.

Sometimes come floating thro' the mind
  Or surging thro' the human breast
A thought, a feeling rich and rare,
  A gift to man, if but expressed.
And when one can, with rhythmic words,
  Move in our breasts sensations deep,
And strike the chord our own soul wept,
  For him the poet's name we keep.

The verses always recalled her father and made her sad, yet she clung to them with childish persistence and chose to be sad in memory with him, than lighthearted without. And yet, this loneliness never came to her.

But sometimes in the falling day
An image seemed to pass and say,
"But thou shalt be alone no more."

The image seemed to be that of the mother whom she did not remember, but whose portrait she wore upon her breast, and in her heart came a nameless feeling of peace.

For a pioneer, Dr. Lennox possessed a fine library, and many of the books were so quaint and old that it was a wonder he was allowed by the church to keep them. To these books Dorothea had free access, and no doubt the natural bent of her mind was fostered by them. Stories of the Crusades and of knightly deeds covered many a page, and the stories were woven into her dreams. At an early day also she came upon a botany, and with the help of her foster-father became skilled in analyzing the flowers which grew in the meadows and in the forests.

There was a school in Sagnauck, kept in a small cabin, one of the first erected and the first deserted by its owner when he became wealthy enough to build a more pretentious home. Here the Puritan children were gathered day by day to memorize the alphabet and struggle with the mysterious orthography of the English language. It was disagreeable work for the majority of the children, but Dorothea's dreaminess made it a romance to her. Each simple tale which she found in her reader had its interest, and she supplied the clouds and the flowers to make it beautiful. In after years these days were among the most pleasant in her memory.

CHAPTER VII.

IN THE MINISTER'S STUDY.

Mr. Granville's study was in a corner of the house and looked out upon the street. It was a very cozy room, furnished with a moderate library and writing desk and a snug fireplace, in which the various kinds of wood snapped and blazed in their season. An arm-chair made out of twisted boughs of hickory stood by the fireplace. In this room the minister spent most of his time, for the years had added to his load until he was glad to retire from his family, and so lose sight of their strange and painful condition. So, after having finished his sermon for the coming Sunday and read for the hundredth time his favorite volumes, he was wont to move his great arm chair from the table to the side of the fireplace, and, leaning back in its capacious depths, give himself up to thought. Here, surrounded by the cheerfulness which every work-room gives, the minister could at times forget his sad affliction and grow, for a few minutes, comparatively happy. But generally in these half-hours in the dusk he sat brooding over his trials and disappointments and the calamity which had fallen upon his family. The dim suspicions entertained ten years ago had been increased and rendered more vivid by the perusal of such works as Cotton Mather, and frequently after his sermons were finished he indulged in long sittings by his fire pouring over those stories of witches and witchcraft which so stirred New England and spread fear over her at the beginning of her life.

It was a cool evening in early autumn—in fact, the anniversary of the trial with which our story opens, although Mr. Granville did not remember it. The trial itself, however, was very distinct in his mind, as was every point in his enemy's life. The man had spent long hours meditating upon this one absorbing theme, and recalling every event or word in Mark Hillary's life, until he had become a monomaniac, and the thought of this rough wood-chopper was scarcely ever absent from his mind. Every scrap of intelligence concerning him had been carefully preserved and studied. Every word the man had ever uttered in the minister's hearing, or in the hearing of any who would communicate it to the minister, had been noted and dwelt upon during these after-sermon meditations. He had made a study of the man's life, and had even gone to the trouble of inquiring into his antecedents minutely. But all this was nothing compared with the awful anxiety his disappearance gave. Long hours the minister sat in his study speculating upon it. Sometimes he paused at the end of a paragraph in his sermon to gaze abstractedly out of the window and recall that last act in Mark Hillary's life.

Then, again, this was a favorite theme for his evening reveries, and often extended them far into the night, until his family, and, indeed, all Sagnauck, were wrapt in sleep. So the poor man wearily wore his life away.

On this particular evening he had been even more troubled by his gloomy thoughts. In his imagination he could feel an unseen presence in the very room, and in his heart hope died, as he said to himself:

"The man or his spirit is near."

This feeling was so strong that he arose and did what at no time before had he courage to do, or which his sense of honor would allow. He went to his desk and took out a little package which had been intercepted on its way to Dorothea two years before. This evening he tore off the wrapper, and in his hand lay a piece of birch bark, such as was often used by the Indians and by some settlers for writing paper. Upon this bit of birch was this sentence:

"Dorothea: Obey the one who keeps you and the one who watches over you, but whom you cannot see, will always provide for you."

"'Obey the one who keeps you.' That is damning," murmured the minister, and his lips turned pale. "It is a message from the evil one, and I have had it concealed in my desk. No wonder we have been afflicted. But, is it not necessary," he continued, after a pause during which he was plunged in deep thought, "is it not necessary that I keep it for testimony?"

But while he was yet undecided whether to cast the evil bark into the fire, or lay it away and brave the danger in the work of convicting a witch, the case was settled by a rap at the door, and, hastily opening it, he admitted the pioneer Squire.

"Come in, Squire, come in," the minister said; "you have come just as I wanted you. I have for some months wished to speak to you upon a subject that is troubling me. Sit down, I pray you.

"You remember Mark Hillary, who disappeared ten years ago," he continued, after his guest was seated in front of the blazing fireplace; "and you are also well aware of the strange manner in which my child has been afflicted."

"Does she grow no better as she becomes older?"

"Not at all. In bodily health she is some stronger, but her attacks have taken a more violent form. At one time I might have considered her frail health as the cause, but as she grows stronger her whole soul shows itself to be in an abnormal condition. If I could have doubted it at first, when she was ill, I cannot now, when she is well. My poor child, I fear, is the victim of the Evil One."

"And who do you suspect?"

"His daughter!"

The pronoun may seem very indefinite, but it was not to the Squire.

"Just before you entered I was reading a note which I want to show you. I have kept my eye on this daughter, and have discovered, among other things, that she is in communication with some one, we know not whom, unless it is as I suspect. This note, which I wish to show you, was intercepted. I have kept it in my desk for some time, but to-night opened it. See what a convicting document it is," and the minister handed the birch bark to the Squire. "'Obey!' It it is written by one who has authority. 'Obey the one who keeps you.' Who is it that keeps her? Evidently it refers to the Evil One, to whom she belongs. 'And the friend you know but cannot see.' Who would that be but the author of all evil? 'Will always provide for you.' Is not that full testimony to her league with the devil? He whom she cannot see will provide."

While the minister was making these running comments the Squire read the note through, holding it at arm's length.

"What shall you do with it?" he asked when the minister had finished.

"That is just what I wished to consult you about. Shall I preserve it as evidence against this—person, or shall I burn it? I must confess that I was strongly tempted to do the latter, thinking only of the safety of my family. But perchance I had better keep it," concluded the minister, with a sigh.

"By no means, I beg of you, my dear sir," responded the Squire, earnestly. "He who holds the devil's writing will soon have the writer in his house. It is by God's grace that he has not come to claim his own ere now."

But just as the minister was about to drop the piece of bark into the fire, the study door opened, his eldest daughter entered, and the minister, instead, dropped it upon the table near him.

Achsah was clad in white from head to foot, and to the two men, whose imagination was excited with thoughts of witchcraft, she appeared like a specter. And, indeed, the appearance of the girl at such a moment and in such a manner was startling. She was now tall and slender, and her height was greatly increased by the long robe of white; her face was pale and would have appeared deathlike had it not been for the piercing black eyes, which seemed to gleam with an unholy light, as she stood in silence and gazed into the fire. A log upon the hearth broke in two and fell between the andirons and blazed up afresh. As the flames sprang up and illuminated her face with their rosy light, the imagination of the Squire saw plainly the traces of some strange power which was working upon her, and he felt as if he were indeed in the presence of an unfortunate one over whom the evil one was hovering. He shivered and involuntarily passed his hand over his eyes.

"Achsah, what do you want?" asked the minister, anxiously.

"I came in for that," said the girl, pointing to the birch bark. The two men looked at each other in silence. Achsah reached out her hand and took the note, walked stiffly across the room and laid it upon the open desk by the window. This done, she returned, sat down upon a stool at her father's feet and became absorbed in watching the flames in the fireplace as they leaped up from the burning wood.

Horror-stricken, the minister and the Squire sat in silence also, watching her.

Soon the door opened and Ashubah, the younger child, came quietly in, and, without heeding the group by the fire, walked directly to the desk and took up the birch bark, which she gazed at as if charmed and unable to turn her eyes away.

Achsah arose from her seat, went over to her sister and without uttering a word, took the note from her and laid it back upon the desk.

Ashubah made no protest but returned with her sister and sat down on the opposite side of the fire.

Neither uttered a word or appeared conscious of the Squire's presence. Both seemed to be in a trance, so still were they, and so supernatural was their stillness for ones so young.

The Squire watched Achsah, who was seated in the shadow of the fireplace near him, the more closely. For about five minutes, but which to the excited man seemed like an hour, she sat perfectly motionless. Her first emotion was a shudder, and then the Squire saw a look of fear pass over her face and transform her features. Her eyes turned to the window. In looking around to follow her gaze, he saw that her sister was affected in the same way, and that the minister was pale and trembling.

"Our enemy is near!" he gasped, as he met the Squire's eye.

Looking then towards the window, to see what had so terrified the girls, he saw a black fantastic face peering into the room from the outer darkness. The light from the fire fell upon the window and made the sight most ghastly. It was a large head, surmounted with a fantastic cap, from which the Squire could see two small horns protruding. The face was dark, except in places where touches of paint illuminated it, and wore a malignant sneer as its sharp black eyes watched the cowering minister and his daughters.

"Did you see that face?" asked the Squire in a low voice which trembled with fear.

"No, but I knew it was near. You see the effect. O, God have mercy!" And the minister bowed down and hid his face in his hands.

The girls, however, never took their eyes from the particular pane of glass at which the face had appeared. And it was curious to note the different effect this apparition had upon the two. Ashubah, after the first shudder, recovered her calm manner and placid face, while Achsah, from trembling passed into an exulting state and sat smiling and returning grimace for grimace with the head outside.

If the Squire for a moment supected this face to be that of some boy bent upon a frolic, the suspicion was soon dispelled, when, after the minister had hid his face in his hands, he saw his eyes bent intently upon an object lying upon the desk. It was watching the note which Achsah had placed there. She also, it seemed, had observed the look, for she arose and started toward it. But before she could reach the desk a pane of glass was dashed in, a black, hairy arm thrust quickly through the aperture and a hand grasped the note. Achsah uttered a cry. The whole was done so quickly that when the minister looked up, startled by the sound of breaking glass and Achsah's cry, the arm had been withdrawn and the piece of bark had disappeared. The cry of the girl was answered by a harsh, grating laugh, which was echoed from the woods around, and for half an hour peals of diabolical merriment were heard about the house until they died away in the distance.

CHAPTER VIII.

AFTER FIVE YEARS.

Five more years passed in the history of Sagnauck since Mark Hillary's disappearance, and Dorothea, the girl-witch, was seventeen years old. She had grown up in these woods of New England free and untrammeled by the affectations of fashion.

Like a sturdy plant which needed only sun and air, she grew. It need hardly be said that her face was fair. Indeed, from it she deserved the name of witch, for truly it was one molded to bewitch the hearts of men, and many of the young pioneers there were who also felt its power.

She was of medium height, with a body well built. Her hands were finely shaped; her hair and eyes were brown. It was of the latter a poet has written:

"Brown eyes seem some rich, tempting wine
That might lead one to love them all too well."

And again:

"I know full well two deep dark eyes,
If brown or black, 'twere sometimes hard to tell.
Bright black in anger, brown in tenderness;
But when the long dark lashes half disguise
Their light, the usual fearless frankness flies,
And then there lurks in dim, secret mistiness
A gleam so subtle in its shadowyness;
I fear to glance, lest there should sudden rise
A flood of passionate tenderness, so deep,
So strong, that it were all in vain to fight
Its mighty tide; to brave it were unwise,
Lest I should be, if o'er me it should sweep,
Soul-blinded by the glorious dark light,
Till all the world seems naught but two dark eyes."

Many were the lovers who came to her, although each parent warned his own son against the wiles of the maiden, for now the suspicion of the minister had grown to be so positive that the girl really bore the reputation of a witch.

This was augmented by the detection of several mysterious visits Dorothea received from some unknown person. One evening, about a year after she was left alone in Sagnauck, the minister was walking through the words north of the village, when he heard two persons conversing, and, approaching, discovered Dorothea. Her companion disappeared as soon as the minister's footsteps were heard and the latter could not identify him. But the visitor wore the garb of an Indian. Dorothea's reticence with regard to the visit added to the minister's belief in her guilt.

After this first visit, Mr. Granville was on the alert to detect Dorothea in other delinquencies. He made excuses to be much from home, and seldom failed to follow her when she was sent upon any errand which would take her into the forest. So the man of God became a spy upon the poor girl.

And his labors were not without result. Twice during that year he came upon her in the forest holding secret converse with some unknown person, and as these meetings were always at night they confirmed the suspicions about the girl. It was also learned that after these interviews Dorothea always had a supply of money about her, and that once she brought in from the forest a bundle of furs, which were made into a cloak for her protection in winter.

One night in October, as the minister was prowling about in the woods, going where his diseased fancy led him, he suddenly found himself in the little opening in front of Hillary's deserted cabin. At the same moment a man dressed as an Indian came out of the cabin door and hastily disappeared in the woods. Mr. Granville, on the scent for anything which might convict the girl, entered the deserted place and began a minute search. He was rewarded by finding a small package—a piece of folded birch bark.

"No doubt it was a message from her master to Dorothea," and he carried it home with him.

An enmity, too, had arisen between Dorothea and Achsah Granville. The latter could not meet the former without her little weazened face drawing up into a scowl, and once she cried out that Dorothea had hurt her, although the two girls were several yards apart. This had occurred in front of the meeting house one Sunday morning as the people were coming out from preaching.

"You child of the devil!" the father cried. "Will nothing satisfy you? Why do you so persecute that poor girl?"

"Child of the devil!" Dorothea answered, "Methinks that is rough speech for a holy man of God. But how can I be Dorothea, 'God's gift,' and come from Satan?"

"You need not play upon words with me, for I know you. Tell me, if you are God's gift and not the devil's child, who it is you go into the woods to meet?"

"That I may not tell, reverend sir."

"No; the truth you say now. It would be to your shame to mention him whom you meet."

"Nay, sir," Dorothea answered, blushing; "there is no shame about it. But whom I meet does not concern you, and I shall not tell you."

"Perhaps you will not deny, then, that you received from him money and furs?" the persecuter said, in a fury.

"Have you been a spy upon me? Was it not enough for you to drive my father from his home? Have you no mercy that you follow and persecute a helpless child? Whether I receive aught from any one does not concern you. And now let me go on my way, for it is not seemly for you to hold such converse in front of the meeting-house on the Lord's day." And without waiting for a reply, Dorothea made her way to her adopted home.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Asbestos Mining.

Asbestos, popularly known as "mineral wool," is a compound of silica, lime, magnesia, and oxide of iron, and is probably the most curious natural product in existence. Being composed of fine fibers, it can be spun and woven into cloth, indestructible by fire, which renders it invaluable in many of the arts.

Mining is carried on by cutting down the hills of asbestos-bearing serpentine, much as a farmer cuts down a stack of hay or straw, or by open quarrying on the level.

The rock is blasted out, and the asbestos, separated from the containing rock, is "cobbed"—that is, separated by hammering from inferior foreign matter. This cobbing is a comparatively easy matter in the case of the finer quality, as it usually separates readily from the other minerals which the ore contains, but in the lower grades much difficulty is experienced in separating the fibrous matter from the non-fibrous.

At best there is a great waste. Much of the asbestos is in thin and narrow veins, and is wasted, as by the present mode of operation it does not pay to separate this from the serpentine. A machine that will enable these narrow veins to be utilized is needed.

When "cobbed," the asbestos is graded according to purity, color, and length of fiber into three grades, and bagged for shipment. The finest quality, or "firsts," finds ready sales at prices ranging from $80 to $110 per ton; "seconds" fetch from $50 to $70 per ton, while the "thirds" may be valued at $13 to $15 per ton. In good mines, the yield of asbestos is from three to five per cent. of the rock quarried, and the cost of mining may be put down at $25 to $30 per ton.

Did You Ever?

Did you ever meet a man who didn't want to talk about himself just when you wanted to talk about yourself?

Did you ever want to borrow money when everybody else didn't seem to be just as bad off as you were?

Did you ever know a woman who thought her husband was the smartest man on earth who wasn't a happy woman?

Did you ever know a man who was afraid to do his duty whom anybody had any respect for?

Did you ever perform a kind action in your life without feeling the better for it?

Did you ever do anything mean without feeling that you had killed something good in your soul by doing it?

Did you ever have anybody tell you an unwelcome truth about yourself without hating them for it?

Did you ever make a dollar in the devil's way without having to pay a dear price for it?—Ram's Horn.

THE AUBURN COURIER,

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY……OCTOBER 16, 1890.

REPUBLICANS have not desired to send speakers into Northern Indiana for many years. The people are too intelligent for that.

THE Record wants the American flag to fly on every sea. Well, it did fly on every sea till the republican party came into power. They soon made it fly off.

W. W. BELKNAP, died this week, was found dead in his bed. He was Grant's secretary of war—the man who sold the offices in his gift and did other disgraceful things.

A SEALING vessel belonging to American owners, was fired on recently by Russians as she was catching seals on their territory. The fire was returned and one man killed.

JUSTICE MILLER, of the supreme bench of the United States, died Monday night. He was 74, born in Kentucky, but appointed from Iowa, by President Lincoln. As a member of the electoral commission, he voted against Tilden, of course.

THE McKinley bill will make the one item of tinware, cost our people about ten millions more than the same goods have cost heretofore. And the people are expected to vote for the republican party, that saddles these extra burdens on them.

SENATOR PLUMB republican, of Kansas has presented a memorial to Congress on behalf of many thousands of laboring women of Massachusetts, who are getting only a little over ten cents a day, on an average. They can't see where the "protective tariff" benefits them.

IN REGARD to what we have frequently said about the sporting character of the present republican state officers, we would state that Bruce Carr, state auditor, had fast horses entered in the speed department at the state fair. If the state officers would do less sporting and more work, the state finances would be in better shape. Turn them out, and we can pay the debt.

THERE was a great rush at the New York custom house last week on the night before the new tariff went into effect. One captain reported his cargo just as the clock reached twelve, and saved the owners $150,000. Another captain got in a few minutes later and the owners of his cargo had to pay $18,000 extra. But of course this added cost is got back when they sell the goods to the consumer.

THERE is a hot fight in the struggle for congress over Hon. C. R. Breckenridge, in Arkansas. It will be remembered that after he was elected, two years ago, his unsuccessful rival was assassinated by unknown persons. No one blamed him for it, but the recent disgraceful action of congress unseated him. He is now running again, and attempts have been made to kill him. The negroes seem to be deep in the plot.

THE Butler Record knows that we have repeatedly "explained how the legislation under Cleveland" would tend to open the ports of the world to American trade, and so make more and better markets for farmers, so we could get once more the prices we got in low tariff times. Then, nations would trade with us, because we would trade with them. Under Cleveland we tried once more to treat other nations decently, so as to secure their business. Republicans prevented this, and are now doing still more to prevent it, so that several nations are now deciding that they will not buy of us. This cuts short our markets, our products cannot be all consumed at home, and hence, sales are dull, for the "home market" is not big enough to consume all we raise. As to the COURIER'S not showing that republican papers said prices would be better, etc., if Harrison was elected the Record must be forgetful, for we have already named the papers, the dates, and quoted the words used.

The Fenton Ladies' Band.

This famous company, that the Waterloo fair was so fortunate as to secure, proved one of their greatest attractions. It deserves more than a passing notice. It is composed of fourteen ladies, making with their accomplished leader, fifteen in all. Everyone is an artist in music, and whenever they played, the crowd gathered around them delighted. And not only are they accomplished musicians, but accomplished and respected ladies, moving in the best circles at their home in Fenton, Mich. Their selections of music are excellent, and include not only the usual choice pieces for bands, but in addition they give all the old and classic airs that have been favorites for years, tunes that never grow old, and which the people never hear too often. Not only was their music excellent, but it was abundant. They played often, and always drew a crowd of enraptured listeners. The people of Waterloo were greatly pleased with them. On Friday evening all the members of the band, the officers of the fair and their assistants, Judge McBride and his son, Charles, Mr. Coulogne and Mr. Newnam, who are secretary and president of the Kendallville fair, and Mr. Fleming and Mr. Pierce of Ft. Wayne, were invited to the residence of Geo. Blair, where a reception was held. There was music, interspersed with conversation, and all had a delightful evening. The ladies of the band proved as accomplished socially, as in a musical way. The fortunate ones who could be present will not forget this pleasant meeting, and the entertainers, Geo. Blair and wife and his accomplished daughters should have due credit. It might be added that the Fenton Band has assisted on great occasions all over the union. They will furnish music at the great Florida exposition this winter.

SECTION 44.

The New Election law section 44, should be read by manufacturers, railroad managers, and all who employ men.

It reads:

SEC. 44. No person entitled to vote at any general, national, state or county election, shall be employed upon the day on which such election shall be held in any manufacturing, mining mechanical or merchantile establishment or any railroad corporation in this State during the period of four hours after the opening of any election in the county in which [such] person is entitled to vote, except as to works of necessity, in which works of necessity every employe shall be given some period of four hours between the opening and closing of the polls on said day; and any Circuit Court may enforce the provisions of this section in term time or in vacation by mandate or otherwise, upon the application of any voter. Every officer of any corporation, owner, superintendent, overseer or foreman, who employs or permits to be employed any person in violation of this section, shall be guilty of misdemeanor, and fined not less than fifty nor more than five hundred dollars.

Learn How to Vote.

Don't fail to look again at the instructions as to how we are to vote as found on page 6, of last week's COURIER. Remember, that in brief, if we want to vote straight, we have only to stamp the square at the head of the ticket to the left of the words "democratic ticket." and not stamp anywhere else. But if we wish to vote a split or scratched ticket, we do not stamp the square at the head of the ticket but we go through the tickets and stamp the squares at the left of each name we wish to vote for. If there is a man we do not wish to vote for, then don't stamp him nor scratch him off, but leave him alone. And if you wish to vote for his competitor go over to that ticket, and stamp the square at the left of his name. When the votes are counted, the election board will count only the names that have been stamped. Anyone who does not understand this can ask the poll clerks, who will take him one side and explain it. Best way is to vote straight democratic ticket.

Registration Knocked Out.

One valuable feature of the new election law, that requiring registration of transient voters has been killed by our state supreme court. Last Wednesday they pronounced that part of the law, section 13, unconstitutional. This lets down the floodgates for illegal voting once more, and any man who can get a "fine worker" to swear in his vote is at liberty to come into the state and by his ballot, kill the vote of the oldest inhabitant, and best citizen of the county. It is unfortunate, to say the least, for this feature of the new law was one that promised to do very much toward ridding the state of one of the worst evils connected with our elections. Indiana has for many years been a close state, and at every general election there has been a disgraceful scramble for people who once lived in the state, or who claim they did, but who have no more right to a say in our affairs than has the man in the moon. They do not claim to be citizens at any other time. The decision of the court may be good law, but it is unfortunate for the interests of pure elections.

The Indiana Baptist State Convention

that met at Muncie last week was a large, well ordered and enthusiastic body, about 350 ministers and delegates being present. Dr. S. A. Northop, of Ft. Wayne, was chosen president. Dr. A. B. Cheffe, of South Bend, secretary. The session continued from Monday evening to Friday noon. Representative men were present from many states. W. L. Riley, of LaFayette, preached the opening sermon. Dr. Northop, Pres. Morgan Park Theological college, preached very ably on Wednesday night. On Thursday evening plans were developed for the thorough organization of the young people of the churches in the state for thorough training in church work. All the societies and their work were well presented, but notably the educational work of Franklin college was ably presented, as it deserves to be. No better work is done by any school in the land. The convention did itself great credit in all its business, but especially in organizing the Church Edifice Fund, which will be heard from later, and which proposes to build one new church edifice each year in the state at a point where it is needed.

Of Interest to All Invalids.

Dr. Fruth, of Provident Medical Dispensary, New York City, will make his next visit to Auburn, Swineford House Tuesday afternoon, October 21, 1890. Dr. Fruth is no stranger in this community. He makes regular visits here, and his many patients are ready to bear witness to the efficacy of his treatment and the permanency of his cures, even in those cases other physicians pronounced incurable. This fact alone ought to convince the most skeptical. Those who from year to year have been putting off the treatment which they need, should no longer doubt the evidence of their own senses. "Success is the test of merit," and Dr. Fruth's success is as remarkable as it is substantial. His reputation rests upon the solid basis of work done and of value rendered for every dollar of fees he has collected. Dr. Fruth is no tramp doctor, with no home, no place of business, no credit, no responsibility, who flits from city to city, professing to raise the dead, but makes professional visits to those communities where his patients are most numerous, and for the benefit of those who can not make it convenient to visit him at his home office. Those who, therefore, confound Dr. Fruith with the ordinary "traveling doctor" are unjust to him and to themselves, for by consulting, they would be convinced of their mistake. Do not put off your visit to some future time, but call and see him at once.

"My Only Family Medicine."

"I have been a user of Simmons Liver Regulator for many years, having made it my own family medicine. It is a pure, good and reliable medicine. My mother before me was very partial to it. I find the Regulator very safe, harmless and reliable as a family medicine, and have used it for any disorder of the system and found it to act like a charm. I believe if it was used in time it would prove a great preventative of sickness. I have often reccomended it to my friends and shall continue to do so."

That Oats Bill Again.

As much as we dislike newspaper notoriety, and the dragging of old matters before the public, yet in justice to Mr. Moody, we feel compelled once more to publish the facts in relation to his action when a member of the legislature, on what is known as the "Oats Bill." Little did we think that this would again become necessary, after the campaigns of 1882 and 1884, in which he carried with him, the journals of the legislature, publicly showing to all, who attended his meetings, that he never voted for this bill. The COURIER, then and now, a paper that reaches the home of nearly every voter in the county, published the record time and again during these campaigns, showing that he never voted for it. The Waterloo Press, also a paper of general circulation, after having published that he voted for the bill, examined the journal, and made a retraction through its columns in which it said: "If we have caused any one to believe that D. D. Moody voted in favor of the Oats Bill, we desire them to consult the record and see for themselves that he is recorded as voting against it" Yet we find that in this we were mistaken, for we are reliably informed that some men who certainly know better, through malice toward him continue to assert that he voted for this bill. It is an elementary principle of law, "That he who makes a statement, as true, which he does not know to be true, is as much to blame as he who makes a statement, as true, which he knows not to be true." This rule of equity may seem very harsh, and possibly should not be applied in this case. Yet the constant repetition that he voted for this bill, made by those who ought to know better, and in many cases do know better, does him the same injury, as though the statement was true. Is it not a shame, that statements, like these, made so wide of the truth, can find lodgment in the mind of any reasonable man, when the truth can be so easily ascertained? Yet it is a lamentable fact, that there are men having easy access to the records, that show these statements to be false, and whose attention has been frequently called to to the fact that they are false, continue to repeat them day after day. The Waterloo Press, a republican paper, after examining the records for themselves six years ago, and finding they were mistaken in what they had said, were fair enough to say they were mistaken, and gave him credit for having voted against the bill. Why should men of his own party be less fair than they? Once more we ask in the name of fairness, that each of you read the following, which is the vote for and against this bill:

"Senate vote is found on page 350 Senate Journal, 1881. The House vote is found on page 1459, House Journal, 1881. Mr. Macartney, republican senator at this time representing this and Steuben counties, voted for this bill. Mr. Taylor, republican representative from Lagrange county, voted for this bill. Mr. Taylor, republican representative from Noble county, voted for this bill, and our joint representative at the time from Elkhart, Noble and DeKalb counties, Mr. Iddings, a republican voted for this bill, and Mr. Thompson, of Elkhart, the man the republicans nominated in 1882 against Captain Barney, voted for this bill. Thus you will see every republican representative in this congressional district, including our senator, Mr. Macartney, voted for this bill, and Mr. Moody voted against it. Here is the vote in the senate:

Those who voted for the Bill were, Messrs. Bell, Benze and 29 others.

Those voting against the Bill in the senate, were, Messrs. Bischowsky, Bundy and 6 others—eight in all.

Those voting for the Bill in the House were, Messrs. Barnett, Bartlett and 63 others—65 in all.

Those voting against this bill in the House were, Messrs. Bushkirk, Cabbage, Cauthorne, Cummings, Gillian, McSheehy, Meredith, Moody, of DeKalb, Wilson and Mr. Speaker. Nays 10.

It is here seen clearly by the record that Mr. Moody never voted for this bill, but on the contry, stands alone as the only member, democrat or republican, in this congressional district, represented by four senators and nine representatives, who voted against the bill.

It is remarkable also, that he should receive so much abuse and misrepresentation at the hands of some, who are laboring to prejudice the farmers against him. On examination, we find that there were in the House, at the time 38 farmers, who voted on this bill, and that 37 of them voted for it, and that of the 10 votes cast against the bill, 8 of them were lawyers; 1 an editor, and but one a farmer. Moody voting against the bill, and 7 other lawyers voting with him. Then why, find so much fault with him? Undoubtedly all voted as they thought right at the time, for the author of the bill, Mr. Benz, said "the bill adds sorghum molasses to the list enumerated in the present law, and that is all the change it proposes to make." See Brevier Report, Vol. 19, page 165.

Every member that voted for this bill was re-elected to the legislature, and not a word said in any paper in the state of Indiana, against their having voted as they did. Then, why this continued abuse of Moody, when he voted right? If a vote for this bill was wrong (and we concede it was) then is he not entitled to some credit for having against it? When he was returned to the legislature, he introduced House bill 211; a bill to repeal this law, and make the standard weight of a bushel of oats 32 pounds, as it formerly was. See House Journal 1885, page 205, and the same was referred to the committee on Ways and Means, See House Journal, 1885, page 363, which committee made the following report: "Your committee on Ways and Means, to whom was referred House Bill No. 211, introduced by Mr. Moody, have instructed me to report the same back to the House with the recommendation that the same be indefinitely postponed." Which report was intended by the committee, to kill the bill. Knowing that the people were demanding a repeal of this law, Mr. Moody made the following remarks, which will be found on page 171, Vol. 22, Brevier report:

"I trust the report of the committee will not be concurred in by the House. I feel that the committee have not carefully considered the change sought by this bill or they would have recommended its passage. The Legislature of 1881 changed the standard weight of a bushel of oats in the state of Indiana from 32 to 33 pounds. The bill originated in the Senate, and as many supposed the only change the bill of 1881 made was in fixing the standard weight of a gallon of sorghum molases, the bill crept through both branches of the Legislature, aided as it was by the grain dealers of the state. This may seem to you gentlemen a small matter, but I want to say in all candor no law enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana in the last fifty years has caused so much dissatisfaction as the enactment of the law of 1881, changing the weight of a bushel of oats. All the great grain-growing states of the North and the West give and take 32 pounds to the bushel. And Indiana standing alone, by reason of the acts of the Legislature of 1881, compelling her farmers to sell 33 pounds of their oats for a bushel."

Mr. Pendleton said: "I have nothing to say on this subject except in confirmation of what the gentleman from DeKalb (Mr. Moody) has said. The whole State asks for the repeal of that law. Ever since the passage of the law in 1881, it has been a continual source of annoyance to farmers and shippers."

After these remarks by Moody and Pendleton, the report of the committee was non-concurred in the bill read a second and a third time; ordered engrossed, and on the 3rd day of March passed the House by a vote of 17 for the bill and 1 against it. See House Journal 1885, page 1023. And on the 7th day of March, it was passed by the Senate. See House Journal 1885, page 1114.

Thus you will see that Mr. Moody voted against this bill in the first place, and when he was returned to the Legislature he introduced a bill repealing it

Coughing

IS Nature's effort to expel foreign substances from the bronchial passages. Frequently, this causes inflammation and the need of an anodyne. No other expectorant or anodyne is equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It assists Nature in ejecting the mucus, allays irritation, induces repose, and is the most popular of all cough cures.

"Of the many preparations before the public for the cure of colds, coughs, bronchitis, and kindred diseases, there is none, within the range of my experience, so reliable as Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For years I was subject to colds, followed by terrible coughs. About four years ago, when so afflicted, I was advised to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and to lay all other remedies aside. I did so, and within a week was well of my cold and cough. Since then I have always kept this preparation in the house, and feel comparatively secure." —Mrs. L. L. Brown, Denmark, Miss.

"A few years ago I took a severe cold which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continual use of the Pectoral, a permanent cure was effected."—Horace Fairbrother, Rockingham, Vt.

Democratic Record.

The last legislature was in all respects a reform legislature and as it was democratic in both branches, it is well to tell the people once more, just what reforms they made. First we will name the school book law. For many years the people have been compelled to pay about twice what these books were worth. And in addition, book agents have gone over and over the state, bulldozing and scheming to secure frequent and expensive changes of text books. The legislature of a year ago last winter had this great evil to face. They gave us a law, that ends the control of the great school book rings, and keeps the book agents out of the state. No one has seen a book agent since the law passed except those sent around to keep the people from obeying the new law. In this they succeeded in some few cases, always creating confusion and added expense. But now they are gone never, we hope to plague the people more. And what is of as much importance, the new books are better, or at least as good as the old ones and cost only half as much. Nor can we change as often, and there will be no book agents to coax us into a change that we do not need. For these millions saved, a democratic legislature is to have praise, for the republican members voted almost solidly against the school book law, and a number of their state officers, including their superintendent of public instruction, and many of their county superintendents worked against it ever since its passage.

Next, we notice the new election law. The old law was a wise and just one, and if politics had not grown so corrupt, would have been satisfactory. But some way must be taken to prevent the wholesale corruption at the polls. The new law will, we believe improve the matter very much, and possibly entirely prevent all corruption in the future. This measure, too, was supported by all the democrats, and to a great extent opposed by the republicans who preferred to take their chances by blocks-of-five methods under the old law. Then we find $100,000 appropriation to rebuild the State Normal school at Terre Haute, $60,000 for a new library at Bloomington for the State University, $40,000 for new buildings at Lafayette. Our several benevolent institutions were overhauled and abuses in their management corrected. An act was passed providing for night schools in cities of more than 3,000 inhabitants, and one providing for free kindergartens in incorporated towns and cities. Acts were passed providing for acceptance of donations for high schools, colleges and Purdue University. The city of Indianapolis was empowered to raise funds for new school buildings, which she greatly needed, by issuing bonds in anticipation of revenue. The injustice of forcing the gratuitous attendance of teachers' institutes was rectified by allowing them their ordinary wages for the time so spent. Recognizing the great importance of library education to the people, provision was made for putting the state library on an equal footing with the libraries of neighboring states and the city of Indianapolis was empowered to double its library tax. The house passed a bill providing for the rehabilitation of the township libraries and their future preservation, but most unfortunately it failed of passage in the senate. It was a measure that should have been adopted, and which will be adopted at the next session. With that exception, the democratic party fully sustained its reputation as the steadfast and consistent friend of public education. Besides these, many other acts can be placed to their credit. The school book law alone will save for the people of the state over two millions a year. We believe the people will approve these measures by making the next legislature democratic.

INDIANA settlers registered more names, about 11,000, than any other state society at the recent southern Kansas fair at Wichita. Illinois came next.

"Some lives are like Horse shoes the more worn the brighter"!
Busy wives who use SAPOLIO never seem to grow old. Try a cake…

A complete wreck of domestic happiness has often resulted from badly washed dishes, from an unclean kitchen, or from trifles which seemed light as air. But by these things a man often judges of his wife's devotion to her family, and charges her with general neglect when he finds her careless in those particulars. Many a home owes a large part of its thrifty neatness and its consequent happiness to SAPOLIO.

☞Grocers often substitute cheaper goods for SAPOLIO, to make a better profit. Send back such articles, and insist on having just what you ordered.☜

W. D. Smith, one of the enegetic young teachers from Fairfield, was in town Saturday attending the Teachers' Association. We were pleased to receive a call from him as well as from M. J. Hadsell, of Concord. Both speak highly of the association meeting, there having been about sixty in attendance, and the exercises very interesting and valuable. The teachers of old DeKalb are always alive and progressive.

The St. Joe News, by its Auburn correspondent has a good word to say for Judge McClellan. Coming from a republican of well known honesty and integrity, it is very acceptable. It says:

"Hon. C. A. O McClellan returned on last Thursday from his attendance upon one of the longest Congressional terms known to the country. During all this period, he was always at his post and upon all the great questions considered, his vote is on the record. It is too much the case, that offensive and unpatriotic partisan feelings should begrudge a member of the opposition even due of praise, legislating as he aims to do in the interest of the country. To speak without bias, Judge McClellan has been an able and conscientious representative, an honor to the 12th district and a credit to the county and town in which he has his home."

Clara Freeman St. Joe, has as fine a lot of trimmed goods as has ever been displayed in St. Joe. Call and examine her goods before you buy.

Rev. Mr. Ashcraft, of Leo, preached at the M. E. church last Sunday morning and evening. They were able sermons and listened to by fair sized audiences.

The young men of chorus class are requested to meet at M. E. church Friday evening of this week to arrange for music for opening of reading room in near future.

Mrs. H. Leib of Lansing, Mich., and Mrs. P. Morel of Waterloo were entertained Tuesday by Mrs. A. B. Richards and Mrs. Phil Plum. They were old Waterloo neighbors.

Harrison did not return by way of Auburn Junction. So our people missed seeing the man who signed the McKinley bill that raises the price of so many things we have to buy.

The Arion Quartet goes over to La-Otta Friday evening to sing for a big prohibition meeting. The famous "Kansas Cyclone," Van. Bennett, will speak, and they expect a big time.

The Camp Fire Companion and the COURIER have a clubbing arrangement. The Companion is a monthly at 75 cents a year, and at club rates both papers for $1.80. Samples of each can be seen here.

Mr. Meese, has been engaged by the company at Ft. Wayne, to sell a new washing machine, the "Rocker." He likes it very much, and believes it will prove even more popular than the Favorite. He had them at the Waterloo fair.

The packages of COURIERS destined for postoffices north of Auburn, were delayed last week because of the wreck on the Jackson Branch, near Jackson. No mail car came south and so none went back north, Thursday noon They were all in the postoffice here on time.

M. W. Johnston who has been assisting his father in the dental office leaves this week for another term in the dental college at Indianapolis. As this will leave the Doctor without help he is compelled to make a change in dates, and between this and spring will be in the Waterloo office, only on Thursday of each week.

The Smith family of which our friend D. T. Smith is a member had a family reunion last month in Butler township, at the home of Mrs. Sol. Simon. About a hundred were present, including some from a distance, and those acquainted with the family, will know they had a good time.

Henry Hamman and his wife drove down from Ray, or State Line Tuesday and spent a day with Mrs H's mother, Mrs. Mary Rohm. Mr. Hamman reports his crops as very fair for this year. It may be of interest to state, that though his land is good, it is rather stony. He has hauled 2010 loads of stone off of 70 acres, mostly small stone.

The greatest attraction of the season and for one night only, is the great spectacular drama of the Black Crook, Oct. 20, or The Tale of Enchantment. The leading star is Miss Myrtle Musgrave assisted by a host of artists. The grand transformation scene with its dazzling splendars is alone worth the price of admission which is 35 and 50 cents. Secure your seats early.

The autumn winds and rains, assisted by Jack frost, have turned the beautiful, green foliage of the forest to a bright, golden yellow, mingled with rich tints of lake and carmine, and the brow of earth is clothed in a gorgeous raiment of the precipitated luxuriance of the monarchs of wood. But nature in all its gaiety, will ere long give way to biting frosts, cutting winds and blinding snows.

Ft. Wayne Journal: Congressman McKinley passed through here this morning on a special train from Kalamazoo to Orville, Ohio. He has been up into Michigan in Burrow's district, endeavoring to convince the people that a 60 per cent. increase in taxation is a good thing for them. The Ohio statesman should confine his efforts to the lunatic asylums. The inmates are not responsible and might agree with him.

As the cold, chilling blasts of winter draw nigh, and the avenues of business open up, affording employment to the laboring classes, the need of rentable houses is more deeply felt than ever. It seems to be a very difficult matter for those wishing to come from other towns to live in Auburn, to find houses suitable to live in, that can be rented. It strikes us very forcibly, that it would pay a good per cent on the investment for some one, who has the capital, to erect a number of good, substantial dwellings for the purpose of accommodating the growing demand in this line.

Special cloak opening on Monday, Oct. 20.

The tower of the new M. E. church is now up above the trees.

Harter gives a special cloak opening on Monday Oct. 20. All come.

The ladies of the Lutheran church will give dinner and supper, Nov. 4.

D. Y. Husselman has to pay $2.50 more for a box of tin, now under the new tariff bill.

Mr. Penfield is again improving though he had been worse since our last issue. He is now in a fair way to recover.

Court has started up again. Kous will be tried next Monday for stabbing P. F. Ryan. Mr. Dills for defense, assisted by Judge Dawson of Ft. Wayne.

The young ladies mission circle, will meet in the lecture room of the M. E. church Friday afternoon at 2:30. All members are earnestly requested to be present.

Mrs. Alzina Glazer is home again after her second trip to Ohio. She was called there by the illness of a sister, who had improved somewhat, before she started back here.

The ladies of the Lutheran church are requested to meet in the lecture room, Saturday afternoon, at 2 o'clock. All who are interested in church work should be present.

Mrs. R. H. Cobb is back again after her long stay at Indianapolis. She is considerably improved and will probably be fully restored to health at last. She goes back this week.

Nice clean office at the Palace barn where ladies can wait when ordering carriages. No loafers or offensive language allowed. J. C. Henry & George Swineford, Props. 42-45

D. K. Houghton, now of Illinois has been back here a few days talking with the old neighbors. He is looking the picture of good health, and is prospering financially, which we are pleased to see.

Trentman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

Cleveland, Ohio.

Among the improvements on South Main street, is noticed the new stone wall that is being put under the residence of our popular townsman, E. D. Hartman. It is a good, solid piece of masonry, and will add to the comfort and convenience of Mr. Hartman.

Rev. H. G. Stringfellow preached a very able sermon Sunday evening, to an interested audience. He is one of those old-fashioned rough and readys, who "hew to the line, let the chips fall where they may." Truth seems to be his standard, and his discourses, from that standpoint, are very interesting.

MILES' NERVE & LIVER PILLS. Act on a new principle—regulating the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new discovery. Dr. Miles' Pills speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles, constipation. Unequaled for men, women, and children. Smallest, mildest, surest! 30 doses, 25 cts. Samples free at F. E. Davenport's.

The well known old Allen county, pioneer, Peter Kiser fell dead while walking along the railroad track in Ft. Wayne last week. He was in many respects, a remarkable man, and has been a prominent figure in northeastern Indiana for more than half a century. Totally without a school education, he still became prominent in business and in politics, had been in the legislature, and been in other places of public trust and confidence.

The editor of this paper has been unfortunate in securing the enmity of every drinking printer he ever discharged for this cause. First it was the Garrett Bologna editor, and now its humble follower and imitator, the Auburn Wienerwurst. Both hopped onto us last week. The latter don't like cheap spectacles. If he will put back in the COURIER's till the money he collected on the last bum he had while employed by us, and which he spent in saloons, we can get a better pair. The Bologna and the Wienerwurst are a lovely pair.

Auburn Fair Society.

The stockholders of the association met in Ensley's Hall Monday forenoon, for general consultation. There was a good attendance. The officers made partial reports, so as to show to some extent the condition of the society. It appeared there had been a considerable sum received at the fair, over and above the amount of premiums, and other expenses, about $1,400 as already announced in the COURIER the only paper in the county that got that near right. The number of tickets sold in all during the week was 11,673, making the gate receipts $2,918 25. Receipts from grand stand, $239, from privileges, $943.67, making a total of receipts $4,100.92. The society still owes a considerable sum on buildings and improvements, and a part of the purchase money for the land. They have to offset this in part, about $2,500 including $2,210.75 stock not yet paid up, the most of which is good. It was decided to go on and sell more stock, as there is still over $7,000 not disposed of. Several present at once agreed to take more, the sums so pledged amounting to $600. Meeting adjourned after appointing S. Kutzner, Wils McClellan and Gene Trout as auditing committee. The directors met at 1 p. m. when $200 more of stock was taken. James Draggoo, took the note of the society at 8 per cent., and so carries their debt. Vigorous measures will be taken at once to put the association out of debt at an early day.

The L. L. C. will meet with Mrs. Rose.

Dr. Fruth at the Swineford House Oct. 21.

See G. H. Yesbera when in need of clothes.

Cloak opening at Harter's Monday Oct. 20.

Levi Osbun, in Jackson, has a sale Saturday of this week, at 1 p. m.

The best and cheapest place in Auburn to buy neck wear is at G. H. Yesbera's.

Monday Oct. 20 will be ladies' day at Harter's. Special display of ladies' and children's winter wraps.

Rev. H. M. Lamport accompanied his mother back to Osceola this week, but will be back before next Sunday.

Don't be mislead but go where you know you can be suited. G. H. Yesbera has the goods and always tries to please.

Judge Dawson of Ft. Wayne, and Judge McClellan will address the Gray Club at their meeting next Tuesday evening.

Miss Lamboley, who has been trimming in the wholesale house at Ft. Wayne is helping Miss Freeman St. Joe this season.

Many of our K. P. friends went up to Angola Tuesday to help dedicate the new hall. Five coaches, loaded with Ft. Wayne brethren went through here.

Davenport is buying all the second hand school books he can get. He took in 300 pounds the first day he began to buy. All who have books to sell should see him.

Campanini, the famous tenor, has written a striking article on "How to Train the Voice" for The Ladies' Home Journal, and it will appear in the November number of that periodical.

Have you farmers seen the new Palace barn one door west of Swineford House? If not, just give them a call. Livery, feed and sale. J. C. Henry & George Swineford, Props. 42 43

The 21st annual state meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association of Indiana, will be held at Richmond, Oct. 30, Nov. 1 and 2. E. B. Stacy is state secretary, 35 North Illinois street, Indianapolis.

Mrs. E. Snyder went to Illinois this week to visit her son William who resides at Chrisman in that state. Last year, she went out and paid a visit to S. H. Snyder, at Neodesha, Kansas, and found him and his little household prospering.

The show at the Opera House next Monday evening will be the event of the season. The Black Crook, that with its splendid scenery made such a sensation several years ago in all the large cities, will be produced here, with its gorgeous scenery, costumes and music. Don't fail to see it.

C. J. Porter, the Waterloo optician will be in Auburn at the Hollister House, the first Tuesday in each month, to meet all who desire his service in fitting defective eyes with the proper glasses, and for all the work in his line. Long experience should be valuable in this case above all others. The eyes should not be trifled with. An eye once lost can never be restored and great care should be taken to preserve them. Mr. Porter stands at the head of his profession in this special department. Don't trust your eyes to inexperienced or careless men, but call on him when here and get glasses such as you need. Don't forget the dates, the first Tuesday of each month. 42

Paid in September.

Though a little late owing to the amount of matter that has been pressing for space, we this week give a list of those friends who have paid in various sums on subscription during last month. F. K. Blake, T. J. Baxter, C. F. Ash, J. D. Rowley, John Leasure, Mathias Cupp, C. W. Kaley. H. J. Mossey, David Andrews, Sandford Smith, H. W. Bowman, Horace Shoemaker, J. C. Obituary.

Miss Emma D. Morr, daughter of George W. and Rebecca Jane Morr was born in DeKalb County, Ind., January 18, 1866. A little over three years ago she was converted and united with the Methodist Protestant church at Concord, Ind., under the pastorate of Rev. J. M. Langley. For some months the system has been giving away under the ravages of consumption. She retained her consciousness to the close, suffered much during her illness, and bore it with patience. When the writer called upon her, he found her trusting in God for salvation through Christ and in Him she trusted to the close of life. A few days before her departure, she exhorted her eldest sister. Mrs. Elda Olinger, to accept of the same Savior, and with her left a message of the same character for other friends. While talking one day of her suffering, with a smile she says: "This isn't much to what Christ suffered for me, is it?" She wished much for the time of her departure, which wish was granted on the evening of Oct. 4, 1890, when with clasped hands raised indicative of joy, she said, "I'm going." A few minutes more and had gone at the age of 24 years, 8 months and 12 days, to join the mother who died two years ago the 11th of September. She left the father, four brothers and four sisters, and many friends to mourn her loss. The funeral services were held at the residence of her father one half mile west of Concord Oct. 6, 1890, conducted by the writer.

S. S. STANTON.

The Tariff in Auburn.

John Harris at the Junction, our enterprising wholesale oyster dealer, has just had a clip from the new McKinley tariff, that brings the matter right home to us. He has been paying all along, $25 a thousand for his oyster cans. But when he got his consignment this week, the bill came at $27.50 a thousand, and was explained by a note saying that the extra $2.50 was on account of the increased tariff on tin, as fixed by the McKinley bill, which went into effect only the week before. Of course the tin out of which these cans were made, was imported before the new bill took effect, and the can makers, will get that extra profit out of their old stock, for that is the way it always works. In this case, the government gets nothing. The can maker makes a big thing out of the people who deal with him. Extra high tariffs are made for this very purpose—to favor certain classes. But the advanced price, will of course have to be kept up, for the next tin these can makers import, will actually have to pay more duty. Harris will go on paying the extra $2.50. Thus, as the COURIER has always said, the consumer pays the duty in increased prices. The foreigner don't pay it, as ignorant republican editors have been telling, nor does it make things cheaper, as they have also told. Ask John Harris. He is a man well known among our people, is reliably honest. He paid the extra $2.50. Now when a republican praises the high tariff to you, refer him to this case. Republicans dare not go on the stump and defend this iniquity.

The Display at Harter's.

It is beautiful, and should be seen, as it can not be fully described. We mean the grand display of trimmed hats and bonnets, exhibited by them yesterday and to-day. Such a display has never before been shown in Northern Indiana. All the latest styles and most lovely designs and trimmings in a bewildering array, and so many of them. Then the profusion of feathers, ornaments, ribbons and everything in the millinery line. The designs of these trimmed goods, should be especially studied. They are not the stiff, conventional designs one may see any day, but original and fresh. To Miss Clayburg and her assistants, is due the praise of much of the loveliness of this display. They are evidently masters of their art, and real artists at that. We stop here, for as we said at first, words fail to describe the display. Go and see for yourselves, ladies.

Weddings.

Rev. W. L. Meese, who is so popular with our young people reports the following: October 8, 1890, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. Wm. Walters to Miss Ellen Roberts, both of Auburn.

Also, Oct. 9 at the residence of Mr. Meese, Mr Newton S. Squires to Miss Christena Wagner, both of Jackson township.

Also, October 12. at Mr. Meese's residence, Mr. David F. Heitz to Miss Emma Weller, daughter of Phillip Weller of Swan. Mr. Heitz is a resident of Butler township. The COURIER sends best wishes to all these fortunate young people.

New Grocery Firm.

There is change of firm on Ninth street. Charles Schnell who has acquired popularity as a groceryman, has sold his business to a new firm. G. A. Mader and E. H. Hartman. Mr. Mader is well known having been reared in sight of Auburn, and Mr. Hartman comes with an excellent reputation, from South Chicago. They will put in and keep up a full line of family groceries, and the establishment will be fully maintained. We bespeak for the new firm a good patronage The old customers and many new ones, are asked to call on them.

Judge McClellan's Opponent.

They have at last got a man who will stick. At least we suppose he will, and make the hopeless race against our popular congressman. It is Norman Babcock, of Lagrange county. He is a well-to-do farmer, a prohibitionist. It is not believed he will cut much of a figure in the campaign.

One at Night.

One dose of Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup taken in the evening before retiring will give you a good night's rest. It will cure your cough quicker than any other, and it is pleasant to take. If you have never tried this remedy, ask your druggist for Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup the next time you buy. It is guaranteed to give satisfaction. Sold by F. E. Davenport.

Four Hours' Time to Vote.

Our voters should read section 44 of the new election law, which we publish to-day. It is of especial importance to all corporations and companies that employ men. Every manufacturing establishment, every shop, store, railroad, or any firm that employs laborers of any kind must give them time to vote. The law says they may have four hours. And the polls in Auburn, Waterloo, Garrett and Butler, must be opened at six in the morning. Read the law.

The Gray Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Gray Club Tuesday evening was well attended. The first speech was by Mr. Brickman, and was a masterly, and unanswerable arraignment of the republican party. He was generously cheered. He is a young man of ability and will, we predict, make his mark in his chosen profession, the law. He was followed, by Mr. S. M. Foster of Ft. Wayne, in one of the most clear cut, convincing and eloquent speeches we ever heard. He showed up the beauties of the McKinley bill in fine style. Among other points he made was his allusion to the increased price of buttons, which have risen within a few days now, to three times the former price. He is a manufacturer of shirts etc., and uses many buttons. The increased price to him in this alone, will be not less than $1,000. He has to pay this, and then charges higher for his goods, to keep safe, and so "the consumer pays the tax." The next club meeting is Tuesday evening of next week. There will be a good speaker.

In one instance several pages are given up to lamenting the death of his farmer.

He meets them, tells them he needs an assistant in his business, proposes marriage, and then borrows what money and valuables they have and is seen no more. STAMMERERS rarely, if ever, show any impediment to speech when speaking in whispers. On this fact a new method of treatment has been founded, which is as follows: In the first ten days speaking is prohibited. This will allow rest to the voice, and constitute the preliminary state of treatment. During the next ten days speaking is permissible in the whispering voice, and in the course of the next fifteen days the ordinary conversational tone may be gradually employed.

A NEW and useful employment has been suggested for women which promises rapid development. This is that of professional packer. The need of this kind of service is apparent to those who witness movings and transportation of household goods, now so much more frequent than formerly, or who see the interior of women's trunks or men's valises. The cost of such helpers would be more than covered by the security and the absence of loss, provided the women were trained, competent and faithful.

IT was predicted by the American Manufacturer, Railroad Gazette, and many other class journals five years ago that the result of laboring men's unions would be an offensive and defensive alliance on the part of great firms and corporations. The prediction has come true, and there is no sort of doubt that all the prominent railroad men have organized, and that iron men shoe men and other manufacturers are quietly banding together for mutual protection.

AN interesting spectacle has recently been seen in the Orkneys. It is probably the first of its kind ever authenticated in living memory. A correspondent writes to a contemporary: "What is said to be a mermaid has been seen for some weeks at stated times at Southside, Deerness. It is about six to seven feet in length, with a little black head, white neck and snow-white body and two arms. In swimming it appears just like a human being. At times it will come very close in shore and appear to be sitting on a sunken rock, and will wave and work its hands. Many persons who doubted its genuineness now suppose it to be a deformed seal."

OTTERS and minks were very scarce in Connecticut a dozen years ago, and it was feared the animals might become extinct, for their hides were worth from $5 to $10 a piece, and everybody hunted them. Then suddenly fashion changed her mind about the value of mink and otter skins, the price went down, and now the animals abound in the State again. So numerous have minks become there that they are getting to be quite familiar with country people. Recently a mink, frightened by a sharp thunder storm, fled out of a meadow, rushed into a farmer's dwelling, and raced from room to room until a hound caught him up-stairs in a chamber. A still more remarkable incident occured in Hartford a few days ago. A mink trotted right into the heart of the city, among throngs of people on the streets, and passed all kinds of dogs with impunity, and finally made his way into the back yard of a big store on Asylum street. In the yard men cornered him and tried to capture him alive, but he fought so desperately that they had to kill him.

It is comforting to know that the danger of being buried alive exists almost solely in the imagination. Yet this fear haunts the minds of so many of our fellowmen that it may hardly be regarded as strange, in some respects, that a number of physicians in a city near Philadelphia banded themselves together to devise means to prevent such a catastrophe in their own case. And when physicians could take such measures in view of a supposed danger, it is not remarkable that the community should have a special and exaggerated horror of being buried alive. But this horror is as unreasonable as is the timidity of the physicians referred to. There seems to be no good ground whatever for supposing that it is possible, in this enlightened age, for any person to be committed to the grave while yet living. Stories reporting such occurrences are by no means rare; but any one who examines them closely will certainly remark that they are wholly lacking in originality, and that there is in fact so strong a resemblance between them as to excite the suspicion that one has been copied from another. Investigation will show, too, that this suspicion is a well-founded one.

"GOD KNOWS."

A Skeleton Found on the Western Prarie.

We had been riding for two long days over the dreary plains—the same monotonous scenery always in view—rough, sterile ground—outcroppings of rock—a lone tree or brush at long intervals—the ground baked and cracked under the summer sun. The prairies were made to enrich the farmer—the plains to revenge on man and bird and beast. Only the serpent can live there. Over these barren stretches no bird flies—on them no wolf can find living. The monotony is maddening—the sterility appalling.

The sun was only an hour high as the column obliqued more to the left in search of a camping ground. Those of us in advance were just ascending a swell covered with large bowlders when a trooper suddenly cried out in alarm and pointed to something on the ground at his horse's feet. We gathered around him, and for a minute no one spoke. There, cuddled against the rock, was a skeleton—a clean picked, bleaching skeleton, with never a bone missing from its place. It was, as all saw at a glance, the skeleton of a child not over 6 or 7 years of age. The shoes, which had rotted from the feet; the few bits of cloth; the buttons lying about, proved it to be the skeleton of a little girl. It had sought what little shelter the rock afforded, and it had died there—died as if the grim messenger had come in its dreams. It lay on its side, the head resting on the right arm, and the limbs were as composed as if death had brought no pain.

"Whose child?" asked a sergeant, "whose child, and when?"

Ah! who could answer! Fifty miles away was the immigrant trail. One—two—three—perhaps five years before, a wagon had left the convoy for some reason and became lost on this desolate expanse. A child had wandered away from camp in search of flowers—had fallen from a wagon and been stunned—had been left sleeping in the grass by accident. No one could tell how it happened, but everyone could imagine what followed. A child of seven left alone in this awful region, where the voice of a bird is never heard—where rattlesnakes sun themselves on every ledge—where the starving wolf flits by like a shadow as he hastens to other fields. The very terror of it would strike her dumb. She would stare about her with an awful wildness in her eyes—her face would be whiter than snow—her lips would part, but no word could pass them. Then she would flee, attempt to run away from loneliness and desolation. She might live two days—three—four. Then hunger and thirst and mental torture would overcome her, and she would lie down to die.

"Whose child, and when?" asked the sergeant as others came to look down on the bleaching skeleton.

This time a captain answered—a bronzed-faced, gray-haired man who had seen many mysteries of the kind. Removing his cap he turned his face to Heaven and answered:

"God only knows!"

Hearts had ached—hearts may have broken—hearts might be aching then and for long years to come.

We sent to the wagon for spades and a head-board. A few feet from the rock we dug a little grave and the skeleton was tenderly lifted up and deposited therein, and as the earth covered them up a score of men uncovered their heads and the captain said:

"Earth to earth—ashes to ashes—dust to dust! The mystery is with thee, O Lord!"

And on the head-board we carved the legend which men may read to-day:

SOMEBODY'S CHILD.
GOD ALONE KNOWS.

TARIFF LETTERS TO FARMER BROWN.

NO. 4.

Where the Tariff Is a Tax to the Hilt.

Dear Farmer Brown:

In my last letter I stopped abruptly with the mere mention of the third class of commodities, which are either not made here at all or are made in quantities not sufficient for the home demand.

On this class the tariff is a tax to the full amount of the duty on both the imported and the domestic article. I am happy in having Major McKinley and his committee in agreement with me on this point. He says in the report on the tariff bill, in speaking of the duty on sugar, that "it is a tax which is added to the price not only of the imported but of the domestic product." He shows that the duties collected on sugar were $55,975,610; and then he makes the following remarkable statement—remarkable for him: "Add to this the price of domestic sugar arising from the duty, and it is clear that the duty on sugar and molasses made the cost of the sugar and molasses consumed by the people of this country at least $64,000,000, or about $1 for each man, woman and child in the United States more than it would have been if no such duties had been levied and the domestic product had remained the same."

In making this statement Maj. McKinley is entirely in the right. The sugar duty, which he has just removed, was $2.22 per hundred pounds on raw sugar. But 112.5 pounds of raw sugar is necessary to make 100 pounds of refined; the duty therefore, entering into 100 pounds of refined sugar was $2.50.

Now, I have before me a table of the prices of the best granulated sugar in New York and in London during the first nine months of last year; and the figures show that this sugar ranged from $2.50 to $3.57 per hundred cheaper in London than in New York. The price ten days ago was $3.80 per hundred in London for granulated sugar, and $6.625 in New York, or a difference of $2.825 per hundred, or actually more than the duty. Maj. McKinley did not state the case any too strongly.

Maj. McKinley, however, is careful to point out the fact that we produce only one-eighth of our sugar, and this is claimed by him as the explanation of the fact that the entire duty is added to both our native sugar and the imported article. He takes the trouble to tell us that this "is not true of duties imposed on articles produced or made here substantially to the extent of our wants."

Let us see how this works with lead. Our production last year, as stated before the McKinley committee, was 190,000 tons, while our imports were stated to be only 1,172 tons. The home market is secured to domestic producers by a duty of 2 cents per pound. And now for the prices: The latest reports give the New York price at 5.30 cents a pound; and dispatches from London on the same day give the price there at 3.08 cents. The difference of 2.22 cents being more than the duty. In view of the higher price here growing out of recent tariff legislation, the importing point has been reached, and accordingly the New York Commercial Bulletin states, in the same report from which I have quoted the above prices, that 1,500 tons have recently been imported. This means that the entire duty is added to the domestic lead, and then the foreign articles can begin to come into competition. This case shows conclusively the error of Maj. McKinley in the assertion just quoted from him.

Another case showing that the entire duty, and even more, may be added to the domestic article is that of linseed oil. The duty on it was 25 cents a gallon under the old tariff that has just passed out of date. The New York price of linseed oil, as was testified before McKinley's committee, was 62 cents a gallon, and the London price was only 32 cents, five cents more than the duty being added by our linseed oil trust, which controls nearly the entire manufacture in this country.

Notwithstanding the arbitrary manipulating of prices by the trust, Major McKinley actually raises the duty to 32 cents a gallon. Heretofore the trust was not able to put up the price of oil above 63 or 64 cents a gallon, for then imports would set in; but now that McKinley has given seven cents additional protection, we may expect to see the price go higher.

Besides these cases hundreds of others might be mentioned where the whole duty is added; but in many kinds of commodities a fair comparison is extremely difficult, owing to the fact that we cannot know whether we are comparing precisely the same article or quality. This is particularly the case with all kinds of dry goods, and in nearly all articles of complicated manufacture.

A vast number of industries went before McKinley to plead for higher duties, showing how they would be injured, or even ruined, if higher protection were not given. It was pointed out by them that foreign competition was interfering seriously with their home market.

It is clear that all such industries sell at prices equal to that of the foreign article, with the duty added. How could there be competition otherwise? For example, our window-glass manufacturers, who have just formed their trust, pleaded with Maj. McKinley that foreign competition was increasing, and that therefore they needed higher protective duties—which were given to them. Now the average duty paid on foreign glass last year was 105 per cent.; in other words, on every dollar's worth of glass there was a duty of $1.05, the dollar's worth costing thus $2.05, not including commissions to the importers and other expenses. Now the question is, How could that foreign glass compete with American glass unless the American manufacturers should try to sell a dollar's worth at $2.05? The fact is, they wanted to sell the dollar's worth at more than $2.05, and that is why they raised their false cry of distress for higher duties; and that is why they formed their trust. They wanted to bag the game that McKinley had started for them.

How many kinds of commodities are thus taxed at higher rates in the McKinley bill? Their name is legion, and it is needless to try to name them. Let us hold fast to the rule that industries which ask for higher duties by reason of foreign competition are already charging up to the high-water mark of the protective duty.

Having now shown that the tariff duty, where it is protective, is always a tax, I will examine in my next letter the question who pays the tax, and will deal particularly with the claim that "the foreigner pays the tax." Yours truly,

RICHARD KNOX.

Protection and Prices.

The following from the Dry Goods Economist of Oct. 4 is instructive: "It will be interesting to watch the effect of higher prices upon the popularity of the new tariff which has caused them. We shall soon hear from the consumer, and, in fact, already there are loud murmurs on every side. As a rule, ladies are proverbially indifferent to politics, but when they find out, as they are now doing, that something has been done by the politicians which results in adding from 20 per cent. to 25 per cent to their dressmaker's and millinery bills, we fancy that we shall hear from the disfranchised sex in tones that no judicious man will be likely to ignore."

So it seems from this protectionist paper, which is, however, fair in its spirit and tone, that the tariff does raise prices. The best representatives of the school of protection to which this journal belongs do not deny this. But the politicians, and demagogues, and "fat friers," and boodlers do deny this, and they have insisted upon their peculiar theory so strenuously and for so long a time that many voters who have given this matter little thought will be surprised at the upward movement of prices which has already begun. We read, for instance, in this same number of the Dry Goods Economist, of a meeting of the pearl button men "for the purpose of defending the interests of importers and the trade, and to do justice to the present and future condition of the market in this article, which affects every large and small manufacturer, every woman and child in the United States."

It was decided to increase the price of the stock in hand by 25 per cent. On all future importations 50 per cent. is to be added to the price of these goods. The firms represented at this meeting do a business amounting to millions of dollars, and virtually fix the price for pearl buttons all over the country.

The old duty on these buttons was 25 per cent. The new duty is "2½ cents per line, button measure, of one-fortieth of an inch per gross, and in addition thereto 25 per centum ad valorem."

And the hypocrites who did this thing give as the reason for their action:

"The change from ad valorem to specific rates is intended to be an increase for the protection of the domestic industry against the competition of foreign convict labor."

So, buttons go up—and the consumers suffer.

The same thing is true all along the line. Wanamaker has issued a circular advising his customers to buy now, as, he says, the manufacturers have had their way, and prices, especially on tinware and kitchen furnishings, are sure to advance shortly.

On drugs, the increase will be from 10 to 33 per cent., so that a man cannot be "puked or purged" without paying smartly for it.

It cannot be insisted on too strongly that in all this business there is not a thought given to the consumer. And if the consumers do not wake up and take some thought for themselves, they are going to get left. It is to be hoped that the tariff-raised prices will arouse in them a realizing sense of the blessings of protection. In the meantime it is comforting to know that the tariff is a tax, that it is added to the price, and that it is paid by the consumer. And we are further consoled with the assurance that the McKinley administration is, in the main, satisfactory to the manufacturers.

Sewing Machines for Americans and for Foreigners.

The protectionists have been much worried by the facts recently brought out to show that our protected manufacturers are selling their goods more cheaply to foreigners than in the home market. These facts were first published at length and in detail by the New York Reform Club in a pamphlet entitled "Protection's 'Home Market.'" The subject was afterwards taken up in the Senate debate by the Democrats, and the proof that lower prices are charged to foreign buyers was brought out very fully and effectively by Senators Carlisle and Vest.

The farmer's wife can see how this matter works in the case of sewing machines, on which there is a duty of 45 per cent. ad valorem. The facts about the prices charged by our manufacturers for these machines in the home and in the foreign market are given in the following extract from the Reform Club's pamphlet:

	To "Home Market."	To Foreigners.
Best Make Machines....	$24.00	$21.00

"The above are the prices charged wholesale dealers for one of the best machines. This machine is sold at retail by agencies in England for $32.00 and in the United States for $45.00.

	To "Home Market."	To Foreigners.
Medium Machines........	$22.00	$17.50
Fine "	27.50	20.75

"A cheaper machine manufactured in the United States is sold to the home dealer for $18.00 and to the exporter for $12.00.

"Another prominent manufacturing company sells the machine for which it charges the American dealer $20.00 for export to South America for $5.00.

"This system of charging American buyers higher prices for their machines than buyers in England, is not confined to a single company but is characteristic of them all."

That is how protection works. It puts up a wall around the country in order that our manufacturers may be exempted from competition from abroad, and then these manufacturers turn around and charge more in this protected home market than they charge to foreigners.

"This," as the American Machinist says, "is likely to strike the American purchaser as being a little rough on him." Is it not more than "a little rough?" Is it not a downright injustice to those who bear the burden of protection in behalf of these manufacturers? As the Engineering and Mining Journal says, "it is not fair that our own people should be made to pay more than foreigners for the products of our own land."

Manufacturers who make these reductions to foreigners need no protection whatever. It is absurd to claim that they do. Yet Maj. McKinley does not take this reasonable view; he continues to the sewing machine manufacturers their 45 per cent. protection.

The precise effect of this duty is that the purchaser of a $20 machine must pay $9 extra, or $29 in all. This extra $9 goes into the pockets of the domestic manufacturer, as the high duty shuts out, practically, all foreign machines. It will not do to say, as the protectionists always do, that the full duty is not added; for here is one manufacturer who sells a machine for $5 in South America and for $20 in the United States.

It is as Uncle Remus says about witches: "Dey comes diffunt."

Two Pages of the Tribune.

That high protectionist organ, the New York Tribune, has been boasting how the G. O. P. has struck a blow at trusts. In giving a summary of the work of Reed's "business Congress" it says:

"For years a chief stock in trade of the Democratic party was its lip and lung opposition to 'trusts' and 'monopolies' which were the constant targets of its vocal thunder." Then it repeats an exploded slander in these words: "In the Lth Congress the thunderings were unusually loud and frequent until Premier Mills and his Dark-Lantern colleagues of the Ways and Means Committee unconditionally surrendered to and became bond servants of the Sugar Trust." Does not the Tribune know that Maj. McKinley himself said during the recent tariff debate that there was no truth in that charge?

Then the Tribune speaks of the worthless anti-trust law passed during the recent session of Congress, saying: "In this Congress the Republican majority promptly met the emergency and strengthened its hold on public confidence by the enactment of a law 'to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.'"

All this beautiful language is on the second page of the Tribune, but on its first page the following dispatch from St. Louis was printed:

"It was learned in St. Louis to-day that a Brussels carpet trust is now assured, and that the price of Brussels carpets will go up 25 to 30 cents. Samuel Kennard, of the Kennard Carpet Company, one of the largest wholesale and retail houses in this city, when asked to-day whether he had heard anything about the new trust, answered: 'Yes, I received a letter this morning from New York, in which I am informed that the trust is practically formed, and the price of body Brussels will go up 35 or 30 cents.'"

McKinley makes large increases in the duties on carpets; and that is why a carpet trust can now be formed to put up prices 25 or 30 cents a yard. Heretofore these higher prices could not be charged, for the people would have begun to import carpets from Europe to avoid paying them; but the ink of Harrison's name is hardly dry on the McKinley bill, before a carpet trust is formed.

Besides the higher prices for carpets which the trust has agreed upon in order to fleece the consumer, it has also laid its hand upon labor. In Philadelphia, where two thirds of our carpets are made, an agreement has been signed by the manufacturers "to shut down 40 per cent. of their looms for a period of one year from November 1, the looms to be securely locked and sealed, and to be kept subject to inspection by an authorized committee."

This means 40 per cent. of the labor in those carpet mills thrown out of employment; at the same time the people are made to pay higher prices "for the benefit of labor." These higher prices are the first fruits of the McKinley bill, and the author of that bill should smile a very wide smile over the fact that higher prices should so soon result. He says: "We want no return to cheap times in our own country," and the carpet trust agrees with him entirely on that score, as do all our trusts.

Trusts cannot be "crushed" at the same time that McKinley is feeding them on higher and higher duties.

How long are the people going to stand this nonsense, any way?

Duties for Rich and Poor.

Maj. McKinley, in submitting his famous, or infamous, tariff bill to Congress last spring, said: "The committee, responding as it believes to the sentiment of the country and the recommendations of the President, submit what they consider to be a just and equitable revision of the tariff."

"A just and equitable revision of the tariff."

Let us see.

The fine cassimeres, worn by the rich, are advanced in duty 25 per cent., while woolens, worn by the poor, are advanced 40 per cent.

Broadcloth is advanced 20 per cent.; cotton corduroy 114 per cent.

Sealskin sacques are reduced 33 per cent.; imitation sealskin sacques are advanced 120 per cent.

Silk velvets are not advanced at all; cotton velvets are advanced 100 per cent.

Silk linings are taxed at the same rate as under the old tariff; cotton linings are advanced 285 per cent.

Silk laces are advanced 20 per cent.; cotton laces 50 per cent.

On black silk there is no advance; on black alpaca there is an advance of 66 per cent.

Silk handkerchiefs are advanced 20 per cent.; cotton handkerchiefs 50 per cent.

Silk stockings are advanced 10 per cent.; cotton stockings are advanced 15 to 25 per cent.

On the finer grades of linens, worn by the rich, the McKinley duty is 35 per cent.; on the coarser grades, worn by the poorer classes, the new duty is 50 per cent.

Yet these are duties imposed in a bill "to reduce the revenue and equalize duties on imports," and are what McKinley calls "a just and equitable revision of the tariff."

A Prayer for Mercy.

Senator John Sherman hopes that the manufacturers who are favored under this new law will not go to forming trusts, or to taking an undue advantage of the great opportunities which he and his friends have given them.

Mr. Sherman should hire himself out as end man in a minstrel show, or adopt the profession of after-dinner speaking. Hitherto he has not shone as a humorist. He has been a rather serious and sober sort of a statesman. But now, at a single bound, he becomes the foremost wit of the country.

"Be careful," he says to the manufacturers; "go slow. You have got a good thing, but please don't get rich too fast. We have given you a protective duty of 100 per cent. or so. You can use it all, but please don't; you can easily form a trust and force prices up out of sight, but we hope you will not do so. Such action would hurt us, and really you ought to be considerate of our feelings."

After Mr. Sherman has voted to give the gentlemen everything they want, his threat to move for the repeal of the McKinley law or any portion of it, if the manufacturers "abuse" it, is not likely to have much weight. And why shouldn't men take advantage of their opportunities? If the Binding Twine Trust wants to "skin" the farmers and if Congress, at its dictation, fixes things so that it can do it, what right have we to think that it will be very careful of the epidermis of the agriculturist?

The truth, of course, is that the Ohio Senator was playing the demagogue. He helped to create the conditions under which robbery is easy of accomplishment, and then he begs the strikers to stay their hand. The ordinary, straight-thinking man will want to know why people cannot be allowed to keep their own property in the first instance, instead of being compelled to be satisfied with what the thieves are good enough to leave them.

Ireland Not Yet Ruined.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune writes a letter to that hide-protection organ on "Ireland's Prosperity," which ought once for all to explode the campaign story about how "British free trade has ruined Ireland."

"Irish prosperity in Ireland itself," says the writer, "is an established and joyful fact;" and he adds: "Ireland is to-day more prosperous than she has been for many a year."

He shows that crops are generally good, manufactures increasing, and that there is "a healthy increase all along the line."

In 1873 the deposits in postal savings banks were only 80 cents per capita; in 1877 they were $1.21; in 1887 they were $2.83; and in 1889 they were $3.25 or more.

In joint-stock banks the returns for the year ending with June 30, 1890, show deposits and cash balances of $165,305,000, "which is the largest sum ever recorded in Ireland."

In trustee savings banks, the deposits have increased 4 per cent. in a year.

Notwithstanding the harsh English rule in Ireland, the country is growing more prosperous. How does that come about, if "British free trade" is ruining the island? Should not the evil effects of that trade be a constant quantity, and press with greater weight as time advances? That is the doctrine that protectionists preach. Every undeveloped country that trades with a well-established country must grow constantly poorer. That is their doctrine. How is it then that Ireland is growing richer?

MCKINLEY'S idea is to increase taxation and to diminish revenue. When the people see that there is going to be a deficit in spite of the outragous load of taxes they are carrying, Mr. McKinley is likely to hear something drop.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN

NERVINE TONIC

AND

Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar.
It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the Great South American Medicine Company, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by the native inhabitants of South America, who rely almost wholly upon its great medicinal powers to cure every form of disease by which they are overtaken.

This new and valuable South American medicine possesses powers and qualities hitherto unknown to the medical profession. This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, and diseases of the general Nervous System. It also cures all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the Great Nervine Tonic qualities which it possesses and by its great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body and as a great renewer of a broken down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the Lungs than any ten consumption remedies ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic almost constantly for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., Aug. 20, '86.

To the Great South American Medicine Co.:

DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of but nothing done me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If every-one knew the value of this remedy as I do, you would not be able to supply the demand.

J. A. HARDEE,
Ex-Treas. Montgomery Co.

Mr. Solomon Bond, a member of the Society of Friends, of Darlington, Ind., says: "I have used twelve bottles of The Great South American Nervine Tonic and Stomach and Liver Cure, and I consider that every bottle did for me one hundred dollars worth of good, because I have not had a good night's sleep for twenty years on account of irritation, pain, horrible dreams, and general nervous prostration, which has been caused by chronic indigestion and dyspepsia of the stomach and by a broken down condition of my nervous system. But now I can lie down and sleep all night as sweetly as a baby, and I feel like a sound man. I do not think there has ever been a medicine introduced into this country which will at all compare with this Nervine Tonic as a cure for the stomach."

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS'S DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., May 19, 1886.

My daughter, twelve years old, had been afflicted for several months with Chorea or St. Vitus's Dance. She was reduced to a skeleton, could not walk, could not talk, could not swallow anything but milk. I had to handle her like an infant. Doctor and neighbors gave her up. I commenced giving her the South American Nervine Tonic; the effects were very surprising. In three days she was rid of the nervousness, and rapidly improved. Four bottles cured her completely. I think the South American Nervine the grandest remedy ever discovered, and would recommend it to every-one.

My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus's Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus's Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health from whatever cause.

INDIGESTION AND DYSPEPSIA.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the Stomach, because the experience and testimony of thousands go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

Harriet E. Hall, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to The Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted Stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

Mrs. M. Russell, Sugar Creek Valley, Ind., writes: "I have used several bottles of The South American Nervine Tonic, and will say I consider it the best medicine in the world. I believe it saved the lives of two of my children. They were down and nothing appeared to do them any good until I procured this remedy. It was very surprising how rapidly they both improved on its use. I recommend the medicine to all my neighbors.

Mrs. Ella A. Bratton, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I can not express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen.

Ed. J. Brown, Druggist, of Edina, Mo., writes: "My health had been very poor for years, was coughing severely. I only weighed 110 pounds when I commenced using South American Nervine. I have used two bottles and now weigh 130 pounds, and am much stronger and better than have been for five years. Am sure would not have lived through the Winter had I not secured this remedy. My customers see what it has done for me and buy it eagerly. It gives great satisfaction."

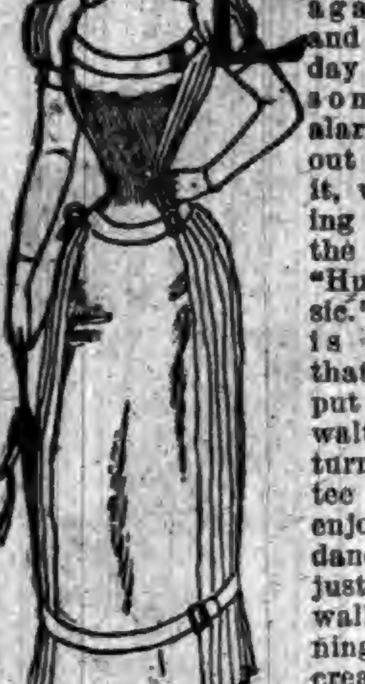
FASHIONS FOR THE FAIR

AN ORIGINAL DESIGN FOR A TENNIS COSTUME.

A Few Words on the Terpsichorean Art—The American Girl the Best Waltzer in the World—New and Fanciful Designs in Ball Costumes—The Perfection of Good Taste and Judgment.

NEW YORK, October, 1890.

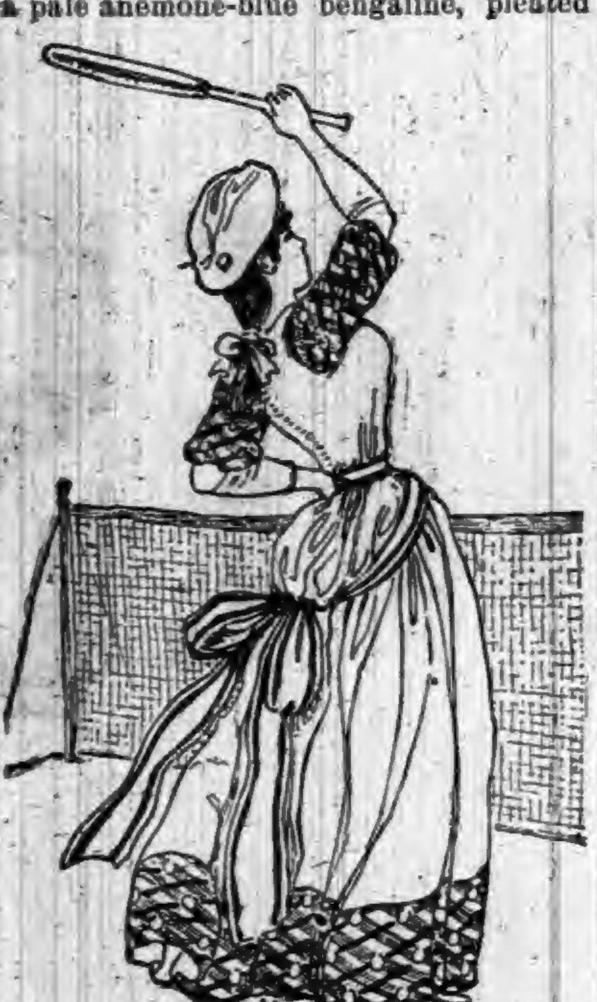


EVERY now and then a carping and captious world undertakes a crusade against dancing, and only the other day was it that some of these alarmists brought out a book against it, which interesting volume bears the quaint title of "Hugging to Music." But there is no likelihood that this book will put an end to the waltz, or in fact turn a single devotee away from the enjoyment of the dance. Dancing is just as natural as walking or running. It is not a creation of art; all savages dance.

"Ah, yes," you reply, "that may be so, but savages don't hug when they dance." Possibly not, but they join hands, palm to palm—"holy palmer's kiss."

Now, as regards this question of hugging while dancing, it's one of those bugbears which certain people conjure up with no little unction. It affords them far more pleasure to do this than the so-called "hugging" does those who engage in it. It is hard to make love to a woman while you are dancing with her, as any dancer will tell you. Waltzing, the way Americans waltz, is a work of art. It calls for your whole mind, and hence if you will take the trouble to observe the faces and expressions of two good dancers, you'll discover that they are terribly in earnest, that it is largely a matter of business wich them, and that to judge from their intent and preoccupied manner they are engaged in trying to fit round pegs in square holes. The enjoyment is in the afterthought, just as the full flavor of the wine can only be enjoyed after you have swallowed it, or the pleasures of an evening passed with boon companions are sweetest in remembrance.

The lady of the initial belongs to that class known as the "rosebud;" although not exactly a debutante, yet she is certainly not more than a second season girl. A glance at her toilet will convince you that she is a girl for battle in the merry war of amusement. In plain English, she is dressed for dancing and dressed in great taste, too, being clad in a pale anemone-blue bengaline, pleated at the sides and trimmed with old silver galloon. The style and make-up of this simple gown is altogether charming, in particular is the belted or zoned effect thrice repeated very original and artistic. As to the color of gloves to be worn with this dancing dress, that is largely a question of personal preferment, but if you want to achieve a signal triumph, set it off by wearing black gloves. They will look strikingly well with this dainty costume and bring out its full flavor and enhance the beauty of your arms.

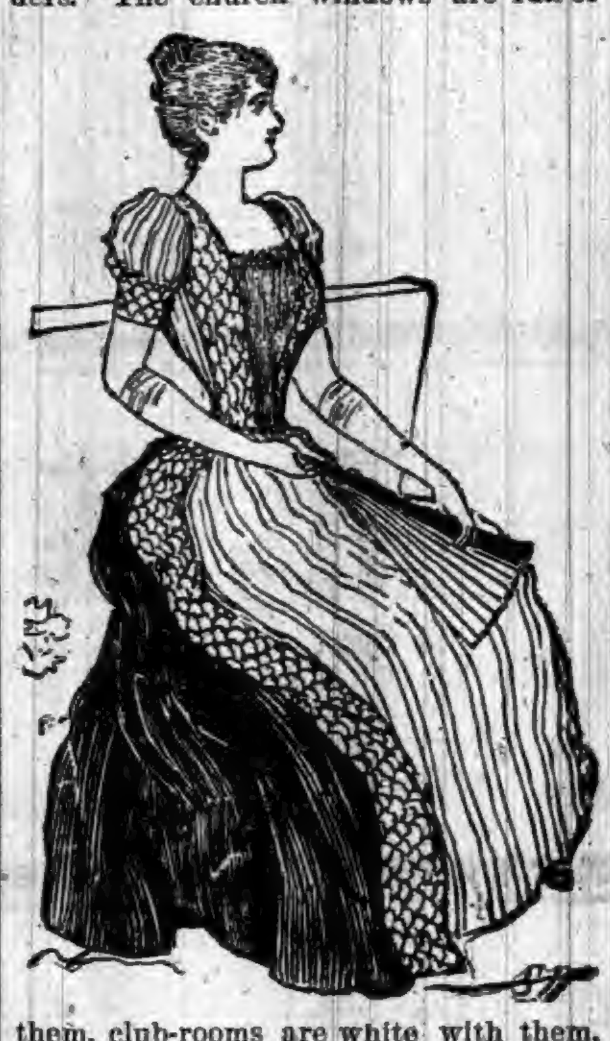


It is pretty generally conceded that the American girl is the best waltzer in the world. I mean as this dance is danced in our ball-rooms. The English woman waltzes as a pendulum swings—an unceasing and unvarying monotony, so regular in its motions that you might keep the time of day by it were it to continue long enough. Not so our lithe, active and vivacious countrywoman. She waltzes, as I have striven to indicate to you, not only with her body but with her mind. English women converse in an exasperatingly slow and collected manner while they are encircling the room in their comfortable one, two, three style. It is the prose of motion, and yet, strange to say, they are quick and elastic on their feet when it comes to athletics. Here they let themselves out, their eyes brighten, cheeks redden, and dignity goes to the winds. The fact of the matter is, she puts more thought into her tennis than she does into her dancing. Voila tout!

And speaking of tennis reminds me that I have a very original design for a tennis costume to show you. The second illustration will enable you to make it up yourself very easily—if not for this season, then for the next. It is a combination of white batiste de laine and pale-gray surah, striped with darker gray and indigo, and ornamented with large white surah. Gray gloves and a white, gray, and indigo-striped faille ceinture caught up as designated, together with a white felt hat, complete this very stylish costume, something altogether new, and as graceful as it is new. I need hardly tell you that you may bring out the full charm of this suit by making the combination with any style of striped surah which may be becoming to you, provided the general features of the costume are preserved. It is an easy thing to select materials; the difficulty lies in making the combination artistically and, above all, in the style of make-up. This word "style" expresses that indefinable charm which is inherent in a peculiar genre when seen at its best. For instance, there is this charm in the costume of the cowboy—not the cowboy of the stage or circus ring, but in the genre when seen at its best on the plains in the far West. So, too, if you seek this quality of "style," as manifested in so-called full dress, you must not look for it among imitators but among originators, for imitation always falls short of originality. This is a canon of art.

The third illustration will exemplify my meaning. Here you see an original creation in the line of ball costumes. It is the perfection of good taste and correct judgment. It is inventive talent of a high order applied to woman's adornment. It called for the combined genius of poet, painter and sculptor. The back of the waist, the sleeves and the apron are made of a gray, maize-striped merveilleux; the chemisette consists of gray silk gauze plisse, with bands of gray faille encasing it and extending to the bottom of the dress, the sleeves also being trimmed with it. A black satin pouff sets the cachet of extreme elegance upon this costume, with which maize-colored gloves should be worn.

Here again we run against the peculiar notions of the enemies of the waltz. They object to the display of neck and arms which these ball toilets call for. These critics and fault-finders call attention to the fact that while a woman blushes at the very idea of making a display of her ankles, yet she unblushingly displays her neck and shoulders in ball costumes. Life is too short to argue seriously against all the "crank" notions of the day. Same men condemn the use of salt in food as little less than a crime against the happiness of mankind! Others claim that a glass of wine imperils the safety of one's soul. What is one to do? To argue seriously that the display of a pair of shapely shoulders is capable of producing wide-spread evil in society only proves to what depths of absurdity the human mind is capable of descending. If for centuries it had been the custom to drape the entire female figure in black cloth then such a display might cause some alarm; but think of it, from childhood to old age, bare shoulders meet our gaze. They are almost as common as bare cheeks. Nymphs, angels, goddesses, naiads, fairies, and all beings of the air are portrayed with bare shoulders. In a word, art museums and picture galleries swarm with bare shoulders. The church windows are full of them, club-rooms are white with them, and yet there is a hue and cry the moment a woman appears in ball dress. The Republic is going to the dogs, for the male citizens will not be able to look upon those bare shoulders and live. Poor creatures! Hamlet should recast his famous expression and say: "Man, thy name is frailty."



It is with no little trepidation that I call your attention, dear reader, to the fourth illustration, for you may be a man; but if not, then I shall begin by asking you to admire with me the superb neck and shoulders of the lovely creature who is so gracefully receiving the homage that is very justly her due. The waist of this exquisite ball dress is all in finely pleated white silk gauze, and so is the apron, which has a ruche all around it as pictured. The bands of the material which encircle the arms are loose, and the corsage is caught up on the shoulders by gray pearls in a most graceful manner. The train is in white brocade, with pale roses and very pale pink lattice-work. Gray gloves should be worn with this lovely ball-dress, which is worthy of clothing either one of the three goddesses who contended for the apple before Prince Paris on the sunny slope of Mount Ida, while the very sheep gave over their nibbling at the sight of so much loveliness. A gray feather fan and a bunch of long-stemmed white roses are among the accessories of this delightful ball toilet. As Mohammed did with his flight, so women are apt to date the beginning of their lives from the first ball they attend. And they are right, for it is then and only then that they realize their importance in life.—Daisy Dart, in Chicago Ledger.

Shut Out.

It is hard for grown people to realize how many things are perfectly simple to them, but quite beyond the comprehension of children. Figures of speech in particular are almost sure to involve the little people in a tangle of perplexities.

Something of this sort happened to little Fanny in church not long since. She is a mere morsel of humanity, and it is the pride of her life that she is old enough to be allowed to go alone to the house of her aunt, three doors away.

Fanny is too short to reach the bell-knob, and as her soft little fist cannot make noise enough to be heard by any one inside, she is obliged to stand on her aunt's doorstep until some good-natured person comes along whom she can ask to ring the bell for her. This difficulty, however, she has been careful not to mention at home.

One Sunday the preacher had much to say about coming to the gate of heaven and knocking for entrance. Fanny listened attentively, with a face which grew constantly more sober, until at last, when a picture was drawn of a little child's coming to the portal, she suddenly put her head down into her mother's lap and burst into a perfect convulsion of tears. Astonished at this sudden outbreak, her mother bent down and in an anxious whisper asked what the matter was.

"Oh, mamma," was the answer, in a sobbing whisper, "I don't think I could ever get into heaven."

"Why not?" inquired the puzzled mother.

"Oh, mamma, I am so little I could never reach the bell, and I never can make anybody hear me knock."

Her grief was so bitter that she had to be taken out of church, and the rest of the afternoon devoted to explaining to her that the minister's words were not to be taken literally.—Exchange.

LINCOLN'S MELANCHOLY.

His Sympathetic Nature and His Early Misfortunes.

Those who saw much of Abraham Lincoln during the later years of his life were greatly impressed with the expression of profound melancholy his face always wore in repose.

Mr. Lincoln was of a peculiarly sympathetic and kindly nature. These strong characteristics influenced, very happily, as it proved, his entire political career. They would not seem, at first glance, to be efficient aids to political success; but in the peculiar emergency which Lincoln, in the providence of God, was called upon to meet, no vessel of common clay could possibly have become the "chosen of the Lord."

Those acquainted with him from boyhood knew that early griefs tinged his whole life with sadness. His partner in the grocery business at Salem was "Uncle" Billy Green, of Tallula, Ill., who used at night, when the customers were few, to hold the grammar while Lincoln recited his lessons.

It was to his sympathetic ear Lincoln told the story of his love for sweet Ann Rutlidge; and he in return, offered what comfort he could when poor Ann died, and Lincoln's great heart nearly broke.

"After Ann died," says "Uncle" Billy, "on stormy nights when the wind blew the rain against the roof, Abe would set thar in the grocery, his elbows on his knees, his face in his hands, and the tears runnin' through his fingers. I hated to see him feel bad, an' I'd say, 'Abe don't cry;' an' he'd look up an' say, 'I can't help it, Bill, the rain's a fallin' on her.'"

There are many who can sympathize with this overpowering grief, as they think of a lost loved one, when "the rain's a fallin' on her." What adds poignancy to the grief some times is the thought that the lost one might have been saved.

Fortunate, indeed, is William Johnson, of Corona, L. I., a builder, who writes June 28, 1890: "Last February, on returning from church one night, my daughter complained of having a pain in her ankle. The pain gradually extended until her entire limb was swollen and very painful to the touch. We called a physician, who, after careful examination, pronounced it disease of the kidneys of long standing. All we could do did not seem to benefit her until we tried Warner's Safe Cure; from the first she commenced to improve. When she commenced taking it she could not turn over in bed, and could just move her hands a little, but to-day she is as well as she ever was. I believe I owe the recovery of my daughter to its use."

The Best Man in the World.

Well, if not positively the best, one of the wisest is he who checks disease at the start in his own system. In preserving or restoring the heaven-granted gift of health, he deserves profound consideration. His example is worthy to be imitated. The complaints which afflict us are largely attributable to a want of tone in the stomach, either inherent or inflicted by ourselves upon that much abused repository of the food that should nourish us. What is its requirement in adversity? A wholesome tonic. None so good, if we rely upon experience and testimony, as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Unmedicated stimulants won't do. Regulation, as well as invigoration of the digestive viscera, is not to be effected by these. Through the agency of the stomachic named, strength of the entire system is retrenched—dyspepsia and biliousness overcome. Malarial, kidney, bladder, and rheumatic complaints are eradicated by this salutary reformer of ill-health.

An extraordinary advance in the use of cocoa seems to have taken place of late years in England. In the House of Commons, this last session, the Right Hon. G. J. Goschen, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, called attention to it as a cause for much of the falling off of the use of coffee. He attributed it in a measure, to the position a preparation of cocoa known as "Grateful and Comforting" had taken. In accord with this suggestion, it may be interesting to follow the course cocoa has taken in England since 1832, when the duty, which had been standing at 6d. per pound, with an importation of under half a million pounds, was reduced to 2d. per pound, and not long after we find the homœopathic doctrine of medicine introduced into the kingdom, and that the use of cocoa was specially advocated by physicians adopting that mode of practice. Soon after we find the first homœopathic chemists established in England (the firm of James Epps & Co.) produced a special preparation which only needed boiling water or milk to be at once ready for the table, and the superior character of this production has, no doubt, done much, as the Chancellor of the Exchequer said, to bring about (backed as it was by a further reduction of the duty to 1d. per pound) the advance made.

"My little daughter's life was saved, as we believe, by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before she was six months old she had seven running scrofula sores. Two physicians were called, but they gave us no hope. One of them advised the amputation of one of her fingers, to which we refused assent. On giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla, marked improvement was noticed, and by a continued use of it her recovery was complete. She is now seven years old, strong and healthy." B. C. PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

One of the most important organs of the human body is the LIVER. When it fails to properly perform its functions the entire system becomes deranged. The BRAIN, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS, all refuse to perform their work. DYSPEPSIA, CONSTIPATION, RHEUMATISM, KIDNEY DISEASE, etc., are the results, unless something is done to assist Nature in throwing off the impurities caused by the inaction of a TORPID LIVER. This assistance so necessary will be found in

Prickly Ash Bitters!

It acts directly on the LIVER, STOMACH and KIDNEYS, and by its mild and cathartic effect and general tonic qualities restores these organs to a sound, healthy condition, and cures all diseases arising from these causes. It PURIFIES THE BLOOD, tones up the system, and restores perfect health. If your druggist does not keep it ask him to order it for you. Send 2c stamp for copy of "THE HORSE TRAINER," published by us.

A signal service to weak womankind is the finding of lost health—the building-up of "a run-down" system. Nothing does it so surely as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures all the derangements, irregularities and weaknesses peculiar to the sex. It's the most perfect of strength-givers, imparting tone and vigor to the whole system. For overworked, debilitated teachers, milliners, seamstresses, "shop-girls," nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, it is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

"Favorite Prescription" gives satisfaction in every case, or money paid for it is promptly refunded. That's the way it's sold; that's the way its makers prove their faith in it. Contains no alcohol to inebriate; no syrup or sugar to derange digestion; a legitimate medicine, not a beverage. Purely vegetable and perfectly harmless in any condition of the system. Echoes from 1884.

As the Dispatch has raked up the old matters of 1884, we presume it would like to hear a little more of it. So we give an extract from the COURIER of Oct. 9, of that year, alluding to what the Republican (now called the Dispatch) had just said. Here it is:

The Republican says: "Moody is now posing as a special friend of soldiers. Has he ever made a certificate for a pensioner? Dare he say that he has ever made one, or shown in black and white that he has favored pensions? He deceives no one in his pretended friendship for soldiers." We can't say how many certificates for pensioners Mr. Moody has made out, but we will venture the assertion that the Republican's young man cannot find a soldier in DeKalb county that ever applied to Mr. Moody to make him out a certificate, that he refused to do so. How could Mr. Moody favor pensions? or does our astute contemporary suppose the state legislature enacts pension laws? Your inquiry reminds us of a little history that bears upon this question. In the legislatune of 1881, the following question was before the house, and explains itself:

WHEREAS, Mr. Geo. Menser, of Jefferson county, of this state, who was a gallant soldier in the Union army, and without any fault on his part has lost both of his arms by the premature discharge of a cannon; and whereas, said Menser is unable by said accident to support himself, therefore be it

RESOLVED, by the general assembly of the state of Indiana, that in consideration of the services of said Menser as a Union soldier from Indiana during the late rebellion, the managers of the soldiers home at Knightstown be and are hereby instructed to admit said Menser to the benefits of said home. And your committee recommend that when the resolution is so amended, it do pass.

This resolution was opposed by quite a large number of members, of both parties. Mr. Huston, an active and leading republican, said on this occasion, he did not want it said throughout the state that he voted to furnish a home for a man who was disarmed while firing a gun for the ratification of Governor Porter. He hoped the bill would be voted down. Mr. Ryan, an ardent republican, said on this occasion: "It does not make any difference whether the gentleman had been in the service of the United States or not, but he must have received his injuries during such service. I submit to you, sir, that the language of this act excludes the person proposed to be admitted to this home by this resolution. I am opposed to it." Now mark the words of Mr. Moody on this occasion: "Inasmuch as the law provides that he be not admitted to this home except he be wounded in the war, the friends of this man sent this petition here, asking us to admit one who had been a soldier in the service of his country, even though he did receive his injuries after his return home. He is said to be an honorable man, and is deprived of the use of his hands and also an eye, and is, I think, in the spirit and contemplation of the law, entitled to a home in the institution. We ought to remember, gentlemen, that we are sent here to legislate for all the citizens of Indiana. We ought to take into consideration each case as it comes before us, and if we are satisfied, under the circumstances, that resolution should be passed, even though it be against the letter of the law. Then we ought to do so, and I think, in this case, this petitioner is justly worthy of our consideration. I, for one, am able to rise above party spirit and vote that this man be admitted to a home in this institution." The resolution was adopted, in spite of the oppositioon of the above named prominent republican leaders.

Waterloo's Big Fair.

The weather till Friday was all that could be desired, so there was no reason why the attendance should not be good. The entries, from the start, showed there would be an unusually large display. Every department soon filled up. Stables for horses, had to be secured down town, and pasture and shelter for sheep on farms near by. Such a show of stock of all kinds had never been seen on the grounds. And even fruit was abundant, there being about 350 plates displayed. Such vegetables and so many of them have seldom been seen at a fair. Of speed horses, there was the greatest number ever on the grounds at one time, 56 in all. Of show horses there were over 200. The total number of entries of all classes, was 6,873. Heretofore 3,000 have been considered good. The attendance was large, especially on Thursday, when over 8,000 tickets were sold. The races were the best ever seen in this part of the country, as they all filled and were trotted in dead earnest over a track in excellent condition. Ten horses started in one race. The show of premium stock on the ring Friday, was a grand affair. The procession was headed by the officers, and the Fenton Ladies Band, the latter being in a bus. The receipts have not been reported to us, but must have been good, though the expense for premiums will be large. But we believe the society will have something left after paying all expenses. We had the privilege of meeting a few of those who got premiums. Geo. McIntosh had his general purpose horse to show with fine colts, among them being colts belonging to D. Lochamier and John Anthony. He had made a similar exhibit at Angola. He got sweepstakes. Lockwood & Clark had a big lot of their fine horses, as did Banks, of Laporte. A. B. Walsworth got a lot of premiums on his fine Merino sheep, making 34 premiums he has had on them this year. He also got premiums on Poland China hogs. Mr. McInturf got preminms on fine hogs. Willard Pepple took sweepstakes on his fine mare and colts in Roadster class. He had taken similar premiums at Auburn, showing against the best in the country. There are many we would have noticed, but in the crowd did not succeed in getting the needed information.

Another Raid.

This time at the M. P. parsonage in St. Joe. The raiders were from Jackson township. The greater number of these were members of the Rehoboth church and the others were sympathizers with them. From the first move by them it would seem that the object sought was "bread" for they took posession of the kitchen and dining room after ordering the pastor's wife to surrender her claim to the same. A little later pastor and family were invited to enjoy a bountiful repast with about 30 others. Oh what a drain upon the pastor's larder! But no, it was not that kind of a raiding party, on the contrary they left the pastor's family better off in flour, apples, butter, pickles, cabbage, pies, cakes, bread, applebutter, oats, etc., than when they came; more than that, the pastor received as a present a $5 gold piece and his wife a fine dress pattern and trimmings. After prayer, with music and conversation the time was spent, which quickly and pleasantly passed. The brethren and sisters returned to their homes leaving the pastor and family some over $14. better off, and not only that, but with an assurance of sympathy and hearty co-operation in christian work which will, we hope tend to an increase of zeal in pastor and people for this work.

The Dispatch's Jokes.

The funniest thing the Dispatch gets off in its rambling talk about Gov. Gray's speech, is where it attacks his illustration of the way a tariff works, by taking the plow made in a given county. The Governor said suppose the commissioners of a county had the power to keep out all plows made elsewhere by putting a tariff of $5 on each one made outside of the county and shipped in. In such a case, the plowmaker inside the county could add nearly $5 to the price of his plow, and make that much more out of the farmers. This would bring no revenue to the county, would take nearly $5 extra out of the pocket of every man who had to use a plow, and would make the plowmaker rich. This is exactly how the tariff works of course. But how does the Dispatch meet this unanswerable argument? It simply says "We can't make plows in this county." But, now, suppose we take one of the counties in Ohio where they have timber on the hills and iron also, with furnaces and foundries to work the iron up There they could make plows, and no "supposition" to it. We give this "actual" example as the great head of the Dispatch don't seem to grasp anything but an object lesson. Would the plow in this case, cost more or less, than without the $5 tariff? Would it not rob the farmer by making him pay $5 more than his plow would otherwise cost? Would it not make the plowmaker richer than he would have become or more suddenly so, than if the powers that be, had not favored him, and made it possible for him to charge this extra $5? There is no "supposition" about these tariff steals, any more than there is about any other species of robbery. The Dispatch adds the equally silly statement that the commissioners could not levy a tariff As Gov. Gray distinctly said so, at the time he began the illustration, we thought at the time he must have been anxious to give the Dispatch the correct idea, for we don't know of anyone else who needed the information.

* * *

It says that machinery sells for about twice as much in South America as here. Of course, who could doubt it, for there is freight for several thousand miles, and the expense of handling it several times. But the manufacturers sell to foreign markets, lower than to our people at home. This proves that they don't need protection, and unnecessary protection is robbery.

* * *

The fact remains undisputed, that the tariff is put higher on the very articles made by the men who put big money into the Harrison campaign fund. Republicans in DeKalb county are afraid to have speeches. They dare not meet an outraged and robbed people, and try to explain why they outrage and rob them. Hence their silence is as the graveyard at midnight.

* * *

If the Dispatch knows anything about the subject, and we begin to have our doubts of this, it knows it is telling a falsehood when it says the democrats propose to tax farms only. As we said last week, no one has ever proposed such a thing in Indiana or even favored it, except the republican candidate for Congress in the first Indiana district. And then why does not the Dispatch say something about that Posey county candidate? Then the editor calls attention to the great blessings that will come to farmers because the tariff on farm products have been greatly raised. We actually think the editor believes this, but we don't believe any farmer does. What are the facts as to a tariff on farm products? Why these: We always raise more than we can consume, except when one crop now and then fails. If we have as much or more than we use, none is brought in from abroad, and so no one is benefited. If we lack, and have to ship into this country, then the higher the tariff the more the thing costs. Suppose, we have a short crop of potatoes. Would it not be better for us to get them brought in free of duty, and so get them cheaper? It says the English carry nearly all our goods across the ocean. Too true. But when the republican party came into power, nearly all this was done by American ships, built in the United States by American capitalists, the work of American artisans and laborers, and were manned by American sailors. But republican mismanagement has given all this over into English hands. Why did not the Dispatch tell all about it. Like all republican papers it is trying to deceive its readers. But its readers know more about these things than the editor does.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

For November, 1890, is a splendidly illustrated paper on "Henry M. Stanley: his Career and Achievements," by Geo. C. Hurlbut, Secretary of the American Geographical Society, makes Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for November an exceptionally interesting number. For a graphic review of Stanley's eventful career, and the Emin relief expedition in particular, from an American standpoint, Mr. Hurlbut's article surpasses anything that has as yet appeared on this fascinating topic of the day. In the same number Felix Oldboy propounds and answers the question, "Who was Charlotte Temple?' bringing forward some hypotheses and revelations which will startle the thousands of romance-lovers who have strewn flowers on the mysterious grave in the Trinity Churchyard, New York city. There are illustrated articles on; "Buenos Ayres," by John Stanley; "Coon-hunting in South Carolina," by H. M Howard, "Great Pahchulakah, the Western Niagara," by W. D. Lyman: "Some Copts in old Cairo" (second paper), by A. L. Rawson; "The Empress Theodora," by A. G. Townsend; "A Vermont Island and its Inhabitants," by Nelly Hart Woodworth; and a History of Human Habitations," by Marc. F. Vallette. The half-dozen short stories are varied and interesting, and the poems "fit, though few." Among the art illustrations is a beautiful portrait of Dorothy Tennant, the English bride of Henry M. Stanley.

Farmers.—Your Timber.

We want some of your timber suitable for our hub and handle factory. Such things as these:

Elm butts, 4 to 14 inches in diameter.

Hickory and ash butts, 5 inches and upward.

Timber for handles, etc. For particulars call at the Hub and Handle factory, south of Wabash station, foot of Main street, Auburn, Indiana. tf

COURIER SUPPLEMENT, OCT. 16, '90.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BUTLER.

Dan Smurr is building a cottage on the the south side.

Mrs. Ann E. Helwig has nearly recovered her former health.

J. P. Jadwin, wife and son, of Orland, attended the Waterloo fair.

Mrs. Oviatt Campbell's father died suddenly last week at Elkhart.

A. Watson is building a large barn and warehouse on his residence lot.

Forgetfulness on the part of the writer last week left the items a blank.

A large number of people from other towns are coming to Butler to live.

Rev. Mr Wilcox exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Stone last Sunday.

Butler turned out very liberally to the Waterloo fair, and did much towards swelling the gate receipts.

Clark Brown, a son of Jerome Brown, is seriously ill with some disease that seems to baffle our physicians.

Politics are running low about Butler. If Voorhees succeeds in waking up the sleeping politicians, he will have to do something wonderful.

Thomas Carr living two miles northeast of town will sell his personal property in a short time and with his family remove to Wisconsin.

R se & Brown have removed their shoe store one door south into Jacob Stiefel's room. A large sample store has filled up the room they occupied.

Rev. Mr. Barnet, of Kentucky, is stopping with his brother. Dr. Barnet of this place. We believe the gentleman is interested in a race horse that is trying to make a record at our fairs.

The deflection of trade caused by the Patrons of Industry trading in other places is plainly observable to Butler merchants, a fact they are reluctant to admit, but one they could not in honor to themselves and other customers prevent.

A number of boys were playing with a foot ball one day last week when Charley Coffrin in wanton mischief picked up the ball and cut a large hole in it. He was arrested for malicious trespass and fine and cost amounted nearly forty dollars. A dear ball play.

Kendallville drew largely from the Butler people during their fair, nearly two hundred took passage on Thursday morning. We believe they all escaped the army of pickpockets and things that infested part of the grounds. The fair proved a grand success.

The Thompson-Waller stock was sold last Saturday to satisfy the chattel mortgage, for about one-third of its value. By the shameless rascality of "Col." Thompson, Mr. Waller is cheated out of nearly all he posessed, and the other creditors lose all the firm owed them.

Mrs. Samuel Seed, an old and well known lady who has lived in Butler fifteen years died very suddenly at Kendallville last Thursday evening. Her remains were brought to Butler Friday morning, and the funeral services conducted by Rev. Mr. Stone were held at the M. E. church and her remains were removed to Tiffin, Ohio. for interment in that city, where she formerly lived. She was one of the most liberal and useful members of Butler society, and will be seriously missed by her friends.

HAMILTON.

Hamilton was well represented at the Waterloo fair last week.

Mrs. J. W. Somerlott's parents from Angola visited with them over Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Ackerman preached at the Disciple church last Wednesday evening.

Hamilton lodge K of P will attend the dedication of the K. of P. hall at Angola this week.

Chas. M. Brown and Wm. S. Renner went to Summit Saturday evening to look after their interests there.

From the town talk and outward signs we judge that some of the young people in or about town are expecting a cold winter.

A family reunion was held at William Dirrim's last Thursday, consisting of children, grandchildren and great-grand children.

John Crane was buried here last Thursday. A large number of friends were present. Rev. Mr. Arthur, from Angola, officiating.

Billy, the clerk, went over the hills to attend a social last Saturday evening expecting to see——you know who, but he was badly disappointed

SEDAN.

Isaac Tryon and family visited friends in Ne ville last week.

Josie Chaney visited friends in Sedan and vicinity last week.

Mrs. Davis, of St. Joe, is visiting her daughter Mrs. Hartman.

Hiram Brand and family were the guests of Mrs. Gonser last Sunday.

Dill Steckley spent Sunday at home. He returned to Ft Wayne Monday taking his family with him.

John McCague accompanied by his son William expects to start for Nebraska soon, where they will spend the winter.

Ladies who want a nice fitting dress should call on Miss Ona Blucher. She is prepared to fit ladies and children of all sizes and ages.

SUMMIT.

George Craig moved his family to town last week.

George Betts moved in his new house this week.

Wm. Betts and wife visited friends in Hamilton last Sunday.

Mrs Warren Boyer's mother visited her a few days last week.

Miss Ettie Knepper, of Auburn, visited friends in this place last week.

H T. Diffinbaugh, of Hudson, made our town a short call Monday.

A good many from this place attended the Waterloo fair last Thursday.

Robert Snowberger and wife were the guest of H. D. Snowberger and wife last Sunday.

S. B. Motinger and wife were the guests of Samuel Mortorff and family last Sunday.

LEO.

Dr. C. F. Swift, of Maysville, was in town last week.

The new gravel road will soon connect Ft. Wayne and Leo.

The infant child of Lewis Myers was buried Sunday afternoon.

Miss Hallie Murphy will teach the primary department this winter.

O. J. Greenwalt will teach the upper school at this place the coming winter.

Ben. Zimmerman, of Auburn, accompanied Mr. Lamport last Sunday in his circuit.

R. Malott, who recently moved from this place has begun saloon keeping in Maysville.

Nov. 2d will occur the third quarterly conference of the M. E. church at Cedarville.

The concert given under the auspices of the M. E Sunday school was a success. The entertainment was interesting as well as amusing. The proceeds is to be applied on the church.

Rev. H. M. Lamport, of the M. E church of Auburn, filled the pulpit at this place Sunday evening The attendance was very small on account of the inclemency of the weather, but the discourse was excellent.

LEO.
(LAST WEEK.)

The M. E. church will be repainted next week.

Scarlet fever has made its appearance in this vicinity.

J B. [illegible] says he is going to add a stock of dry goods to his business.

Moses Horn, of Antwerp, Ohio, was the guest of Henry Dishler last Sunday.

The recent rains are causing a decline in the price of butter—plenty of pasture.

The funeral of Mrs. Nathan Myers took place at the old Lutheran church Sunday at 10 o'clock a. m.

A concert by the M. E. Sabbath school is soon to be held at the schoolhouse, the proceeds to go for the church.

Rev. H. M. Lamport, of the M E. church, of Auburn, will fill the pulpit of Rev. Ashcroft, at this place next Sunday evening.

AUBURN JUNCTION.

The men have commenced the brick walls of the Monitor M'f'g company's building, which will soon be finished.

For the best stoves in the market, call on the Eagle Iron Works.

Mr. Waterman, teacher of the school here, spent Sunday at his home in Waterloo.

Newton Mathews is taking a "lay off" on account of sickness.

Quite a number from this place attended the Kendallville fair.

G. S. Clarke has moved his house and is fixing it for winter.

The magic lantern show here last Saturday evening was well attended, and was very good

Harry Stafford, night operator for the B. & O., is "laying off" on account of his being sick.

ACCIDENTS AND CRIME.

OHIO LEGISLATORS APOLOGIZE TO THE GOVERNOR.

Between Life and Death—Nelson's Record—Religious Redskins—An Aged Defaulter—Noted Counterfeiter Dead—Burning of the Rainbow.

THE OHIO LEGISLATURE

Did Not Mean an Insult to Governor Campbell.

A Columbus special, dated the 22d inst., says: At the forenoon session of the Ohio Legislature a resolution was passed stating that the action of the House yesterday was not intended by the majority as a snub toward Governor Campbell. The resolutions also provided for the appointment of a committee to visit the Governor and request that he submit his message to the House. Its recommendations were that the present Cincinnati board be abolished and a new one be appointed by the Mayor to serve until next April. It was referred to the Judicial Committee and the House adjourned to 3 p. m. Upon convening in the afternoon further consideration of the matter was deferred to 3 p. m. Wednesday.

The Senate this afternoon passed the Soncrant bill in amended form. It provides for the abolishment of the present Board of Public Improvement of Cincinnati, and the appointment of a non-partisan Board by the Mayor, which shall serve until April. At the April election a new Board is to be elected by the people, two to serve two years and two to serve one year. A motion to reconsider was lost, the passage of the measure, so far as the Senate is concerned, is final.

IS SHE ALIVE?

A Supposed Dead Girl Shows Signs of Life.

Mrs. Caroline Zettly, of New Holland, Pa., whose apparently dead daughter was shipped to her in a box marked "suicide," summoned physicians, and as the doctors were assisting in removing the body from the box, they noticed that the evidences of death were not perfect. No rigidity was apparent, and not a sign of decomposition. The girl was placed in bed and a closer examination made. The hands were found to be warm and a slight flush appeared on the cheeks. Restoratives were applied, but to no avail. The physicians are puzzled and wonder how it is possible for a vestige of life to remain after the confinement in the box. The authorities have been notified and are doing their utmost to solve the mystery.

Pete McCartney Dead.

Pete P. McCartney, one of the most expert counterfeiters in the United States, died at the penitentiary at Columbus, O. When he died he was serving a ten years' sentence for passing counterfeit money in New Orleans in 1888. McCartney was an educated man and had made a thorough study of the art of engraving and its application to criminal ends. His most successful work was on government bonds, and he once made a $1,000 United States bond so perfect that it was actually redeemed at the Treasury and the holder of the genuine was later arrested and charged with counterfeiting.

Superstitious Redskins.

It is said that an entire band of two hundred Indians near Fort Pierre, S. D., will die unless something is done for them. Thirteen have already died, and many of them are down with mountain fever. These redskins have been realizing the new Messiah craze by fasting and executing ghost dances without stint for two months, until they are helpless and have brought on disease. It is the same band that was misled by Ten Hands, who recently tried to pass himself off as the Messiah and was put in the guard house by the authorities.

A Bold Robbery.

A bold daylight robbery took place in Chicago. Two masked men walked up to the front door of J. W. Civine's residence and knocked. Mrs. Civine opened the door and they walked in. While one of them searched the house for money, the other stood over Mrs. Civine with a revolver in his hand and threatened to kill both her and her baby, which she held in her arms, if she made any noise.

An Old Rogue.

Harvard, Ill., is all torn up over the development that Charles Armstrong, for forty years one of Harvard's most prominent citizens, has proved to be a defaulter, having robbed his clients of $25,000. He has always borne an unblemished reputation, but now it transpires that for years he has been practicing systematic frauds on a large scale.

Again Lowered the Record.

There was a fair crowd and fine weather at the opening of the Cambridge City races. The feature of the day was Nelson's great feat of lowering the stallion record to 2:10¾. He made the quarters as follows: First quarter, 33¾; half, 1:05¾; three-quarters, 1:38¼; mile, 2:10¾.

The Extra Session of Congress.

The fact that the various cabinet officers are now busily engaged upon their annual reports to be presented to Congress simultaneously with the President's message on the day of its meeting, is commented upon at Washington as an indication that an extra session will be called.

Supposed to Have Been Killed.

Edward S. Larmouth, of Berlin, N. J., disappeared and searching parties have as yet been unable to find any trace of him, although the wagon and team with which he started out have been found. The wagon was smashed and the horses were dead.

Five Killed.

A telegram from McNairy County, Tennessee, gives particulars of a horrible accident there, in which five men were killed. The boiler of an engine exploded and John White's head was blown from his shoulders and hurled fifty yards away. The body of the owner of the mill, H. E. Tombull, was torn into shreds.

Only Two and a Half.

William Haightley, who kicked his aunt to death last June, was sentenced to two and one-half years in the Massachusetts State Prison.

SOUGHT THE LIFE OF STEEL.

Enraged Partisans at Oklahoma City.

A plan was arranged to take Gov. Steele, of Oklahoma Territory, from the train as he was going into Oklahoma City, and assassinate him, but the attempt was foiled by the Governor leaving the train and taking a stage just before the band of masked men were encountered.

This situation of affairs grows out of the determined effort of Oklahoma City citizens to have the Legislature pass a bill removing the capital from Guthrie to Oklahoma City. They sent a powerful lobby to Guthrie to present their case to the Legislature, and came near carrying their point. Governor Steele is a citizen of Guthrie, and has been accused of being partial to his own city in the struggle for the capital.

The bill removing the capital to Oklahoma City was finally passed, but Gov. Steele vetoed it. Since then the feeling against him has been very bitter in the defeated city, and gave rise to the plot upon his life.

DURANT'S DASTARDLY DEED.

Murderous Fanaticism in a Darky Church.

Primus Jones, colored, was killed at Sumter, S. C. A protracted meeting was being held by the negroes at Beulah Church, and the greatest excitement prevailed. It was at first reported that Primus had been offered as a sacrifice to the Holy Ghost because of his incredulity. The Deputy Coroner held an inquest at the church and the testimony showed that, in a perfect frenzy of fanaticism, Jones was killed by Rev. A. H. Durant, the negro pastor, and one Richard Campbell, prominent member of the church, because the deceased had expressed doubts about the supernatural power of Durant to kill and restore to life, and that it was a test case, but the experiment failed.

A large number of Durant's congregation believed that he possessed supernatural power until his failure in this case. The finding was that Jones was murdered by Richard Campbell and A. H. Durant. The murderers are in jail.

FANATICAL FERVOR.

An Old Woman Killed by Crazy Cranks.

Near Perry, Mich., have lived for many years William Fillinger and his wife. Last summer they attended a series of revivals and became religion mad in a mild way. With them lived Fillinger's mother, who has long been physically frail. It worried Fillinger and his wife that the elder woman was unbaptized, and recently they decided that the necessary religious rite should be performed although the poor woman was confined to her bed, unable even to rise. Taking water to her room they began the ceremony of dashing water in her face, and continued it until from shock and exhaustion their victim ceased to struggle. The horrified fanatics then discovered too late that she was dead. Soon after neighbors were attracted to the house, and discovering the dead body took charge of the nearly crazed pair. They also rescued a little child whom they assert the couple was about to submit to a similar dreadful baptism. The couple was taken to jail at Corunna.

Buried and Burned.

A terrible accident, which may cause the death of a number of workmen, occurred at Moorhead & McLean's Second Avenue furnace in Pittsburgh, Pa. A gang of men were engaged in blowing out one of the large iron furnaces preparatory to making repairs. The bridge in the furnace stack broke down, allowing several tons of almost white heat coke to fall, completely burying seven workmen. Edward Hughes and his brother were taken out alive, but burned almost beyond recognition. They cannot possibly recover. Five Hungarians, names unknown, were also rescued. They are terribly roasted. The injured men have been removed to hospitals. It is now reported that other workmen are buried under the avalanche of hot coke and have not been rescued.

Belknap's Funeral.

Gen. Belknap's funeral took place from St. John's church in Washington. Long before the remains arrived, the church was crowded. The remains, escorted by the Union veterans, G. A. R. veterans, and the Third Artillery band, followed by the family and friends, arrived at the church promptly. The casket was borne by six non-commissioned officers of the artillery (all in full uniform), followed by the honorary pall bearers and relatives.

A large number of army and navy officers and prominent public officials and many well known citizens of Washington attended the funeral and followed the remains of the soldier and ex-cabinet officer to the grave.

Shaved a Scab.

A bloody assault that narrowly escaped a fatal ending created intense excitement in Albany, N. Y. Charles Harris, the victim, an ex-striker, while passing the barber shop of John Loftus in company with James Wilson, took occasion to stop and taunt Loftus for shaving a "scab" railroad man. The two were followed by the infuriated barber, who seized Harris, and drawing back his head, drew a keen-edged razor across his throat. The cut may not prove fatal.

Shot His Wife's Seducer.

John Dixon, a prosperous farmer of Allegheny County, N. C., discovered that an intimate relation was existing between his wife and Marshal Halsey. He found the pair in a compromising position and promptly shot and killed Halsey. He threatened to kill his wife, but her piteous pleadings caused him to desist. News of the tragedy soon spread, but everybody justified Dixon and swore that they would pull down the jail and free him if he should be arrested.

Paralyzing on Prohibition.

A decision was rendered in the United States Circuit Court at Topeka, Kan., that has dropped like a bombshell and created consternation among the friends of prohibition in Kansas. The decision in question allows the reopening of original package liquor houses in the State, and in effect declares that the Wilson bill enacted by Congress does not restore the power of the Kansas prohibitory law as against original package saloons.

To Carry Mails by Electricity.

Oscar Kleinsteinber, of Milwaukee, Wis., is working on a new invention which may ultimately revolutionize the present system of carrying mails between different cities. It is intended to be an electrical mail carrier and works on the same principle as the overhead electric street car system, only that the wires intended to carry the mails will be inclosed in pipes. It is expected that the mail carriage will travel sixty miles an hour.

Scientific Surgery.

The Cæsarian operation was successfully performed at Philadelphia. The patient was a young colored woman, 23 years of age. The operation was necessitated by malformation, owing to which the child would have been born into the abdominal cavity. The physician made the initial incision in the abdomen at 11:16 a. m., and four minutes later handed the child to the nurse. The child weighed nearly six pounds.

A Hoosier Pioneer.

Mrs. Samuel H. Patterson, of Jeffersonville, is dead. The deceased was one of the early pioneers of Indianapolis, accompanying her father to that city in November, 1820, and the family built a cabin on Washington street, near the old canal. In the fall of 1821 the city of Indianapolis was laid out, and Miss Nowland, then a stout girl of twelve, carried the chain for Alexander Russel, one of the civil engineers.

Mobbed by Negroes.

As Silas Riggs was walking down one of the streets of Winston, N. C., he was attacked by a mob of negroes. He ran into a bar-room and appealed for protection. A few whites, who were in the place, ran into the street and soon a lively fight ensued, which resulted in the death of Riggs. Several others were badly wounded.

Bursted Her Boiler.

Shifting engine No. 1, belonging to the Monongehela connecting railroad, while pushing a train of empty cars along a side track near the casting-house of the Elsa furnace, in Pittsburgh, Pa., exploded her boiler with terrific force. Engineer Flaherty, aged 25, was blown from the engine cab to the Monongehela River, a distance of 300 feet. Fireman Thos. McGuff, aged 21, was hurled against the brick side of the casting house and instantly killed. Conductor James. Foraker, 50 years old, was perhaps fatally scalded. Brakeman Joseph Ferry was frightfully cut and scalded about the head and shoulders, but may recover. Thomas Clark, a laborer, had his leg broken and back injured. Several men at work in the furnace were slightly injured by escaping steam and flying debris.

Cuban Reciprocity.

The Secretary of State has received from Havana a distended account of the action of the Chamber of Commerce of that city with reference to reciprocity with the United States. It took the form of an address to the Minister of the colonies. The address, after declaring that the United States is chief consumer of Cuban sugar, now that European countries are manufacturing their sugar from beets, urges upon the Minister of colonies the importance of promptly meeting the situation by a reciprocity with the United States. Especially is this urged to keep abreast of Brazil, which is prompt to take advantage of the opening for a market in the United States.

Graveyard Discoveries.

In disinterring the bodies in the old Quaker Church graveyard at Beaver Falls, Pa., the workingmen came across the skeleton of a man which measured six feet and six inches. The skeleton was in a perfect state of preservation, and the bones were of immense thickness.

The skeleton of a lady buried sixty years ago was exhumed, and the blonde hair clinging to the skull was as bright and silky as on the day she was buried, and what was more astonishing it was fully five feet long. It gave evidence of having grown to this extreme length after the body was laid in the grave.

Mysterious Death.

Mrs. Caroline Lettley, of New Holland, O., received the dead body of her 20-year-old daughter Helen in a box from Mt. Vernon. The box was marked "Suicide" with no other explanation. The mother, almost frenzied, asked physicians to make a post-mortem examination. They declined because there was no registry of the body. The mother is still keeping the corpse. No explanation has been received from the west. The girl left her home one year ago. She wrote ten days ago that she was coming home. The authorities are investigating. The doctors are nonplussed.

The Ohio Legislature.

The lower branch of the Legislature reconvened at 4 p. m. Monday. Governor Campbell's message was taken to the House, but the Speaker refused to recognize his Private Secretary and an adjournment motion was rushed through without having received the message. Governor Campbell looks upon the action of the Speaker as a personal insult. The message suggested that a non-partisan Board of Improvement for Cincinnati be appointed by the Mayor of that city and an election be held in April.

Almost a Horror.

The presence of mind displayed by an engineer saved a train from a dreadful wreck on the Jacksonville Southeastern near Jacksonville, Ill. As the late express was going into the city over a high iron bridge the train began to sink down. The engineer pulled the throttle wide open, and the cars spun over the stream beneath and were stopped on the other side. When the trainmen went back they found that a part of the bridge had given away, and the escape from a terrible disaster was fortunately averted.

Horse-Thieves Caught After a Fight.

From advices just received from the Iowa reservation it is learned that three United States Deputy Marshals, in a chase after a band of four horse-thieves, engaged in a fight with the desperadoes. One of the thieves was killed. The others were taken prisoners. When the thieves saw that they would be unable to make away with the stolen horses, eleven all told, they shot them.

Safe Robbers Surprised.

A gang of robbers were detected at work on a safe at Ohio City, Ohio. The alarm was given and the citizens turned out to capture them. The robbers opened fire on the posse and a battle ensued, during which three men were killed and others wounded. The robbers, it is reported, made their escape, leaving one of their number dead. Great excitement prevailed.

Serious Illness of Gen. McKibben.

Gen. T. B. McKibben, retired officer of the army and distinguished for his military services during the war, is lying at the point of death at the Garfield Memorial Hospital in Washington, of cancer of the throat. He went to the hospital for treatment some weeks ago, but it was not known until a few days since that his trouble was cancer and necessarily fatal.

Fifty Deaths Daily.

At Aleppo the deaths from cholera average fifty daily. The city of Aleppo, which is in North Syria, has a population of but 100,000, and the death rate is alarmingly high. The prevalence of the cholera at Aleppo is the more grave because, being on the only safe route between Syria and Eastern Asia, the city is the center of Damascus and Bagdad caravans.

Murder and Suicide.

Near Rlairsville, Posey County, Ind., Henry Kron and his wife quarreled. The husband took a double barrelled shot gun and shot his wife in the presence of their three children, who were powerless to interfere. Kron then passed into the next room and with the remaining load shot the top of his own head off. Kron was a well-to-do farmer.

Mock Marriage.

George Hughes and Miss Annie Bowers were married at Lincoln, Neb. Hughes and a man named Douglass Martin greatly resemble each other, and the lady mistook Martin for her husband, and did not discover her mistake until the next day. It now transpires that it was a mock marriage and both men have skipped.

A Contested Will.

The will of Frank O. Lloyd, who was a rich St. Louis druggist, causes a sensation. The will leaves nearly all the money of the deceased to Mrs. Jennie Walker, a widow to whom Lloyd was engaged twenty years ago. Steps are being taken to contest the will. Mrs. Walker will fight for the provisions of the will in her favor.

Killed by a Constable.

John Davis, the ex-proprietor of the Hotel Pittson, was shot and killed at Wilkesbarre, Pa., by Constable Withers. The constable attempted to quell a disturbance, when Davis interfered and knocked Withers down twice. When the constable got up the second time he fired four shots at Davis, all taking effect.

Saved the Six.

A family consisting of a man, his wife and seven children, as well as a boarder, had a narrow escape from death by fire in Jersey City. Six of the children were dropped, one by one, out of a window and were caught by a policeman. The others of the party managed to escape death by almost a miracle.

Frightful Collision.

Two freight trains on the Pennsylvania Railway crashed together head-in at Philadelphia, Pa., through the carelessness of a telegraph operator, letting the second train onto the block. Engineer H. R. Neal was badly injured and fireman John Searen badly scalded over the body and will probably die.

Half a Town Burned.

Half the business portion of Virdin, Ill., was burned. Twelve stores were destroyed. The town has no fire department and the ringing of the church bells brought half the population out to fight the flames. The loss, which cannot be ascertained, was not covered by insurance.

Among Chicago Thugs.

In less than an hour after he arrived in Chicago, George H. Bott, of Watertown, Wis., who is gray-haired and feeble, was sand-bagged, robbed of $500 in cash, a certificate of deposit for $8,000, and despoiled of his overcoat, hat, and satchel. His assailants are unknown.

Shot by an Assassin.

S. E. R. Vogelsang, Town Marshal of Falmouth, Ky., was shot and killed. The murder was brutal and cowardly. Vogelsang was just entering the gate of his home when an unknown assassin fired. The Marshal fell dead, with a double load of buck shot in his breast and face.

Thought to Have Been Murdered.

It is thought that William B. Hakes, who died on his farm near Holly, N. Y., was murdered. He was known to have $120 in his pocket book. He slept alone one night and the next morning his hired man found the back door of the house forced open and Hakes' pockets empty.

Killed by Cigarettes.

Frederick Long, a boy aged 14 years, died suddenly from excessive cigarette smoking at Lockport, N. Y. The boy had become a victim of the habit, which had affected his heart to such an extent that he was taken with chills and vomiting, and died in a short time.

Bad Wreck.

A stock train was wrecked on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad at Altona, Ill. Thirteen cars of stock and two engines were destroyed, and the engineer and fireman are reported to be badly hurt. A wrecking train was sent out to clear the track.

The Wreck Found.

Divers locating caissons in the Ohio River near Cincinnati, have found fourteen feet down in the mud what is believed to be the wreck of the steamer Moselle, sunk forty years ago. A large sum of money is known to be in the safe and a number of dead in the cabin.

Death of the Child Shot.

Freddie Niblick, the child who was shot through the head by his little brother at Decatur, Ind., has died. The child survived ten days with a hole in his head in which a drainage tube was inserted that admitted daylight entirely through his head.

Miners Resume Work.

Four hundred men have resumed work at Lake Superior and Cleveland mines, in Ishpeming, Mich. The majority of the strikers are still out, however, and swear they will go back on no terms. But their own differences may result in trouble.

A Montana Town Burning.

Dispatches have been received saying that Stevensville, Mont., a town on the Better Route Valley branch, is on fire and that the conflagration threatens to take the whole town with no means on hand to prevent total destruction.

Railroad Shops Burned.

The Queen and Crescent Road shops and train sheds at Ludlow, Ky., caught fire. Several locomotives, a dozen passenger and sleeping coaches and many freight cars have been destroyed. The loss will be $200,000.

Appointed by the President.

The following appointments have been made by the President: Joseph Telters, Nebraska, receiver of public moneys at Lincoln, Neb.; Herman Rhodes, New Mexico, agent Indians, Mesculero Agency, New Mexico.

Coming Home to Vote.

Large numbers of clerks and officers employed in the departments and the Capitol at Washington, are leaving or preparing to leave within a few days to take part in the elections in their respectives states.

Heavy Gales.

A heavy gale did much damage to small shipping in New York Bay besides causing the suspension of a great deal of traffic in the rivers and on the bay.

Maxwell Hanged.

James Maxwell, alias Murray, was hanged at Morris, Ill., for the murder of Chas. Decker. His neck was broken by the fall and death was instantaneous.

THEY SCORE MRS. LESLIE

TAKEN SEVERELY TO TASK BY THE SOCIALISTS.

The New York Woman Said in a Recent Interview that "Anarchists Should Be Shot Like Dogs," and This Remark Calls Out Some Bitter Criticism at Chicago.

[Chicago dispatch.]

It having been freely advertised that the socialists would discuss Mrs. Frank Leslie, Waverly Hall was crowded on Sunday afternoon. By way of preliminary, a few minor resolutions were offered and discussed and several articles were read on socialistic subjects, and there was the usual row over Prof. Orchardson and his resolutions.

The subject of the day was introduced by Mrs. S. Woodman, who read an interview with Mrs. Leslie which appeared in a recent interview of a local sheet, in which she is accredited with saying many harsh things about the socialists. Mrs. Woodman offered a long resolution, of which the following is a sample:

Resolved, That the gentle, tender-hearted representative of America's uppertendom who has done Chicago, during the last week, the honor to visit it, and has kindly consented to enlighten the general public as to her views on the industrial situation and recommend a course of treatment warranted to cure in all cases for discontented workers of all nationalities, is hereby entitled to the thanks of this meeting, for voicing in so unmistakable a manner the secret sentiment of the self-styled elite of our great cities in regard to the working classes and the grievances of which they complain.

Mrs. Woodman then made a long address, in the course of which she said:

"'Shoot them like dogs.' This is how Mrs. Leslie would have the anarchists treated. It seems strange, does it not, that a woman's lips should utter such words as these? Stranger still, that a woman's heart could beget the thought. Even the coarsest and most cruel men shrink a little from the woman who advocates coarseness and cruelty, and they are right. From woman—the wife, mother, sister, daughter—one naturally expects gentle thoughts and humane sentiments, and so to hear an expression which would do credit to the most illiterate and brutalized officer on Chicago's police force from the lips of one whose beauty and grace have become a household word in the United States cannot fail to have called forth a faint shudder even from so callous an individual as a Chicago newspaper man.

"'Shoot them down like dogs! Treat them like mad dogs!' How redolent with refinement, how suggestive of feminine delicacy, purity, and womanly sweetness in this language! Has this woman no children? No; she is childless. She tells you so. 'I have no child's stocking to fill with candy and dolls Christmas morning.' There is a world of pathos in this thought. After all, with all her wealth of diamonds, she is to be pitied. Had she been a mother perchance she would have thought of the little children left fatherless, of the wives and mothers bereft of their only support and left to struggle single-handed in consequence of that shameless and infamous execution Nov. 11, which Mrs. Leslie characterizes as 'a brave and wise thing.' As a matter of fact, there are few of Chicago's citizens who are not more worthy candidates for hanging than were those.

"Mrs. Leslie shares the national antipathy to untitled foreigners. Worthless, utterly worthless, morally, mentally and financially worthless foreigners are continually being shipped over here as husbands for American heiresses. Mrs. Leslie is right. They should be suppressed. The most stringent legislative enactments should be passed and rigidly enforced against their importation. O, but this is not the class of foreigners—idle, dissipated and impecunious noblemen—that Mrs. Leslie and her uppertendom friends object to. The more worthless the more welcome, provided they come from the aristocracy. But the class of workingmen, American or foreign-born—it matters not—which asks questions, which claims rights, which reads, studies, thinks and agitates, which insists that society should exist for the producer and not the producer for society, which declares that 'labor creates all wealth and is entitled to what it creates; that millionaires are a monstrosity and capitalists a curse.' Ah, this is the objectionable class in the estimation of the Leslies.

"'It is a great nation, this,' sighed Mrs. Leslie, 'and will be greater when these social questions are settled.' They will be settled according to Mrs. Leslie, and that 'by force.' There is just one point which the lady has apparently overlooked. It is that the people themselves will be apt to take a hand in the settling. 'Yes, strikes must be put down and the strikers be suppressed by force,' she says. Herr Most could scarcely have delivered himself of more incendiary language than that employed by this cultivated beauty and pet of fashion—Mrs. Frank Leslie. Imagine it: no Judge, no jury, no court, but let every man, woman and child who walks the streets armed with a revolver, ready to shoot at any suspected anarchists or other disciples of discontent. If this is not anarchy, what is it? But only the 'better classes,' as Mrs. Leslie calls them, may indulge in the luxury of recommending this particular kind of anarchy.

"The 'better classes!' Well, you heard some account of their performances at a certain big ball here in this city a little while ago. It is a pity that these refined, cultured, high-bred, blue-blooded, altogether superior beings were not compelled to endure any discomfort when they wished to travel, merely that a few thousand common, insignificant, every-day plebeian creatures like ourselves should have a few more of the necessaries and comforts of life.

"Mrs. Leslie is at least [illegible] way, if her statements are to be taken at their par value. 'Do you know your own typesetters?' asks the reporter. 'Every one of them. They all touch their hats to me as I pass.' Think of this! Isn't it remarkable? Every man who knows enough to go in the house when it rains will touch his hat to a woman, be she a washerwoman or duchess. The homage is to the sex, not to the individual, but Mrs. Leslie does not seem to be aware of this. 'And I believe they would all die for me,' says she. Well, either Mrs. Leslie's organ of credulity is abnormally developed or there must be no people in that office who have any self-respect in them. Possibly Mrs. Leslie makes life such a 'demnition grind' to them, that it's the toss of a penny to most of them whether they live or die, the odds, if any, being decidedly in favor of the latter alternative.

"In conclusion, we would like to give the Mrs. Leslies one little word of friendly warning and advice. It is contained in the old proverb, 'Better let sleeping dogs lie.' [illegible] they are [illegible] there are [illegible]. Furthermore, [illegible] to invite them to show their real strength, [illegible] ascertain."

GRANDMA'S HONEY BREAD.

BY OZIAS MIDSUMMER.

I've tasted the sweets and the sours of living,
I've drank the rare draughts and the dregs of the cups;
I've joyed in receiving and joyed in the giving,
My life's intermitted in life's downs and ups.
Arrayed I behold now its comfort and dread,
With the brightest spot in it—Grandma's honey bread.

At home there were apples, and doughnuts, and cookies,
And buns, and molasses, and bread o'er and o'er,
And baby boys baked that a joy at to look is,
And puddings and jellies and pieces the more,
But nothing there seemed quite so good as the bread
That I got at grandma's with honey instead.

Ah, well I remember the buggy and "hossie,"
The happy bright days when we all sped away
'Mid "birdies" and "sheepies, and "lambies" and "bossies,"
The river side sporting, to spend the whole day
With dear, good, old grandma to visit, 'twas said—
But I well remembered the honey and bread.

And I too remember the scenes at the meetings,
The shouts and the welcomes, the trounces and throws,
The laughter, the joys, and the gladness at greetings,
The sights and the sounds, the confusion, all those;
But best of them all mem'ry knows what was said
When grandma said, "Get him some honey and bread"

You see it was thus that, amidst the confusion
(For we'd just arrived at her vine-shaded door),
She mentioned so quickly the thing to my notion,
Was from the known fact I had been there before,
And scarce ever landed before I had said:
"Me knows oos dot wery dood 'oney and bread."

DOROTHEA INGRAM.

A Story of Early Colonial Days.

BY CHARLES C. HAHN.

CHAPTER VIII.—(Continued.)

These meetings between Dorothea and Achsah at length became so painful to the latter that the minister exerted all his power to prevent them. He allowed his daughter to go out with no one but himself, and while taking their solitary strolls he carefully avoided those places where they were likely to encounter Dorothea. But there was one place in which he could not avoid the young witch, for such she was now called by the settlement generally. In the meeting-house on Sunday and on lecture days the whole population were obliged to gather. Here, for an hour or two on those days, the two were obliged to sit, and although it was God's house, the minister was never easy lest the devil's power might find some weak place in his prayer and break through, even in that sacred place. Consequently he changed his own family pew to a remote corner from Dr. Lennox's, where Dorothea sat, and contrived as much as possible to keep his daughter from the sight of the girl.

He had it in mind several times to forbid Dorothea from entering the meeting-house, but his deacons dissuaded him. Then, too, the minister knew that the time to strike an open blow had not yet come. For Dr. Lennox, with whom Dorothea lived, and to whom she had become as a daughter, stoutly denied all insinuations against her, and had publicly stated that he would fight for her as for his own flesh and blood.

Dorothea's beauty also had its influence upon a great many of the congregation, principally the young men of the settlement. As has been stated, she had grown up a comely girl, the equal to whom there was not in Sagnauck, and, despite the reputation given her by the minister, and the evidence before them with regard to Achsah Granville, Dorothea's suitors were many.

Neither was there ever any jealousy of her in the hearts of the other maidens of the village, for Dorothea possessed that openness and good-heartedness which seldom fails to make friends. Then, too, her readiness to serve a neighbor, to watch by the sick, to nurse a fretful child, or do any of the many acts which a good-hearted woman can do if she will, made her a favorite with her elders. True, they half believed her false, but they silenced themselves with the fact that nothing had really been proven against her, and that to them she had always been kind. Some, no doubt, were influenced by the thought that, did she possess the power ascribed to her, it were better to treat her well and secure her favor than to incur her emnity.

It was a troublesome young life; and had not Dorothea been supported by Dr. Lennox and his wife, she, long before these five years had elapsed, no doubt would have committed some act of indiscretion, or allowed some outburst of temper which would have given the minister good cause for proceeding against her as he had against her father. But this worthy couple watched over her as they would over their own child, and many times succeeded in soothing her feelings when severely tried, and in inducing her to forgive and, if possible, forget, the wrongs done her.

In one instance the Doctor's well-meaning plans came near hastening on the end against which he was guarding. Like all medical men of the colonies in those days, he had been educated in England, and was consequently fairly well acquainted with nervous diseases. To him the girl Achsah's trouble seemed due entirely to physical causes, although he could not understand just how it was brought about. He accordingly decided, one day, to bring the girl into Dorothea's presence and test the effect it would have upon her, doubting not that her fear of him would hinder any deception.

By a little maneuvering he was able at length to secure the girl's presence in his office and then sent for Dorothea. Scarcely had she entered when Achsah began to show unmistakable signs of some outside influence being brought to bear upon her. Her face rapidly changed its expression, her arms dropped to her sides, and her whole body became limp.

For an instant the Doctor's faith in his adopted daughter was shaken, and he glanced up quickly at her. To his horror and the confirmation of his fears, she too was visibly affected. Her eyes were steadily fixed on those of the girl shrinking back in the chair, and her face wore a look which the Doctor had never seen there before. It was pale, and the muscles of the face stood out in relief. Thus she remained for several seconds, then gradually resumed her usual manner, and a contemptuous smile rested upon her lips.

The Doctor was about to speak to Dorothea when his attention was called Achsah. With a shudder she slipped from the chair and lay upon the floor, her limbs contorted and her mouth foaming. While the Doctor was hastening to procure certain medicines which he thought might relieve her, she ceased her struggling, and by the time he returned to her she had straightened her form to its full length and lay upon the floor with the rigidity of a cataleptic fit. He laid her upon a couch and administered a potion which soon revived her. She remained weak for some time, but the Doctor learned that whatever her trouble might be it was not beyond the aid of medicine.

"Unless"—he could not help the thought—"unless Dorothea had withdrawn her spell."

That so serious would be the result of his test the Doctor had never imagined. He had supposed that when the two girls were brought together, away from the minister's influence, he would be able to control Achsah's trickery, as he had called it, and that an unanswerable argument would be found against the minister's charges. But the result had been just the opposite to what he had wished, and the scene in his office had been one, he knew, which would but injure the one he desired to help. And his fears were speedily realized, for that very night the excited minister called upon him, and, after denouncing his treachery, announced his intention of having Dorothea arraigned for witchcraft.

CHAPTER IX.

A LOVE IDYL.

In the midst of all these troubles the severest experience of youth came to Dorothea, and in it she was happy. During the past year a stranger had come to Sagnauck from old England.

Many of the colonists had emigrated from the country in which Oswold Castle stood, and knew, by reputation, at least, of Lord Oswold. The coming of his younger son, Egbert, was like the coming of an old friend to those even with whom he was not personally acquainted. He came, too, bearing with him the patent for a large grant of land near Sagnauck, a patent which bore upon it the great seal of the King himself. Even in New England, where men were supposed to be taken for what they were worth in character, rather than for what they were worth in houses and barns, these facts gave to the younger son of Oswold a warm welcome.

But the young man had a personal character which would have made him welcome in time when it should become known, and Sagnauck was not long in finding it out.

In appearance Egbert Ingram was of medium height, and the picturesque dress of that age set off his manly figure to advantage. His hair was typical Saxon, light and wavy, and his eyes were of that dead-gray hue which denote strength of will and honesty of purpose.

His advent created no small stir in the village, for he was the first to come direct from old England since the settlement had been made. From him could be learned many things with regard to the old home, and the state of affairs in England. Fresh from a more refined atmosphere, he brought with him, too, an influence which was speedily felt. Old phrases fell from his lips, new ideas came from him, hints of other ways of living were dropped, books and pictures were spoken of, and the little settlement, which had dropped down into its own way of life and unconsciously adopted its own peculiar vernacular, had an agreeable diversion. The elders remembered the more courtly words they had been accustomed to in their youth, and almost unconsciously began to use them again. His stories of England also gave new subjects for thought and conversation, and the little world, bound in by a circle of dense woods, found an opening out into a greater one, which it was learning to forget.

The younger members of the village, many of whom had thought of but little except the clearing of forests and the planting of corn, of work on week days and of preaching on Sunday, were pleasantly surprised to hear such familiarity with books and paintings, towers and castles, and lords and kings. It was like a glimpse into fairyland.

And yet one should not imagine from this that Egbert Ingram was an egotist who had thrust his own personal likes and dislikes upon the others. He was too much of a gentleman to allow the least with whom he came in contact to imagine that any other life could be more congenial than that of an honest pioneer in the woods of America.

It was rather by questions that he was drawn out, and what he did in changing the current of thought in Sagnauck was brought about more by the pioneers themselves than by him.

When Egbert Ingram left England he was given a letter of introduction to Dr. Lennox, who urged him to make his home under the physician's roof until he should become settled, either upon his own land or in the village. This necessarily brought him much with the Doctor's adopted daughter, Dorothea, and between the two sprang up a friendship such as the latter had never enjoyed before. Under his tuition she began the study of several books, which Egbert had brought with him, and in particular did she devote herself to the mastery of her mother tongue. She loved also to listen to her companion's tales of old courtly life, and so well did he recount, and so well did she listen, that before many months passed she felt as if she were nearly as familiar with the manners of England's nobility as if she had lived among them.

This friendship was very sweet to Dorothea, and in it she for a time almost forgot the cloud that hung over her. Then came one of her encounters with the minister. For the first time Dorothea felt a sense of shame in connection with Mr. Granville's persecution.

Would Mr. Ingram hear of it? And would he side against her? Would he, too, believe the tales that were told about her?

The long winter months had been so pleasant, and now that spring was opening, she had felt as if new life had begun to unfold in her. And was all this fancied happiness to pass away, too, under the dark cloud which covered her young life.

The meeting with the minister had occurred in the afternoon, and, with somewhat of the superstition in her which then pervaded all New England, she asked herself: "I do wonder if the spider and the rabbit had anything to do with it? I saw a spider in my room soon after I arose, and as I was walking through the woods a rabbit ran across the path in front of me."

Her reverie was broken by the approach of Egbert Ingram, who, seeing her standing alone in the yard before the Doctor's home, approached and greeted her.

"So, Mistress Dorothea, I find that, not content with bewitching men with your fair face and brown eyes, you must needs call in the aid of his majesty of the lower regions."

"And do you believe it?" Dorothea, with sad face, asked, feeling as she did so that if he believed in her guilt there was nothing she cared to live for.

"Do I believe it?" Egbert replied. "How can I disbelieve such a learned and holy man as Mr. Granville? Does not he know all the signs for detecting witches, and has he not assisted in the burning of one in merry Salem?"

Dorothea made no reply, and her downcast eyes and troubled face told him that the subject was one too serious to her for jesting.

"I beg your pardon, Dorothea," Egbert continued in a lower tone. "I did but jest, for the charge seemed to me too ridiculous to be treated seriously. How long have they so worried you?"

"Nearly all my life. At least, ever since father disappeared, which was over five years ago."

"Poor child! And is there no one to help you bear these insults?"

"Yes; father and mother Lennox always have been my friends. But it is a hard life—a hard life, with all the world against me."

"Nay, Dorothea, not the whole world, but only a very small part of it. There are other lands where you might never hear from this troublesome minister, for I know that he alone believes the charges against you."

"Yes; but they are far away, and Sagnauck is all the world to me. Here I must live and here I must die."

"Then, Dorothea, allow one man, who would die for you, to become your protector. Little one, do you not know that I love you? I should not have spoken of this just now had it not been that you need some one to help you. Dorothea, will you be my wife?"

"Even when men say I am a witch?"

"Yes, Dorothea, for indeed you are one. For have you not cast such a spell over my heart that I cannot break it? All I can do is to make terms with the witch."

An hour after, when Dr. Lennox returned from a professional visit and was told of Dorothea's engagement, he was much relieved.

"I am glad of it, Ingram, glad of it, for Mr. Granville is so excited over that unfortunate affair in my office that he is determined to drive the poor child from the settlement. But as your wife she will be in a position too strong for him to assail. So I would urge you to marry in all haste."

And Egbert, quoting from an old book, answered:

> "Let me lay lance in rest for this dear child,
> Because I never saw a maid more sweet."

CHAPTER X.

A PRIMEVAL WEDDING.

Dr. Lennox took pains to announce Dorothea Hillary's engagement at once, and that same evening called upon the minister and used such arguments as prevailed upon the latter to give up, for the present at least, his idea of prosecuting the girl.

Both the Doctor and Ingram were anxious for a speedy marriage, and before another month had passed, and just as the forest flowers were blooming, Dorothea Hillary gave herself to Egbert Ingram, and the maiden passed away among the flowers of early spring, and the new life came among the flowers in May.

The marriage was a joyful one, for all loved Dorothea, and the little settlement made the day a festival.

Many were the gifts which were brought to Hillary's cabin in the woods, for there Ingram and his wife had decided to begin their wedded life.

In the evening after the youth had gone an incident happened which made Mr. Granville believe that he had done wrong in allowing the nuptials to be celebrated, for that gentleman had cultivated his diseased imagination to such an extent, that long after the villagers had retired to their homes he wandered about in the woods brooding over his trouble. He meant to be just, and perhaps merciful, but his breast was filled with conflicting emotions, as a brand from the burning, he wished to save her—but on the other hand came up before his then primitive mind, the facts concerning the girl, and he found that he was not doing his duty in not bringing her to trial. As he was walking aimlessly about in the woods he saw a powefully built man, in whom he thought he recognized the dead Hillary, approach the cabin, and following him in single file were a half-dozen Indians, each bearing a bundle on his back.

Egbert and Dorothea were seated in the cabin talking over the events of day, and, as is the custom of lovers, repeating their vows of allegiance to each other, when a rap at the door attracted their attention. The seven men whom the minister had seen silently entered and ranged their bundles upon the floor around the man and wife.

This was done without a word, and the six Indians withdrew, leaving their leader in the cabin. Dorothea Ingram arose from her seat by the side of her husband and went to him. As she approached the man extended his arms and clasped her to his bosom.

"Dorothea, my love, may this day be the beginning of a happy life for you. I am not much at praying, but I will pray to-night that God may make your husband faithful to you. Here is my wedding present. If you were poor it would make you wealthy, for each bundle is made up of the choicest furs, and here is a purse filled with gold and silver, and, even though your husband is wealthy, my present will not come amiss. Besides you must not go to your husband empty handed."

With a kiss from the young bride's lips the man departed.

The minister had been a silent witness of the scene, and he knew now that Dorothea was still helped by and had received another visit from the devil, even on her wedding day.

CHAPTER XI.

PURITAN LAW.

A year passed by—a year laden with happiness to Dorothea. She and her husband have made a happy home in Hillary cabin. The settlement had now grown to such an extent that their farm had become quite valuable.

Egbert was away part of the time looking after his land, which lay some three miles inland, but as was natural the greater part of his time was passed at home.

With his own hands and with the help of others he cleared several acres of ground about the home, and in another year the rich black loam would have a heavy crop.

Dorothea had her garden, in which vegetables grew, with here and there a bed of flowers. Climbing vines had also been planted at each side of the cabin door and, before fall, had spread their luxuriance over the side and around it with their green leaves.

But the minister had not been idle. The scene he had witnessed the evening after Dorothea's wedding could never be banished from his mind. It had rankled in his bosom like some poisonous weed spreading its fibrous roots and feeding upon his heart. He was now thoroughly convinced of Dorothea's evil, and was restrained from proceeding against her only by the position which her husband gave her. But at length even this did not protect her, and he gave notice one Sunday morning, after preaching, that the next day Mistress Dorothea Inghram would be asked to appear before the officers of the church to answer to the charge of withcraft.

The announcement created great excitement, and many were the friends who were indignant, but Mr. Granville had consulted with the deacons of the church and it was their opinion that Dorothea had best be put on trial. If she were innocent she would be cleared. If guilty, it was best to have her guilt known.

The rest of the day was one of intense, though repressed, excitement, and the people gathered to the afternoon preaching with the expectation of hearing something more with regard to the all-absorbing subject. But they were disappointed.

Mr. Granville came behind the tall, Puritan pulpit, and, after the hymn and the prayer and the reading of a chapter of the Scriptures, announced his text:

"I am He that blotteth out thy transgressions as a cloud; and as a dark cloud thy sins."

The plain board meeting house stood at the end of the one long village street, and was surrounded by forest trees. The oak and the maple, the birch and the hickory beat their branches on its roof. In front grew the wild hawberry, which, in its season, was loaded down with bright, red berries, and in the rear were the graves which marked the saints who had gone to heaven.

It was a strange sermon, and so impressed the listeners. The subject seemed to have nothing to do with the great fact which was filling the minds of the congregation. Mr. Granville preached as he had never preached before, and the people listened with wondering awe. Was this the decrepit man who had wearied them with his platitudes about God's judgment and foreordination? Was this the man whom they had grown to look upon as stern and unforbidding—who preached rather an unforgiving God than a God of sinners?

The minister said: "Beloved, the clouds are an emblem of sin. They float above us in God's air and are so dark that they hide the sun from us. They come from earth, they rise from the brook, the river, the ocean, and no man sees them rise. And yet, when they leave us and rise to that clear space which belongs to God, they stand out in clear relief and are beyond our reach. They float in God's air and hide from us the sun.

"So with our sins. They come from us and ofttimes we know not of them even as they are rising. But when once they have gone upward, they gather and we see the black cloud between us and God. They form on earth, in our hearts, but when they have risen, no man's hand can reach them. They then belong to God, and He alone can drive them away.

"There is then left to us nothing. But God has said that even as He scattereth the clouds so will He drive away our sins. They may be dark and threatening, and nothing that we can do can drive them away. But He has promised that His hand shall stretch out and take them away."

The sermon closed with these words: "God is love and He is merciful, and He will stretch out His strong hand and take away the dark cloud which hangs between Him and us; and all that we have to do is to fall upon our knees and beat upon our breasts and cry, 'God, be merciful to me a sinner.'"

The minister ended and gave out a hymn, which was sung by the choir in the gallery. Then the choir received the benediction and departed.

The sermon was the cause of much discussion in the village, particularly in the doctor's household, where Egbert and Dorothea stopped that night. Egbert said:

"I never have understood Mr. Granville before. Take courage, Dorothea. He means to do right, and if we can but prove to him that his distorted imagination is wrong, from being your enemy he will turn to be your friend."

The next morning the whole village gathered in the meeting-house. It was a solemn occasion. Prayer was offered by the minister, and a Puritan hymn was sung, after which Dorothea was brought before the pulpit to answer the charge which her life-long enemy had been preparing.

The first accusation was with regard to her evil influence over the minister's daughter. This Dorothea denied, and in rebuttal Doctor Lennox told of the incident in his office, giving as his opinion that Achsah's trouble was mere nervousness, and that the herbs of the forest, if rightly applied, would prove a restorative. This statement of his created a favorable impression. Then the minister arose and said:

"Mistress Dorothea Ingram, who have you met in the forest during the last five years?"

The congregation waited, breathless, for the answer.

"Reverend sir. I might answer your question were it not for a promise to one to whom I am bound by the most sacred ties——"

"Stop!" cried the minister. "Speak not in this place of sacred ties which bind you to the evil one."

The congregation experienced a shock and believed that the minister was right. Before Dorothea could reply the minister asked again:

"Will you tell me now who visited you on the night of your marriage and gave you such presents as no other maiden in the village could hope to receive?"

To this Dorothea answered:

"Who it was that visited me my husband knows, and if he is satisfied, it does not concern you."

This also, as the minister saw, created a favorable impression in Dorothea's behalf. But his work was not yet done. Drawing a folded slip of paper from his pocket he said:

"My brethren, ye have heard the manner in which this woman hath eluded the guardians which would condemn her. Here is written proof against her. I found it in her cabin two years ago. It was left there by a man who entered the place after night-fall. I found a note written on birch-bark. I took it home and kept it for two years, and Deacon Bethnal saw it, and was a witness when that same note was taken away by the one who wrote it, 'The Prince of the Power of the Air.' But, so deeply had the words burned into my mind, that the next day I rewrote them, and here they are:

"'Dorothea! Obey the one who keeps you, and the one who looks after you, but whom you cannot see, will provide for you.'

"Brethren," continued the minister, "what more proof is needed? Mistress Dorothea has refused to tell who it is hath met her in the woods, and who it is that provided for her on the eve of her marriage. Behold! here is his own communication. You will note that he said, 'Obey!' because he has a right to command. 'Obey the one who keeps you.' Who could this refer to? Satan. 'And the one who keeps you.' Who was it kept her? The evidence is clear. It was the evil one. And if anything more is needed, the last part of the note is sufficient: 'The one whom you cannot see will provide for you.' Whom could she not see? The devil, who has been providing for her and protecting her."

After this speech the officers of the church and the village consulted together. The evidence to some was plain, but others put a more favorable construction upon it. The latter, however, were in the minority. Puritan law was strict and the verdict was announced that, as the charge of witchcraft had not been fully proved, but grave doubts remained in the minds of the judges, Mistress Dorothea Ingram should at noon that day receive twenty lashes upon her bare back. And the merciful judges prayed that this might prove the salvation of her soul.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Some Short Dietary Rules.

I am told that the most remarkable physician in England at the present time lives in Birmingham, says Eugene Field in a London letter to the Chicago News. He is not yet forty years of age—I cannot recall his name at this moment. What interested me in the talk I had about him was the circumstance that he violates many of the customs of life. For example, he dines at 7:30 every evening, and at 9 o'clock he goes to bed. At 2 o'clock in the morning he rises, reads for two hours and writes for three hours. At 7 o'clock he eats a light breakfast and then goes to bed again, rising at 11. The hours devoted to the practice of his profession are, therefore (with few exceptions), between noon and 7 p. m. The amount and quality of the work done by this man are said to be simply wonderful, and in five years he has risen to a foremost place in the medical profession.

I cannot forbear giving for the benefit of your dyspeptic readers a few rules that are laid down by the English physicians for the observance of those who suffer from acute indigestion:

1. Do not eat beef; it is too hearty for the average dyspeptic. Eat the lean of mutton (boiled preferred).
2. Bacon in small quantities may be eaten; also thin slices of aerated bread fried in bacon fat; also boiled pigs' feet and tripe, and the fish not known as oily fish.
3. Eat no fruit. Of vegetables partake sparingly of baked potato, rice and boiled peas.
4. Bread may be eaten (aerated bread preferred) in thin slices toasted until they are brittle.
5. The brown meat of fowl may be eaten. Avoid all gravies and sauces.
6. Abstain from all liquors, and drink no tea unless it be fresh made.
7. Eat no eggs, except fresh raw, well whipped. Sugars should be avoided.
8. Drink no ice-water; partake freely of hot water and hot milk (not boiled).
9. Lie down for twenty minutes after each meal.

A VERY ingenious instrument has lately appeared for showing the velocity and pressure of the wind. The effect is produced by the rising or falling in level of mercury in a trough.

SENATOR TURPIE!

—AT—

WATERLOO,

Thursday, Oct. 30.

Speaking to begin at 1, P. M. Big meeting in the evening at which there will be speeches by

JUDGE McCLELLAN

AND

HON. W. G. COLERICK.

ROBERT GARRETT, once the president of the B. & O. has returned from Europe, and is much improved in health. It was at one time feared he would go insane.

FIVE per cent. is being levied on department clerks at Washington, to help in the republican campaign. But Harrison agreed to enforce the civil service law, which declares such assessments a crime.

SILVER has been forced down by its enemies, the gold men, to $1.10 an ounce. Under the first impulse of the new silver bill it had gone up in price. But it appears the law is not so good as was expected.

THE recount of the population of New York City is completed. It was taken by the police and shows a total of 1,711,000, or about 200,000 more than the federal census made it. This shows how carelessly the work has been done in general.

THE Pullman Car Co, have announced a dividend of 8 per cent and have put aside $2,398,130 as net earnings for the year besides. Does anybody wonder to hear that Pullman believes in protection? Don't forget, that only those are "protected" who do not need it.

NOT a republican paper has the courage or ability to stand up before the people and defend the McKinley tariff that is causing a rise in prices of nearly every article of everyday use. So, they put in the time publishing false statements and making personal attacks on democratic candidates.

GEO. P. GORDON, inventor of the printing press that bears his name, died worth a million and a half. Now, his daughter who received most of the money, is dead, and other heirs are quarreling over the money. This should be a warning to all printers to leave their millions in safe hands.

MCKINLEY got a big joke on himself the other day. He had been holding up the beauties of his high tariff in Michigan and on leaving, passed through Michigan City, Ind. As the train stopped there, he made a short speech to a few republicans and closed by saying "I hope you will return your congressman by an increased majority." They were thunderstruck, for the member is Shively, a democrat. But he supposed he was still in Michigan.

Our Sample Ballot.

We publish to-day, by authority of the board of county commissioners the sample form of our local ticket, namely, our our district, and county ticket. This is required by law to be published so voters can see exactly what they are going to use. Study it carefully, and keep for reference. Sample ballots printed on green paper, will also be distributed for the convenience of those who need them. The real ballot to be used in voting at the election, however, will be printed on white paper. The sample state ballot which has been distributed among the people, is yellow, while the real ticket to be used at the polls will be red. Notice how these ballots are to be folded, so that the initials of the poll clerks will be on the outside, so that when you hand your ticket to the inspector he can see that they are the proper ballots to be voted. If the initials are not in sight, the ballot will be given back to you, and you must go back into the booth and fold it properly. A ballot must not be so folded as to show the name of a candidate. That would lose your vote. Remember the plain directions. If you want to vote a straight ticket, stamp only the little square at the head, opposite the name of the party, whose ticket you wish to vote. If you do not wish to vote a straight ticket then do not stamp the head. Let that alone, and go through the entire ballot and stamp the square opposite the name of every man you wish to vote for. These directions apply to both the red and the white tickets. Fold both and give both to the inspector. Do not use a paster, and do not scratch out or erase a name. The voting is done with the stamp.

Voorhees at Butler.

About 100 went from Auburn to hear Indiana's great senator, at Butler, last Wednesday. An extra train was run from Garrett, taking all told about 200 Senator Voorhees had reached Butler before the train from here, and all parts of the county had sent numbers of the most enterprising citizens, who were eager to hear and see once more, the man who has for many years been a leading figure in the senate. His speech was the speech of a master, and his arraignment of republicans and their methods in congress was overwhelming. People stood for an hour and a half and listened patiently to him, though there was not a seat provided for them. They don't seem to know fatigue when Mr. Voorhees speaks. He appeared somewhat worn, as he has been on the stump every day, going frequently from one side of the state to the other. He had been up a part of the previous night, and when he left Butler, it was to be up all night long, going by the way of Logansport and Indianapolis to speak at Greenfield, in Hancock county the next day. Few people could do the work he has to do. In the evening, there was a fully attended meeting in the opera house, speeches being made by Hon. W. F. McNagny of Columbia City, and Judge McClellan. Judge McClellan confined himself to a thorough discussion of the tariff and such leading topics, dealing with them in a masterly way and making his speech intensely interesting. He could speak from experience for he had ten months been in the midst of the discussion of these things, in Congress, and his words carried conviction to the minds of his hearers. He was listened to attentively till the close, though he spoke over an hour. Mr. McNagny followed in an able and scholarly speech of about an hour, holding his hearers to the close. Though comparatively a young man, he has few equals on the rostrum, and he wins golden opinions wherever he meets the people. Those who heard these two evening speeches, compliment the two gentlemen in no stinted terms. The DeKalb county band went over from Auburn, and furnished the chief music. They received many compliments from Butler citizens for their good music, good appearance, and gentlemenly ways. Uncle John Moore and his drum corps were also on hand and gave the crowd some of the liveliest of their music.

McKinley's Tariff in Auburn.

Our attention was drawn to this by the fact that our popular merchant, Mr. Harter, found he needed more children's wraps for his fall trade than he had ordered, and sent for more. The bills came and were much higher, as they explained, on account of the increased tariff. Mr. Harter is a republican and cannot be accused of any design to make the new law unpopular. Our other merchants find the same thing.

* * *

Scarely an hour passes but some one in asking prices of various goods, learns that an advance in prices has been made, all on account of the new republican tariff. Now and then a customer who is a republican, says it is not the change in the tariff laws. One of them said, no article but tin was affected by the new law. This would be as much as to say that tin alone, had been given a higher rate of duty. This is not true. There are hundreds of articles affected in the same way. We called attention to a few incidents last week. Mr. Foster in his speech here, spoke of pearl buttons, saying they would be doubled in price, for the new rate of tariff was about three times as high as under the old law Glassware and lamps are affected and will be higher. Ask your hardware man the prices of what they have to sell, gun barrels, saws of all kinds, and hundreds of such articles. All on account of the new law passed by a republican house against the solid vote of democratic members, and then signed by a republican president. They knew it would make the people pay more for things they must have. But what did they care? The wealthy men who had contributed to the campaign fund, had demanded more tariff, and they always get of republicans whatever they ask for.

* * *

But the greatest injustice is in placing a higher duty on articles used by common people, than on such as are used by the wealthy. On sealskin sacks, the duty is made a third lower than under the old law; but on silk plush to imitate sealskin for the use of common people the tax has been raised from 50 to 110 per cent. Silk velvet, no advance, but cotton velvet raised from 40 to 80 per cent; fine cashmere increased only 1½ per cent, but woolen goods from 80 to 118; black silk, no advance, but black alpaca from 60 under the old law, to 100; silk linings, no advance, but cotton linings raised from 35 per cent in the old, to 100 in the new law. We suppose the wealthy members thought of their own families while framing the bill.

* * *

John Forsythe, the great dealer in collars, 201 Broadway, N. Y. advertises an increase in prices of 10 per cent.

Daly & Armstrong, Augusta, Me., in their advertisement, say, "The McKinley bill has advanced prices 25 per cent on ladies' wraps."

An advertisement of a hosiery house in the New York express says: "We are selling at 39 cents a pair, which is less than the mere duty under the McKinley bill, and which you will have to pay after this lot is sold"

Risser & Bro. Philadelphia, "Under the new tariff a considerable advance will be made in French underwear." Leading dealers in photo materials all over the country advertise an advance of about 20 per cent.

The Wanamakers of the West are Bullene, Moore, Emery & Co., of Kansas City. Bullene was the republican candidate for congress two years ago, but his firm in an advertisement a few day ago said:

"The McKinley bill has passed Importers and manufacturers are wiring all over the country to their agents to advance prices. * * * The McKinley tariff bill increases the tariff on all lines from 35 to 50 per cent."

And as a practical illustration the firm gives these figures:

"Clothes that we sell in this sale for $3.96 under the new tariff bill we will have to sell for $7.70.

"Clothes that we sell in this sale for $5.22 under the new tariff bill we will have to sell for $9.07.

"Clothes that we sell in this sale for $20.40 under the new tariff bill we will have to sell for $33 92."

Bullene is now convinced that the tariff is a tax

R. G. Dun & Co, the mercantile reporters say: Prices are advancing and dealers are adjusting themselves to new tariff conditions." The wholesale price of axes has gone up $2 a dozen. Saws, both hand and cross-cut have advanced from 10 to 40 per cent. Articles made of lead, plated knives, forks, spoons, etc., have gone higher. Glass has gone up about 30 per cent, zinc articles are nearly doubled and so has powder and ammunition.

* * *

Then we have found a number of other advertisements; Gusky & Co, Pittsburg, say, "Present prices can't last. All wearing apparel will advance 25 to 40 per cent. Riegelman & Co., of Des Moines, Iowa, say in their notice, in speaking of the McKinley bill. "It increases the cost of millinery goods, 10 to 60 per cent. A Becker, of Cleveland, a dealer in umbrellas, etc., says, "The new tariff will make an increased price in this line of 15 to 25 per cent."

* * *

Even John Wanamaker, advertised a short time ago that owing to the new law, the most of his goods will advance in price. Schofield & Mason, the Philadelphia carpet men say, "The McKinley bill increases the tariff on wool 40 per cent more and besides, yarn is hard to get. Carpets are high to day and will go higher."

We close by giving an extract from a commercial newspaper, the "Dry Goods Economist." The leading organ of the dry goods trade, a non-partisan paper with strong protectionist leanings, has this to say about the advance in the price of dry goods since the new tariff took effect:

Prices are now about 10 per cent higher than in August on all spot goods in in which wool plays a prominent part as a raw material; linens and knit fabrics have improved in the same ratio. This improvement has been gradual, but not the less certain, and will give a handsome extra profit to many firms. It does not, however, represent the whole difference between present and future duties, holders of goods having wisely adopted the course of keeping the trade supplied by making the advances gradual. No artificial scarcity need therefore be feared.

It will be seen that while prices have already advanced 10 per cent, the trade expects them to go a good deal higher. This is pretty hard on the buyers of dry goods, and especially those whose wages have been reduced, or who have been thrown out of employment, since the McKinley law went into force.

Town Precincts.

To make the bounds plainer for people in town, we may state, that in Auburn, those who live north of Seventh street and east of Jackson, are in the northeast precinct, and will vote at the Sheriff's office.

All who reside west of Jackson and north of Seventh, are in the northwest precinct, and will vote at Caleb Neal's residence, the next building north of the ward school house.

All who live south of Seventh street, but west of Main street and the Ft. Wayne road are in the southwest precinct, and will vote at the residence of Samuel Fretz, on South Jackson street.

All who reside east of Main street and the Ft. Wayne road, and south of Seventh street, are in the southeast precinct, and vote at the Surveyor's office.

Pleasant for Farmers.

[Chicago Herald.]

W. W. Phelps, minister to Germany, is home on a vacation and is employing his leisure in saying a few words in relation to the protection of American industries. In a speech at a republican convention in New Jersey he said: "The export of agricultural products must find a limited and falling market, but the export of manufactured articles must find an increasing and permanent market. The lowest grade of labor can raise corn, wheat and pork. Ultimately we shall lose foreign markets for our wheat, but not for our wares."

Mr. Blaine months ago declared that there was not a line in the McKinley tariff will that would produce a new market for a bushel of wheat or a pound of meat. Mr. Phelps, who has been studying matters abroad, or at least observing the condition of affairs, has come to the conclusion that our agricultural products sent abroad must find a "falling market" because they will come in competition with those produced by "the lowest grade of labor" in the world.

As the prices in European markets govern those in our own, our farmers will be compelled to send their products to a "falling market" if they send them anywhere. Manufactured articles, however, are to advance in price. The farmer, therefore, is to lose in two ways. He is to get less for what he raises and to pay more for what he buys. He is also comforted by the complimentary statement that his is "the lowest grade of labor." Such is "protection."

Manufacturers in Indiana.

[Indianapolis Sentinel.]

We find a characteristic article in yesterday's Journal, entitled "The Growth of Indiana Cities, in which the preposterous claim is made that Indiana cities have grown during the last ten years because the people of Indiana have been heavily taxed on their food, shelter, clothing, medicine, tools and almost everything they consume or use in their occupation. We quote:

Why has the plate-glass of Indiana become famous throughout the country? Why has the brand of its carriage-manufacturers become the favorite in the market? Why has the state thousands of men building cars, making nails, carriages, paper, machinery, furniture—in short, scores of articles requiring skill and capital for their production? Ask seven-eights of the manufacturers and they will tell you that it is due to the fostering influence of the protective tariff.

It may please the Journal to assume that Indiana owes its manufactures to a high protective tariff, but intelligent people know better. The manufacturing industries of Indiana had their origin under the Walker tariff—the "free trade tariff," as it is usually termed. This tariff was adopted in 1846, and was much lower than the proposed Mills tariff, which was so vigorously denounced two years ago as free trade. The Walker tariff was still further reduced in 1857. So that during the entire—1850-1860—we had free trade, or a tariff "for revenue only."

Let us see how manufactures grew in Indiana during those ten years:

In 1850 there were 4,392 manufacturing establishments in Indiana. In 1860 the number was 5,323, an increase of nearly 1,000.

In 1850 the capital employed in these enterprises was $7,750,402. In 1860 it had grown to $18,451,121, an increase of nearly 250 per cent.

The average number of hands employed in these manufactures in 1850 was 14,400. In 1860 it was 21,195, an increase of 50 per cent.

The total amount paid in wages to manufacturing employes in 1850 was $3,728,844; in 1860 this amount had nearly doubled, the figures being $6,318,335.

In 1850 our manufacturing establishments consumed $10,369,700 worth of material; in 1860 they consumed nearly three times as much—$27,141,597.

The value of the annual production of our factories more than doubled between 1850 and 1860. In 1850 it was $18,725,423: in 1860, $42,803,469.

These figures, which may be found on pages 930 and 931, vol. II, "Compendium of the Tenth Census," show what ten years of comparative free trade did for the manufacturing interests of Indiana.

There was also a large growth between 1860 and 1870, due principally to the immense demand for manufactured products caused by the enormous waste and destruction of the war, and also to the artificial stimulous given to business by the inflation of the currency. But between 1870 and 1880, under the blessed high tariff, the number of manufacturing institutions in Indiana actually decreased, and in amount of capital invested, number of men employed, amount of wages paid, value of product, the increase was trifling.

The Rambler in Iowa.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IOWA, OCT. 12, 1890.

COURIER AND READERS:—I am spending a few days in this beautiful city. Just across the Missouri river, is the city of Omaha, Nebraska, a city of great growth and splendor. The fine streets, elegant buildings and large manufacturing interests, make these two cities very prosperous. They are united by bridges, and electric motor cars carry passengers from one place to the other in about five minutes' time, at a cost of five cents. But dear readers, it was Denver and the Rockies that I promised you, I would write about. I say that Denver is the city of a myth, a fable, and a wonder within itself. Less than thirty years ago, the present site of Denver was the camp of the savage Indian. The city is located at the junction of the South Platte River and Cherry Creek; the county seat of Arrapahoe county, Colorado, about midway from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans. This beautiful, busy city is very wealthy, with a population of 80,000. In the old part of the city, the streets were laid out across the compass from Northeast to Southwest. Thus the center of the city is reached, somewhat to the amazement of a stranger. Many of the streets are naturally macadamized, which are acknowledged to be the firmest steets known The streets are very wide, and about 300 miles of them are required to accommodate the city to its limits. The beautiful incandescents furnish the light that is needed, in such magnificent splendor and perfect arrangement, as to cause one to gasp in wonder. The electric street railways form a net work, which serves the convenience of the public. Seventy churches of every denomination furnish opportunity for every person to worship as their conscience may dictate. Ten hospitals furnish treatment of all the ills of life, regardless of money in a part of them. Banking is carried on at an immense rate. I learned from one of the Clearing House managers that the business done here, amounts to over half a million dollars a day. The postoffice does a business of $160,000 per annum. Hotels are numerous, and good lodging can be obtained at from $1.50 up. The water works are grand. The water for public use is drawn from the Platte River, while the water used to supply the wants of domestic life, comes from the mountains through a system of ditches used for irrigation, and beautiful streams of pure mountain water run through the streets, which produce a very delightful effect. Other parts of the city are watered by artesian wells. The city is filled with a rich profusion of pretty flower gardens, whose delightful fragrance speak in strong accents of their native climes. It seems that these elegant gardens have in them, flowers collected from every country known. You may ask from what source does Denver derives its support? Its main support is secured from the adjacent mines of gold, silver, lead, copper and zinc. Thirteen railroads center here which afford transportation to all parts of the world; all kinds of coal are mined in abundance; large herds of cattle, sheep and horses are raised; immense quantities of grain and vegetables are grown by the irrigating process. The altitude of the city is 5,196 feet above the sea level. Just fifteen miles to the westward, the Rocky mountains in inimitable grandeur rear themselves. Stretching away along the horizon as far as the vision can penetrate through the crystal atmosphere, it seems that one could reach their imposing, majestic presence, in an afternoon's walk. But alas, it is not so! Gray peak and Long peak loom up, at a distance of sixty-five miles, while Pikes peak, so grand and sublime, is ninety miles off. Thus a stranger is mistaken in the distance.

WANTED AT ONCE! A man, to Sell CHOICE VARIETIES of NURSERY STOCK in and around AUBURN, during the fall and winter. We solicit the correspondence of anyone wishing a SITUATION. Six Per Cent. is Enough.

Here is another item of importance to the people just now when so many are insisting that we should have a law reducing the legal rate of interest to six per cent., that the Dispatch should have mentioned when reviewing Mr. Moody's record. When Mr. Moody was in the legislature in 1881 the Buskirk Bill, a bill making the legal rate of interest six per cent., came up for passage. Mr. Moody stated that there were thousands of dollars in this country owned by farmers who were willing to loan it out at the rate of interest, named in the bill, because there was not a farmer in the northern part of the state who can realize 3 per cent., out of the money invested in his farm. The withdrawal of eastern capital would cause people to pay as they go, and not incumber themselves by mortgaging their property, therefore he favored the passage of the bill. None but bankers and money lenders and their friends are opposed to the bill. It ought to stand upon its merits, and every member should go upon record in that view of it. As long as people are willing to convert their money into 4 per cent., bonds he thought it high time the people of this state should be able to obtain money at 6 per cent. Mr. Buskirk, the author of the bill said "This bill has been discussed in all its bearings. If the members of this House vote as their constituents desire them to vote this bill will pass without further delay. If you strike out section 5, then the lender has nothing whatever to risk; he loans his money at 10 or 13 per cent. and the borrower pays it." And again in 1883 when Mr. Antrims bill regulating the interest on the school fund was before the House for passage, Mr. Moody said "I do not propose to enter into a discussion with gentlemen of this floor as to whether all the school fund in the state can or can not be loaned at the present rate of interest." He did not think that extortion was right, nor that, if every dollar of the school fund of the state could be loaned at 10 per cent., to the already burdened tax payers of our state who hold this money, that it would be just for us to compel them to do so. On an examination of the records in the Recorder's office of the state, the gentlemen will find that this large and magnificent fund is loaned to small land owners of moderate means who by all means should be protected from usury and extortion. These funds are loaned in small amounts ranging from $300 to $600. Every man making a loan of this fund must pay the interest in advance, pay for an abstract of title costing him $3 to $5, pay for a mortgage and the recording thereof, which amounts in the aggregate to about $6 to $8. We do not think it right to say that corporations and individuals may contract for and receive the highest rate of interest their money will command. He thought the fund should be loaned at 6 per cent."

L. W. Walder, who used to attend the fair at Waterloo, has been out in Kansas, and he writes back to the Hicksville News, that at the Wichita fair, he saw a threshing machine that fed itself, and a fast trotting horse that had to breathe through a silver tube inserted in its neck so as to pass into the windpipe.

Dr. Norman Teal will meet the Gray Club at their regular session on Tuesday evening of next week. Let every one come out and get acquainted with him. They will find him a perfect gentleman such as would prove an honor to the district, if we should be so fortunate as to get him into the legislature.

T. C. Elson came down from his home at Buchanan, Mich., last Friday, to visit his daughter, Mrs. Simp. Johnson. His eldest daughter, Mrs. Frank Goodman, whose home is at Durango, Colo., came with him. Mr. Elson has many relatives about here, and a host of friends. We were glad to receive a brief visit.

There came near being a fatal accident at the new M. E. church Monday. The contractor, Mr. Hoffman was up in the tower, about twenty feet from the ground, when a block on which he was standing, turned or slipped so that he fell off. He was saved from falling the whole distance, by fortunately catching on a lower scaffold. He was quite seriously bruised as it was.

We had a note a week or so ago about October garden truck. Now it is the birds that are fooled into believing that spring has come. The English sparrows that keep up their residence in the lions' mouths above our office and all around the Kiblinger block have been cleaning out the old nests, and the other day a newly laid sparrow's egg dropped out of the one over our stair, crushing it of course. It takes a queer season to fool a bird.

Every democrat wants to hear Indiana's new and eloquent senator, David Turpie, and every republican ought to hear him. He is an able and scholarly man, one who is an honor to the democracy and to the state. The people in this section have never heard him. They should not fail to come out and see the man of whom they have read so much. Let him be honored with a rousing meeting. Let us make it the great rally of the campaign. Judge McClellan and Hon. Walpole G. Colerick, will address a meeting in the evening. Let us give both a full turnout.

Mrs. T. P. Scott had a sister visiting her last week.

Mrs. Moss has returned from a four week's visit at Toledo.

Mrs. Nicholas Ensley is back here for a visit with the old neighbors.

Rob. McDougal is getting ready to move into the new Sheffer building.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kennedy, of Waterloo, were on our streets Wednesday.

The best and cheapest place in Auburn to buy neck wear is at G. H. Yesbera's.

The big truss to support the roof on the new M. E. church was raised Monday morning.

They are going to put down a cement sidewalk in front of the new brick block east of the postoffice.

Judge McClellan is over at Ligonier visiting the democrats and shaking hands with the people generally.

Charles Schnell has retired from the grocery business as it was too confining. As stated last week he is succeeded by G. A. Mader and Mr. Hartman.

H. J. Salander of Pleasant Lake, Adam Deetz and Frank Seiler of Fairfield, remembered the Old Reliable Courier generously while in town last Friday.

The W. R. C. will entertain a nickel social at the residence of Mrs. Cass on Thursday afternoon Oct. 30, from 2 till 5 p. m. All are cordially invited to attend. Alice Stafford, Sec.

Nice clean office at the Palace barn where ladies can wait when ordering carriages. No loafers or offensive language allowed. J. C. Henry & George Swineford, Props. 42-45

Married: At the residence of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Bertha Knott, near Pleasant Lake, by Rev. W. O. Butler, Oct. 15, 1890, Mr. Henry A. Snow of Omaha, Neb., to Miss Mary E. Forward.

Republican candidates are running over each other in their mad rush over the county, to reach the public crib. There is nothing that sets a republican so wild, as a possible chance of getting an office.

Our tariff articles this week, should be carefully read, especially by republicans, those who have been voting with the party, that has brought these increased prices on them. Talk to your neighbors about it.

Trentman, at the Handle factory, the old Hub and Spoke factory at the south end of town has commenced buying timber again for the fall work. He wants all kinds such as he uses. See his advertisement. Call on him if you have any to sell. tf

The members of the L. L. C., will give a high tea to invited guests, in honor of Mrs. Helen Ensley, of Indianapolis, next Tuesday afternoon from 3 o'clock till 5, at the residence of Mrs. J. A. Barns on west Seventh street. Mrs. Ensley is a charter member of this excellent club.

Henry Harris is back from Noble county, and is back to stay. He had been at Ripley, where Mr. Crew is located. He brings word that Mr. Crew has been having a good deal of sickness in his family. Mrs. Crew has been sick some time. We are sorry to hear it.

O. W. Nottingham, who has been teaching penmanship here, will close his work Friday. He goes from here to Warsaw. To those who have been under his instruction, it is needless to say he stands in the front rank of those who teach this valuable art. He will be here again next school year.

J. A. Potter has one of the finest lots in the new cemetery, having selected one of the best and fitted it up nicely. Last week he had the bodies of his wife and daughter, Nina, taken up and removed from the old cemetery to the new one, and deposited in their last resting place on his beautiful lot, We presume that many others will do likewise.

We have received a recent copy of the Cameron, Mo., Daily Vindicator containing an article by Rev. H. A. Sawyers, in regard to the several theological schools under the charge of the Presbyterian church. It appears that some erroneous statements had been made as to these, by a lecturer, and Mr. Sawyers very naturally came to the rescue, and sets the speaker right. There is much information in the article, which is also, a very able one.

Lagrange Democrat: Congressman McClellan has been very active in advancing a petition numerously signed in this vicinity asking that a pension be granted to Mrs. Elizabeth Gushwa, a venerable but unfortunate lady who for some time has been an inmate of the county house. She was the mother of four brave union soldiers who perished in the service of their country, and was justly entitled all these many years to a liberal annuity from the government, but on account of her age, which is about eighty-five years, and her extreme poverty, she was unable to collect the testimony neccessary to "prove up" her case. A petition stating the facts was prepared and presented to Mr. McClellan, and properly vouched for, and he promptly introduced a bill providing for the neccessary relief. The bill passed through the necessary amount of red tape and reached the President on the 29th of September. His signature was promptly attached and in a few days more the old lady will be enjoying the good fortune she has long deserved. Here is an instance of Judge McClellan's methods applied to a case beyond politics—in which, in fact, there is no possibility of a vote, and yet we doubt if there is a republican newspaper in the District fair enough to mention it.

Taxpaying time ends Nov. 3.

Kouse trial is on our supplement.

Senator Turpie at Waterloo, Oct. 30.

See G. H. Yesbera when in need of clothes.

George Chapman started last Friday for Philadelphia, to visit relatives residing there.

Senator Turpie speaks to the people at Waterloo, on Thursday, Oct. 30, at 1 p. m. Give him a rousing meeting.

Don't be mislead but go where you know you can be suited. G. H. Yesbera has the goods and always tries to please.

Miss Lamboley, who has been trimming in the wholesale house at Ft. Wayne is helping Miss Freeman St. Joe this season.

The ladies of the M. E. church are getting ready to give a grand dinner on Thanksgiving day to which all can take their friends.

Have you farmers seen the new Palace barn one door west of Swineford House? If not, just give them a call. Livery, feed and sale. J. C. Henry & George Swineford, Props. 42 43

The Black Crook Company at the Opera House proved rather a new thing, and was very popular with all except, the bald headed gents, that were forced to go onto the front seats. They managed to survive however.

The article about Judge McClellan that we clip from the Lagrange Democrat, shows but one instance of the many in which the Judge has been of valuable service to poor, but worthy people. He has been a faithful and efficient friend to the soldier.

The C. L. S. C. will meet next Saturday afternoon with Mrs. Clifton. Program. Outline History of England, Mrs. Moody; Our English, Miss Ramsey; How the Saxons Lived, Miss Keeran; The Tenure of Land in England, Mrs. Yesbera; Essay, Mrs. Clifton.

C. J. Porter, the Waterloo optician will be in Auburn at the Hollister House, the first Tuesday in each month, to meet all who desire his service in fitting defective eyes with the proper glasses, and for all the work in his line. Long experience should be valuable in this case above all others. The eyes should not be trifled with. An eye once lost can never be restored and great care should be taken to preserve them. Mr. Porter stands at the head of his profession in this special department. Don't trust your eyes to inexperienced or careless men, but call on him when here, and get glasses such as you need. Don't forget the dates, the first Tuesday of each month. 42

Our Population.

The corrected census reports show the population of Auburn to be 2427, a gain in ten years of 57 per cent., Butler has 2519, a gain of 135 per cent. Waterloo has 1473, a gain of 7 per cent. Have no figures yet as to Garrett.

Poultry.

10,000 pounds of poultry wanted at once at the Palace meat market. I am now prepared to buy all kinds of poultry for which I will pay the highest market price during the season.

B. C. Zeigler,
Auburn, Ind. 40tf

Notice.

Having purchased the meat market of John McMillan on the east side of Main street, south of the National Bank, Auburn, Ind., I am now prepared to supply all kinds of fresh, smoked and pickled meats and everything in the line of a first-class meat market at lowest possible prices. Mr. McMillan will remain in my employ in the business and will be pleased to continue waiting upon his old customers. Highest market prices paid for hides, pelts, etc.

Lewis Eck. 43-45

A Straw.

Rumors of democrats disaffected here and there, come up now and then, but upon being chased down don't seem to pan out. The other day, a knot of democrats were talking, when one asked if anyone in the crowd knew of a man who was "off" on any of the candidates. All said, no. But at last one remembered a man, naming him, who was off on one candidate. It was then learned that this voter was lately a republican and had concluded to vote for one man on that ticket still so as to make the change more gradual.

Higher Prices.

Farmers and working people everywhere should ask the prices of all articles they are accustomed to buy at stores, groceries, etc., and compare with old prices. Then ask yourselves and your neighbors why you have to pay higher rates. The government don't need the money for though our national expenses are enormous, under all administrations till Harrison's we had a big surplus. And if government needed the money, it don't get it. The most of the advances in prices just now, are made on articles imported before the new tariff went into effect. All this, swells the importers' profits, and government gets nothing. The same is true of things made in this country. Government gets nothing from them anyway. The whole object and effect of this law is to make the rich richer, at the expense of the common people. It is a law ordering one man to give his money to another without getting a cent in return. It is a legal robbery, one that differs from burglary only in this, that a burglar has the law against him, and in this case the robber is given the legal right to plunder his neighbor as much as he pleases. Then instead of going to jail for his crimes, the legalized robber rides in his carriage while his victim goes on foot. Ask your neighbors why they vote the republican ticket, when that party treats them so.

Surveyor Hook is Right.

As the Dispatch is not able to defend its party's policy of raising taxes of all kinds, higher and higher, it puts in its time making personal attacks on democratic candidates. Last week it went for Surveyor Jake Hook. Mr. Hook has been careful, faithful and concientious. Has done his work well, and required good work of those who had anything to do with ditches. And he has tried to save the money of the county and the people whenever he could. That is the way a public officer should do, we think. But the Dispatch don't like his plan of saving the people's money. It said last week, that he ought to have reallotted every ditch in the county, whether the people wanted it done or not This would give Mr. Hook a big amount of money, do the people little or no good, and cost the county from $6,000 to $8,000 more than we are already paying on ditch expenses. The Dispatch carries the idea, that if its candidate, Mr. Diehl were in Hook's place, he would go ahead and make this needless and heavy expense. We have no doubt he would. We do not remember a republican county officer that hesitated at making any cost to the county, so he can get a bigger salary out of the transaction. Do the people want to swap off Hook who saves their money, for Diehl who will take it from them to the tune of $8,000 a year? We think not.

⁂

The Dispatch next tries to scare the people by telling them that if their ditches are not cleaned by Nov. 1, they will have to pay a fine of $1 a day. This is all nonsense. No one will have to pay a fine. But when the people ask the surveyor to re-survey and reallot their ditches, then if any one is mean enough to force the matter, a fine might be imposed. But as we said, this will not be done, and the Dispatch knows it. The Dispatch admits that it must be a case of "neglect of the surveyor." But such a case does not exist. Mr. Hook has re-surveyed all the ditches he was asked to do, at least as far as he had time, and no one but the Dispatch is complaining. And all it cares for, is to get votes for Diehl so he can get in, and get this extra $8,000 a year of the people's money, and put them to as much more extra expense besides.

⁂

It also says "Hook has not furnished an abstract for a single trustee." But the fact is Mr. Hook has furnished 38 of them. And in any case when this work has not been done, it has been the fault of the parties or of the trustee. Mr. Hook has done his duty, and accommodated the people. What the Dispatch calls his "carelessness," is only his carefulness, his desire to save the people's money, and to save them trouble. That is just the kind of a man the people like, and they will re-elect him, in spite of the Dispatch's misrepresentations.

The Greatest Strike.

Among the great strikes that of Dr. Miles in discovering his New Heart Cure has proven itself to be one of the most important. The demand for it has become astonishing. Already the treatment of heart disease is being revolutionized, and many unexpected cures effected. It soon relieves short breath, fluttering, pains in side, arm, shoulder, weak and hungry spells, oppression, swelling of ankles, smothering and dropsy. Dr. Miles' book on Heart and Nervous Diseases free. The unequaled New Heart Cure is sold and guaranteed by F. E. Davenport, also his Restorative Nervine for headache, fits, sprees, hot flashes, nervous chills, opium habit, etc 1

The Official Ticket.

We publish to-day by authority, the official ballots to be used at the coming election. The state ballot to be voted will be red, and the local ballot white. Stamp the square at the left of the words "Democratic ballot," and that is all that is necessary. That gives a straight ticket. That is the best and easiest. But if a split ticket is voted, each and every name should be stamped, from top to bottom, then in counting there need be no mistake made. There is no penalty attached to any mistake, but one who purposely violates the law, may be punished. There are no more dangers, or difficulties for the honest voter than under the old law. On the contrary the honest voter is fully protected. That is the great aim of the law.

THE New York Tribune tells of a fastidious lady who drove to the butcher's and told that individual that whenever he or his assistants spoke to her through the telephone they must wash their hands and put on a coat. A GOOD story is told of a famous college president—a clergyman—who, addressing the students in the chapel at the beginning of the college year, said in conclusion: "It is a matter of congratulation to all the friends of the college that this year opens with the largest Freshman Class in its history." And then, without any pause, he turned to the Scripture lesson of the day, the third psalm, and began reading in a voice of thunder, "Lord, how they are increased that trouble me!"

A RICH man in St. Petersburg died, leaving orders that his sealed will should be opened twelve months from his death. When opened it contained another sealed packet, with instructions that it must not be opened for a year. The will had seven seals, the last of which has only just been broken, although the testator died six years ago. The money went to his nieces and nephews, a fourth to be invested till 1910, and then handed to the nephew who was blessed with the most numerous family.

IT would not be easy to imagine a more abominable crime than that which is revealed in the story that comes to us from Kansas of the kidnaping of children of wealthy parents to hold them for ransom. The mere mention of such a scheme carries terror to every home where there are little ones. In this instance it is gratifying to learn that the villains were apprehended before they had succeeded in carrying their plans into effect, and are likely to be sent to prison. No punishment that they are likely to receive will be regarded as too severe for their offense.

OF taste, a medical journal says that it is not equally distributed over the whole surface of the tongue. There are three distinct regions or tracts, each of which has to perform its own special office or functions. The tip of the tongue is concerned mainly with pungent or acid tastes; the middle portion is sensitive to sweets or bitters; while the back portion confines itself entirely to the flavors of rich, fatty substances. This subdivision of faculties in the tongue makes each piece of food undergo three separate examinations, which must be successfully passed before it is admitted into full participation in the human economy.

IT is said that the drop of colored blood in the veins of Mlle. IN China, when a man contemplates suicide, the affair is made quite a public exhibition of, and the seats commanding a good view of the operation fetch high prices. This money goes to the surviving relatives. Now, this is a deuced sight better than the selfish American way of going to somewhere secluded to "pass out." There are youth about us whose fine sensibilities have been worked up to concert pitch by dime novels and border plays, who would go without cigarettes for a week to save half a dollar to see a man blow his brains out. It is too bad that none of our suicides will encourage this desirable taste in our rising generation.

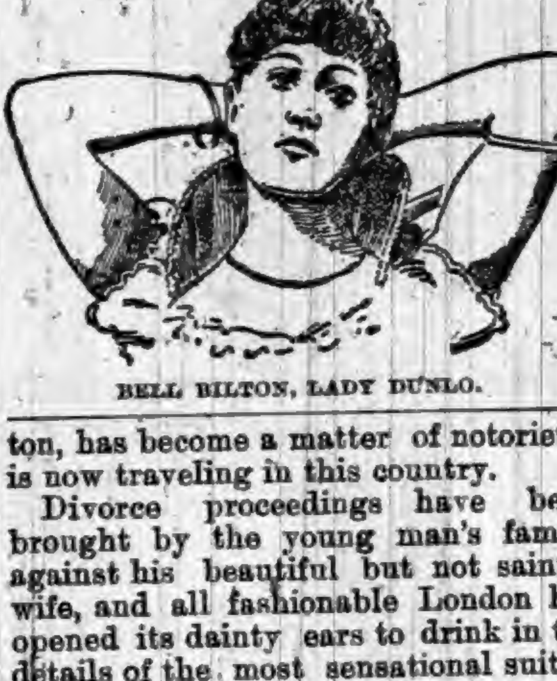
ARREST on a telegram has just come up before a Chicago court, which held it to be illegal—as probably every lawyer would unhesitatingly decide. Two years ago Secretary Bayard formally declined to make such an arrest on a cabled request from Belgium, and the proposal was made that a convention arranging for arrests on telegraphic requests be negotiated. In this country it is probable but not certain that legislation would be necessary to render legal an arrest under such a conviction. For years past our local police authorities all over the country have made arrests on telegraphic requests, to which often far more attention is paid than to a warrant, but all such arrests are irregular under existing law. They ought to be legalized and proper restrictions placed about their use.

DUNLO'S MUSICAL BELL.

The Most Sensational Divorce Suit of the Age.

Viscount Dunlo, the young Irish peer whose scandalous marriage to the London concert-hall singer, Bell Bilton, has become a matter of notoriety, is now traveling in this country.



BELL BILTON, LADY DUNLO.

Divorce proceedings have been brought by the young man's family against his beautiful but not saintly wife, and all fashionable London has opened its dainty ears to drink in the details of the most sensational suit of the age. Following the divorce suit, Lord Dunlo will institute proceedings to rob the pretty but wayward Bell of her title. The latter insists that she will remain the Viscountess Dunlo and will die as the Countess of Clancarty. Viscount Dunlo, she said, knew perfectly well what she was before her marriage, and she did nothing to deceive him. He asked her to marry him, and she consented. She did not run after him or wheedle him into marrying her. It was quite a different matter.

Novelty in Street Jackets.

The long-basqued jacquette, shown above, says the Paris New York Herald, is an ordinary dress bodice, and is type of a style that is in embryo now, but will be fully developed later on. The basques will be quite short, open, but of square corners, of single layer, and as tight-fitting as the skirt of a Newmarket coat, or with superposed basques, and all rather loose, like a watchman's cape. Venetian cloth makes many of these tailor gowns, as it does of jackets or of traveling cloaks that are lined with bright clear tartan silks.

M'KINLEY PRICES.

THE FIRST FRUITS OF M'KINLEY'S TARIFF JOB.

What the New York Market Reports Show—The "Beneficences" of Higher Prices as Seen by McKinley—The False Promises of the Republican Committee.

Maj. McKinley, that curious specimen who believes that high prices are best for the country, should begin to wear a well-selected assortment of smiles. That statesman says that "it is only in order now to watch for the beneficence which the new tariff law is bound to work." If McKinley will look into the trade papers he will find that his Chinese-wall bill has already begun to work its "beneficence."

He will find that those "beneficences" are already coming in the shape of higher prices, just what McKinley has aimed at, for he has said himself: "We want no return to cheap times in our own country."

Let us look into only two of these trade papers, both of them protectionists—the New York Dry Goods Economist and the Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter—which are the very highest authorities in their respective trades.

If Mrs. McKinley will look into the Dry Goods Economist she will find a comment on her husband's tariff law which ought to be of special interest to her. It is as follows:

"It will be interesting to watch the effect of higher prices upon the popularity of the new tariff which has caused them. We shall soon hear from the consumer, and, in fact, already there are loud murmurs on every side. As a rule ladies are proverbially indifferent to politics, but when they find out, as they are now doing, that something has been done by the politicians which results in adding from 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. to their dressmaker's and millinery bills, we fancy that we shall hear from the disenfranchised sex in tones that no judicious man will be likely to ignore."

The same paper prints a long article with the heading, "The Tariff and Prices—A General Advance All Along the Line." This article gives in some detail the advances in prices which have already been caused by the tariff bill, as stated by the merchants themselves. A large number of merchants were spoken with, and every one reported advanced prices as already in effect or as soon to be made.

Mr. John Claflin, who is a member of the great Republican firm of Claflins, reported that "woolens will advance about 10 per cent. on an average." Linens, said another merchant, had advanced on an average about 5 per cent., and buyers were more eager to purchase at this figure than dealers to sell. Still another merchant reported that dress goods for women were 10 to 15 per cent. higher. "The advance on velvets," he said, "is all the way up to 25 per cent., and so it is on the lowest grades of plushes." While there is this sharp advance on grades which only are in the reach of the poorer buyers, how is it when the rich come to buy? "There is, however, no advance on the finest qualities of velvets."

Another merchant said, "Dress goods have all gone up. Among the articles which have been most affected are ginghams which contain some silk. The price of these goods has gone up fully 50 per cent., the old duty being only 35 per cent. ad valorem, while under the new law they will have to pay 35 per cent. ad valorem and 10 cents per square yard."

Corduroys are a kind of goods in which nearly all country people are interested. One of these merchants said, "Low-priced corduroys will cost 40 per cent. more. The actual advance on corduroys and on velveteens this week has been 25 per cent." Another merchant said that worsteds had already gone up from 12 to 15 per cent. as the result of the increased duty.

These were all wholesale merchants. The retail trade, however, was also feeling the effect of higher prices. The article says: "Linen goods of every kind have careered upward, also hosiery, underwear, etc. Ribbons are a cent or two higher on the standard goods."

The same paper reports that pearl buttons had advanced in price 25 per cent., and that an equal advance would be made later, all owing to the higher duty. The New York Commercial Bulletin shows that the price of these buttons had already been doubled before this 50 per cent. advance was decided upon. The full advance in price is therefore 150 per cent. In other words, a dollar's worth of pearl buttons will hereafter be sold for $2.50. Buyers who object to these prices must remember that the good Maj. McKinley assures us that "when merchandise is cheapest men are poorest." It is well to remember here, too, that our President has said that "a cheap coat usually covers a cheap man." Of course cheap pearl buttons would go on cheap shirts, which would naturally be worn by poor men—or, as the President says, "cheap men."

The Oil, Paint and Drug Reporter is devoted to the trade indicated by its name, and is a defender of the protective system. In its first number after the tariff bill went into operation it printed the following items in its market reports:

"Phosphorus is 10 cents per pound higher, that being the extent of the increase of duty by the new tariff.

"Cod-liver oil, now that the new duty has gone into effect, is held for higher prices."

The lowest price in August was $16.50; it is here quoted at $17.75 to $18 as the lowest figures.

Sugar of milk, which is used to make food for very young children, has felt the touch of the 8 cents per pound duty. Early in August the price was 18 to 23 cents per pound; the price has now jumped to 28 cents, while some dealers quote 30 to 35 cents.

"Bay rum is firm, $2.25 being the inside price, while some dealers want $2.35. The increased duty is the cause of the recent change in prices." The August price was $1.90 to $2.

Window glass, which has been made dutiable by McKinley, at a much higher figure on the largest sizes, and which has just come under the sway of the new window glass trust, is about to rise to a higher price. The paper here quoted says: "It is reported that all the large Western jobbers have been in Pittsburg the past week, anxious to place contracts in anticipation of an early rise in values."

The McKinley bill reduces the duty on some articles, and it is interesting to note the immediate effect of such reduction. The paper just quoted says in its market reports:

"Hemp seed being advertised at a lower rate of duty, market prices have been reduced."

"Rope seed also pays a lower rate of duty, and in consequence has declined to 4¾c for English and 3⅝c for German." The price in August for English was as high as 5c, and for German as high as 4c.

A reduction was made also on chloroform, but "chloroform prices have not been affected by the cut of one-half in the duty, the new rate being practically prohibitory."

McKinley goes about the country telling the people that the foreigner pays the tariff tax. Do these facts confirm his words? Moreover, the Republican National Committee are now sending out from Washington a campaign document in which the following remarkable assertions are made:

"All the Democratic talk about 'increased taxation to the people,' is downright falsehood.

"The customer will appreciate the existence of the new tariff law only by its results in the reduction of his necessary household expenses."

Do the above facts confirm the brilliant promises of the Republican National Committee? or do they show that committee to be prophets of falsehood? Even John Wanamaker knows more about these matters than the committee. He has issued an advertisement warning his customers that they would do well to buy his tinware before the tariff price is put on.

Even Wanamaker knows the tariff is a tax!

TARIFF LETTERS TO FARMER BROWN.

NO. 5.

Who Pays the Tariff Tax?

Dear Farmer Brown:

The first thing in this letter is to beg your pardon for putting such a foolish question at the top of it. It does not seem possible that anybody could doubt at this late day that the consumer of any article pays all the costs which have accumulated upon it on its way to him.

But some men are doubting it; or, at least, are teaching people the contrary while knowing better themselves.

One of these men has recently said that "by putting our duties on foreign products, the like of which we can produce in the United States, we make these competing foreign producers bear the burden and supply the revenue to the public treasury." The man who said this has a name which is familiar to everybody just now. His name is McKinley.

When a man of his prominence disseminates stuff like this it is not remarkable that many people of simple and honest minds are befuddled. As some of the readers of these letters have doubtless been led astray by such talk, I think it necessary to take up the subject here and expose the hollowness of Major McKinley's pretense that the foreigner pays our taxes.

McKinley, then, claims that the foreigner pays our tariff taxes. Before making my answer to him, let me call attention to the fact that McKinley makes this claim with no apparent sense of shame, which is quite remarkable for a man of his reputation for integrity. He seems to see nothing wrong in forcing foreigners to pay our taxes. One would expect to see an honest, self-respecting nation not simply paying its own taxes but taking scrupulous care not to lay the burden of them upon other nations, for a decent nation must at least be an honest nation.

Yet here is a leading American statesman, with prospects and ambition to be President, actually praising his tariff bill because it forces the foreigner, as he says, "to bear the burden and supply the revenue to the public treasury"—a smart Yankee trick, which, let us hope, Major McKinley would be far too honorable to practice in dealing with his fellow-townsmen at Canton. Everybody says he is a most honorable man—how singular that he should be willing to place our Government in a situation which he himself would blush to occupy!

But let us come now to his claim that "the foreigner pays the tax." What answer is to be made to it?

I say emphatically, that McKinley does not believe it himself. That may seem a rough speech and may shock you; but listen a moment and I will convict him out of his own mouth.

Let me call your attention to several passages in his speech in Congress last May in opening the tariff debate. In explaining the general provisions of the tariff bill, he said: "There has been for many years a provision in the law permitting the United States to import for its use any article free of duty." Then he explains what his committee did with that law: "This provision of law has been eliminated in the proposed revision, and if approved by the House and Senate and the President, the Government, its officers, agents, and contractors, will hereafter have to pay the same duties which its citizens generally are required to pay." In doing this the committee, he said, was actuated by the belief that "the laws which it imposes upon its own people and tax-payers should be binding upon the Government itself." [Applause.]

In other words, the people pay tariff taxes—why should not Uncle Sam do the same? Accordingly, the McKinley bill makes Uncle Sam pay tariff duties from one of his breeches pockets over into the other! And this is done in order that Uncle Sam may bear his part of the burden.

How delightfully amusing that McKinley did not see that the old gentleman loses nothing by paying the duties to himself! But, all the same, McKinley here "gives away" his case completely. The consumer pays the tax, and Uncle Sam must do the same, though he pay to himself.

This is enough of itself to prove my point that McKinley does not believe that the foreigner pays the tax. But there is a still more fatal admission in that speech of the Buckeye statesman. It is in reference to rebates, or drawbacks.

Here is his explanation of what the committee did:

"By way of encouraging exportation to other countries and extending our markets, the committee have liberalized the drawbacks given upon articles or products imported from abroad and used in manufactures here for the export trade. Existing law refunds 90 per cent. of the duties collected upon foreign materials made into the finished product at home and exported abroad, while the proposed bill will refund 99 per. cent. of said duties, giving to our citizens engaged in this business 9 per cent. additional encouragement, the Government only retaining 1 per cent. for the expense of handling."

He has the Government, as you see, to pay back the duty on the raw material to the manufacturer in order to put him in a position to compete with foreign nations, by restoring him to the position where he would be if he had not paid the duty. But you see very clearly that the manufacturer is already in a position to compete, and on an equal footing with his competitors in other lands, if it be true that the foreigner pays the duties on the raw materials which the manufacturer buys from him.

McKinley goes on to explain how beautifully his drawback will work in the matter of smelting ores, showing that by allowing ores to be admitted free into certain establishments, which are also bonded warehouses, great good will result. Here are his words:

"This, it is believed, will encourage smelting and refining of foreign materials in the United States and build up large industries upon the seacoast and elsewhere, which will make an increased demand for the labor of the country."

Certainly. By relieving the smelter of taxes which he says the foreigner pays.

McKinley had a deep-laid scheme in all this. It was to rob the Democrats of the "free raw material" argument. See with what innocence he states the motive of his committee:

"It completely, if the provision be adopted, disposes of what has sometimes seemed to be an almost unanswerable argument that has been presented by our friends on the other side, that if we only had free raw material we could go out and capture the markets of the world. We give them now within one per cent. of free raw material, and invite them to go out and capture the markets of the world." [Applause.]

But there is another point in this remarkable speech which is equally fatal to McKinley's claim that the foreigner pays the tax. He says: "We have increased the duty, as I have already said, upon carpet wools, and that has necessitated an increase of the duty upon carpets themselves."

This is what is called a compensatory duty; that is to say, an increased duty on a finished article in order to compensate the manufacturer for the duty he paid on his raw material. Of course this is based upon the idea that the duty on the raw material has increased its cost precisely by the amount of that duty, which would be absurd if the foreigner paid the duty. The higher duty on carpet wool "necessitates," as McKinley says, the increase of the duty on the carpets themselves. That was clearly one of his lucid moments when he recognized the simple fact that the foreigner does not pay tariff tax.

Now, old friend, have I made good my case? Have I convicted him out of his own mouth? Either McKinley is an insincere man, or else he can crowd a greater number of inconsistent notions into his cranium than most men of his rank and station.

But this is enough; the Lord High Tariff-maker himself admits over and over again that the American people pay their own tariff taxes, and it would be needless for me to waste further words to prove so obvious a fact. Yours truly,

RICHARD KNOX.

Dearer Pearl Buttons.

The effect of the McKinley tariff bill in Europe has been watched eagerly by both parties in this country. Whenever some European manufacturer has "squealed," the protectionists have been greatly pleased and have sent up a chorus of "I told you so!"

McKinley himself has been the leader of this chorus. In the speech accepting renomination for Congress he said: "If any doubt ever existed that the House bill was a piece of American legislation for the benefit of the American people, and in the line of the country's largest prosperity, that doubt must have long since been removed by the manifestations of opposition which have come from the leading and competing nations of the world."

Here is an example of what he means: The passage of the bill, together with the fall in gold in Austria, has had the effect of closing up a large number of establishments in that country for the manufacture of pearl buttons. It is reported that in this way 30,000 workmen have been thrown out of employment, and a later dispatch says that the city of Vienna has voted 5,000 florins (about $2,500) toward the fund now being raised for those unfortunate laborers. That is what the McKinley bill has done for the pearl button makers in Austria. What has it done for the pearl button wearers in America?

Under the effect of McKinley's high duties the price of these buttons has already been more than doubled. The following invoice from an importer in New York will explain that great advance in price;

1,473 gross pearl buttons, value in Vienna	$ 628
25 per cent. duty	157
Additional duty under McKinley tariff	754
Total	$1,539

Invoice of pearl buttons received in New York Oct. 7. None of the goods were of the low grade. Had they been, the difference would have been much greater.

That is why we are now paying more than double price for our pearl buttons.

Do these facts bear out the McKinley notion that his bill is "in the interests of America," and is "a safeguard to the happy homes of American workmen?" Does this look as if the best way to do something good for ourselves is to do some harm to others?

McKinley passes a bill which makes our mothers and wives pay more than double price for their buttons, and if they call this a piece of foolish law-making, McKinley will say, "Oh, but good women, don't you see that we have thrown 30,000 pauper laborers in Austria out of employment? Therefore it must be a wise bill. Of course it is not a good bill for Europe. It is an American bill, not a European bill."

Upon hearing which all those who occupy the chief seats in the paradise of fools laugh loud and long, and toss their hats in the air for very joy at having found one who is worthy to be their king.

A Domestic World's Fair.

It seems to be growing more and more certain that the Chicago World's Fair will be a United States Fair instead of a World's Fair. It was reported some time since by the London correspondent of the New York Times that "the McKinley bill had already made it certain that Europe would take no interest in the Chicago exhibition and would be practically unrepresented there."

Now the New York Tribune, the leading high-tariff organ of this country, prints a dispatch from Rome to the following effect: "The committee appointed to arrange for a proper representation of Italian art and industry at the international exhibition in Chicago in 1893 has dissolved, having decided that any further efforts to accomplish the work for which it was formed would be useless. It is stated the committee found that in view of the new United States tariff law few manufacturers or others were willing to send exhibits to Chicago."

This is only natural. Protection puts up barriers in the way of trade between nations, and the McKinley bill erects the highest barrier of this kind that the world has ever seen, except in the case of China before that country opened its ports to the world and modern civilization.

Merchants and manufacturers do not exhibit their goods at fairs merely to instruct and amuse the people. It is a simple business transaction; they want their wares to be seen by those who may become buyers. In other words, a World's Fair is meant to extend foreign trade—just the opposite purpose to that had in view by McKinley and his followers in passing their "domestic bill."

Accordingly we are to have a "domestic" fair, which does not mean that it cannot be a great and interesting exhibitoin, only it will not be a World's Fair

The Tariff Booty.

Pennsylvania was happy when the McKinley bill was passed. At Harrisburg cannon were fired in celebration of the event.

The next thing in order was a visit to the State from the fat-fryers, to get money to elect McKinley. But the "fryers" struck a snag when they called on James B. Oliver, one of the rich "tariff barons" of Pittsburgh, and a prominent iron man. Oliver refused to be "fried." "Why should we give anything toward McKinley? His bill didn't do us any good, but has injured us." The "baron" was in a spiteful mood because Carnegie was helped by the bill. "Carnegie will reap more benefit from the passage of the McKinley bill than any other manufacturer," said Mr. Oliver.

Carnegie came home recently from his coaching tour in Scotland. On the ship with him were many European delegates to the recent Iron and Steel Institute in New York. Mr. Frederick Starr, one of these delegates, says: "Andrew Carnegie came over with us in the Servia, and there was a current report on board that he had said he expected to make three-quarters of a million dollars during the next year by the increase in duties on imports."

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine-tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir, are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied, and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This recent production of the South American Continent has been found, by analysis, to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its magic power to cure all forms of nervous derangements.
